Sonora, Texas, - June 30, 1900

A New York business man who was a passenger with the Boer enjoys their trip to this country related this story of Lord Roberts, which was told on shipboard, the Boers enjoying it with everybody else. Roberts walked up to Lord Kitchener before several of the officers at the front one day and said: "Kitchener, I am making an addition to my staff." "Yes?" replied the ex-sidar, "who is it?" "My chief," replied "Bobs." "Who?" inquired Kitchener, perplexed. "I am an old man now, and I feel lonesome, so I have asked Lady Roberts to join me. Her headquarters will be in the vicinity of Bloemfontein until they can be moved to Pretoria."

A Life And Death Fight.

Mr. W. A. Hines of Manchester, La., writing of his almost miraculous escape from death, says: "Exposure after measles induced serious lung trouble, which ended in Consumption. I had frequent hemorrhages and coughed night and day. All my doctors said I must soon die. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery which wholly cured me. Hundreds have used it on my advice and all say it never fails to cure Throat, Chest and Lung troubles." Regular size 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at E. S. Briant's Drug Store.

An Obliging Tradesman.

Mrs. Youngwife—I want five pounds of sugar, please.

Dealer—Yes, ma'am. Shall we send it for you?

Mrs. Youngwife—No, I'll take it with me if it isn't too heavy.

Dealer—I'll make it as light as possible for you, ma'am.—Philadelphia Press.

To save mending, avoid breaking, and to avoid suffering, prevent coughs and colds by the timely use of Ballard's Horehound Syrup. It is a safe, sure and swift remedy for all bronchial ailments, price, 25 and 50 cents at J. Lawenthal druggist.

Texas wools have been more active. They have been taken at prices ranging from 18c downward. Most of the sales have been made by one house. Some heavy fall wool has sold at about 14c, the clean cost being about 45c. Year's growth Texas sells for 52 to 55c, clean and eight months' at about 50c. For twelve months' wool, in the grease, in Hamilton county, Tex., 18c has been paid by the Boston trade, and for eight months' wool 15c. There are many holders in that section who will not sell twelve months' wool for less than 20c.—Boston Wool and Cotton Reporter.

A Monster Devil Fish

Destroying its victim, is a type of this malady is left on organs, nerves, muscles and brain. But Dr. King's New Life Pills are a safe and certain cure. Best in the world for Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels. Only 25 cents, at E. S. Briant's Drug Store.

Don't be Haughty.

It was a spotted cow called Speck that chewed the herbage green; she wore a bell upon her neck, that sounded sweet, I ween. The giddy steers around her played; the calves kicked up their heels; the fat old bull stood in the shade, his head was full of wheels. This cow was full of wild conceit; her head was swelled immense; she thought she was the slickest thing that ever jumped the fence. She thought herself most awful big from heels to little horns; so when she spied the black boar pig, she viewed the same with scorn. "Leave this field!" she fiercely bawled, "I don't like your smell." The porker, as he slowly crawled retorted, "Go to h—ll." For animals are keen to wit and quick to repartee; they nearly always make a bit (by whinny, squeal or bray). "Speak thus to me, you noxious beast!" the angry cow inquired. If you've come here to spoil my feast, I'll see that you are fired. A hog is out a loathsome brute that's full of sin and wiles; it only wants to grunt and root and smell for seven miles. You have no higher wish or hope, ambition ne'er adorns—"Just when a butcher threw a rope and caught her by the horns. "Come on old girl!" the butcher cried, "your time has come to die, for people won't put feed inside an old cow that is dry." And so the spotted cow called Speck was led away for beef; the black boar pig stood on his neck and squealed for joy or grief.

Moral—It isn't safe to look with scorn on other creatures round; they may be eating hay and corn when we are under ground.—Walt Mason in Wauesa (Neb.) Enterprise.

About Polled Breeds.

Among the thousands of new readers of this journal who have been added to our subscription lists the past winter are many who have not a clear understanding of the different breeds of polled cattle. A number of inquiries on this subject have reached us and a general reply is made. The word polled means hornless, polled cattle are those naturally without horns, they are commonly called muleys in this country. Four breeds of polled cattle are recognized—Aberdeen-Angus, Galloways, Red Polls and Polled Durhams. The first named three are of British origin, the last named is distinctly an American type. These breeds are not related, they have been bred separately and distinctly. Moreover the blood of the old established British hornless breeds did not enter into the origin or improvement of the American type.

Numerically the Aberdeen-Angus is the most prominent and important breed of polled cattle. It originated in the county of Angus (now Forfar) and Aberdeen in northeastern Scotland. Its antiquity is great. It is recorded that there have always been polled cattle in Angus. These cattle were generally black, with some dark reds and brindles. Attention has been specifically directed toward eradicating a tendency to produce red or brindle cattle, but occasionally these colors crop out. A little white on the belly and udder are common. One of our inquirers wants to know if such white marking is not evidence of impurity in breeding. It is not. Aberdeen-Angus cattle are of compact, rotund conformation in contrast to the angular form of the English Shorthorn. They are short legged and fine boned with well buried hip bones and rounded quarters. Their hair is long and mossy in the winter time, short and fine in the summer. It takes the highest polish under the care of skillful herdsmen. They are largely used in the farm dairy in their native home and are rich milkers. Finished heaves of this breed have proved so popular in the market places on both sides of the water that their breeders call them market toppers, with much foundation in fact for the appellation. The name of the breed as used in this country was the result of a compromise. They are called doddies for short, the word doddied meaning hornless. They are also called Angus, Polled Angus and Polled Aberdeens.

