TWO ARRESTS MADE

J. A. NORWOOD AND O. W. ROBISON HELD FOR MURDER OF DR. IRL DYCUS.

THE INQUEST IS DELAYED

Justice Brothers Continue Inquiry Until Further Evidence Can Be Secured.

The shreds of evidence that had been gathered in connection with the death of Dr. Irl Dycus pointed so strongly toward foul play that last night O. W. Robison, a washer at the Wichita laundry, and J. A. Norwood, a carpenter, who has been in the employ of Brown & Cranmer, were placed in jail and this morning a formal charge of murder was sworn against them by Constable Randolph.

Norwood and Robison are the men who had made threats against Dr. Dycus at the Elite pool hall early Tuesday morning. They were subpoenaed to appear before the coroner's court yesterday afternoon and were kept under surveillance until their formal arrest this morning.

The coroner's inquest which was begun yesterday afternoon was continued this morning to give the officers more time in unearthing evidence as to the cause of the young man's death.

In the meantime Robison and Norwood are confined in separate cells at the county jail.

Several pieces of evidence which may assume importance at the continuance of the hearing have been secured by the officers now working on the case.

One of these is the finding of a pair of carpenter's overalls under Norwood's bed at the mansion hotel late yesterday afternoon by Marshal Gwinn and Officer Jernigan, on which were stains having the appearance of blood.

Late this afternoon these stains were examined under a microscope by J. W. DuVal, who pronounced them not to be blood.

Late yesterday afternoon spots resembling blood were found on the Denver track near Hunt's elevator. Whether these spots are blood has not yet been determined.

J. L. McConkey, who has spent much time looking over the ground where the body of Dr. Dycus was found on the railroad track, has discovered no conclusive evidence, but feels that the young man was murdered and his body carried to the spot, where it was laid on the rails.

Probably one of the most important pieces of testimony will be the statement of Walter White, night call boy for the Fort Worth and Denver. White told a Times reporter this morning that while sitting on a truck at the side of the depot at about 12:15 a. m. Tuesday he was seized by two men answering the description of Norwood and Robison and that the men demanded with oaths to know if he was Governor somebody, whose name he does not remember, and that upon convincing the men that he was not the fellow they wanted, that they wanted to know where he was, saying that they were going to fix him. White does not know which direction the men took after leaving him, nor does he remember of having seen anyone answering the description of Dr. Dycus.

In his testimony before the inquest yesterday, Norwood said that he had no ill feeling toward Dycus and that he never saw him after he left the pool room. Robison also made the same statement. They say that after going to the Wichita and the St. James hotels, they went to their room in the Maason hotel and went to bed. This statement is corroborated by a third man, whose name has not been learned.

Norwood says that he never changed clothing on Tuesday morning and that the clothes he now wears are the same he had on Monday night.

Both men deny very stoutly that they made any assault upon Dr. Dycus or that they saw him after leaving the pool hall.

Their statements in regard to their actions in the pool hall are contradicted by other witnesses in several points.

So far, no conclusive evidence has been unearthed against either of the men now under arrest, but in view of their threats and actions, and the fact that the body was found two miles from town, at a spot where the dead man could have no motive for visiting, and other additional shreds of evidence, furnish the grounds for their detention until a thorough investigation is made.

1000 BOATS SWAMPED IN TYPHOON AT CANTON.

By Associated Press.
Canton, China, July 29.—A devastating typhoon swamped a thousand native craft and many people were drowned. The British gunboat Robin, and the French gunboats Argus and Vigilant were considerably damaged. In the city numerous houses collapsed, entombing the occupants.

Dispatches state that the funeral of Dr. Dycus was held at the home of his mother in Fort Worth this afternoon. Letters found on the body yesterday from an officer in the Fort Worth Masonic lodge, were written to notify Dr. Dycus that he had been elected to membership in the lodge and further stated that last night had been set for the date of his initiation.

Judge Carrigan this morning ordered a recess in the district court to give District Attorney Martin and the officers and opportunity to investigate the case thoroughly. At this time it is not known when the inquest will be resumed.

Young Dycus Well Known in Fort Worth.

The tragic death of Dr. Dycus, follows close on that of his father, Judge F. E. Dycus, a prominent lawyer of this city, who died on April 1. Dr. Dycus had resided for twelve years in Fort Worth and was a student of the Fort Worth Medical College. He intended returning to Fort Worth this fall to complete his course at this institution. He had already received a certificate to practice medicine and during last summer was assistant to City Physician Solon Milton.

Dr. Dycus was born 21 years ago at Decatur. While still a child his parents removed to this city, where he attended the public schools, including the high school. He attended the State university for a term and developing a talent for medicine early decided to take up the practice of that profession. Had not the fatality of Monday cut off his career, he would have been graduated next spring from the medical college.

