Livestock Show Scheduled this Weekend

by Alan McWilliams

Today's 4-H program is noted for its flexibility, a feature that makes it the largest youth serving organization in the country.

4-H is flexible because it is organized in different ways, for different needs, in different places. Organization may take the form of community or neighborhood club, a project club, a special interest group, or special activity. Young people may take part in 4-H through any or all of these.

The community 4-H club is associated with an area known to local people like a small community, a particular section of a town, or other area. The number of 4-H members in a club may range from five or six to more than 100. This type of 4-H club continues from year to year. Boys and girls belong to the club, enrolling in projects according to their interests.

4-H projects offer an opportunity for youth to make critical decisions to aid in later life. Through planning and carrying out a project, youths learn to apply these decisions to real-life problems.

In a project involving raising any animals, the member must do the following:

---compare and contrast animals as the basis for deciding which to keep or cull, to breed or to buy. Basic training of this nature is done in livestock judging.

---identify characteristics of individual animals that qualify or disqualify as certain breeds or species.

---learn nutritional ration ingredients needed for health and growth and identify animal parts and their functions.

---use previous experience and subject matter learned to recognize health problems and courses of action needed to be taken.

---identify errors through recognizing and correcting mistakes such as incorrectly identifying the breeding cycle or gestation period of an animal can cause a loss of productivity and money.

4-H offers parents, as well as youth, an opportunity to grow, to develop, and to learn. So, actually, 4-H is for parents, too. If you are interested in the 4-H program in Kinney County, call or come by the Kinney County office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service located on the 2nd floor of the county courthouse.

Gold Receipts are Like Gold to B.I.S.D. Students

San Antonio, January 17, 1990 - Super S Foods Stores, which currently operate 44 supermarkets throughout Central and South Texas, today announced a major new program designed to contribute an estimated $300,000 in free computers and equipment to local schools.

Jim Stanley, Chairman of the Board of Super S Foods Stores, said schools would be able to exchange Super S register tapes for a large variety of Apple computer equipment.

"Our program's operation is simple," Mr. Stanley announced, "schools merely have to save Super S gold register tapes dated from the commencement of the program on Wednesday, January 17, until its completion four months later. The tapes value can be accumulated toward a goal of purchasing a set piece of computer equipment."

For example, Mr. Stanley said, $70,000 worth of Super S tapes could buy an Apple IIC monochrome system while $125,000 in tapes could buy a Macintosh system. Tapes can also be exchanged for software, printers, disk drives and other APPLE equipment.

"There is no cost to the school whatsoever," Mr. Stanley emphasized. "Once the tapes are turned in to us, we redeem them in four to six weeks and present the equipment to the school. We even arrange for a local distributor to install it and give those operating it an orientation. Of course, this is all brand new equipment which is fully covered by the manufacturer's regular warranty."

Mark Dieterle has been named "Apples for the Students" Coordinator and will maintain his office at Super S headquarters in San Antonio. He will be responsible for total coordination of the four month program.

"APPLES for the Students was designed to address the growing need for more computer equipment in our primary and secondary schools," Mr. Stanley said. "It will help promote computer literacy among students who will be graduating into increasingly computerized workplaces and college environments."

Any school can join the program by registering with the "APPLES for the Students" Coordinator, or by contacting their local Super S Foods Manager. Complete program details will then be sent to them at the school.

"This exciting program," Mr. Stanley said, "is an excellent example of a business/educational partnership. Super S Foods Stores serve the community and we can think of no better way to reinvest our funds into our communities than by helping to further the education of our young people."

This innovative program also allows financially restricted school systems the opportunity to acquire valuable computer equipment at absolutely no cost to them. Super S estimates that it will distribute close to $300,000 in APPLE computer equipment before the program ends in May.

Mr. Stanley said APPLE computers were specifically chosen for the program because a recent analysis of area schools indicated that the majority of them utilized APPLE computer equipment for education purposes within their systems.

Elementary School principal, Steve Mills is the coordinator for this project in Brackettville. Collection Boxes be at the school and the Bank and possibly at other locations in the future.

Jones Elementary students will be making the boxes for the Apple computer drive that started Wednesday, January 17.

The overall goal for the B.I.S.D. is to collect enough sales receipts to qualify for 5 APPLE computers.

