OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

I read of a very odd sort of wedding gift not very long ago, a set of push buttons for every room in the house. They were made, so the article says, of beaten gold and jade, pale ones for the light decorated rooms and darker ones for the heavier decorations. This is a new idea, isn't it? The article suggested that one might make a present of gold keys. Imagine such extravagance. The burglar would consider that he had made quite a haul if he succeeded in getting hold of a few keys, wouldn't he? We are constantly hearing of such extravagances—anything in the search for something new.

Here are some dancy ideas for chests or boxes which might be carried out by almost anyone. A new dower chest is very convenient, because the side is arranged on hinges so it may be lowered. This saves the trouble of raising the lid every time anything is wanted, and it is far easier to see what you are getting out.

The idea suggests another. Why not make a skirt box on the same plan? Any box will do, and shelves may be laid on cleats inside, each one holding just one skirt. It would then be quite unnecessary to move one skirt to get at another, as each one would be alone.

The same idea might be used for a house box, and the two might be covered with denim and used as couches. What a blessing it would be to have a divan on which pillows might remain undisturbed! What a comfort to get a skirt or waist from a box—even the very bottom one on the pile—without having to upset every other garment within reach!

Some one has asked the question, "How many styles are there in coats?" And a "wise one" has answered, "Each coat is a style unto itself." It is quite easy to believe this statement if you have been on a coat-seeing expedition, for there are fashionable coats of every kind from satin to meltons, some with plain seams and some with stitched, some with buttons and braid and many without either. The most of the separate coats are made of plain, rich material, lined throughout with heavy satin, and are finished with satin collar and inset cuffs and lapels. The coats are three-quarter length.

A Few Suggestions for the House-keeper.
A scratch on polished furniture can be almost obliterated by a vigorous rubbing with linseed oil.

If, when using lemon for flavoring, you need only half an one, put the other half on a plate and cover with a glass tumbler, which excludes the air and prevents it from drying up or getting moldy.

Table linen which has been stained with egg should never be placed in boiling water, as it has the effect of "setting" the stain and making it almost permanent. The best method is to soak the cloth in cold water, which will make it perfectly easy to remove the stain before sending it to the wash. In cleaning cut glass a little ammonia in the water will give it a luster and it is still better when you add to it a few drops of bluing. Polish it with tissue paper.

The bureau drawers may be made to open easily and noiselessly if you rub them with common soap.

If black stockings are washed in warm soapy water and rinsed in clear water with a little vinegar, they will keep their color until worn out.

A Bachelor's Omelet,
Cleveland Leader.
There is a certain Cleveland bachelor who claims that he can make a bacon omelet that would make Mrs. Rorer sit up and take notice and caused any experienced cook and housewife to grow green with envy.

The uninitiated might suppose that the excellence of this omelet is due to the strong arm of the bachelor in question, and the persistence with which he beats the eggs till they are stiff enough to stand alone. But the omelet owes none of its excellence to mere muscle.

If you ask the bachelor how long he beats his omelet he will scorn you. He hasn't any egg beater and it "takes much longer with a fork," besides much beating is a weariness to the flesh. "Just whip the eggs up a little with a fork," he will tell you, "add a little milk, some salt and pepper, and a pinch of baking powder." What's the use of beating all that time when baking powder will do the work just as well and better. If his word may be trusted the omelet is as light and fluffy as any that has been put together in the much approved fashion.

To make the bacon omelet by the bachelor's rule, cut the bacon into small pieces and fry these till they are done enough to serve. Pour off the fat and add the crisped pieces of bacon to the omelet mixture. Then turn all back into the pan in which the bacon has been fried and brown in the ordinary manner.

Apple Fritters.

Select fir mapples, pare and core, then cut into slices not thicker than a third of an inch. Have ready a kettle of boiling lard, such as you use in frying doughnuts. Now mix quickly a batter consisting of one pint of milk, three eggs beaten light, a third of a teaspoon of salt, a pint of flour and a teaspoon of baking powder. Mix the beaten eggs with half the milk and the salt, then alternately the flour and the rest of the milk; the baking powder last. Dip the slices of apple in this batter and fry golden brown. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve at once.

