Quanah Going Some.

Quanah Tribune-Chief.
Rather remarkable and a pretty good indication of what a good distributing point Quanah is, is the fact that though the office of Swift & Co. here is only a branch of the Amarillo office, which does not handle beef, but only hog products, the volume of business transacted by the limited Quanah branch far exceeds the combined business of the firm at Amarillo, Plainview and Dalhart.

However, Swift & Co. is not the only firm that is made aware of the happy conditions here. There is Coleman-Lysaght-Blair Co., which have whole grocery branches at half a dozen good towns. The Quanah branch house is again in the lead, far exceeding even the sales of Wichita Falls, where the headquarters of the firm are located.

HEBREW CIVIL NEW YEAR NEAR.

Feast and Fast of Jewish People Always Carefully Observed.

Saturday, Sept. 26, will be the time of the new moon, and will be the beginning of the Jewish civil year. It is reckoned as the year-5669, as the Hebrews compute years. The year just closing was an unusually long one, having 383 days. It is known as an embolismic year, a catching up time.

Friday evening, as the stars show, the observance of the time will begin. It will have service in the temples.

Later, on the tenth day, October 5, will be the beginning of Yom Kippur, the atonement period. October 10 will be the Feast of Tabernacles.

The year just beginning will have 355 days. It begins with the Feast of Trumpets, goes through the Feast of the Atonement and ends with the Feast of Tabernacles, the joyous time of ingathering.

Two hundred and sixty-two wagon loads of corn have been unloaded at Burk Burnett up to last Wednesday night, according to the Burk Burnett Star, and the streets of that town are crowded with wagons every day. Carload after carload of corn has been shipped from Burk Burnett and with the prospect of a splendid cotton crop; the farmers of that section and the business men of Burk Burnett see prosperity ahead.

The Times' Bryan and Kern campaign fund is growing slowly. One mer. dollar came in today in response to the frequent and urgent appeals. The Times is satisfied there are others who would like to contribute, and would gladly do so but for the fear of getting in the jam. There is ample room yet in the Bryan band wagon and even if you don't expect to land a federal office your name attached to a petition for a friend who will likely be an applicant for "government pie" when Bryan is president will be looked for on the list of the faithful—those who contributed of their means to accomplish a democratic victory.

A news item which the Banner is tardy in reporting is the election of Will H. Mayes of the Brownwood Bulletin as president of the National Editorial Association. Mr. Mayes is a thorough newspaper man and has been a tireless worker in the Association—Seymour Danner.

Since landing this fresh honor Mr Mayes has turned republican and is now supporting the republican State ticket. His success as a newspaper man is always to be commended, but the thing that puzzles most democratic newspapers is: What can Mr. Mayes see in the republican candidates of their platform, national or State, to induce him to "flip"? It may be that, in reality, he has not changed his politics, and has just recently decided to pull off the mask he has been wearing.

For years Bowie has been advertised far and wide as the place for the hungry traveling public to get "chicken and bread," and passengers have been known to pass right through Fort Worth and other towns where trains stop for meals without taking advantage of the stop to get a square meal, simply because they were aware that the train would pass through Bowie and it did not matter at what hour of the day or night Bowie was reached they felt assured and confident that an army of urchins would be on hand with an abundant supply of "chicken and bread" to appease their hunger for the small sum of from 15c to 25c. Now, the authorities of Bowie have determined to stop the business and have framed up an ordinance making it an offense to sell or offer to sell any "fruit, vegetables, or anything to eat upon the depot platforms or right-of-way of any railroad entering that city," and such offense is made punishable by a fine of from $1 to $50. Thus, the sale of one article for which Bowie has been made famous, is to be curtailed or cut off by the strong arm of the law.

Spoiling a Bachelor

(Original.)

When Angelica was seventeen her parents married her to Ezekiel Ballou, aged sixty-five and seven times a millionaire. Seven years later Ballou died and left a widow without children, but with $10,000,000.