The young man had a large circle of friends in Fort Worth. He is survived by his mother, two brothers and two sisters. The body will be brought to this city and interred near the recent grave of the father of the young man who met with such an untimely end. Judge Dycus' death was also a sudden one, occurring after a short illness from blood poison, caused by a slight scratch.

The shock has been a severe one to the family, which is still in mourning for Judge Dycus.

Family is Prominent.
The Dycus family has been one of the most prominent in North Texas. They were among the early settlers in Archer County and maintained a country place there after the late Judge Dycus moved to Fort Worth and formed a legal partnership with George E. Miller. Dr. Dycus returned to Archer County after the death of his father.

COMMON PEOPLE OFFER CONTRIBUTIONS

By Associated Press.
Lincoln, Neb., July 29.—Charles Bryan today remitted to Governor Haskell, treasurer of the democratic national committee the sum of $1,500, given by 101 contributors to the campaign funds. Treasurer Haskell stated today that two hours after the selection of the treasurer had been announced $2,700 had been contributed by two local residents. This sum came without solicitation.

Lincoln, Neb., July 29.—When W. J. Bryan returned to Lincoln this morning he found about a bushel of letters containing contributions to his campaign fund. These letters came from every part of the United States, and contained amounts varying from $1 to several hundred dollars. Among the checks was one from a Memphis newspaper for $428.75, which that paper had collected from its subscribers. A list of givers to this Memphis fund include a "widow's mite," $1, and an equal amount from the Mary Galloway home of Memphis. Word has been received at Fairview that in all parts of the country democratic newspapers are receiving contributions to Mr. Bryan's fund. Especially in the South is this kind of work being done.

INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE CONVENTION ADJOURNS AFTER NOMINATING CANDIDATES.

BRYAN'S NAME IS HISSED

Man Who Attempted to Place Name Before Convention Expelled From Hall.

By Associated Press.
Chicago, Ill., July 29.—The first national convention of the Independence League Party finished its labors early today, after nominating Thomas Hisgen of Massachusetts for president of the United States and John Temple Graves of Georgia for vice president and the adoption of a platform of principles.

The nomination of Hisgen was reached on the third ballot, with a vote of eight hundred and thirty-one out of nine hundred and forty-nine cast. Graves was nominated by acclamation.

John Sheppard of Kansas, who attempted to put Bryan's name in nomination, had to be escorted from the hall by a detail of the sergeant at arms, while the delegates surged behind, denouncing him as a traitor.

Fire at Quanh Early This Morning Destroys Four Two-Story Bricks.
Special to the Times.
Quanh, Tex., July 29.—At 4:30 this morning fire broke out in the center of the business portion of this city, and before the flames could be checked four handsome two-story brick buildings, together with a greater portion of their contents, were destroyed, entailing a loss to the owners of the buildings and the stocks of goods of about $75,000, the loss being about half covered by insurance.

The buildings destroyed were those occupied by the Lewis-Sanders Hardware Company and the Blunt & Company dry goods store.

The cause of the fire is not known, but is supposed to be of incendiary origin.

WILL TAKE STEPS FOR TRIAL OF STANDARD CASES.

Bryan Plans for Campaign.
By Associated Press.
Lincoln, Neb., July 29.—A close personal friend of William J. Bryan today said that Mr. Bryan will make few speeches during the campaign and that these will be carefully prepared and made before the first of October.

During October he expects to remain at home and assist in the work of the campaign through a discussion of the issues in the form of interviews.

In view of the structures in Taft's speech of acceptance Mr. Bryan will issue a formal statement in which he will answer his opponent.

THAW GETS 3 YEARS

MAN WHO CLAIMED TO BE THE WEALTHY NEW YORKER CONVICTED OF SWINDLING.

MADE BOGUS CONFESSION

Claimed to Have Been an Accomplice in Guinness Murders at LaPorte, Indiana.

Julius G. Truelson, alias Jonathan G. Thaw, who made a sensational bogus confession in the Wilbarger county jail, in which he claimed to have assisted Mrs. Guinness, the LaPorte, Indiana, murder fiend, in five of her murders, entered a plea of guilty in the district court here yesterday afternoon to a charge of swindling, and was sentenced to three years in the State penitentiary.

Truelson plead with the jury for leniency and showed himself a good pleader, his talk probably influencing the jury in giving him a short term sentence.

Truelson, it will be remembered, was the man who, claiming to be Jonathan G. Thaw, opened an account with a Vernon bank on a worthless draft, and afterward came to Wichita Falls and purchased $350 worth of diamonds from A. S. Fonville, giving a check against his account in the bank at Vernon as payment.

