The cook, controlling her temper,
Was on baking waffles intent.
E'en puss knew better than whimper
As the master came and went
From cook stove to dining table,
While children as mute as mice
Wished the good cow out in the stable
Could papa give some advice
When the coffee wasn't hot.

Tears the mistress' eyes were filling.
Then, smiling on children five,
She saw them all more than willing
To do without coffee and thrive
If sirup of serenest maple
O'er their waffles they could poor,
But the master viewed as staple
Beverage warm and slammed the door,
For—the coffee wasn't hot.

Prince would you, sir, learn the moral?
Should the coffee be forgot.
With your cook to pick a quarrel
Will not make the coffee hot.