Now commenced Angelica's real life. She was old enough not to need a chaparron, yet young enough to enjoy the prominence given her by her wealth, a beauty that was in its prime and great sprightliness. She at once became the favorite of society and lived in some one of her several residences in town and country. Men flocked to her in untold numbers, but what is easily gained is not valued, and she would have none of them. Several of her suitors were men of prominence who could have advanced the young widow in a way not to be attained by wealth alone, but the trouble was they were to be had for the asking. There was no sport in a chase where a hundred hunters were bring at her on sight. She preferred to turn huntress and bring down the game herself.

Among the young men of her acquaintance was Paul Debonair, whose father had died and left his son several hundred thousand dollars. Paul spent all the income, but resolutely refrained from touching a cent of his principal. Pleasure was his object. More money than he had he would not have valued. He had enough to give him what he wanted and not enough to bother him by attending to it. He would never marry. In short, he was determined to get the most out of life in the way that seemed most desirable to him—that is, as a man of the world.

One evening he went to a ball. Angelica was there, surrounded by a crowd of men elbowing one another to get near her. If she moved from one room to another, within a few minutes every one of those men was to be found in the room to which she had gone. If she went back, they went back. Paul Debonair looked at this spectacle with disgust. He danced in the same set with Angelica, but every time it became his part to take her hand to swing he would pretend to have made a mistake and swing some one else.

"Great heavens, Paul," said one of his friends, "do you know whom you are snubbing? That's the young Widow Ballou, worth millions."

"I don't care if she is the Widow Croesus," said Paul in a tone loud enough to be heard by the widow herself, "and worth billions."

Paul Debonair had sounded the death-knell to his independence. Angelica sent one of her circle of attendants to bring him to her and introduce him. He consented, but if his object was to avoid rudeness he might as well have declined, for his brusqueness and indifference were unpardonable. Angelica had noticed while he danced that Tersichore was one of his idols. He abandoned himself to the motion and the music as one in a heavenly dream. Quick to see a weak point, she resolved to attack him through this love. She asked him to dance. He had the effrontery to decline on the ground that he did not know how to dance.

But it was not long after this that Angelica gave a ball herself. She had given out through her friends that she felt very much hurt at the treatment Debonair had given her, that she had been surprised that any man should treat an unprotected woman so rudely, but that she would give him an opportunity to redeem himself. These remarks were intended for Paul's ears, and when he received an invitation to her ball he decided at least to accept it.

There being no orchestra at hand capable of playing dance music as Angelica wished it played, she imported one, and when Paul entered the ball-room he heard voluptuous sounds that tingled in the tips of his toes. He went directly to the hostess, who smiled upon him and said:

"I have been saving my first dance for you, Mr. Debonair. I am hostess here, and my word is law. You are commanded to dance with me."

In another moment Debonair was gliding over a waxed floor with a dream of loveliness in his arms. The soft strains, the beautiful face so near his own, the liquid eyes fastened always upon his, were an irresistible incantation. Then, too, he was dancing with one who was, like himself, a born dancer. They passed banks of flowers and momentarily caught their perfume. They sailed around water springing from a fountain, and as the tiny drops fell they sang a song of love. But all Paul Debonair saw was a beautiful face, a swelling bosom, a pair of dark eyes.

Paul Debonair realized that he was being snared. Matrimony had been a horror to him, and this only possible outcome to the widow's witchery appalled him. He left on the next steamer for Europe. Angelica followed him. One evening while he was at a ball at the (American embassy) at Rome the orchestra struck up the waltz to which he had danced with the Widow Ballou. He was standing in a dream of that one dangerous dance of his life when suddenly an arm was laid upon his shoulder. His own passed involuntarily around a waist, and he was whirled away. Again he was in the toils of the witch.

When they rested, the game had been played to a finish and the widow had won. Paul Debonair had surrendered while they whirled. She led him captive back to America, and the house that had known him knew him no more. Every one said what a pity to spoil so delightful a bachelor by making a married man of him.

Newsy Notes From Iowa Park.

Special to the Times.
Iowa Park, Tex., Sept. 12.—Mr. A. E. Hill, who came here a few months ago from Mississippi and purchased the Overbey Bros. lumber yard, has sold to a stock company and moved to Waco, where he will enter the Baylor university.