He was arrested on a Fort Worth and Denver train at Dalhart and the diamonds recovered.

In the Vernon jail he attempted to play insane and made an alleged confession concerning the Guinness murders, which resulted in Sheriff Smutser of LaPorte making a trip down to Vernon to investigate.

After he was made to acknowledge that his confession was bogus, Truelson gave up the insanity role.

Sheriff John T. Williams of Wilbarger county, who brought Truelson down for trial says that he is charged with swindling at Vernon and that the grand jury there will probably return several indictments against him.

Abell Sent Up for Two Years.
Roy Abell, charged with the forgery of a check, was found guilty yesterday morning in the district court and the jury fixed his punishment at two years in the State penitentiary.

Small Blaze at Dr. Reed's Stable.
The fire department was called out early this morning by a small blaze in Dr. Reed's stable near the Argyle hotel. Dr. Reed was feeding his horse when he heard the crackling of flames in the eorn bin and upon investigation discovered a fire in the husks on top of the eorn. The blaze was extinguished before much damage was done. The origin of the fire is unknown.

DO YOU WANT TO MAKE OR LOSE MONEY THIS SUMMER?

There is no good reason for any "summer dullness" in the stores of this city. That's a strong statement—but it's not nearly so strong as the one to follow. ¶ No store in this city ever suffered from summer dullness that was not directly traceable to its advertising policy—that was not inevitable on account of its advertising policy. This is a strong statement—but not so strong as the one to follow. ¶ You—if you who read this are a merchant in this city—have the absolute power to decide whether, during this summer, your store shall lag and lose ground, through encouraging the non-buying habit in the people—or shall keep as busy as in the so-called "busy seasons." You decide the matter one way or the other when you decide on how much or how little you will ADVERTISE during these summer months. ? ? ? ? ?

ANIMALS. AMBIDEXTROUS.

Right handedness and right eyedness came with genus homo. Dr. George M. Gould has watched for them in squirrels that use their front paws to hold nuts, cats that strike at insects in the air or play with wounded mice and in many other animals, but he is certain no preference is given to the right side over the left.

But in the lowest human savages all over the world choice in greater expertness of one hand is clearly present. One cause for its development is in primitive military customs. In all tribes and countries since man used implements of offense and defense the left side, where the heart lies, has been protected by the shield, and the left hand was called the shield hand, while the right hand was called the spear hand.

Next to fighting came commerce. The fundamental condition of bartering was counting with the low numbers, one to ten. The fingers of the free or right hand were naturally first used, and all fingers today are called digits, as are the figures themselves, while the basis of our numberings is the decimal or ten fingered system. Every detail and action of the soldier from ancient Greece to modern America is right sided in every detail. Firing from the right shoulder and sighting with the right eye bring the right eye into prominence.—Exchange.

Her Protector.

"Well, sir," explained young Mr. Soobert, "it was like this: I thought my wife might be afraid of traps, so I bought her a watchdog. He was a fierce looking bull, and I reckoned he'd about fill the bill. I got him in the morning and had him sent right out to the house. When I got home that night one of the toughest looking hoboos you ever saw was sitting on the porch. 'What in thunder are you doing here?' I asked. 'Well, boss,' says he, 'I come lookin' fer a handout, an' de lady she gimme 50 cents to stick around an' protect her from dat dog o' yours. She's sure scared of 'im.'—Kansas City News-Examiner.

An Antidote.

Sir Henry Irving was frequently a victim to the interjections of gallery gods. When playing "Racheth," one night he had reached that dramatic moment in the banquet scene when in dreadful fear he bids the ghost of Banquo to vanish:

"Hence, horrible shadow, Unreal mockery, hence!" he exclaimed and, shuddering convulsively, dropped to his knees, covering his face with his robe. As the ghost vanished a shrill voice in the gallery broke the momentary silence: "It's all right now, 'Enery; he's gone!"—London Belman.

WHICH WAS RIGHT?

See if You Can Untangle the Knots in This Problem.

A young man named Enathius desired to learn eloquence and art of pleading, and he bargained with Protagoras, the ancient Greek sophist, for instructions, agreeing to pay one half of the fee down and the other half on the first day he gained a case. It took the young man so long to learn that his tutor came to the conclusion that he was delaying his start in business; to avoid paying the other half of the fee, so Protagoras sued him for the money.

When the case came up for trial Protagoras said to the young man: "You act most absurdly, young man, because in either case you must pay me. If the judges decide against you, you must pay, and if they decide for you you must pay, for you will then have gained your case."

"You are wrong," replied the young man. "I will win either way. If the judges are for me, I will not have to pay, and if they are against me I will not have to pay, for this last was the very bargain between us—namely, if I did not win my case."