Stolen Items Recovered

The Sheriff reported that several stolen items had been recovered with the exception of one stolen item still under investigation.

A 44 magnum super black hawk was taken in the burglary of a vehicle March 10, 1989. It was entered into the Texas Crime Information Center Computer Network which lead to the recovery of the gun when Laredo police found it at a Pawn Shop in Laredo August 21, 1989.

The pistol was recently returned to the Kinney County Sheriff's department and is valued at $400.00. It will be returned to it's rightful owner Mr. Robert McWilliams.

Hunters Pablo Garza from Fort Worth and Daniel Ivarra from Uvalde, Texas reported on Nov. 30, 1989, that their 1975 Bonanza Travel Trailer was missing. The trailer had tumbled on its side, when the hunters returned with a wrecker they were surprised to find it missing along with a 1955 Willis Jeep.

The missing trailer was discovered in the Kickapoo trailer park, this case is under investigation and there are suspects to the crime. No charges have been filed as of this date. The recovered trailer is valued at $2,500 and the Jeep is valued at $1,500.

The Sheriff's department has entered the Jeep with the Texas Crime Information Center Computer Network in hopes that the case may soon be solved.

Lindsey said the one-time payment is available to many low-income households. Other low-income individuals may request an application by calling the toll-free number 1-800-252-8060 during the enrollment period of Jan. 22 through Feb. 28.

persons, $973.49 for three, $1,165.49 for four, $1,357.49 for five, and $1,549.49 for six.

Households are eligible if the cost for heating is included in the rent payment of it the household pays a portion of its home energy costs.

Energy assistance checks are sent directly to the people who are eligible for assistance. However, the checks are made payable to the energy provider.

People receiving one of these energy assistance checks should mail it or take it in person to the energy provider business office with their regular energy bill. This check can be cashed only by the energy provider. If the HEAP check is more than the energy bill, the additional amount will be credited to the person's account for the next month's bill. We hear a lot today on the so-called "war on drugs" from politicians, big city law enforcement administrators, and private citizen groups. The rhetoric sounds good and the plans demonstrated on chalk boards and paper also look good in theory. However, when it comes to practical application by frontline officers on the street, the "war on drugs" falls far short of its planned objectives and realistic success. How can law enforcement officers fight drugs if we are hamstringing by laws that defy common sense?

EXAMPLE: One night in March, 1989, two Washington, D.C. narcotics officers had a car under surveillance. They watched a passenger step out of the vehicle and take a large plastic bag out of the trunk. They then followed the car to a shopping center and watched the suspect take the bag into a small grocery store. A half-hour later the suspect returned to the car without the bag. One of the narcotics officers, posing as a customer, went into the store where he spotted the bag behind the counter. He questioned the manager and two clerks and was told that the suspect had asked them to keep an eye on the bag. The narcotics officer lifted the bag and felt hard, pebble-like objects inside. His experience told him that the bag contained "rocks" of crack. Further investigation determined that the bag held 272 small plastic bags of the drug valued at $23,000.00.

The suspect was later arrested, convicted, and sentenced to ten years in prison. Upon hearing his appeal, the U.S. Court of Appeals overturned his conviction on the grounds that his rights had been violated. Their reasoning was that had one of the clerks opened the bag and shown the evidence to the narcotics officer the evidence would have been acceptable. But, according to the rules of evidence the trained, experienced narcotics officer DID NOT have the right to pick up the bag in the first place. The suspect, a major drug dealer went free!

EXAMPLE: In February, 1989, a federal judge in Denver, Colorado dismissed drug charges against a Jamaican drug dealer because a Denver SWAT Team, carrying a valid search warrant, failed to knock on the door before battering it down, entering, and confiscating drugs and arresting the suspect! Another drug dealer set free!

EXAMPLE: In April, 1989 an Alaskan appellate court overturned a conviction on a drug dealer because the dealer, a bartender, had sold undercover narcotics officers drugs from his jacket hanging some 15 feet from the bar. The court ruled that because the jacket was not within the immediate reach of the bartender the officers should have obtained a search warrant! Another drug dealer set free!

