Between the Frying Pan and the Fire!

WASHINGTON.—The main reasons why no one can yet be sure whether or not there is to be an extra session of Congress are that it isn't clear yet just who wants such a session and that the Senate can move with a surprising amount of speed when it desires.

The thing that threatens to force President Hoover to call a special session is the possibility that the appropriation bills won't be passed, leaving government departments without money on which to operate.

The Senate has been finding plenty of points for debate besides appropriation bills and that raises the point of physical limitations as to whether the appropriation bills can be passed if such debate goes on and the argumentative point whether the other matters are of sufficient import to warrant delay at the expense of a special session.

Some of the subjects, which have been taking up time are the debates on drought suffering and unemployment, the confirmations of three federal power commissioners and of Eugene Meyer to the Federal Reserve Board, Indian affairs administration in connection with an appropriation measure, the Wickham report, maternity and infancy legislation, the Nye investigation of senatorial campaign expenditures, and Tom Heflin's charges of fraud in his defeat for re-election. The Indians have been given an especially large amount of time.

SENATOR LAWRENCE C. PHIPPS of Colorado, who is said to be worth something like $50,000,000, was one of those barred from the concert of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra the other night when he arrived with some ladies and sought to enter the hall after the overture had begun. The senator was told that he couldn't enter until intermission, when the best part of the concert would be over. A music critic who heartily joined him in protest was threatened with ejection. Senator Phipps refused to wait for intermission and left.

CONGRESS fixed the legal alcoholic content on non-intoxicating beverages at one-half of 1 per cent, but the point has been debated ever since. Professor Yandell Henderson, professor of applied physiology at Yale, says this: "No beverage which in common usage is drunk only in such amounts that not more than the equivalent of 80 cubic centimeters of absolute alcohol is absorbed into the blood in an hour can properly be denominated as intoxicating."

Few persons care to drink half a gallon of beer in an hour, Dr. Henderson says, and hence according to his definition beer containing 3 or 4 per cent alcohol by volume is not intoxicating, even if the consumer drinks half a gallon an hour for several hours in succession.

Professor Henderson made these assertions in answer to query from the Yale Daily News. Senator Eingham of Connecticut has placed his article in the Congressional Record.

JUST to remind you how small the world is getting:

Mr. Claude Watkins, proprietor of the New Central Hotel at Maysville, Ky., read in a newspaper about 2 o'clock in the afternoon that his daughter had been injured in an automobile accident at Rome, Italy, a few hours previously.

He put in a telephone call for the American consulate at Rome and at 3 o'clock was talking with Vice Consul Donald Wilcox.

Mr. Wilcox said he knew all about the accident, that the hotel man's daughter was not seriously injured and that he would see she had every attention. He promised to cable later news and Watkins had the cablegram before 6 p. m.

Watkins wrote the State Department a letter of appreciation. Well, said the department people, proud of the foreign service, things often happen like that.

CANADIAN SECT PLANS FIFTH GREAT TREK

By United Press. CHIHUAHUA CITY, Mexico, Feb. 6.—Movement of the Doukhobors from Canada to the Santa Clara ranch near here, planned as soon as the Mexican government grants permission for the trek, will be the fifth great migration for the sect in its 300 years of history.

So well have the leaders of the communist religious colony managed its affairs in recent years that there will be plenty of funds left for transportation after the 650,000 acres of the great ranch are purchased. Special combination freight and passenger trains probably will carry the Doukhobors and the trip will be made in greater comfort than any of the previous migrations.

Though the Doukhobors are not aggressive and make no attempt to impose their beliefs on their neighbors, the sect has been in more or less conflict with authority ever since it was founded in Russia during the eighteenth century by a wandering Prussian soldier of Quakerish ideals. Because they opposed the orthodox church, Czar Alexander I required them all to live in the Tauris area.

The second movement was from 1840 to 1850. The Doukhobors refused to serve in the armies of Czar Nicholas I because of religious scruples and he banished them to the savage Trans-Caucasus on the Turkish frontier. To the surprise of their oppressors, the Doukhobors thrived and multiplied.

In 1887, Czar Alexander III ordered universal military service enforced in the Doukhobor colony and the conflict was renewed. In 1895, the Doukhobors burned all of the arms they could find in protest. This so incensed Czar Nicholas II that he sent cossacks against them, driving 4,000 persons from Tiflis to Georgia.

Count Leo Tolstoy was responsible for the fourth migration. He heard of their plight, and with the proceeds of "Resurrection," his last great novel, and donations from British philanthropists arranged for the Doukhobors to emigrate to Canada.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE Shawnee, Okla.

Edgar G. Harris, publisher of the West Point (Miss.) Times-Leader, president of the Tupelo (Miss.) Daily News, and one of the best known and most successful small city publishers in the south, says: "Few people appreciate the service rendered by the daily and weekly press during the period of economic adjustment through which the country has recently emerged."

"Newspaper revenues have declined 15 to 25 per cent during the past fifteen months and this is in many instances more than the difference between profit and loss. Yet most newspapers have maintained their organizations intact, paid the same wage scales, the same price for white paper, and pocketed their losses without complaint."

