W.A. WRIGHT,

In these restrained and careful times Our knowledge petrifies our rhymes. Ah, for that reckless fire men had When it was witty to be mad! When will concelts were piled in scores And lit by flaring metaphors, When all was crazed and out of tune, Yet held the music of the moon.

If we could dare to write as ill As some whose voices haunt us still, Pethaps even we might call our own Their deep enchanting undertone.

IMPRESSION.

We are too diffident and nice, Too learned and too overwise, Too much afraid of faults to be The flutes of bold sincerity.

For, as this sweet life passes by, e blink and nod with critic eye; e've no words rude enough to give Its charm, so frack and fugitive.

The green and searlet of the park, The undulating streets at dark. The brown smoke blown across the blue, This crowded city we walk through.

The pallid faces full of pain, The field smell of the passing wain, The laughter, longing, perfume, strife, The daily spectacle of life.

Ah, how shall this be given in rhyme Ey rhymesters of a knowing time? Ah, for the age when verse was glad, Being godlike, to be bad and mad. —Edmund Gosse in Pall Mall Gazette.