St. Charles Corn Bread.

Beat two eggs until light without separating. Add to them one pint of well soured buttermilk, one pint of corn meal, one teaspoonful of melted butter, one teaspoonful of salt, and one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in one tablespoonful of hot water. Beat hard for a moment and bake in a shallow pan in a hot oven.

Oysters With Rice.

Bring one pint of oyster liquid to the boiling point, add one tablespoonful of butter and salt and pepper to season. Butter a baking dish and fill it with alternate layers of cooked rice and chopped raw oysters; moisten each layer with the oyster liquid and finish with rice. Bake until thoroughly heated and serve garnished with broiled oysters.

Cream Dressing for Fruit Salad.

Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter, and add two and one-half tablespoonfuls of corn starch, one tablespoonful of flour and one-fourth of a tablespoonful of salt, three drops of tabasco sauce and one tablespoonful of sugar. When well blended add one cupful of hot sweet milk, stir and cook until well done. Remove from the fire and beat in one slightly beaten yolk of egg, then add, beating after each one, five tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Finish by adding sour cream and beat well with an egg beater.

The Origin of Woman.

According to a Hindoo legend, this is the proper origin of women: Twashtri, the god Vulcan of the Hindoo mythology, created the world, but on his commencing to create woman, he discovered that for man he had exhausted all his creative materials, and that not one solid element had been left. This, of course, greatly perplexed Twashtri, and caused him to fall into a profound meditation. When he arose from it he proceeded as follows. He took:

- The roundness of the moon.
- The undulating curve of the serpent.
- The graceful twist of the creeping plant.
- The light shivering of the grassblade and the slenderness of the willow.
- The velvet of the flowers.
- The gentle gaze of the doe.
- The frolicsomeness of the dancing sunbeam.
- The tears of the cloud.
- The inconsistency of the wind.
- The timidity of the hare.
- The vanity of the peacock.
- The hardness of the diamond.
- The cruelty of the tiger.
- The chill of the snow.
- The cackling of the parrot.
- The cooing of the turtle dove.
- All these he mixed together and formed a woman.
- And then he presented her to man—Philippine's Gossip.

Advice Concerning Girls.

To make a noise like a disappointed lover grasp the hair above the ears firmly with each hand, utter a shrill, piercing whoop, and assume a pronounced position upon the forehead.

A prinky man knows his own finish and a girl sees it.

If poise is what you need, get an eye to pose.

The efficacy of a good example is apparent in strange results.

Before asking a young woman to change her name, see if you would if she changed her face.

"The long and short of it" is no disgrace. Let 'em hoot; they'll get used to it, the same as you had to.

Look out for the doll-faced girl with the sawdust walk; she's planning a quick trip.

The athletic girl is all very well in her way, but dangerous in somebody else's.

"He found her flewles"—she lived in a hammock. It is a rocky proposition which has caused many a confident man to quail.

In the event you have made any contribution to the Bryan campaign fund the music of the democratic rosters on the morning of November 1th will sound much better to you.

Estimating Wichita county's democratic voting strength at 1200, the Times' Bryan campaign fund up to noon today shows that an average of 12 cents for each voter had been contributed. Tomorrow is the last chance you will get to help along the cause of democracy, as the balance of the time between then and the election will be devoted in discharging the indebtedness of the campaign, and placing what is left, if there be any, where it is likely to do the most good.

Wichita County's exhibit at the State Fair compares favorably with those of other counties, and when taken into consideration that our exhibit was collected within a couple of months after it was decided to make arrangements for space in the building on the fair grounds, it is the best one there. Other counties have more elaborate exhibits, but they have had a year or more in which to grow and collect them especially for exhibition purposes. Next year, however, Wichita county will have a much better exhibit at the Dallas Fair.