The list of cases similar to those shown above goes on and on. Needless to say this is extremely frustrating and discouraging to frontline officers on the street risking their lives to apprehend drug dealers. Drug abuse has become the number one problem facing America today. Drugs are the number one business in dollars and cents in many states and areas of our country and pose an extremely critical problem to the health, social, and criminal status of many cities, towns, and villages across the land. Gang warfare over control of "territory" for drug sales has broken out in many of our big cities and urban areas causing hundreds, if not thousands, of deaths and injuries each year. Whole neighborhoods are taken over by drug dealers and their "soldiers" causing innocent, law-abiding citizens of those neighborhoods to be terrorized by the drug dealers, "soldiers", and drug lords.

One would think that with all the widely publicized knowledge of the drug problem nationwide that politicians and private citizens of this country would unite in outrage and support every effort of law enforcement agencies and peace officers attempting to wage war on drug dealers. However, the "war on drugs" is in reality not a war at all. In an all-out war all available efforts are made to win the war and by necessity the methods used in that warfare are sometimes harsh, cruel, and bloody and would not be acceptable under other conditions.

The "war on drugs" is a political war as was the "war" in Vietnam, and we all know the tragic results of that conflict. In a shooting war the politicians should pass emergency laws and resolutions designed to support those who are having to fight the war, providing them with the resources in money, equipment, and manpower needed to fight and win the war. They should not interfere with and in other ways hamstringing the efforts of those who are trained in warfare and fighting in ways to lose a war, they are trained to win but so often are not allowed to do so because of politics. In order to successfully wage war and win a war, any war, money, equipment, supplies and manpower are needed. The most important ingredient however, is the WILL TO WIN!

If we are indeed involved in a "war on drugs" then we should be allowed to use tactics, procedures, and methods that have been proven effective in combatting crime. And, if our enemy pulls a knife on us, we should pull a pistol, and use it. If our enemy sends one of ours to the hospital, we should send one of theirs to the morgue. The enemy must at all costs be made to realize that we ARE COMMITTED to winning the war and that we are going to use cruel and unusual methods to defeat him if necessary and will give no quarter.

In the "war on drugs" the enemy (drug lords, dealers, and users) are allowed to use any tactic required to ply their trade and are overly protected by the very laws of our Constitution and Bill of Rights that are designed to protect innocent, law-abiding citizens. The drug lords are better financed, better armed, and in many instances better trained in combat than the average front line peace officer. They kidnap, torture, and murder innocent citizens, politicians, and law enforcement officers as well as those who compete against them in their illicit trade. They are without compassion for right or wrong or human life. They have the WILL TO WIN and will do so unless they are overwhelmed and crushed with tactics beyond those they themselves use.

If we are to win the "war on drugs", and we can, then we must unite and take a headline stand against violators. We must be allowed to take measures to WIN the war, not just contain it. Citizens and politicians must unite behind law enforcement officers and allow us to join forces with specially trained and equipped military and law enforcement teams. We must be provided funds for training, equipment, and manpower necessary to wage combat on a cruel, heartless enemy. The average citizen must be willing to be somewhat inconvenienced now and then at roadblocks, airports, ports of entry, and other locations used by drug dealers. Civil rights activists and Civil Liberty Union attorneys must direct their complaints and lawsuits to REAL issues instead of going after honest, hardworking peace officers acting in good faith to win the "war on drugs". Judges Must start making decisions against drug dealers and users instead of letting them off on vague technicalities. We Must Be Committed to Win!

Search and destroy squads of highly trained, well equipped military and law enforcement teams must be deployed in those areas, both urban and rural, known to be used by drug dealers. Intercept planes of the U.S. Customs must be armed and rigged for aerial combat and prepared to shoot down drug smuggling planes that refuse to comply with demands for surrender. Shoot, don't shoot tactics must be refined and adjusted for use against drug smugglers anytime and anywhere they are found. Known drug lords, dealers, and users Must Not be allowed the same rights as honest, law-abiding citizens. The enemy Must be overwhelmed, smothered, and defeated with all our resources and power. We Must Have The Will To Win!

I am in no sense of the word suggesting that we live in a police state. But no other democracy protects the rights of criminals over their rights of honest, law-abiding citizens to live in peace and security as does America, and no other democracy anywhere in the world has anywhere near the drug problem as that in America. We don't need protection from honest, hardworking law enforcement officers, we need protection from criminals and we need to win the "war on drugs".