An automobile supposed to belong at Wichita Falls, damaged the horses of campers Thursday night near the railroad tank. The stock was scattered and part or all of them seriously injured.

The first bale of new cotton was ginned at the new gin this week. Hundreds of bushels of corn are being marketed here now. The sheller will soon begin to prepare it for shipment.

The nine months session of school begins Monday. About 200 children are enrolled. One teacher has been added, making six in all. Forty new desks have been ordered.

Mr. C. E. Cartee has sold his residence in town and is building a house on his farm east of town, where he will move soon.

Mr. Henderson, through G. J. Clark, sold his farm Thursday, and may move to town soon.

Mr. J. P. Herod, who recently sold his farm to Mr. R. W. Hyde, has moved to town and now owns the residence formerly belonging to Mr. Hyde.

Mrs. Tanner and little daughter of Jacksboro are the guests of her son, Mr. Jess Tanner.

The increased interest in country property has extended to our town, where property has been changing hands. Nearly four hundred town lots were quietly sold this week.

There has been some talk of trying to secure an academy here. This is an ideal location for a school and would mean much to our community to locate one here. Our people should put forth every effort possible to accomplish this.

The Iowa Park band has an engagement to play at Weeth's Grove today. Mr. Claude Williams has bought the quarter section grass land formerly belonging to Mr. Stanfield and has erected a stable and residence on it, and will make his home there.

Mr. E. Schneider, who has long been a resident of this country, has sold his property northeast of town, and has gone on a prospecting tour before locating elsewhere.

Capt. Blaggs will build a nice residence on the farm formerly owned by Mr. Dunn.

Mr. John T. Overbey is making some substantial improvements at his home.

Rich Juicy Tree Ripened Fruits

We've told you about the difference between shelf ripened and tree ripened fruit before, but it's easy to forget, so we repeat it. If you have never had the opportunity of going out and picking a ripe peach, plum or pear off the tree, you can hardly appreciate the vast difference in flavor which there is between tree-ripened and shelf or box-ripened fruits.

The sun, air and sap of the tree gives to tree ripened fruit a richness, fullness and delicacy of flavor that is entirely lacking in the box ripened.

That's why the best grade of canned fruits, such as our "White Horse" brand are of such a fine flavor and quality.

They are all carefully selected, tree-ripened fruits.

AMARILLO'S PACKING HOUSES.
Work is Expected to Start Within a Few Weeks.

Amarillo is to have the plant of the Panhandle Packing Company—and that with but little delay. The meeting yesterday evening at the Potter county court house was attended by a majority of the stockholders of the company, and all were enthusiastic over the promise of an almost immediate development of the proposition.

The executive committee appointed by the stockholders at a previous meeting was instructed to collect one-half of the stock subscribed, and it is engaged on that task today. There is no question about the coming of the packing house now. The meeting last night added definite assurance in such a manner as to dispel the fears of even the most pessimistic and timid.

W. O. Butt, representing the foreign interests in the movement, was instructed to proceed with the plans.

While no time can be stated definitely at this time for the beginning of the construction, it is known that there will be little delay in commencing. A large amount of materials will be required for the buildings and this will doubtless begin to move within a few weeks at most. This institution is thoroughly appreciated by every progressive citizen of the city.

Amarillo, already the metropolis of the plains, received in this packing house a further impetus and incentive for growth and progress. The building of the city, as is generally recognized by the citizens of the entire country, has been steady, and this additional and almost sudden expansion comes with much evidence of welcome.

A FAREWELL TO THE ELOPEMENT CLUB.

(Original.)
The Elopement club was in session, and the president said:

"Girls, since our last meeting one of our number has accomplished what we all pledge ourselves to accomplish and is present to take leave of us. The secretary will read that part of our constitution bearing on the case."

The secretary then read:

ARTICLE II.
Recognizing the wrong committed by men (who by nature have an advantage over women in active fields) in selfishly supporting themselves alone and depriving women of the home and children, we each agree to capture some man for a husband and carry him off by persuasion or force, by hook or by crook, to the matrimonial altar.

