Soviets Express Desire for Peace, Agree to Discussion of Differences; U. S. Seizes Railroads-Strike Off

By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer,

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not nessessarily of this newspaper.)

OVERTURE: Peaceful

All of a sudden the air between Washington and Moscow was filled with talk of peace and desire for cooperation.

Exactly what had happened to bring about the quick flow of the milk of human kindness between the U. S. and Russia was not clear. Certainly there had occurred no basic change in the potentially explosive relationship.

It began with a U. S. statement of position, voiced by Bedell Smith, ambassador to Russia, in the presence of Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov. Smith, apparently speaking officially, suggested that the way is clear for a discussion of differences with Russia. Said the U.S. ambassador: "The present state of U. S.-Soviet relations is a source of grievous disappointment to the American people. As far as the United States is concerned, the door is always wide open for full discussion and the composing of our differences." Russia's reply, as broadcast by the Moscow radio, expressed a positive attitude toward improving Soviet-American relations and stated that Russia "is in agreement" with a S. proposal for "discussion and settlement of existing differences." Although these developments received a big play in the press and radio of both nations, indications were strong that the aura of mutual hostility separating the U.S. and Russia might not be dispelled by the willingness to "compose our differences. Neither side had modified its foreign policy. Rather, each had emphasized it in the exchange of notes. The U. S. statement said, in part: 'The concern and the determination of the people of the United States have been intensified by the inexplicable hostility of the Soviet government to the European recovery program-a measure which in its inception and subsequent developments is so obviously only a measure of American assistance for reconstruction on a co-operative basis without menace or threat to any-

In their reply the Soviets contrasted what they termed military threats against the Soviet Union with the Russian government's pursuit of "a consistent peace policy. At least there was a definition of terms and a preliminary agreement to talk things over. Whether or not any good would come of it was, at this stage, problematical.

There was a suspicion abroad that Russia, balked in its ambitions to expand into western Europe by the European recovery program, might be ready now to try to make some kind of deal.

ALL ABOARD: Trains Run

U. S. economy escaped being a victim of railroad paraplegia at the eleventh hour when three rail brotherhoods yielded to a restraining order brought against them by the government and called off their impending strike.

Events leading up to that climax had run a course which has become familiar to strike-weary Americans. Negotiations between the railroads and the three dissenting brotherhoods - engineers, firemen and switchmen-had been fruitless. As the strike deadline approached they remained miles away from any kind of agreement on wages and working

By that time President Truman had built up a full head of steam and he opened the throttle wide.

Acting under the sanction of a 1916 law which authorizes the government to take over the railroads during the time of war (U. S. is still, officially, in a state of wartime emergency) Mr. Truman seized the entire vast network of tracks and trains in the name of the federal government.

That move paved the way for a court order restraining the unions from striking for eight days. Fed-eral District Judge T. Alan Golds-borough issued the order and the nation's trains kept running, for the time being, at least.

Possibly proving that there is no wind so ill that it doesn't blow up some good for somebody, one of the major influences leading to cancellation of the rail strike was John L. Lewis, who didn't have a word to ewis, who didn't have a word to ay about it.

But Lewis had set the pattern. The looking to 1952. say about it.

It's Leap Year, Girls!

First girl in our town to "get her man" on Leap Year was the Cuppers' daughter, Jane, who wed Bill Webster's boy last Saturday.

When I asked Bill Jr. if it was true that Janey really did the proposing, Bill said: No, but she made it plain she'd make an ideal wife. Instead of looking for diversion or excitement every evening, she was content to chat beside the fire.

"I could plainly see," says Bill, "that we'd really have a happy home life-which is just exactly what I want from marriage."

I know it's usual for older folks to shake their heads over the younger generation. (It's gone on for hundreds of years, now.)

But from where I sit, young people of marrying age today are every bit as commendable as their olders were-in their temperance (a glass of beer for instance), tolerance, and common sense. So to Jane and Bill-the best of luck!

Princes Dolly reigns supreme in her cotton-white royal robes. Yes, and it's Text cotton—that Queen of textiles—grown and ginned in Texas, spun and fashioned in humming Texas mills.

Texas is proud of its growing textile and garment industries—industries that are built of the use of natural resources. Texas is proud, too, of its natural gas indu try-another example of the way natural resources can be given value by being put to use.

Cotton in the fields. . and natural gas in the ground . . . would be of little value to an one unless they could be gathered, processed and made available for use for the benefit of mankind. This is practical conservation, it stimulates industrial development, creates jobs and benefits all the families of Texas.

TEXTILE AND GARMENT INDUSTRIES

Thousands of employees share the benefits of the Free Enterprise system, as it operates in the textile and garment industries of the Gulf South. In one recent year, payrolls of these industries were more than 100 million dollarsmoney that found its way into every cash register in the area. Don't Neglect Lunch If You Want to Stay Full of Pep, Health

ARE YOU ALONE at home for lunch so that you don't bother to prepare something for yourself? Or does the family come home, and you simply rummage around the refrigerator and don't know what to

These are frequent situations in many homes throughout the country. Lunches of this type-or none at all for the homemaker alone at home-don't help pep, vitality and health. If you get a lag in the afternoon and wonder what's wrong with you, check your luncheon habits.

Physicians and nutritionists are of the opinion that if you skip a meal, it places too much of a load on another meal. Let's say you've skipped lunch and eat a very full and ample dinner. Do you feel like doing anything but flopping into bed and wasting the evening? And have

You may be busy, but you can prepare cottage cheese with oranges, grapefruit and berries in season with a buttered muffin and a glass of iced tea for a lunch that's healthy and balanced.

you ever thought of what it does to your digestive process to have it called upon suddenly to digest a big meal after having been lazy for many hours?

It's much better to try to distribute your calories evenly throughin good working order.

Don't give the excuse that you think lunch unimportant and simply don't feel like bothering with it. Even if you're alone at noon, it doesn't take much effort to prepare a nice cottage cheese and fruit salad and a glass of milk roll or toast. Or, if the youngsters are at home, it's simple enough to cream some leftover vegetables into a piecheese, serving it with fruit-and cookies for dessert.

Planning will give you plenty of the right foods on hand from which to choose a nutritious and well-balanced lunch. And if you value your health and well-being, you'll cer-tainly not count half an hour at noon much to give up to it.

HERE ARE SOME HOT DISHES from which to choose for lunch if there are several of you at home, They are made from "planned" leftovers and are quick and easy to prepare.

Corn Scramble (Serves 6) 1 cup subed leftover ham

2 tablespoons fat 2 beaten eggs Salt and pepper 1 No. 2 can cream style corn 1/4 cup green pepper, cubed

Creamed Meat in Potato Nests (Serves 4 to 6)