The judges considered the case inexplicable, and as they could not see their way to any decision they adjourned the case to a day that never came for any of the principals. On Protagoras' side it was a case of losing when he won and on the young student's side winning when he lost.

Peppermint and Tobacco.

If you have a boy who has begun smoking too early and whom you wish to cure of the habit, feed him peppermints. Dr. O. Clayton Jones of Silverton, England, writing in the London Lancet, is authority for this simple cure. Dr. Jones writes: "To break the smoking habit in a youth there is nothing better than peppermint drops. He cannot smoke with a 'bullseye' in his mouth, and even for some time after it is dissolved tobacco will not blend kindly with the taste that remains. Socially the cure may seem worse than the disease, but from a medical point of view the sucking of peppermints is far less hurtful. A common 'bullseye' will prevent smoking for nearly an hour, so the amount of sweets used need not be great."

Origin of Boston's Glory.

Even as early as the days of Henry VIII. some sort of volunteer force had existed in England, and what is now the Honorable Artillery company was formed at that time and became a center of instruction for the city trained bands during the time of Cromwell. The Honorable Artillery company may be counted among the things which crossed in the Mayflower, for in 1639 was formed the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts.—London News.

The Rain Was Hot.

Mrs. Goltz had been waiting for a week or more to give her rear porch a good scrubbing, but she was always afraid of incurring the keen displeasure of the people in the flat below, who, it seemed, were never off their porch and who would get all the drippings of her scrubbing operation.

When it rained, though, Mrs. Goltz saw what she thought was her opportunity. The people down below surely would not be out on the porch during the rainstorm, and all the water that dripped down would be attributed to the rain. She filled a bucket with boiling hot water, threw in a sallow cake of soap and got busy.

But she had reckoned wrong, for the people down below were on their porch enjoying the shower. In a minute Mrs. Goltz heard a woman's voice below saying: "Why, Martha, the rain's coming through from the porch above. The roof must leak."

And then Martha observed, with a gasp: "Yes. And, oh, heavens, had you noticed that the rain is hot? Did you ever bear of such a thing? Aren't terrible things happening? All these awful murders, and now hot rain! But it's the Lord's doings, and we must submit."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

At the End of the Voyage.

Jonah disembarked. "The only trip I don't have to tip the steward," he exclaimed. "There with he regarded the whale half approvingly."—New York Sun.

Different Points of View.

"It's hard to be poor," sighed the needy pessimist. "That's queer," replied the ragged optimist. "I always found it easy enough."

Shir: Fashion Notes.
 Hair ornaments are returning to favor with great rapidity, and butterfly clips in violet and gold make stunning ornaments for evening coiffures. Jet is used to some extent and velvet ribbon. Then, too, many women are wearing their hair in great bows in the back, around which quite broad ribbon is fastened, with a dainty bow at the top.

Sets consisting of scarf pins and sleeve links for wear with shirtwaists are among the newer novelties. French gilt, with coral, lapis lazuli, moonstones, amethyst or jade are effectively used, and they are quite inexpensive.

Plaid taffeta skirts are being worn by young women, and many have them made with jumper waists. They are extremely useful and comfortable for wear with sheer waists. Cretonne is certainly having a vogue. It is said that there will be far pieces worn this winter, in the workmanship of which bits of this popular material will be shown. There will be cretonne slippers, reticules of cut leather with cretonne linings. In fact, it will continue to be used in many ways and it is really very effective. Footgear deserves a vast amount of attention. The fashionable woman will see to it that her kimono has Japanese gold embroidered slippers to carry out the Japanese idea. Fine black kid is correct, of breakfast gowns, for low-heeled shoes. For her lingerie luncheon frock Louis-heeled bronze kid or white canvas oxfords are the thing.

Marking House Linen.

The marking of house linen has become a matter of concern to the prospective bride and to the young housekeeper who sets out to have a well-filled linen closet. The heavily padded, exquisitely embroidered letters are "the thing" and here are directions as to their placing:

Sheets are generally marked with four-inch initials, placed directly in the center, about two inches below the hem or hem-stitching. These should be so placed that when the edge of the hem is turned over the letters will be right side up when looked at from the foot of the bed.

Similar initials should be used on the pillow cases, but only half the size. These should go on in the middle of the case, an inch above the hem. They should be stamped so they read from left to right, when the pillow is in place, with the hems to the outside of the bed.

Tablecloths are marked with three and a half or four inch letters, or in monograms. These are arranged diagonally about eleven inches in from the edge of the table; more often they are put at either end, but in the same relative distance from the edge.