ARTICLE III.
When a member has been successful in this praiseworthy object she shall before retiring from the club narrate the methods she has used.

The president then called on the successful member to comply with the requirements of the last named article. She arose and said:

"Girls, I must say that I have found my object more easily accomplished than I supposed—not that the man I have captured had in the beginning any especial fancy for me; indeed, he was rather inclined to avoid me. He created in me an autogonism which spurred me on to my work, thus helping me amazingly. What do you suppose he had the brutality to say? Why, he said, 'A man is a fool to marry until he is too old to have any fun.'"

"I didn't scold him a bit for that. I just said: 'I think so too. Let's have a lot of fun.'"

"How?" he asked.

"We'll spin around together till we get tired of each other—go to theaters, drive, and all that. My uncle gave me a check last Christmas, and I'm dying to spend it."

"He assented to all except my spending any money, proposing to do that himself. I let him do it and put my check aside for a trousseau. He took me out to drive the next day and when we were in a lonely place put his arm around my waist. I didn't object in the least; indeed, I encouraged him. Then we went to the theater together, and he held my hand under a fold of my dress most of the time during the performance. Then we went boating, and, pulling the boat in under overhanging trees, he sat down at my feet and held my hand some more. On this occasion he offered to kiss me, but one must have a limit, and I drew the line there."

"I had been fishing for him a month when I got a bad scare. Another girl set her cap for him. If I had thought she could get him I wouldn't have stood in her way, but she was a stupid creature—didn't know men at all. I had a sharp hook at the end of my line, and I don't believe she had anything but bait. She would only divert him from me. So I made up my mind that I must put the steel through his gills and land him."

"I laid a desperate plan. I got a time table of trains to and from Eged lake and studied it. Then I asked the man who had said 'A man is a fool to marry till he's too old to have any fun' to take me out to the lake on a Saturday afternoon. He did. We got out there just in time for dinner and dined on the hotel porch overlooking the lake. It was growing dark when we finished, and he proposed a boat ride. I told him I feared it was too late. He insisted, and I yielded with pretended reluctance. In the boat I offered to let him a kiss against a pound of candy that he couldn't pull across the lake in a given time."

"Here comes in the beauty of not going too far with a man. If I'd given him kisses he would have been tired of them by this time. As it was, he was crazy to get one. I asked for his watch to keep the time and when he wasn't looking turned the hands back nearly an hour."

"He won the bet."

"I had noticed by the time table that the last train left at 11; no other train till Monday morning. When I got too dark to stay on the water longer we landed and went up to the hotel. I saw several people I knew and took pains to pass directly under their noses that they should see that I was there. I had my watch in my belt and when my fish was not looking took note of the time. At a quarter past 11 I suggested that we go to the station. He looked at his own timepiece and said it was only half past 10. I told him he must be wrong and insisted on going. When we got to the station, the train had been gone half an hour."

"I fell over in his arms in a faint."

"When I came to myself again I looked up at him with all the reproach I could summon."

"My reputation!" I gasped. "It's gone forever. I'll be cut by everybody."

"I'll drive you home."

"Drive home fifty miles and at night? We couldn't get there till morning. Oh, heavens! What shall I do?"

"I'll stand by you," he said. "I'll kill any man who says you're not pure as an angel."

"Man!" I retorted. "Men have nothing to do with spreading scandals. It's the women. Do you think you could stop their tongues? No woman can be off like this with any man except her husband."

"Is that the only way out of it?" he gasped.

"Well, girls, I landed him. We were married and telegraphed a notice to the city papers, and—'and,' blushing, 'we're very, very happy.'"

The retiring member was complimented for her skill by the president, and a resolution was inscribed on the minutes of the meeting referring to her method as a stroke of genius.

A PERSONATION.

(Original.)

Russell Seymour at twenty was desperately in love with Barbara Ward, a few months his senior, but since he had nothing except what he might carve out of the future a marriage between them was not to be considered. Seymour went to a distant city to push his way in the world, declaring that when he had a competency he would return and if he found Barbara still unmarried would claim her.