The "War on Drugs", is it to be or not to be?

There are few greater things to be enjoyed by the American people than the privilege of voting in free elections. Most of the world has not the slightest idea what it is like to be able to choose leaders by ballot. This privilege should be accompanied by responsibility. The basic philosophy behind an election is to find the best person for the office. Most of the time it is a matter of choosing the lesser of two evils. Much of this is due to the fact that it is difficult to find truly responsible people to run for office.

A factor also is the fact that it is often impossible for competent people to be elected. People generally vote based on emotions. This is true in local, state and national elections. Were people to truly evaluate qualifications many elections would have different results. A careful evaluation of qualifications would never found John Kennedy as even a candidate for President. It's a sad fact that many factors enter into an election. In this area one big factor is racism.

There are those who openly run on the basis of race and appeal to those of a particular race to vote for them simply because they are the same race. Generally these would cry to high heaven if those of another race refused to vote for them because of race. There are those who feel they must vote for a person because he is "Him", no matter the candidate is not qualified.

Others vote because of friendships regardless of qualifications. Many fall victim to campaign rhetoric that many times is pointedly false. Because people do not truly evaluate politicians on the basis of facts and qualifications the entire society suffers. In a sense, people deserve what they get from politicians because they have selected them. What a transformation if all people in all elections would truly consider all candidates and vote only for the most qualified.

But since this is only a pipe dream and people will continue to vote their prejudices, for candidates selected on many frivolous bases, we must live with mediocre and sometimes painfully detrimental actions by elected officials. However I'm glad I live in America where I can vote for anyone I choose and I would not want to rob another of the same privilege - that's America.

Unsung Hero

A man and his wife moved to Fort Clark Springs a number of years ago and truly moved. Their hearts were in the move and ties were broken where they moved from and roots were immediately set deeply into the community. He has been active and faithful to his fraternal order and to his church. He has been and is active in his service club. He participates in many communities. He is always friendly. He is an avid gardener and particular to see his yard is always well groomed. Without exception anyone who knows him likes him. Surely Merlyn "Robbie" Robertson is an "Unsung Hero".

Praise the lord!!!

Rev. Walter Johnson, Pastor of St. John Baptist Church, is pleased to announce a Baptismal service this coming Sunday afternoon, January 21st. The service will be held at First Baptist Church at 3:00 p.m. The names of the candidates are Monique and Vienna Pierce.

Real Estate News

by Molly Ardrey

Do you remember how excited you were when you purchased your first home? The time you spent planning and picturing all the things you wanted to do to make the home just like you wanted.

Fixing up a place is fun when it is yours. It is also a forced savings plan. Some of the dollars you are spending are building up equity for you.

When you are living in someone else's house you hesitate to spend money on it, so you never have it fixed just like you would if it were yours.

And how much better a credit rating looks when you own rather than rent.

Young couples and families are wise to sacrifice for a time to save the money for a down payment on a house. Start small, fix up the home and in several years you may be ready to sell, using your equity for a down payment on a larger house. Pride of ownership is rewarding.

Golf News by Les Roper

This past week a very select group of golfers were called together for a highly secret meeting. This bunch was handpicked by Captain Bill Bizzell and their mission would be known as "Operation Sandbag". This very prestigious group was made up of Gordon Lundquist, Walter Dyer, George Bumgardner, and of course, Captain Bizzell. The code name for this team would be "The Sandbaggers" and their first mission would be a search and destroy attack.

After each man was sworn to secrecy they were briefed on their first mission. They were to load up with full packs (golf clubs, balls, tees, ball markers, pencils with erasers, extra score cards, etc.) and travel to Uvalde where they would engage the enemy, known as the "Underdaws" in a dawg eat dawg contest of golf. Bizzell assured his men that the advantage would definitely be theirs since his scouts had brought back information describing a bunch of "country bumkins" who were "ripe for the picking". Our illustrious representatives from Fort Clark started drooling so heavy their car nearly drowned out before they got off the Fort (and it ain't rained in months). The security guards reported that they could hear their battle cry long after they had cleared the front gate... "Bring on them mulllets".

What happened in Uvalde that afternoon turned drool into crocodile tears. Uvalde's main string was attending to more important business and didn't show up. What did show up was a "Rag Tag" group of second stringers known as the "Underdaws" and this accommodating group didn't have the heart to let the honor of Uvalde's Golf Club go down the drain without some sort of battle.