This position assures them not being covered by dishes or centerpiece. They will also show up better than if the letters do not come on the table, but a few inches above the hem, as is sometimes done.

Napkins are marked in letters to match those on the tablecloth they are to accompany. It is also well to have two sets for general use, marked with a different kind of letter. There is less danger of their being mixed with the better ones in sorting. Either one, two or three initials are used, or a monogram set in a medallion.

Towels are marked in any size letter that suits the fancy. As a rule they are rarely more than four inches high, though a single initial is sometimes taller. They may also be as small as an inch and a half. The letters go about an inch and a half above the hem.

The foregoing article will be quite a help to the woman who is anxious to have her linen marked in "just the right way."

It is almost certain at this writing that young Dr. Irl Dycus was murdered by thugs and footpads. As to whether the parties suspected and charged with this foul crime are the right ones or not is yet to be proven, and proof in a case of that kind will be difficult, if not entirely impossible to establish, to the satisfaction of the law. As a consequence, the chances are that if it was murder, the murderer will escape punishment: Under circumstances like that, surrounding this foul crime, it begins to look as if the citizens of Wichita Falls will be forced to take matters in their own hands in order to rid the city of the criminal class by breaking the law themselves. Time after time vagrants—persons without any visible means of support, have been brought into our local courts, tried by jury and set free. There is plenty of work, both in town and country, and there is little or no excuse for any able bodied man to be out of work. Much as this paper dislikes to make the statement, it has gotten to that point where it is absolutely unsafe for any man who is the least bit under the influence of liquor to traverse certain streets and localities of the city, more especially if it is known that he has money on his person. Wichita Falls should be freed from these thugs and vagrants, by process of the law if possible, and if not that way then by any means thought best by a committee of citizens that might be organized for such a purpose. The continued prosperity of Wichita Falls does not, in any degree, depend upon the vagrant, drunken, midnight prowling class of people and if it should be made known to them without further parleying that this city shall not further be regarded as a rendezvous for that low-down, cowardly class of criminals.

To the Citizens of Wichita Falls:
Believing that clean streets and alleys are a city's best advertisement, as well as the best sanitary precaution, as chairman of the sanitary committee of the city council of Wichita Falls, I am making arrangements to try and keep the city as clean as possible and expect and will, of course, have the support and aid of all good citizens.

Others will be handled as the law directs.
I find upon looking into the matter that we have a very strong sanitary ordinance and that the throwing or depositing of any matter, even waste paper, into the streets or alleys is a violation of the ordinance, and I also find that any officer of the city or member of the sanitary committee who fails to prosecute any violation of this ordinance brought to his notice is subject to arrest and prosecution.

I noticed this morning while the streets were being cleaned that within a very few minutes after the wagon passed papers were being thrown in the streets, and I have instructed the city marshal and his deputies to enforce the ordinance to the letter.
Now let us all get together and have the cleanest as well as the busiest city of its size in Texas (or elsewhere) and see how fast we grow. Very respectfully,
B. J. BEAN.

You can fool part of the people all the time and all the people part of the time, but you cannot fool all the people all the time--Abraham Lincoln

Over 2500 assesment orders have gone to pieces in the United States, leaving more than Thirteen Million of their members without insurance.

The average age of these orders was less than 15 years. Yet in the face of these facts, people continue to join the same kind of concerns in the year 1908 and think they have their lives insured.

In truth, these concerns furnish only temporary protection. The law forbids them to guarantee the amount you are to pay or the amount to be paid at death.

Never Lose Sight of This.
A legal reserve insurance company which faithfully accumulates, securely invests and honestly handles the mathematical reserve contemplated by its plan of organization and required by the insurance laws of the several States, cannot fail.
It cannot fail because the system upon which it is founded is mathematically correct, sure in its operation as the multiplication table itself.
It is as certain to fulfill its contracts to the last as that two and two are four; as certain as that an accumulation of one hundred cents will settle on obligation of one dollar.
If a legal reserve company has failed at any time in the past, it was not because of any defect of the legal reserve system, but because it had departed in some vital particular from the requirements of that system—a thing practically impossible under the new legal reserve laws of New York, the most exacting ever enacted.
An assessment company, whether a fraternal society or a private association, which conducts its business economically and efficiently, which faithfully accounts for all receipts and honestly disburses the same, and which securely invests the meager emergency fund accumulated in its earlier years, is nevertheless bound ultimately to fail.
It is bound to fail because the system upon which it is founded is mathematically wrong.
It is bound to fail because two and two are four, and not seven; because the requirements of the multiplication table are inexorable as death itself; because the rates are too low to permit of the accumulation, when members are young, of a fund sufficient to provide for the higher mortality that must come with increasing age.
Though its business be managed economically and its affairs administered honestly, it is nevertheless bound to fail ultimately, because it is not possible for even honesty and economy and upright purpose to pay an obligation of one dollar with an accumulation of thirty cents.—Mutual Interests.

