The Creator of Man

A question frequently asked by youngsters is where did God come from. Mortal man has never been able to answer this question. There are some things beyond the reach of the human mind. We cannot conceive of the beginning of time, nor the end of time, or the boundaries of space, yet there are many things we can learn about God. The opening lines of the Bible are, "In the beginning God created the heavens and earth," signifying that God is not just something to be seen in nature or thought of when beautiful music is heard, but rather a powerful being who is all wise and ever present. The scripture says God is love and is grieved when his people do wrong, that he is a jealous God who expects complete obedience. By nature eternal and immutable, we read that God is a spirit and must be worshipped in spirit and truth. Several instances are recorded in the Bible of men who out of a deep sense of gratitude bowed down to worship an angel, and in each instance the angel would not permit it, saying worship only God. At the end of time we must all meet this mighty being, creator of mankind, so a study of his will to man is of profit to all of us.
