NO. 21

Greenbelt Dam

The officers and attorneys of the Greenbelt Water Authority had a meeting with members of the Collingsworth County Irrigation Water Control District at Childress one night last week.

The Collingsworth group has opposed the Greenbelt Authority. They stated that they thought the Authority sought to impound more water than was necessary.

"I personally am willing to let them have all the surplus water as long as it is not needed by the cities of the Greenbelt," said Dr. S H Townsend president of the Authority.

"Whether the Collingsworth group plans to go ahead with its announced intention to file its objection was not discussed. Since only officers and attorneys were present at the meeting no official action could be taken" Dr. Townsend said.

The city of Kirkland is now organizing to buy Greenbelt water. A steering committee has been named to start working on the project. A total of 38 families have shown interest in the water in and near Kirkland.

Farm Facts

Every now and then a farmer runs across a bull or steer that is so mean he feels like shooting him. Some farmers do—with a tranquilizer dart that tames the unruly animal. It thus protects both man and beast.

The dart is a plastic syringe encased in metal and loaded with nicotine. It's fired from a special air rifle that loads like a single-shot shotgun and is powered by a compressed air cartridge.

Farmers, ranchers, zoo keepers, veterinarians, and big-game hunters use the rifle. They can fire it from as far as 75 yards away and score an effective hit, but best results are obtained from a distance of about 35 yards.

When the dart strikes the animal, a small compressed air cartridge is activated and the nicotine is injected into the bloodstream. In a few minutes the bull will stagger and then drop to the ground, paralyzed. Then the farmer can administer medicine that the animal may need.

The treatment is relatively painless for the animal. It appears to suffer little, either from the dart or from the dose of nicotine. Within an hour's time, the bull will be grazing contentedly as if nothing had happened, and science will have helped the farmer solve another knotty problem.

Farm Facts

A Texas farmer, Lyndol C. Barker of Dell City, not only has produced eight bales of cotton per acre but has averaged 6.92 bales per acre over a five-year period on 10.4 acres.

Time was when a cotton farmer thought he was going great if he could grow a bale to the acre. Standard weight of a bale of lint cotton, not counting its wrappings, is 478 pounds. The average yield across the Cotton Belt rose from 254 pounds in 1945 to 448 pounds in 1960.

Dell City is 90 miles east of El Paso in the center of an irrigated cotton-growing area where the average yield is more than two bales per acre.

Barker says there's no secret to making high yields. He just gives the cotton maximum water, fertilizer, and care.

Of Barker's 250 acres, about 130 are in cultivation. He grows cotton, cantaloupes, tomatoes, carrots, and other crops, and believes in diversification and soil care.

His land is flat, mostly sandy loam, and he rotates so that cotton is grown on the same plot only one year out of four.

Barker's achievement points up the efficiency of the U. S. farmer. The record of U. S. farms is unmatched anywhere and is a key to our high living standards.