Just a Fish Story. Forty years ago, when my father was captain of an East India trading ship, while off the coast of Africa near the equator the ship's carpenter was taken sick and died. He was sewed up in canvas, and with him were sewed his kit of tools and grindstone for ballast to sink him. Services were held and the body committed to the sea.

Four days later the ship's boy fell overboard, and a great shark came up under the stern and swallowed the boy before he could be reached.

The next day the shark was still following the ship. A shark hook was baited and put over the stern, and the shark was caught, but was so large it could not be taken on board, and they were obliged to shoot him. He looked so plump and large the mate, who was an old whaler, wanted to go over the side and cut the fish open. He was lowered over and cut a hole in the shark and was surprised to hear voices and on looking in saw the ship's boy turning the grindstone for the ship's carpenter, who was sharpening his ax to cut their way out.

My father, who is eighty years old, can vouch for this that it is a fish story.—Boston Journal.

DECENT BURIAL.

LAIBORNE called Oscar through the soft dusk of the April evening. The phalanx of stars marched anxiously across the heavens. Clalborne lifted his face gratefully to the cool night breeze, for he was worn with the stress and anxiety of the day, and there remained much to do. The bungalow had been speedily transformed into a hospital. One nurse, borrowed from a convalescent patient at the Springs, was to be re-enforced by another summoned by wire from Washington.

The ambassador's demand to be allowed to remove Armitage to his own house at the Springs had been promptly rejected by the surgeon. A fever had hold of John Armitage, who was ill enough without the wound in his shoulder, and the surgeon moved his traps to the bungalow and took charge of the case. Oscar had brought Clalborne's bag and all was now in readiness for the night.

Oscar's erect figure at salute and his respectful voice brought Clalborne down from the stars.

"We can get rid of the prisoners tonight—yes?"

"At midnight two secret service men will be here from Washington to travel with them to Baltimore to their boat. The baron and my father arranged it over the telephone from the Springs. The prisoners understand that they are in serious trouble and have agreed to go quietly. The government agents are discreet men. You brought up the buckboard?"

"But the men should be hanged, for they shot our captain, and he may die."

The little man spoke with sad cadence. A pathos in his erect, sturdy figure, his lowered tone as he referred to Armitage, touched Clalborne.

"He will get well, Oscar. Everything will seem brighter tomorrow. You had better sleep until it is time to drive to the train."

Oscar stepped nearer, and his voice sank to a whisper.

"I have not forgotten the tall man who died; it is not well for him to go unburied. You are not a Catholic, no?"

"You need not tell me how—or anything about it. But you are sure he is quite dead?"

"He is dead. He was a bad man and died very terribly," said Oscar, and he took off his hat and drew his sleeve across his forehead. "I will tell you just how it was. When my horse took the wall and got their bullets and tumbled down dead, the big man they called Zmai saw how it was, that we were all coming over after them, and ran. He kept running through the brambles and over the stones, and I thought he would soon turn and we might have a fight, but he did not stop, and I could not let him get away. It was our captain who said, 'We must take them prisoners,' was it not so?"

"Yes; that was Mr. Armitage's wish."

"Then I saw that we were going toward the bridge, the one they do not use there at the deep ravine. I had crossed it once and knew that it was weak and shaky, and I slacked up and watched him. He kept on, and just before he came to it, when I was very close to him, for he was a slow runner—yes!—being so big and clumsy, he turned and shot at me with his revolver, but he was in a hurry and missed, but he ran on. His feet struck the planks of the bridge with a great jar and creaking, but he kept running and stumbled and fell once with a mad clatter of the planks. He was a coward with a heart of water and would not stop when I called and come back for a little fight. The wires of the bridge hummed, and the bridge swung and creaked. When he was almost midway of the bridge the big whren that held it began to shriek out of the old posts that held them, though I had not touched them, and it seemed many years that passed while the whole of it dangled in the air like a bird nest in a storm, and the creek down below laughed at that big coward. I still heard his hoofs thumping the planks until the bridge dropped from under him and left him for a long second with his arms and legs flying in the air. Yes; it was very horrible to see. And then his great body went down, down. God, it was a very dreadful way for a man to die."

And Oscar brushed his hat with his sleeve and looked away at the purple and gray ridges and their burden of stars.

"Yes; it must have been terrible," said Clalborne.

"But now he cannot be left to lie down there on the rocks, though he was so wicked and died like a beast. I am a bad Catholic, but when I was a boy I used to serve mass, and it is not well for a man to lie in a wild place where the buzzards will find him."