Twenty years passed. Seymour had prospered, but had not married. At forty he was still very young looking, young feeling and young acting; but he was at that age when a man begins to tire of clubs and the laborious part of keeping in social life. He longed for a home, and what was more natural than to revert to his old sweetheart to make that home for him? He wrote her that he was intending to make a trip and would call upon her. He inclosed his photograph.

Now, Barbara Ward had been a good deal of an invalid for many years. Her face was creased, and her hair was almost white. She looked ten years older than she was, while the likeness she received looked ten years younger than Seymour. Here was a gap in appearance alone of twenty years. In addition to this, she was broken down in health, and her time for rearing a family had passed. She was too sensible a woman to receive Russell Seymour as a lover. Her sister's child, now a woman of twenty-seven, had the same name as she, and pictures of the two taken at the same age looked like twins.

The Wards lived at a suburban town near a city. Seymour sent word of the day and hour of his expected arrival, and Miss Barbara drove to the station for him. Seymour, who was aware that a woman of forty would have passed the bloom of youth, looked forward to the meeting with misgivings. When he saw what he mistook for his old love but slightly aged he was astonished and delighted. Indeed, he began to worry about a few gray hairs that were creeping into his beard.

Now, Miss Ward had instructed her niece to entertain Mr. Seymour and make excuses for her own nonappearance, for she did not intend to show herself. It did not occur to Barbara to play the part of her aunt till she saw that she had been mistaken for her; then, the spirit of mischief being rife in her, she played it to perfection.

"How in the world," he asked, "have you managed to retain your youthful appearance?"

"No cares and a good conscience."

"You don't look a day over thirty."

Barbara winced at this, but managed to reply, "And you don't look a day over thirty either."

"How fortunate that we have both retained our youth! But the heart—that never grows old."

"Sometimes it grows cold." She cast aside her eyes.

"I assure you mine beats the same as when I parted from you."

"Then why have you not come for me before?"

"This was a home thrust. He pleaded absorption in business, a desire to accumulate a certain amount and other excuses of which there was no warmth of love. 'And you,' he said, 'why did you cease to write me?'"

"How could I continue to write when your letters came at such long intervals as to indicate that you were changed?"

"Never mind that, sweetheart. We are united now, and we'll never part again in life."

Had the young lady not held the reins he would have taken her hand, stolen an arm around her waist, possibly a kiss. As it was, he was obliged to defer caresses till they reached home, where he found her unwilling to submit to them. He protested, and she dropped a hint that she must be won anew. Indeed, she left a doubt in his mind whether she could be won at all. They dined together, and Seymour was surprised that no one except Barbara was at the table. He asked if she lived alone, which disconcerted her, but she stuck to the truth by telling him that she lived with an aunt who was an invalid.

That night Barbara confessed to Miss Ward the part she was playing. Her aunt after reflection told her to continue the deception. Seymour was made welcome at the house and showed no inclination to depart. The day after her arrival the invalid came down for dinner, and Seymour was introduced by Barbara. A sadness came over Miss Ward's face when her former lover showed no recognition of her whatever. Indeed, he sat at table with a bored look on his face that a third person should have come to intrude upon their companionship.

There were many conferences between aunt and niece. The elder Miss Ward, fully realizing that she and Seymour were not for each other, desired Barbara to accept him in her stead. Barbara would have been pleased to do so but for what she considered disloyalty to her aunt. One day after an agreement between the two women they met Seymour together and told him the truth. Then Barbara said:

"To make amends for this deception we are agreed that if you wish either of us you may choose between us."

Seymour stood looking at both in astonishment. Then the true man spoke in him in no uncertain tones. Advancing toward his old love, he took her hand:

"This is my choice."

Miss Ward placed his hand in that of her niece.

BIG HUNT IN TEXAS.

Chief Quannah Parker Will Hunt With Governor Campbell.

Lawton, Okla., Sept. 10.—Chief Quannah Parker of the Comanches is planning for a great hunt of several weeks in the Panhandle of Texas during the latter part of October in which will join not only the famous Indian chief, but also ten of his leading men, War Chief Geronimo of the Apaches, several of the leading ranchmen of Western Texas and Governor Campbell of the Lone Star State.

