President Approves Govenor R. Perry's Disaster Declaration

AUSTIN - Gov. Rick Perry today announced that President Bush approved his request for a Presidential Disaster Declaration as a result of the extreme threat of wildfires in all counties across the state.

Under the federal Stafford Act, today's action makes Texans whose homes and property were destroyed or damaged by wildfires eligible to receive individual assistance; local jurisdictions that have been fighting the costly fires will be eligible for public assistance.

The disaster declaration is effective Dec. 1, when the wildfire threat became severe statewide. Perry also asked that federal public assistance be approved to defray the costs of prestaging fire fighting assets so that fires could be contained before they threatened lives, homes and communities.

"We will continue to do everything we can to protect lives and property in the days and weeks ahead," Perry said.

This Presidential Disaster

Declaration replaces Perry's earlier request for an emergency disaster declaration and better ensures that Texas is eligible for all available federal assistance.

Since Dec. 26, 456 wildfires have burned nearly 254,000 acres, consumed 340 homes, and forced the evacuation of more than 4,800 individuals in Texas.

The state has coordinated a campaign to fight fires from the air with 1,600 aircraft sorties dropping 1.5 million gallons of fire retardant, as well as from the team won the NCAA Outdoor bowl game in back-to-back ground with state and out-ofstate bulldozer crews assisting local fire fighters.

We've all heard the argument, evolution is a 'science' and therefore it is somehow more valuable or respectable than religion. This same argument won the right of evolution studies in our public school classrooms, and helped build the wall around so called non -scientific 'creationism' and to this day keeps it from being taught in our public schools. It seems that labeling something as a science is a one way ticket to popularity and acceptance. Deeming something to be of a religious nature practically guarantees objection, often ridicule. Could these labels have been sold a bill of goods

When we take a closer look at the definitions of science and religion, we find that evolution is based on the same premises as any religion, and isn't a science at all.

Science is defined as the 'systematized knowledge derived from observation, study, and experimentation carried on in order to determine the nature or principles of what is being studied.' To observe, study and experiment would mean that one would have to have some kind of contact with that which is being observed, studied, or experimented upon. For example, one can study a plant, or a gas, or be less than honest? Could we the effects of weather, since one can see them happen right bewhen they say that evolution is fore them, in real time. study or experiment on evolution? Evolution is the process of something moving from one stage of development to another. What do we really have to scientifically prove evolution?

A scientist might have a fossil, but we can only speculate as to the age and appearance of the animal creating that fossil. No one has ever witnessed evolution of life, no one here now was there to observe, study and experiment. Like it or not, we can only form theories and beliefs about what might have been. As sound as these theories might be, they are and will always be theories. Evolution is simply a system of belief based on what we think might have happened. Those who believe in evolution have faith in the scientist's abilities to speculate and imagine what might have been. This is not science. This is faith.

that (according to evolutionist) ...but so is evolution. Evolutionists hold to their beliefs with great 'ardor and faith'. The difference between the two is that evolutionists believe that there is no God or that a God didn't create the world, and they work from that principle. Creationists believe in a God that gave man life and created the world, and base their system of belief on

There is nothing to observe, study and experiment with, both must rely on faith, and relying on faith isn't science.

It is time we removed the phony and inaccurate label of 'science' from evolution and see it for what it really is - a religion, based on faith and a system of belief.

If public schools are not allowed to teach religion, then the theories of evolution have no place in a classroom. If they are The definition of religion is allowed to teach theories based 'cause, principle or system of on faith, like evolution, then crebeliefs held to with ardor and ationism should be taught also.

Less calories, but still tastes good

It seems to be more talk about our personal weight this time of year than any other. Most of us are guilty of having over indulged and are now moaning that we need new clothes dryers as the old one is over heating and shrinking our clothes!

Alright. How about a few dishes that have less calories but still taste like we're indulging. Sound Good? Ok, then try these. Light Carrot Cake

1/2 cup sugar

1/3 cup vegetable oil 1/3 cup orange juice concen

3 egg whites

1 cup all purpose flour 1 tsp. baking powder

1 tsp. ground cinnamon

1/2 tsp. ground allspice 1/4 tsp. baking soda

1/8 tsp. salt

1 cup grated carrots

2 tsp. XXX sugar

Combine first four ingredients in mixing bowl and beat 30 seconds. Combine flour, baking powder, cinnamon, allspice, baking soda, and salt; add to the orange juice mixture and mix well. Stir in carrots.

Pour into an eight inch square baking pan that has been sprayed well with non-stick cooking spray. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes or until toothpick inserted comes out clean. Cool and dust with XXX if desired.