"But you cannot bring a priest. Great harm would be done if news of this affair were to get abroad. You understand that what has passed here must never be known by the outside world. My father and Baron von Marhof have counseled that, and you may be sure there are reasons why these things must be kept quiet or they would seek the law's aid at once."

"Yes; I have been a soldier, but after this little war I shall bury the dead in an hour I shall be back to drive the buckboard to Lamar station."

Clalborne looked at his watch.

"I will go with you," he said.

They started through the wood toward the Port of Missing Men, and together they found rough niches in the side of the gap, down which they made their way tollsomely to the bowlder lined stream that laughed and tumbled foamily at the bottom of the defile. When their work was done Oscar took off his hat and knelt down by the side of the strange grave and bowed his head in silence for a moment. Then they climbed the steep side of the gap and turned toward the bungalow. Oscar trudged silently at Clalborne's side, and neither spoke. Both were worn to the point of exhaustion by the events of the long day. The stubborn patience and fidelity of the little man touched a chord in Clalborne. Almost unconsciously he threw his arm across Oscar's shoulders and walked thus beside him as they traversed the battlefield of the morning.

"You knew Mr. Armitage when he was a boy?" asked Clalborne.

"Yes; in the Austrian forest, on his father's place—the Count Ferdinand von Stroebel. The young captain's mother died when he was a child. His father was the great statesman and did much for the Schomburgs and Austria, but it did not aid his disposition—no?"

The secret service men had come by way of the Springs and were waiting at the bungalow to report to Clalborne. They handed him a sealed packet of instructions from the secretary of war. The deportation of Chauvenet and Durand was to be effected at once under Clalborne's direction, and he sent Oscar to the stables for the buckboard and sat down on the veranda to discuss the trip to Baltimore with the two secret agents. They were to gather up the personal effects of the conspirators at the tavern on the drive to Lamar. The rooms occupied by Chauvenet at Washington had already been ransacked and correspondence and memoranda of a startling character seized. Chauvenet was known to be a professional black-maller and plotter of political mischief, and the embassy of Austria-Hungary had identified Durand as an ex-convict who had only lately been implicated in the launching of a dangerous issue of forged bonds in Paris. Clalborne had been carefully coached by his father, and he answered the questions of the officers readily.

"If these men give you any trouble, put them under arrest in the nearest jail. We can bring them back here for attempted murder. If nothing worse, and these mountain juries will see that they're put away for a long time. You will accompany them on board the George W. Custis and stay with them until you reach Cape Charles. A light-house tender will follow the steamer down Chesapeake bay and take you off. If these gentlemen do not give the proper orders to the captain of the steamer, you will put them all under arrest and signal the tender."

Chauvenet and Durand had been brought out and placed in the buckboard, and these orders were intended for their ears.

"We will waive our right to a writ of habeas corpus," remarked Durand cheerfully, as Clalborne flashed a lantern over them. "Dearest Jules, we shall not forget M. Clalborne's courteous treatment of us."

"Shut up!" snapped Chauvenet.

"You will both of you do well to hold your tongues," remarked Clalborne dryly. "One of these officers unstands French, and I assure you they cannot be bought or frightened. If you try to bolt, they will certainly shoot you. If you make a row about going on board your boat at Baltimore, remember they are government agents, with ample authority for any emergency and that Baron von Marhof has the American state department at his back."

THE PORT OF MISSING MEN

"You are wonderful, Captain Claiborne," drawled Durand.

"There is no trap in this? You give us the freedom of the sea?" demanded Chauvenet.

"I gave you the option of a Virginia prison for conspiracy to murder or a run for your life in your own boat beyond the cape. You have chosen the second alternative. If you care to change your decision—"

Oscar gathered up the reins and waited for the word. Claiborne held his watch to the lantern.

"We must not miss our train, my dear Jules," said Durand.

"Bah, Claiborne, this is ungenerous of you. You know well enough this is an unlawful proceeding—kidnaping us this way—without opportunity for counsel."

"And without benefit of clergy."

laughed Claiborne. "Is it a case for the sea or the nearest county jail? If you want to tackle the American courts we have nothing to venture. The Winkler crowd are safe behind the bars in Vienna and publicity can do us no harm."

"Drive on!" ejaculated Chauvenet.

As the buckboard started Baron von Marhof and Judge Claiborne rode up and watched the departure from their saddles.

"That's the end of one chapter," remarked Judge Claiborne.

"They're glad enough to go," said Dick. "What's the latest word from Vienna?"

"The conspirators were taken quietly. About a hundred arrests have been made in all, and the Hungarian uprising has played out utterly, thanks to Mr. John Armitage," and the baron sighed and turned toward the bungalow.