Billy Bob Holden, Mike Reilly, Bo Farr, and Lou Donage, all playing with borrowed golf clubs and second hand balls, let the "Sandbaggers" make all of the rules and call all of the shots. The "Underdaws" were really impressed with this well dressed and disciplined group from Fort Clark. Anyway, the game got under way and things began to happen right off the bat. The details of the contest seem to be fuzzy in the minds of the combatants but after three holes the outcome was obvious. The "Sandbaggers" were well dressed and well armed but they forgot one thing...they forgot to bring any ammunition.

The game finally finished with the "Sandbaggers" in full retreat. However, they did make one stop. All of them stopped by the Bank of Uvalde and applied for a SBA loan (disaster loan). One of the fighters sold his clubs on the way home and out of the four who did return, two of them look like Jerry Glanville...they are wearing black and I don't think it is for strength. More like mourning the loss of a loved one...little pieces of green paper with numbers on it.

The men's Winter League advanced to the sixth week of competition with the Gobblers showing no signs of letting up in their quest for the championship. Ralph Viesteenz, Lou Schlatterer, Charlie Descheemaeker, and Harold Kauffman met early this past Wednesday morning and they were treated to a double helping of Wheaties before game time. The breakfast of champions must have worked because Ralph and his boys went right out and picked up another ten points to give them a grand total of fifty four points and the undisputed lead. Hanging onto second place and playing a very low keyed game of golf was the Rattlesnakes led by Clark Horning, Jim Bussey, Lee Herron, and Vern Ebert. This bunch has been hanging on to second place for about three weeks now and you don't hear much from them but beware, boys, 'cause they are within striking distance. Breaking out of a tie for third and taking sole possession of third place was Hoagy Nelson, Gordon Petaja, Don Herron, and Ray Kurtz. They scored ten big points. Confidence is running at a high level with most of the other teams still feeling like a good run on their part could move them into contention.

The team standings are now:

1st ... Gobblers ... 54 pts.
2nd ... Rattlesnakes ... 38 pts.
3rd ... Horned Toads ... 29 pts.
4th ... Whittetails ... 24 pts.
5th ... Roadrunners ... 20 pts.

6th ... Badgers ... 12 pts.
7th ... Armadillos ... 9 pts.
8th ... Javalinas ... 9 pts.

Monday morning the weather was overcast and very damp and Sondra Meil, the recreational director of Fort Clark, could not believe her eyes when she looked outside and counted 27 dedicated golfers standing around waiting to be paired up for the weekly scramble that has grown so popular on the nine hole course. Not ever wanting to do anything that might disappoint anyone, Sondra wrapped up in her warmest and driest coat and bravely divided the players up in teams and fired the gun that gave them the go ahead.

Tom Faulkenberry has become a regular visitor to the winner's tent lately and this week was no different. He once again conquered the little nine hole "monster" course and claimed the first place check in doing so. Finishing second was Leon Dotson, and third place was captured by Darlene Horning.

Ladies day at the golf course this past Tuesday found 32 fabulous females competing against one another in a Droupout Tournament. Don't ask this reporter to explain the rules and regulations of a tournament with this format but you can rest assured it was fun if the gals put it on. The blue ribbon and the first place money order went to Chick Cruse, a regular winner in the lady's league. Jon Ann Mayberry scored well enough to win the red ribbon and second place while Helen Miller claimed the white ribbon and third place. Needless to say, the gals had the time of their lives doing what they do best...playing together and having a good time.

SEEING YOU...

Seeing you reminds me of the memories you and I shared.

The fun
The laughs
The tears
Seeing you makes me think of the times we had,
Running
Jumping
and getting mad
You brought me such pain
You brought me grief
Your picture reminds me of when you had to leave.
Seeing you cry
Made me cry
Seeing you laugh
Made me wonder why.
Seeing you die
Made me hate you
Looking at the lifeless body that isn't yours
Makes me remember what we did.
Your supposed to be with me forever
Your my best friend
I'll leave you never.
You weren't supposed to die,
But in a way, I guess you never did,
I love you forever
Because your my best friend.