In the rush and excitement of the presidential campaign, the people of Texas should not forget that there is to be a State election. Of course, the democratic ticket will roll the usual majority, but there are several amendments to the State constitution to be voted on, the most important of which is perhaps the one which relates to schools, and popularly known as the school tax amendment, which, if adopted, will give to the people of the rural districts of the State the privilege of voting upon themselves a special tax of 50 cents on the one hundred dollars valuation, whereas, under the present law the year only vote a special tax of half that amount.

MORE SIDEWALKS IS THE SLOGAN

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce met this morning and took action with reference to securing more sidewalks and to this end passed a resolution calling upon the city council to request the property owners on the south side of Eighth street between Ohio and Indiana avenues to construct good sidewalks in front of their property.

Another resolution was adopted requesting the city council to construct sidewalks at the corner of Tenth and Austin, Tenth and Scott and intervening gaps in Block 184 on Ninth street and Blocks 167 and 168 on Seventh street, with the further provision of appointing Mr. G. D. Anderson a committee of one to request the council to take immediate action in this matter and force owners to pay cost of improvement.

The directors also instructed the secretary to mail a written request to Messrs. J. C. Ward, Willie Wyatt and C. W. Bean to construct sidewalks along their property holdings on Eighth street, thereby adding to the value of Wichita Falls' reputation for uniform sidewalks.

The Y. M. C. A. matter, which was referred from the monthly membership meeting to the directors for consideration was disposed of by taking no action in the way of endorsing the proposition as an official body. Rev. Farley appeared before the directors and requested their co-operation as individuals, which was heartily concurred in, both in moral and financial support.

At the request of local members of the Ladies' Federated Clubs of Texas, the directors decided to extend the necessary financial assistance of entertaining the next annual meeting of the Federated Clubs, providing the meeting is held at Wichita Falls. It is believed the meeting can be secured for this city, which is due to be held next April.

The proposition of State Government Agent Quicksall to appoint a local agent in the Wichita Falls district to establish experimental stations on a number of farms, providing local interests will contribute money for the purchase of seed, not less than $100 for the year, was approved. J. L. McConkey has been requested by Agent Quicksall to accept the appointment, which he has agreed to do. Mr. McConkey is a practical farmer and takes a keen interest in advancing progressive farming methods.

Safe From a Fall.

Two kindly disposed gentlemen recently saw a man weaving his dextrous and winding way along the sidewalk, staggering under a load of such dispersions that a philosophical observer remarked he was entitled to go after it twice, says the New York Sun.
At frequent intervals he brought up against a convenient lamp post or free box. One of the gentlemen was moved to offer his services as guide, but they were repulsed with confidence and dignity.

"I'm all right," he insisted. "Can't fall. Wear a gyroscope in m' hat."

An Illustration.

(Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.)
"What I want in a wife is availability. I don't care how many other good traits she has. If she hasn't that I don't want her."
"How are you going to find out about a woman's disposition before marriage?"
"Take her unawares and test her."
"That reminds me of a story," rejoined the other, and, lighting a cigar, he told it:
"One morning a gentleman was sitting in a railway car when three well-dressed young ladies got in and began to look about them for seats together. There was one entirely vacant seat, the next in front of the gentleman mentioned. One of the girls, who seemed to be taking the lead, stopped before these seats, turned over the back of the forward one and looked hard at the gentleman sitting in the other, plainly saying by her manner: 'We three girls can have a nice little party of our own in these seats if you will take one with some one else. Haven't you the politeness to do so?'
"But the gentleman sat still in his seat. Evidently there was no politeness in him. The leader of the trio took the seat next the window, facing the impolite man; one of her party sat beside her, while the third dropped into the seat beside the man. They were evidently chums and kept up a chatter with their tongues. The man sat among them like a black crow among white doves, paying no attention to them nor they to him. He was young and bore the stamp of a gentleman. Surely it was surprising that he should not have given them the whole of the two seats and chosen another for himself. Instead he sat stolidly looking in front of him, not even glancing out of the window or reading a newspaper. The leader of the party began to frown. Sitting facing the man, she was subject to his constant gaze. It was, to say the least, annoying.
"This is intolerable," she said, fanning herself angrily. "Did any one ever see such rudeness?"
"Gently, Alice," said the girl beside the starrer in a cautioning tone. "Bet, you change seats with me."
"I'm willing," Bet replied softly.
"You shall do no such thing. You haven't the spunk of a kitten. I shall stay right here, and if he doesn't stop I'll try to find a way to make him."
"The man paid no more attention to the words than if they had not been spoken. If he had occasionally turned his eyes upon the other girl facing him or glanced at the one beside him his action would not have been so noticeable. But, no; he had fixed his gaze on Alice and ignored the others.
"I can't endure it any longer, Mame," she said. "I must keep my eyes fixed on you or I shall do something terrible."
"Why not apply to the conductor?" suggested Mame.
"I will just as soon as he comes along."
"But the conductor did not come along, and Alice's position was not comfortable. She turned again toward the man. He was still staring at her. She resolved to try the effect of returning his insolence in kind. Fixing her eyes upon him, she stared at him for a full minute. Making no impression whatever, her temper broke away completely. Closing her fan tightly in her fist, she drew it back and lashed it vigorously on the man's cheek.
"There!" she exclaimed. "Perhaps it will teach you not to stare a lady to death."
"The man brought his hand to the hurt, half rose and in a gentle voice full of sorrow said:
"There is some mistake. You do not understand. I am blind."
"Oh, Alice!" moaned Bet. "What have you done?"
"Why didn't you tell me?" said Alice to the man.
"You have said nothing to make me understand that I was offending you, though now some of your remarks are intelligible to me."
"People in such condition," said Mame coldly, "shouldn't travel alone."
"Girls," exclaimed Bet, "neither of you seems to appreciate that it is you and not this poor man who is to blame."
"No one is to blame, ladies," said the man. "It is simply my misfortune."
The train slowed up for a station. The man arose and, feeling his way with a walking stick, started to leave the train. The girl called Bet took his arm and saw him to the platform.
"I see the pith of your yarn," remarked the listener. "Your man and Bet became lovers, were married, and she ministered all her life to a blind man. Very touching, but somewhat hackneyed."
"Nothing of the sort. The fellow wasn't blind at all. It was a put up job on his part. He wanted a wife, just as you do, who was amiable. He found her in the girl who befriended him, but instead of hunting her up and marrying her what do you suppose he did? Why, he hunted up the girl who struck him and married her."
"For heaven's sake! What did he do that for?"
"Who knows? She was homely, while Bet was pretty. She had no money and was not remarkably interesting. In such affairs no one knows what either sex will do."
"And how did the marriage turn out?"
"She got him under and kept him there."
"I reckon," said the other thoughtfully, "I reckon I won't marry."

A congressman tells of a ducky in Georgia whose best quality is his devotion to his aged parent.
Once the congressman asked Peter why he had never married.
"Why, boss," explained Peter. "I've got an ole mudder. I had to do fer her, suh. Ef I doan buy her shoes an' stockin's she doan git none. Now, 'oss, you see ef I was 't git married 'd have t' buy 'em fo' mah wife an' 'at'd be takin' de shoes an' stockin's 'ight out my ole mudder's mouf."

An Imposing Caution.
Kansas City Star.
An English landowner, annoyed by nut pickers, had put up the following notice, which proved effective in keeping trespassers off his grounds: "Caution—All persons entering this wood to so at their own risk. The corylus yvellana abounds here." The "corylus yvellana," although it sounds so dreadfully fierce, is nothing more horrifying than the common hazelnut, described by its Latin name.

Rival Dignities.
Ladies' Home Journal.
An Englishman, fond of boasting of his ancestry, took a coin from his pocket, and, pointing to the head engraved on it, said, "My great-great-grandfather was made lord by the king whose picture you see on this shilling."
"What a coincidence," said his Yankee companion, who at once produced another coin. "My great-grand-grandfather was made an angel by the Indian whose picture you see on this cent."

