LOSS EXCEEDS $500,000.

By Associated Press. Mobile, Ala., Oct. 8 .- Further details of the recent conflagration at Port Limon, Costa Rica, indicate that the losses will aggregate $500,000. The loss is partially covered by insurance to the amount of about $150,000.

A confession has been secured from Isaac Lee, a Chinaman, who says that he intended to burn his stock of goods to secure the insurance money. He employed a negro criminal to do the work. The negro has been arrested and is in jail. Both will be held for murder and arson, since three deaths resulted from the conflagration.

CAUSED BAD WRECK ON THE KATY NEAR JOLLY THIS MORNING.

THE PASSENGER COACHES

Turned Over at the Side of the Track and a Score Were Injured.

Misfortunes and railway wrecks never come singly and railroad men will tell you that one wreck is likely to be followed shortly by two or three more.

The events of the last twenty-four hours on the Katy railroad have borne out this tradition. Following a freight wreck near Nocona eardly yesterday morning, which still had traffic blocked this morning, a more serious wreck occurred at about 7 o'clock this morning when two coaches carrying benorning's session of the International gers were overturned by spreading Conference of Cotton Growers and rails about two miles this side of Joi-Manufacturers. The conference was ly and about eight miles east of this

> When the wreck occurred the train was running at a rate of between fifteen and twenty miles an hour. On account of the softened condition of the track, caused by the recent heavy rains, the track suddenly gave way and the two coaches toppled over on their sides, the engine and tender remaining upright on the bed of the track. The passengers were tossed and jumbled about among the seats and many of them would certainly have been killed had the train been running

A GIRL'S HEELS

Her Shoes Said to Be an Index to Her Character.

"If you want to know whether a girl is slovenly or not look at her heels," said the wise woman to the young man who was contemplating matrimony. "Her gown may be pretty, her hat becoming, her neckwear trim and neat and her gloves well fitting, but if her heels are run over look out for her. Her trimness in other respects simply denotes that she is neat spasmodically, that she will make an effort to keep things tidled and in order only when she is urged to or because she has some special provocation. But by nature she is slack. The man that marries a girl with perpetually run over heels will find her coming to the breakfast table as soon as the honeymoon is over in a tumbled kimono and with her hair in curl papers. She never will be a good housekeeper.

"On the other hand, I've seen girls who maybe did not have such a trim appearance, whose hair was apt to be a little flying, but whose heels rested firmly on the ground, and never did I discover they were in the slovenly, high, class. Maybe they were not careful enough of outward appearances, but they kept their buttons sewed on, rips repaired, spots sponged off and their rooms in immaculate order." - Ex-the public. Are those who so mercilessly flail the unhappy Mr. Fairbanks going to quail in the presence of the First Citizen, or will they challenge him before the bar of public opinion?

We desire to see the republicans who are enraged at Fairbanks show the mettle that is in them. If they continue to attack Fairbanks, who does not "indulge" and remain silent in the presence of the First Citizen, who drained his glass while the banqueters shouted, then we shall be forced to the conclusion that they fear to enfrank Kell President counter the wrath of the strenuous Teddy. It is clear that he doesn't give a continental whether people approve or disapprove his fondness for 'sperits" and at St. Louis he brazen: ly challenged them to combat.

Now what are they going to do about

What will the great human drouth say about it? Will he condone this affront to the cold water sentiment or will he discharge a limpid and luculent peroration at the First Citizen?

We insist that it is time to forgive Fairbanks for something that he didn't do or include in the list of Those to be annihilated the strenuous one for something he did with the most bewildering audacity.-Houston Post.

When the Democracy of Texas authorizes such a man as John H. Kirby to speak for it, it will be time enough for him to announce to the world that Texas Democrats do not favor Bryan for the presidency. In doing this, the Texas lumber king may have been ex-those Democrats who are closely allied with him in the making of money by questionable methods, or perhaps he may have got his inspiration from high political sources. If the latter, then it is time to find out who, or which one of the men of Texas whom the Democrats have honored and given their support for high office is willing to come out as bold as Mr. Kirby and oppose the nomination of Bryan for the Democratic presidential nomination. If matter in a manner which will be de-Calberson to allow the use of his name as a Democratic presidential aspirant most positively refused to allow the use of his name in such a contemptible and undermining scheme. With Culberson out of the way, those who oppose the nomination of Bryan it now seems will be forced to make an open fight against the great commoner. the nomination of Bryan over any other man are ready for such a fight and der obligations or in any way under the influence of Mr. Kirby and his stripe of Democrats shall represent Texas as a delegate to the National

> It takes live, hustling business men to make any town grow. Wichita Falls has her share of business men who are devoting their time, talents and a fair share of their money toward bringing more people here, and the results are telling and will continue to be felt so long as they work in harmony. If the good work they are doing continues uninterrupted, the 1910 census will place Wichita Falls in the list of towns that have over 10,000 population. Of course these enterprising citiens who are doing what they can to build up Wichita Falls expect to get all their money back with good interest by the enhancement in value of their holdings. There are only a very few who are not contributing of their means to help along the work of pushing Wichita Falls to the front. They know full well that they are being benefitted, yet refuse to do their part, or in fact any thing towards building the town and as a rule place prohibitive values on their holdings. In this respect the town is unfortunate.