DECORATING PANCAKES — While making pancakes for my family, I took a cake-decorating tube and filled it up with pancake batter. I decorated each of the cooking pancakes with names, pictures and faces, then flipped them. It is amazing the simple things you can do with your children and have so much fun to boot. My children and I had a most enjoyable breakfast. Renee W., Duluth, Minn.

WRAPPING PAPER — My husband is an avid deer hunter who prefers to package the meat himself. I had two empty freezer-wrap boxes to throw away when I thought of a different use for them. Having a large family, this last Christmas meant a lot of gift-wrapping, which I generally enjoy doing. However, unless I buy wrapping paper with rows of designs I can cut along, the paper never comes out even. So, after removing the adjoining ends, I taped the two freezer-wrap boxes together (end to end) with the teeth strips in line and found that most wrapping paper will fit in the long box easily. Now I can tear off even amounts of paper just like aluminum foil. Frannie M., St. Johnsbury, Vt.

BABY BLANKET — When my first child showed growing fondness for a particular blanket, my husband and I thought nothing of it. On washing days, I was usually able to keep her amused long enough to wash and dry her blanket before she realized it was gone. You would not believe the tears that would flow from her tiny eyes when she had misplaced that blanket. She finally grew out of that stage and plays with her dolls and stuffed animals. Now I am expecting our second child and have purchased two identical blankets just to be on the safe side. While I wash the dirty one, I can replace it with the clean one. Julia C., Lake Oswego, Ore.

Winter: Time For Soil sampling

UVALDE -- Winter is an excellent time to take a soil sample and have it tested for nutrients, says an agronomist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"The laboratory will have plenty of time and results should be back before the production year starts," said Dr. Noble S. Kearney, agronomist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"By getting the results early producers will have time to visit with fertilizer dealers and decide which fertilizer to use and where the best price may be obtained," Kearney said.

Producers should take several samples from the same field and mix these together. This will assure a representative sample from that field or area.

"Fill out the information sheet carefully and give a realistic yield goal for the crop to be fertilized," Kearney advised.

Phosphorus and potassium, if needed, also may be applied broadcast during the winter so the nutrients will be in the root zone when the crop begins to grow, Kearney said.

"Wait and apply nitrogen at planting or after the crop begins to grow or both. Nitrogen may leach from the root zone if applied too early and phosphorus and potassium are not very mobile in the soil," he said.

Soil sample bags and instruction sheets may be obtained from county Extension agents. The agent also can assist with interpreting the results of the soil test.

Grandma's Kitchen

I want you to know I tried making the low-fat-cream cheese last week and made myself a bowl of dip, and it was delicious, so I hope you like it as well. This week I want to tell you about another of God's healthy gifts to us, a lot of people can't get used to it as well. This week I want to tell you about another of God's healthy gifts to us, a lot of people can't get used to it as well. This week I want to tell you about another of God's healthy gifts to us, a lot of people can't get used to it as well.

It's also the only kind of oil you can reuse and cook different things in and they'll retain their own taste, you can switch from fish to french fries to chicken and back again and this oil will keep on being the same. This, I didn't believe, but I do now.

It might be a little more expensive, but think of it this way, it's your health I'm thinking about, and you'll save it on Dr's bills. Now this is a little story that came from the days before Jesus. The olive was one of the main tree-crops of ancient Israel.

The berries were harvested in about November, by shaking or beating the branches with poles. Some olives were eaten pickled, but most were taken in baskets to the presses where the valuable oil was crushed out. Olive oil was used for cooking, for lamps as a fuel, and as a soothing lotion for the skin. Back then it was also used to anoint Kings and priests. It was the way a person was set apart for special work. The trees themselves can live up to an age of several hundred years. The wood can also be carved and polished for fine work, as in Salomon's Temple Deuteronomy 24:20, Judges 9:8 1 Kings 6:23, also 1 Kings 17:12-16 and 1 Samuel 10:1. All these will tell you about olives, if you care to look it up.

In a couple weeks, we will be celebrating forty-five years of wedded bliss, another milestone for us, and memories to add to the others. At this time, I have no idea where we'll be, I love walking the beaches, even in winter, and I love getting out on a (hill) mountain top and communicating with nature. The inner peace is fantastic, so if I'm (we're) missing, don't look for us, we're doing our thing.