When the two diplomats rode home half an hour later it was with the assurance that Armitage's condition was satisfactory.

"He is a hardy plant," said the surgeon, "and will pull through."

Question Answered.

In business yet? Yes, in business yet. One of your men gone? Yes, but I am going to get another one. What kind are you going to get? The best that can be had, and one that will be satisfied to work for good wages and not bore the customers for more work than they want to have done. It is my intention to treat all of my customers right and in the future you can feel assured that you or your small boys will be treated right. I established my shop for the accommodation of the people and not for the embarrassment of any one. My ideas may be wrong, but I have served near twenty years in the business, and if I don't know what is right and fair to the people I am willing for some one to show me, but I must be shown, and if I loose before I learn I will have the satisfaction of doing it to suit myself, and trying to please the public.

I invite all knockers to come in and see how it is done.

Yes, I am still in business and expect to stay, and my motto is: "Treat the people right; stay in the lead and results will follow."

THE "SHOESTRING" WANTS TO ORGANIZE SCHOOL DISTRICT.

An election will be held at the home of L. C. Hineckley on August 19th for the purpose of authorizing the incorporation of the "shoestring" portion of the old Wichita Falls Independent school district.

As a result of the election held several weeks ago the old school district was dissolved and it is now proposed to organize two districts from the old.

One will embrace the city of Wichita Falls and the other for which the election will be held on August 19th will cover the "shoestring" strip around Wichita Falls.

STRONG STILL HOPES; WORTHAM CONFIDENT

Special to the Times. Dallas, Tex., July 29.—Hon. Sterling P. Strong, chairman of the democratic prohibition submission committee, said yesterday that he still believed his fight had not failed. Hon. John L. Wortham, chairman of the North Texas Business Men's Local Option Campaign Committee, which led the fight against submission in this part of the State, claimed that submission has been defeated by 40,000 to 60,000. Mr. Wortham added that he feared the local option proposition for which he fought had failed to receive the required majority to make it a platform demand.

Looks for a Change. "Until more complete returns are received," said Mr. Strong, I have no statement to make other than this: We figure that at least 51,000 votes, in addition to those already tabulated by the News, are yet to be accounted for, and we have reason to think that these votes will change the result. I still believe this afternoon that submission has not failed."

Mr. Strong said further that, even if submission had been defeated, his committee would maintain permanent headquarters in Dallas, from which place the fight against saloons in Texas would be prosecuted.

Defeat of Submission. The proposition to submit a constitutional amendment for State wide prohibition has been defeated," said Mr. Wortham in a formal statement issued today. "The indications are now that submission has fallen anywhere from 40,000 to 60,000 short of a majority. The proposition was brought before the executive committee, under a provision of Sec. 20 of the Terrell election law, as amended by the Thirtieth Legislature, which read as follows: "Provided, any political party in this State, in convention assembled, shall never place in the platform or resolutions of the party they represent any demand for specific legislation on any subject unless the demand for such specific legislation shall have been submitted to a direct vote of the people and shall have been endorsed by a majority vote of all the votes cast in the primary election of such party."

Worried Over Local Option. "It is clear that for a measure to become a platform demand it must receive the affirmative consent or approval of a majority of all the democrats participating in the primary. Not only has the submission proposition failed in this respect by many thousands of votes, but a majority of democrats expressing themselves on the subject appear to have voted against it. The result is that State-wide prohibition has been denied a place in the democratic creed, and further that the democrats of Texas stand for local self-government and a surcease of agitation.

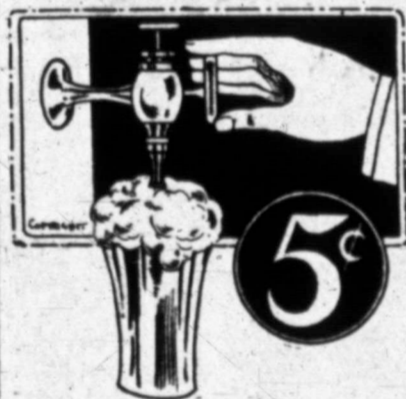

"When the question of submission was before the executive committee, the friends of local option filed a counter petition which, if it had been granted, would have given the voter an opportunity to register an affirmative choice between the two propositions; but the State-wide leaders defeated us in our efforts and succeeded not only in segregating the two propositions, but in bringing about the needless confusion of the voter by placing the negative on the ballot.

"As a result of this confusion I fear that the local option proposition has failed to receive the required majority to make it a platform demand, but, regardless of the result, the friends of the measure will use their best efforts to secure such legislation as will strengthen the local option laws and secure their enforcement wherever the people may desire prohibition."