The Galloway cattle are like the Aberdeen Angus in three particulars—They are of Scotch origin, are black and are hornless. It is likely that in the early times they were allied to the Aberdeen-Angus in blood, but there has been very little mixing in the last quarter of a century. The channels of trade do not run between the district of Galloway in the South of Scotland and Angus in the northeast. Both breeds were long circumscribed in their native habitations and by environment and selection two different types have been evolved and firmly fixed. Probably no race is more purely bred than the Galloways. They are generally distinguished from Aberdeen-Angus by a more angular frame, larger bones and their characteristic long and shaggy coats. They show the same occasional white markings on belly and udder as the Aberdeen-Angus, and sometimes throw calves red in color. They are especially noted for their hardiness and for the high quality of meat which they produce. Improvement was begun with this breed later than with the Angus, but it has been pushed successfully the past few years.

The Red Polls are natives of the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk in England. A hornless type of red cattle has existed in these counties for a hundred years. The cattle of Suffolk were somewhat larger and coarser than those of Norfolk, but since the establishment of the herdbook and the intermixture of the cattle of the two counties this difference is disappearing. The Red Polls are of rotund conformation. Red and white, brindle and yellowish cream were colors seen in cattle in those counties in early times, but they have been bred steadily toward a deep rich blood red. The white spot on the udder, which was at one time held to be an evidence of good breeding, has been bred out. Red Polls were originally celebrated for dairy qualities, but of late years have been much improved in beef properties, so that now they are one of the most conspicuous of the dual purpose types.

These three polled breeds are very prepotent in fixing the characteristics of form, color and polled head on their progeny. Information has repeatedly been published of late concerning the Polled Durhams. They were originated in this country in response to a demand for a hornless Shorthorn. Native muleys were bred to Shorthorn bulls and thus graded up by successive crosses. Sports that appeared in the Shorthorn breed—pure bred calves that came hornless—were used to establish what is now known as double standard Polled Durham, that is cattle eligible to registry as pure Shorthorns and also as Polled Durhams.—Breeders Gazette.

The Wool Market.

The San Angelo wool market this week presents the paradoxical condition of exciting calm. There is enough here, though the clip is not entirely in warehouse, and the buying interests are represented by Messrs. A. W. Littlehale, resident buyer for several mills; C. Palmer, of Hill & Palmer, San Antonio; Geo. R. Toppliff, of J. Joshman & Co., Boston, and Allan C. Emery, of Hecht, Liebman & Co., Boston. All have closely inspected the contents of the several warehouses, but have made no offers. On the hand, the growers' representatives in the commission business here have courtously entertained the buyers but have made them no prices. It is now rather late in the season but no prospects are discernible of an early exchange of wool and money. On the contrary, the presidential campaign may be over before such a consummation becomes a fact, and two clips may change hands in the fall, rather than one at the present season. The ruling Eastern markets present about the same aspect, though of course, a little buying is going on there for present needs. Both sides are firm, each apparently independent of the other with no disposition or apparent necessity of either yielding for some time to come.—San Angelo Standard.

American Horses for Japan.

A New York special says: Following closely in the footsteps of the British Government, which has in the past year made a continued demand on our equine resources, comes the Japanese government on a search for highly-bred horses to be used for the improvement of the oriental product. Mr. Walter D. Grand, of the American Horse exchange, received a communication yesterday stating that Messrs. Ayami and Muri, directors-in-chief of the imperial stud, at Tokio, Japan, would arrive in New York Saturday. These officials are coming at the express command of the emperor to purchase American trotting bred and hackney stallions to improve the breed of horses in Japan. Mr. Grand will accompany the visitors on a trip through Canada and the United States and all the large breeding establishments will be visited and selections made of suitable animals. Mr. Ayami was here a few years ago and at that time bought a few horses which he took back with him to Tokio. The emperor was so pleased with the product of the American and Japanese cross that he commanded the directors of the imperial stud to experiment further, and bring back the best animals that can be procured the desire being to produce the highest type possible of a horse suitable for military as well as general utility purposes.

Died on Friday, June 22, 1900, Nora May, the youngest child and only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Bobett, aged two years, five months and five days. The funeral took place at the Sonora cemetery Saturday evening. The News extends sympathy to the parents.

About 2 o'clock p. m. Friday Mrs. Maggie Blake Gonzales heard the Bobett child cry and looking to ascertain the cause saw the little boy aged four years trying to carry the baby out of the tent. Mrs. Gonzales ran to their assistance and the little boy said the baby had taken carbolic acid. Mrs. Gonzales took the baby to her house and sent for the doctor. It seems the child had been playing with a bottle of carbolic acid and the cork coming out the acid was spilled over her neck and breast from the effects of which she died in three hours. Mrs. Gonzales has a very severe burn on her arm caused by the acid when she was carrying the child to her home. Mrs. Bobett was not at home when the accident occurred.