Ivory Jelly.
The jelly was singularly pale. It almost resembled junket.
"It is Ivory jelly," said the invalid.
"My English cousins sent me a case of it from Sheffield."
"But why is it called Ivory jelly?" they inquired.
"Precisely because it is made of Ivory. A third of England's Ivory goes to Sheffield, and in the process of grinding and cutting it for knife handles, and so forth, a lot of Ivory dust remains, a fine dust, similar to the best flour. Of this the Sheffield folk have made Jelly for many years.
"The Jelly for some reason is nourishing, extremely so. The doctors prescribe it for the anemic. And of late a Sheffield firm has taken to manufacturing it on a large scale. Sheffield Ivory Jelly is now on the market.
"Out of courtesy to my cousins I tried it. To my surprise I found it good. My doctor, sampling it, found it good too. He told me to take the whole case."—Buffalo Express.

Text Books Hit West Texas.

After the old soldiers have had their say and expressed themselves in mighty plain language about some things appearing in the State text books, the Amarillo Panhandle continues the investigation and points out some things which it considers an insult to West Texas. It says:

"Now the people of Western Texas and the great fertile plains through the Daily Panhandle propose to have their say regarding one of the Texas text books given into the hands of children of this State. This particular book is 'Dodge's Primary Geography—Texas Edition,' published by Rand, McNally & Co.

"It is hardly necessary to go into a 'lamboasting' effort, as the matter in this work regarding Western Texas is so miserably untrue as regards the conditions today that it seems a waste of words to dwell upon it. Yet the matter in this book regarding Western Texas and the great Panhandle shall not go unchallenged. On page 163 occurs the following:

"As one goes into Texas the climate becomes more and more dry, until in the western part of the State crops cannot be raised except by irrigation.

"Crops cannot be raised except by irrigation. The wide sweep of hundreds of miles of wheat, cotton, feed crops, Indian corn, melons, fruit, root crops of various other productions, and the statement as false utterly.

"On page 105 this excellent (?) book breaks out again, this way:

"In Western Texas and Oklahoma it is so dry that few trees grow, and during many months in the year little green grass can be seen except perhaps along a stream. This region does, however, have a large amount of dry brown grass which is excellent food for cattle. So cattle raising, or cattle ranching, is an important industry here."

"During many months in the year little green grass can be seen except along a stream"—another vapid assertion, and one too miserable to waste words on.

"Now comes a paragraph which was true fifteen years ago, but which is untrue today; and that any maker of a text-book in America would put out such ancient, and misleading statements, passeth understanding. Here it is:

"As the food is scattered, the land belonging to a man owning thousands of cattle must be very large. Thus the cities and even the small towns are very far apart. The cattle roam freely over the vast area, coming frequently to the wells or watering places for drink. They are cared for by 'cowboys' or ranchmen. These cowboys live a rough, hard life, as most of their work is done upon horseback."

"Thus the cities and even the small towns are very far apart. That the great West is forging fast to the front as one of the most popular regions of the union, that cities and towns, and farms and farmhouses and industries, and smokestacks and railroads are growing thick and fast is of no consequence to the Texas text book board.

The 'information' in this geography regarding Western Texas is so misleading, so unfortunate and so inexcusable that the Daily Panhandle finds it difficult to speak of the matter in a conservative way, and will leave the subject to the people of this great West to digest.

"All are Meteors With a Different Name."

"We wither from our youth, we gasp away—
Sick, sick: Unfound the boon—unslaked the thirst,
Though to the last, in verge of our decay,

Some phantom lures, such as sought at first—
But all too late—so we are doubly cursed.
Love, fame, ambition, avarice—'tis the same,
Each idle, and all ill—and none the worst.

For all are meteors with a different name,
And death the sable smoke where vanishes the flame."

In all probability, for millions of years, the sun has risen to bless us by day and the stars have twinkled through the evening twilight. Each of us, during our short stay, have watched in our own way, the repetition of yesterday. Men have dug and delved, studied and worried, they have searched and theorized on the origin of man. They have polluted and deluted the sacred laws with their poor mortal theory of evolution; the opinions; the theories, the deductions, the figures and the facts are varied entanglements, intricacies and perplexities, based on personal opinions. But as varying, as far apart as they may be as to the origin of humanity, they are all agreed as to our destiny.