Commercial Secretaries of Texas Need Helping Hands in Their Work.

Beaumont, Tex., Oct. 6 .- A word to you concerning this legislative committee of the Commercial Secretaries. Possibly to some of you who read this the significance of the name may be vague even misleading, for in these piping times of trust-busting there may be many political privateers sailing un der the flag of "legislative."

Do not run away with the impression that the secretaries are loaded for bear and will come into camp every night with a sackful of corporations shot through the neck, and picked up dead in their tracks. The objective of this body of men is otherwise. They are magnates, not missiles; they attract, not repel. They have no wish to fill the State up with trusts, but they certainly wish to stand as a buffer between the legitimate investor wishing to come to Texas, and the political fanatic armed with an ax and lying in ambush on the border line.

Up Into the Stars.

That there is a clear cut furrow in the field of equity is not debatable; that these commercial secretaries are moving within the confines of this groove is here made clear to those who do not fully understand the nature of their work. These men are not professional boomers, wildcatting in a field of hazard and caring not whether they bring in dusters or pay streaks. They are drilling in the proven limits, and if they are supported in their work will build Texas up higher than the pyramid of Cheops; will thrust the crest of the Lone Star State far up into the domain of the stars, and across the wide field of it will stick black smokestacks standing like sentinels in the night guarding the industrial interests of the State we all love so well.

Let them alone in their noble work, you say? Nothing of the kind. Help them along in their noble work is better. These men are up in the firing line-and somebody has to pack the ammunition. Will you be one of that corps? These secretaries are salary men, but they are throwing an aggressive spirit into this industrial battle which money cannot buy; they are pushing their lines a little further, and a little further ahead whenever opportunity knocks at their door. They need ammunition! Are they to have

Is a Moral Force.

This legislative committee of the Commercial Secretaries' is a moral force working along advisory lines; it is a sort of board of strategy seeking to attract by fair means the overflow of capital from the congested States. They are not infringing on the statutes, but wish to reduce the chafing where State laws may abrade corporate rights. They are not throwing fat into the pans of greedy corporations, but wish to allay the fears of the outside money into which a great scare to the outside money into the out has been thrown. They wish to do this by thoroughly legitimate methods. by reduction of the friction, by modification of those laws which in the heat of the trust crusade may have have been hammered out too keen on the cutting edge. They will work along the lines of the live and let live policy; they are the smooth lubricant between joints that creak with friction. POISONED GLOVES.

They Had Their Home In Italy With the Borgias and Medicis.

Perfumed gloves have contributed largely to the bright and cruel side of romance, of fact and of fiction. They had their home in Italy, the home of the Borgias and De' Medicis, and it is said, with how much truth will never be known, that many an untimely death was caused by wearing perfumed gloves whose scented palms concealed a deadly poison. It seems to have been a favorite pastime of the notorious Alexander VI. and of his more notorious son, Caesar Borgia, to invite a friend to dine, show him every attention as a guest, present him with a beautiful pair of perfumed and poisoned gloves and next day send flowers to his funeral, accompanied by a little note, polite, but firm, requesting the immediate transference of all the property of the deceased to the coffers of the Borgias.

There is an interesting and very ugly story of a famous poisoner of the fifteenth century who confessed under the water cure to having murdered for a consideration about fifteen people by means of poisoned gloves. The poison she employed was so slow in taking effect that for years she remained undiscovered and finally came to grief through her own foolish boasting .-Kansas City Star.

THE GREAT RACHEL.

Fondness of the Famous Actress For Scarfpins.

A rather comical story relating to the great Rachel and at one time her devoted admirer, Prince Demidoff, runs

It seems that upon the occasion of the prince's visits to the charming actress she would often greet him in playful mood and while criticising his attire, which was the special object of his thought, would draw from his' necktie the pin which secured it, a cameo, topaz, ruby or whatever it might chance to be, and place it in her pincushion or upon her corsage.

This habit greatly amused the prince, it seemed so childish and such a mischievous act, and it really added to her charm in his eyes. One day, however, he called wearing a sort of stock, and consequently had no jewel.

The observant maid noticed that there was no pin in the tie of Deniidoff, and when she announced him to his mistress mentioned the fact. "It is the prince, but he wears a stock."

"Then say I am out," replied Rachel. Finding himself refused an interriew, the prince set about learning the n. It mightily amused him, and thereafter he never appeared with out the bauble that had always proved the sesame to the great aetress' presence.-Minneapolis Journal.

The Poet Shelley.

Shelley lived with arder among ideas, aspirations and passions in which there was something at once irresponsible and abstract. He followed every impulse, without choice or restraint, with the abandonment of a I leaf in the wind. "Oh, lift me as a wave, a leaf, a cloud!" was his prayer to the west wind and to every influence. Circumstances meant so little, to him that he was unconscious of the z cruelty of change to sentiment, and thus of the extent of his cruelty to I women. He aimed at moral perfection, but was really of a perfect aesthetic selfishness. You will have the very best cup of coffee it is possible to produce. We have always been COFFEE CRANKS and think we have the best line of coffees that the world produces, and we do not confine ourselves to any one line but buy coffee as we buy everything else—where we believe we are getting the best value for our money, and find that some roasters will do better on one grade of goods while another will do better on another. No matter what grade or priced coffees you use we can give you exceptional value for your money and can suit the individual taste of all.
