Greenbelt Dam

Clifford Johnson, local director, attended the meeting of the board of directors of the Greenbelt Water Authority at Childress last Thursday night.

The gap in the dam was closed last week. Water is now backing up from the daily flow of the river. It will be in readiness to catch the water from the spring rains when they come.

The dam is now 83% complete, the filter plant is now 35% complete and the additional 110 miles of pipe line is 90% complete.

The anticipated completion date of the project according to B. C. Alexander, resident engineer with Freese, Nichols and Endress, the authority's engineers, is now June 15, 1967, some 10 months ahead of schedule.

Cotton Report

The USDA's Consumer and Marketing Service in Memphis, Texas reported that cotton classed under the Smith-Doxey Act for growers during the week ending Thursday, Dec. 8, was lower in grade, staple length, and micronaire. Late scragging and the method of harvesting coupled with the damage done to late planted cotton and top crop by the hard freeze in early November accounted for the lower quality.

K. E. Voelkel, in charge of the Memphis cotton classing office, stated that although cold temperature, fog and high winds restricted harvesting, 22,000 samples were classed during the week. This brought the seasonal total to 73,000. With the 5,000 unclassified samples on hand and the samples classed this week, it was estimated about 25 percent of the crop remained to be processed. Last season as of Dec. 7, 56,000 samples had been classed.