The poet Byron understood humanity, as a study of the above extract will show. With each birth a destiny is fixed; a fate is sealed; we may be kings and queens, presidents or leaders of men, or we may be only their subjects. Whatever our station in life, "All are Meteors With a Different Name." But from the first day of our existence, we are all pushed by the ceaseless, unchanging roll of time, "Though to the last," even when we begin to bend under the weight of years "some phantom lures, such as we sought at first." But, alas! Some day, somewhere, our sun of life must sink to rise no more. Each of us, either long or short our lives, have felt the twang of a broken chord, caused by the hand of death. Each has bowed to this immutable law; our heart has been broken (as it were) by the death of loved ones. But, alas! It must be so! We can do nothing but mourn their departure, try to perpetuate them by keeping their names and deeds engraven in the hall of memory, erect at their last resting place some beautiful and lasting memorial. Out of respect, in loving remembrance of father, mother, brother or sister, 'tis the last and only duty we can perform. We would say to you, with all due respect, do your duty and place the order now. Wichita Marble Works, 818 Indiana Ave. 144-61

THE MAN FROM
... DEADWOOD.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

It happened in Arizona when that region was a catch-all for bad people from the Missouri river to the Pacific ocean. A man entered the Alhambra hotel, east of the city, about his name, Silas Dungleford, Deadwood, Colo. He was shown to room No. 36, on the floor above—there were but two stories in all—where he deposited his baggage, contained in a red bandanna, and went down to supper.

While eating a hand was clapped on his shoulder. Putting his hand to his hip, he turned, white as a sheet, and looked up into a man's face.

"Fardig, stranger. I thort you was Mark Brown."

Mr. Dungleford turned to his supper concealing as best he could a sign of relief. When through he went to the bar, lit a cigar and smoked with an assumed careless air. Nevertheless, from under the rim of his sombrero his restless eye kept a sharp watch on every one present. His cigar finished, he yawned, took a candle from the bar and went up to his room, moving so long as he remained in sight of others with a deliberate step, which he increased when in the hall above. Entering his room, he turned the key in the lock, put his pistols under his pillow, undressed and went to bed.

There was a confusion of noises in the room below. Men were evidently gathered there, though what they were doing or saying he could not tell. He got out of bed and put his ear to the floor to listen. There were periods when they talked and periods when they were silent. Tired of attempting to discover what they were doing, he returned to his bed and fell asleep.

He was awakened by the knock of a heavy knuckle on the door. Starting up, he seized his pistols and jumped out of bed.

"What's wanted?" he said, assuming a gruff tone.

"You; open the door!"

"Not on your life!"

"Then we'll do it ourselves."

There was the sound of a boot heel against the door, which flew open, and the kerosene lamp in the hall revealed within a stalwart figure standing with a revolver in each hand. Several men in various costumes from that of Mexican to cowboy faced him.

"You Dungleford?" asked one of them.

"I am. Let the man who denies it stand back and get ready to swallow a lead pill."

"Of Deadwood?"

"Yes, of Deadwood. You saw it on the register, didn't you? What d'y want to come up here in the middle of the night for to wake a man up to learn what y' already know?"

"You're the man we want, whatever your name is."

"Stand back! The first man that steps inside the door is a dead un!"

He was pale as a ghost and both hands trembled. They were eight to one and all armed. But he was like a stag at bay. They recoiled.

"You've come to hang me. I know it. But before you git the rope around my neck some of you'll bite the dust. Stand back, I say!"

"Stranger, what the— one of the party was beginning, but the hunted man broke in.

"Ford tried to kill me because I held a full house against his three aces, and I scooped $800 on the hand. I shot first; that's all. The Texas man got in my way when I was drunk. As for the woman, I found her stealin' on me with a carvin' knife when she thought I was asleep. I killed all three of 'em fair. I lit out 'cause their friends was gettin' together to do me. But I'm broke, and Tim Bunker owes me a thousand I wanted to git, so I came back under another name to git it."