This information was given out here today by Chief Parker in discussing plans for the coming national convention of the League of American Sportsmen, which opens in Lawton October 12. Parker is a member of the entertainment committee from the local league chapter and will remain at his home until after the convention here. Shortly after the big hunts to which Parker has invited visiting sportsmen, he will leave for the Texas hunt, near the old Comanche stamping grounds, from whence they came to Oklahoma.

By arrangement of Chief Parker, the officials of the war department have agreed to permit Geronimo to accompany the hunters. Parker has also just secured permits from the Texas authorities for all of his men to hunt there.

The hunt is to take place on the range of the great Matador Land and Cattle company ranch, with headquarters at Trinidad, Colo., covering the counties of Motley, Pickett, Cottle and Floyd, and on this range, says Parker, may be found wolves, deer and several other kinds of big game.

Invitations have been received by Parker from the owners of the ranch to come and bring with him Geronimo, and Murdo McKenzie, manager of the ranch, S. B. Burnett, a wealthy cattleman of Fort Worth, and Governor Campbell are all arranging to join in the chase.

AUCTION SALE OF TOWN LOTS

AT

YOUNG COUNTY, TEXAS

NEWCASTLE is a new town just starting. Newcastle is 55 miles south of Wichita Falls, and is the terminus of the Wichita Falls and Southern Railway. It is situated near the center of Young county, in a very fine agricultural section. The elevation is between 1200 and 1300 feet. It is a place that on account of the natural advantages is sure to make one of the largest towns in Northwest Texas. Newcastle is in the largest bituminous coal field in Texas. Coal of better quality and much greater in area than any other coal field in Texas. Think of the possibilities of Newcastle as a manufacturing center, with an unlimited amount of fine grade coal for her every want. Newcastle is sure to be one of the best towns in Northwest Texas. Not a mere hamlet of a town, but a city of several thousand inhabitants. Your first question would naturally be, what would make it? There is every reason why it should make a good town, and no reason whatever why it should not. Here are some of the reasons:

Reason No. 1—Coal.

Newcastle is the center of the best coal field in the State of Texas. Not a small pocket, but a large area of coal of a quality not equalled by any other coal yet opened up in the State. A coal company with ample capital behind it has already sunk two shafts for the coal development. One shaft being north of the town and the other south of the town. In both of these shafts they have uncovered a fine strata of coal. The shaft lying immediately north of the town has a 53-inch vein of soft coal of a quality far better than anything else found in the State. The mining machinery is now being placed at both shafts, each of which will ultimately have a maximum capacity of 800 tons per day. Think what an output of 1200 to 1600 tons of coal per day means to a town. It means that there will always be a large and certain pay roll upon which to rely for business. But the coal company does not propose to stop at two or three, or even four shafts. Just as soon as it is possible to push the developments, the company expects to sink other shafts, and push the development work until the output from the Newcastle mines will be the greatest of any in the Southwest. This coal development alone will easily make a town of three or four thousand inhabitants of Newcastle within the next two or three years.

Reason No. 2—No Company Stores.

A large company with ample capital has been organized to develop the coal on an extensive scale. The coal company does not contemplate engaging in the mercantile business in any way. The coal company was organized for the primary purpose of coal development, and the coal field has proven to be of such great magnitude and extent as to require the every energy and effort of the coal company officers to handle the development and mining work as it should be and then some.

Think what all this means to Newcastle. No company stores. Thousands and tens of thousands of dollars paid out for coal mining, all of which is turned loose for the free, open competition of the Newcastle merchants. Not a pay roll or easy money time once a year in the fall like most Texas towns, but a sure pay roll every month in the year.

Mr. Merchant and Mr. Investor, you cannot afford to overlook such an opportunity as this.

Newcastle is just as sure to be a hustling, thriving little city as natural advantages, backed by ample capital can make it. The thorough business men who are ever awake and on the lookout are the ones who will reap the greatest benefits in Newcastle. You can't afford not to investigate the advantages and opportunities at Newcastle.