Here's a ground beef ditty, thought you might like.

- Swedish Meatballs
- 1 pound lean ground beef
- 1/2 cup oat bran
- 1 onion, diced
- 1 tea worcestershire sauce
- 1 egg
- 1 Tbs parsley flakes
- 1 tea pepper
- 1 - 10 3/4 ounce can cream of celery soup
- 1 soup can skim milk.

Combine the ground beef, oat bran, onion and egg, worcestershire sauce and seasonings in a mixing bowl. Add 1/4 cup of soup to the mixture and form into meatballs. Bake at 350 degrees on a shallow baking sheet. Combine the remaining soup and skim milk in a medium saucepan to make a sauce. Add the meatballs and heat for about 15 minutes. Serves 8. Every body loves peanut butter, so here's another recipe you can slip in that lunch box.

- Spicy Peanut Butter Cookies
- 8 ounces peanut butter
- 1/4 cup margarine
- 1/4 cup honey
- 1 cup finely ground whole wheat flour
- 1/2 cup oat bran
- 1/4 cup unsweetened orange juice
- 1/4 tea finely grated orange rind
- 1/4 tea nutmeg
- 1/4 tea cinnamon
- 1/4 tea ground cloves

Cream the peanut butter, margarine and honey together. Stir in the oat bran, flour, orange juice, orange rind and spices. Roll into 1 inch balls, place on a cookie sheet and flatten each cookie with a fork. Bake at 350 degrees for 12 to 15 minutes. Makes about 40 cookies.

Here's a great thought for you--Acquisitrieness is a disease. Our ego deceives us into thinking that if we have a bigger house, newer car, fancier clothes, we'll be happier. Well??? Didn't you get a better car? Didn't you move into a bigger house? While there is nothing wrong with either of them, they also don't bring peace. They do bring higher insurance policies and more things that need repair.

Well another week, so be careful and stay happy.

Special Hugs and Love Grandma

There are traces left by pre-historic man of irrigation ditches along the Cimarron in the Cimarron Valley in Beaver and Harper counties in Oklahoma. The construction of this system proved the Indians were not ignorant savages.

Parts of these ditches were still there when the white settlers came. Long ago a terrible flood had forced the natives to leave, seeking another location.

In most cases the white settlers took over the ditches and improved them for their own use. In the present time the valley's water comes from deep wells and the irrigation system is no longer needed.

Across the valley parts of the ditches can still be seen. We have little knowledge of these ancient ones but we know they were there so long ago.

Throughout the southwest remains of ditches built by the ancient ones can be seen.

In New Mexico they are kept up and used still. They are called "Mother Ditch" and have been modernized and are cleaned out each year in a ceremonial rite. They are kept by each family and handed down from father to son.

Without them the families would have no means of growing food for survival.

The ancient Indians system of irrigation is a work of love and art that shows scientific knowledge that the ancient ones are seldom given credit for.

Chamber of Commerce Spotlight Review No. 11

People come and go but property often lives on to accumulate history. That is the case with our feature subject, the B&S Grocery and The Jug Store, located on Highway 90 at Ann Street. There has been a wide diversity of activity on this central piece of real estate as the economic winds of Brackettville changed direction over the years. In the midst of change, one thing endured over the decades, and that is the huge lone oak tree in front of the store. It remains as one of our cherished landmarks, taken for granted, but splendid in stature.

In the beginning (AS FAR BACK AS LOCAL MEMORY EXISTS) an old wooden building surrounded by deer horns stood on the grounds. It was appropriately name the Lone Oak Saloon, and it was later replaced by a shed type building for the sale of cold drinks, canned food and bread--becoming the forerunner of todays business. When ownership changed about 1950, to Dale Borden and Plunker Sheedy, a Dairy King and Deer Storage facility were added. Borden and Sheedy also lent their names to establish the business name, B & S Grocery.

The partnership was later dissolved in the mid-seventies, and the Dairy King was closed. The present owners, Don and Linda Woodson, acquired the property in 1980. Under their management, the grocery store line of merchandise was expanded and the Jug Store was added where the Dairy King had been.

This month marks the 10th anniversary of the business for the Woodsons. We salute you, Don and Linda, for your faithful service to this community, through your business enterprises, and civic contributions. Thanks for everything!