"Oh, you're Colorado Pete, air y'?"

"Certain. Ef y' thort I was Dungleford what d'y come up here in the middle of the night to git me out for?"

"How long ago did y' kill them duffers?"

"A year last month."

The gang looked from one to another inquiringly. No one seemed even to have heard of the murders. Finally one of them turned to the man who had confessed that he was Colorado Pete.

"Jee-kon y'er lookin' for painters, stranger, where there's only coyotes. None of us was here when y' done the killin'. D'y s'pose this town's made up of people as has got homes to set around in and never move on?"

"And y' hain't come to hang me?"

"That wasn't the intention fast off."

"Then what're y' doin' here?"

"We was havin' a small game below, said a red bearded man, Jim Peters, he and me was in for a three hundred dollar pot. Jim held a straight, I three queens. Jim allows as his hand beat mine, I allowin' that mine beat his'n. Three of the gang sides with him and three with me. Some un said there was a man from Deadwood stoppin' at the hotel and what they don't know about poker or any other gamblin' game in Deadwood wasn't worth knowin'. So we come here to ask y' to decide the p'int."

"Oh," said Colorado Pete, lowering his pistol, "is that all? I thort y'd come to hang me. Waal, three of a kind beats a straight, and some folks don't count straights no how."

"Hoop!" shouted the winner, leading the party downstairs. "I knowed I was right!"

"Much obliged, stranger," said the only polite man in the party. "Sorry for disturbin' you."

EDWARD S. SPINNEY.

The Stick For Wives.

In the old Anglo-Norman marriage ceremony the gentlewoman used to promise her husband to be "duxon unto my gentil manne." The word duxon corresponds to the modern German biesam, meaning bending or pliant, and the old English was "husk-an," all of which goes to show that things must have been very pleasantly ordered in the good old days that are dead and gone. According to the old English law, which is still unrescinded in the statute book, the "gentil manne" was allowed to beat his goodie wife with a stick the diameter of which did not exceed a quarter of an inch.—New York World.

What She Wanted to See.

The chauffeur was taking his load of tourists for a ride through the residential portion of the metropolis and pointing out to them the state mansions of the nabob. "I've often heard," said the portly dowager with the diamonds, "of these Oliver Wendell homes. Would you mind showing us one of 'em?"—San Francisco Argonaut.

Sensitive.

"I hear you is out of a job, Willie?" "Yes. I may be a little too sensitive, but when the boss sez 'Git to blazes out of here before I kick you out!' then I got mad and resigned me position."—Illustrated Bits.

Just Names.

She had passed a season abroad, and in London, she said modestly, her success had been unprecedented. The earl said he could readily believe that.

"The dinner," she resumed, "that Lady Featherstonhaugh—"

"Excuse me. The name is pronounced Freestonhay," said the earl.

"Well, at the dinner Lord Dalzell—"

"Though written Dalzell, it is pronounced Deel. But pray go on."

"He and Sir Dugaid Colquhoun—"

"You mean Calhoun. Yes?"

"And Lady Leveson-Gower and Mr Bohun—"

"Leveson-Gore and Boone are the correct pronunciations. But I'm interrupting you."

"Not at all. All these persons and Lord St. Maur drank—"

"Not St. Maur—Seymour. Well?"

"Oh, I forgot what I was going to say. You've quite put me out with your corrections."