Farming country, as much as any town in the whole country; railroad facilities first class, and the greatest coal field in Texas, developed on a large scale to back it up.

Reason No. 3—Farming.

Newcastle has a vast amount of the very finest of farming country tributary to it. Only one mile southwest from the beautiful townsite of Newcastle flows the Brazos River. Thousands and thousands of acres of the richest Brazos bottom lands, with their never failing crops are here at the door of Newcastle. To the north and northwest there are thousands of acres of as fine farming lands as can be found in this grand old State.

Taken as a whole, the farming country tributary to Newcastle is larger than almost any town in this part of the country. In another year with average crops the town should easily receive 10,000 bales of cotton. There are a great many pastures which are gradually being cut up and sold in small tracts to the farmers, all of which goes to increase the business of Newcastle. When all of these pastures are cut up and farming is in full blast, Newcastle will have a local trade alone that will be the envy of many other towns of several thousand inhabitants, to say nothing whatever of the coal developments.

Reason No. 4—Terminus.

Newcastle is the terminus of the Wichita Falls & Southern Railway and is very likely to remain so for a long time to come. This insures the drawing of a vast amount of trade that would not otherwise come there. Newcastle is a town that will have the active support and encouragement of the railroad interests, who expect to make the best and largest town in this part of the country. The larger the town the better it is for the railroad. The greater the coal development, the more tonnage for the railroad. One development goes with another. It goes without saying that Newcastle is sure to be the best town in Northwest Texas and the railroad's active support will be cheerfully given to help Newcastle in every possible way.

Reason No. 5—Location.

Newcastle is situated on a high mesquite prairie, about one mile from the Brazos River. This gives a view commanding the entire surrounding country and affords perfect natural drainage. Its elevation is something like 1300 feet above the sea level. There are comparatively few hot days during the summer and the nights are invariably cool and pleasant. Newcastle is an ideal place for a home. Where living will be pleasant and most surely profitable to the energetic business man. A more picturesque location for a town cannot be found in Texas. In Newcastle you may grow in health and in wealth.

Reason No. 6—Building Material.

There is as large a deposit of fine sandstone building rock near the town as can be found in the State of Texas. It is found in smooth layers of from 8 to 10 inches thick. When exposed to the weather becomes hard as flint. This is the same character of stone that the government used in the erection of its fort at Ft. Belknap. This stone solves for all time the question of cheap and substantial building material.

Reason No. 7—Brazos River Bridge.

Young County has let the contract for a wagon bridge across the Brazos River. Work will begin on this bridge this fall, and its location will be only about a mile from Newcastle. The building of this bridge opens up a very large trade territory to the new town, and it means that whatever barrier the river imposes during high water has been effectively removed so far as the town of Newcastle is concerned, and opens up a trade territory extending for, possibly, thirty miles. The greater part of this trade territory is tributary to Newcastle, anyway, but in the past when the river was up, of course, Newcastle could not be reached, but the building of this bridge removes the only obstacle in her way to all the vast amount of business whose natural outlet is Newcastle.

Big Auction Sale of Town Lots at Newcastle.

On Tuesday, Sept. 22d, we will have a big auction sale of business and residence lots at Newcastle. This will be the largest auction sale of lots ever held in Texas. There has never before been an opportunity of such possibilities as the Newcastle lot sale offers. The lots will sell cheaper on the sale day than ever afterward. Your price will be our price. Remember the date—Tuesday, Sept. 22.

The surest and safest of all investments is real estate. No safer investment was ever offered than Newcastle town lots. Get in on the ground floor and reap your part of the certain benefits.

Terms of Sale: One-third cash, balance in six and twelve months at 8 per cent interest.

Excursion rates on the F. W. & D. C. Ry., M. K. & T. and Wichita Falls Route.

A special train will leave Wichita Falls at 7 a. m. on the Wichita Falls and Southern Ry., and will reach Newcastle at 10 a. m., on Sept. 22, 1908.

The 53-inch vein of coal in the shaft just north of the town is open for inspection and can be seen at any time. An inspection of this shaft alone will be enough to convince you of the permanency of this town.