So much for history--lets look at the many necessities and convenience items the business provides for the consumer. Just a partial list includes: bulk ice-cold drinks-fresh and packaged meats-dairy products-canned and frozen foods-basic hardware items-a surprisingly well stocked health care drug section-hunting and fishing supplies-and licenses for these sports. The Jug Store includes, wines, liquors, and other popular varieties of beverages.

In both stores, merchandise is nicely arranged on display shelves or counters so anyone short of time can quickly find their choice. Friendly, helpful, and courteous employees include: Marion Berry, Dee Perry, Patty Doss, Sylvia Alvarado, and Clara Bonner, some having been with the business for years. Friendly Service is the motto of the owners and their assistants.

Store hours are as follows: The Jug Store 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. - Mon-Sat. B & S Grocery - 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. - every day

Irrigation Scheduling

PEARSALL--Irrigation scheduling isn't guesswork. It's simply determining when to irrigate a crop and how much water to apply, according to a professor of agricultural engineering at Texas A&M University.

"The point is that you know what you're doing," said Dr. Joe McFarland here recently.

McFarland was speaking to a group of over 100 producers who attended the first South Texas Irrigation Conference. The Conference, held at the Lions Club Civic Center, addressed such topics as Texas water laws, calculation irrigation pumping costs, the history and development and conversion to Low Pressure Precision Application (LEPA) systems and growers' perspectives.

The conference was sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Evergreen Under-ground Water Conservation District. If an adequate supply of water is available, the objective of irrigation scheduling is to supply just enough water to the root zone to meet the needs of the crop, McFarland said.

There are three reasons and three benefits of irrigation scheduling, he said.

Producers can save water, save money for more return on their investment, and the plants will never be under water stress, he said. Additionally, by careful scheduling, producers can avoid leaching chemicals into groundwater supplies, he said.

The objective of irrigation scheduling is to apply enough water to restore the soil moisture of the root zone to meet the needs of the crop, he said.

The depletion of soil moisture in the root zone is monitored by any of several methods.

The first, the calendar method, is a set amount applied by the calendar without considering the crop stage or the weather. Rainfall may be taken into account, McFarland said.

"If you're short on water, the calendar doesn't really do a good job with irrigation scheduling, however," the agricultural engineer said.

This method of irrigation scheduling is usually expensive, either in terms of the excess water applied or the crop yield reductions from moisture stress. Both extremes may occur in the same season, he said.

The advantage of this method is that management of the irrigation is simplified, he added.

The second method is plant appearance. Irrigation of a set amount is applied when the crop shows signs of temporary moisture stress. This method is very effective if the plant indicator shows up before yield reductions occur. However, an irrigation system with sufficient capacity for an irrigation before additional water stress occurs is needed, he said.

The third method, soil moisture, is based on soil moisture depletion, either measured or estimated. Multiple locations of measurement are needed to take rainfall into account in irrigation scheduling, he said.

The fourth method, atmospheric, is directly related to the weather. A dry, windy, hot day will result in more water use by a crop than a cool, humid, cloudy day. This type of information is available from farm radio and television shows and some newspapers, he said. This information can be plugged into a formula determined by the crop which is being grown. Some agencies, including the Extension Service, have established irrigation scheduling programs based on atmospheric measurements, he said.

The fifth method, pan evaporation, is similar to the atmospheric method, but the actual evaporation from a large container of water is used, he said. The evaporation pan is four feet in diameter, with water about 6 to 8 inches deep. This method is not as accurate as the atmospheric method, he said.

Remote sensing, the sixth method, is based on measurements of the crop with sensors that do not touch the crop canopy. A crop that is freely transpiring will have a cooler leaf surface than a crop that is experiencing water stress. These methods are among the most scientific but are very difficult to use due to the cost of the equipment and the difficulty in interpreting the sensor readings.

Several combinations of methods are available, based on the advantages of individual methods. For example, soil moisture sampling with resistance blocks or tensiometers is an excellent method for determining the soil moisture remaining in the root zone, he said.

"Use any information you have handy. The more information you have, the better job you can do," he stressed.

The bottom line in irrigation scheduling is to take into consideration when the crop was planted, what was planted, how much stress the plant can stand, rainfall, when the producer stops irrigating, and what the weather says, he said.