"And your story was just getting interesting, too," said the earl regretfully.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

REAL SERVICE TO YOU

IF, BY some persistency in giving advice, this newspaper can convince every merchant of the wisdom of telling you all of his store-news that is important—of using enough space in which to do it, and of telling as much of his store-news in every issue as you would be interested in knowing--and--

If, at the risk of over-iteration, this newspaper should convince you that this same store-news is of real, live, palpitating importance to you, as fully worthy of your attention as politics, or base ball, or Crowned Heads, or elopements, murders, riots, fashions or functions of the rich--and--

If it should follow that the merchants should prosper in exact ratio to their energy in advertising and that you should thrive in proportion to your intelligence in spending your income--then this newspaper will feel that it has accomplished so real a public service that this city will be a better place in which to live and to do business

YOU COULDN'T BE

So the man concluded to advertise for you. He had hoped you would happen to come around to see him of your own accord—or, that somebody would tell you about what he has to tell you—or, that necessity would drive you to search for him. But, you didn't come—you didn't "happen" to hear, or to see. His message for you wasn't delivered. His offer—the offer that is really more to your liking and to your interest than any you've had for months—is, at last (as it should have been at first) put into the form of an ad.; and awaits you in these columns. QUILTY OF CONTEMPT.

But Colorado's Secretary of State Was Freed From Jail by Supreme Court.

Denver, Colo., Oct. 27.—Secretary of State Timothy O'Connor was found guilty of contempt of the District Court by Judge George Allen today and ordered confined in the county jail until such time as he shall obey the order of the court in regard to the official ballots for the November election.

The sentence followed Mr. O'Connor's refusal to place the anti-Guggenheim and Business Men's ticket on the official ballots.

These tickets carry the name of the regular republican candidate for president, candidates and state officers, but different nominations for county offices and legislature.

The State supreme court this afternoon granted a writ of habeas corpus applied for by O'Connor's attorney and the Secretary of State was released from the custody of the sheriff upon $5,000 bond. He will appear before the supreme court Monday, at which time the court will take up all matters connected with the controversy which led to the issuance of Judge Allen's order.

KERN ASSERTS SIMS DENIES

By Associated Press. Tipton, Ind., Oct. 27.—John W. Sims Says Story is False.

By Associated Press. Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 27.—Secretary of State Sims declared that the statement of Kern at Tipton was absolutely false. "It is about time for such stories to be circulated, as the democrats hope to help their cause in this way," said Sims.

Missionary and Social Meeting.

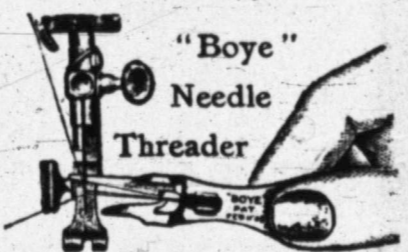

The monthly missionary and social meeting of the ladies of the First Presbyterian church was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. L. White, 1519 Tenth street. Thirty members answered to roll call. Several visitors were also present.

This was in many respects one of the most helpful and enjoyable meetings of the year. The topic for the month, "The Mormons in the United States," was interestingly discussed by a number of ladies, Miss Kemp and Mrs. Hunt giving especially good papers on the subject. Little Miss Lola Strange rendered in a most pleasing way a missionary recitation, while the Misses White and Ingram favored us with several vocal solos. After this program followed the social hour, during which dainty refreshments were served, and last but not least came the offering, which amounted to $12.49.

We are glad to report that the society is growing in both interest and numbers, five new members being recently added. A MEMBER.

DESIGNED BY SPERO, MICHAEL & SON NEW YORK

Copyright 1908 by Hart Schaffner & Marx

One of the most essential features of clothing is style. It is not put into like starch in a collar; it is not added to the garments when they are nearing completion. Style is built into clothes from the very start; from the chalk lines on the cloth before the shears starts their work and goes hand-in-hand with every operation in clothes making to the last stitch.

Hart, Schaffner & Marx and Spero, Michael & Son's clothes have real style and also the other necessary accomplishments; excellent material high grade workmanship and splendid wearing qualities. We are showing a surprising assortment of fall styles in all the modish fabrics and collar for men and young men. Price $10 to $40. IF THERE WAS ANY BETTER COFFEE TO BE HAD THAN

MANOR HOUSE COFFEE

We would certainly sell it.

We have picked out this particular brand of coffee because we believe it to be the very best on the market. We steel cut it for you as you want it and make the sweeping assertion that you can make more cups of Good Coffee from a pound of Manor House steel cut in our mill than from any other.