"If a merchant doesn't sell his goods, he still has them. They may depreciate to some extent. But they are still on his shelves. Not so with a newspaper. Labor and white paper costs are substantially the same, regardless of the volume of advertising carried."

"Be it said to the everlasting credit of the newspapers, however, they have maintained a buoyant spirit of optimism, minimized evidences of fear and trepidation, and encouraged and fostered every effort to stem this unfortunate tide of pessimism and fear. "It has been a 'testing time' for the newspapers of America, and the better papers will emerge from this crisis stronger than before, because they have justified their existence and demonstrated their usefulness."

OLD BIBLE REMINDER OF PIONEER'S CAREER

By United Press.
AUSTIN.—Mute testimony to the travails of its owner, who was one of the famous "Three Hundred" who accompanied Stephen F. Austin on his pilgrimage to Texas, the land of promise, in 1821, the old family Bible of Asa Mitchell now reposes in the vault of the library of the University of Texas. Bound in faded doeskin, made from the hide of a doe Asa Mitchell himself probably killed and skinned and certainly dressed, the Bible is now in an excellent state of preservation even though the binding is ragged. Mitchell established the first tannery in Texas, and it is quite certain that the binding for this Bible was one of his first productions.

Mrs. Mattie Austin Hatcher, archivist in the University library, is making a collection of family Bibles which belonged to members of the old "Three Hundred" and descendants of those noted pioneers are lending assistance in running down every possible clue to their present whereabouts. In addition to the Mitchell Bible which was deposited in the library by Mrs. John Pritchett of Austin and San Marcos, a lineal descendant of Mitchell, Mrs. Hatcher has secured, either as gift or as loans, the Bibles of William Stafford from Mrs. Starkey Duncan and Miss Lucile Dyer, both of Austin, of Josiah H. Bell from Mrs. Lucy Carnes of Austin, and of John Little from Mrs. Sam J. Smith of Austin. Stafford, Little and Bell were all members of the original "Three Hundred" and Bell was a particular friend of Stephen F. Austin, the latter having left Bell in charge of the colony while he went to Mexico City.

Asa Mitchell, a native of Pennsylvania, married Charlotte Woodmancy of Elizabeth, N. J.; shortly after his marriage, when his son, Nathan, was 2 years old, he moved to Christian county, Kentucky. In 1822, the whole family embarked on a "broad burn" on the Mississippi River for Texas. At New Orleans, the Mitchells, together with a party of 30 or 40 others, the majority of whom were young men, set sail on the schooner, "James Motley." After 40 days on the hot, shiny sea, they crossed the bar at Pass Cavalle and sailed up Matagorda Bay to the point where the town of that name now stands.

Several days after landing, the adventurers encountered a party of Mexican traders and purchased from them several ponies. Without saddles, they mounted the ponies and started up the Colorado River, passing through the regions that are now Matagorda, Wharton and Colorado counties, then without sign of human habitation. At the spot where the town of Columbus later was established, they halted, and began to construct rude clapboard shelters under the trees.

Several of the men then returned to the coast for the remainder of the provisions and baggage, only to find that the guards had disappeared and the baggage and supplies were gone. It was thought that the party had been discovered by the Carankahua Indians, a cannibal tribe.

Discouraged, many of the settlers wanted to return to the "states." Of these malcontents, Mitchell was one. He went to La Bahia, now known as Goliad, then a mission and trading point, to purchase a drove of mules. These he hoped to sell in Louisiana for enough to take his family back to Kentucky. A frightful storm, however, overcame him and his Mexican herdsmen scattered his drove of mules, with the result that only 12 of the animals were found after the stampede. These he managed to sell for a good price.

With about 30 active young Kentuckians, Mitchell chartered a schooner at New Orleans, intending to sail for Matamoras, Mex., stopping only long enough in Texas to pick up Asa's family at Matagorda. A three-day gale, however, interfered, and its cessation left the party stranded ashore seven miles east of the mouth of the Brazos.

Mitchell and his fellow adventurers launched two yawl boats in the waters of the Galveston Bay above San Luis Pass, and soon discovered the Brazos River and fresh water. Moving up the Brazos, they located at the present site of Velasco. The appearance of the deadly Carankahua interrupted their home-building, but the reliable long rifles of the Kentucky boys kept the cannibalistic natives at a respectful distance. The warfare also served to bring the presence of the party to the attention of the settlers farther up the Brazos.

During Mitchell's absence, the marauding Indians attacked the settlement at Matagorda, but the attack was at first confined to outlying families. Mrs. Mitchell and an old man, Mr. Gilmore, placed the Mitchell children on ponies and escaped to comparative safety to a point on the Brazos where Richmond now stands, then inhabited by a single family, the Boatrights.

Asa heard of his wife's proximity, so, with two companions, Toy and Mays, he called up the river in a yawl and brought her with him to Velasco.

Tobacco Planted
The settlers immediately began to clear the cane brakes away for agricultural pursuits, and planted corn, melons, pumpkins and other seeds. Most important of all, however, was the thimbleful of Kentucky tobacco seed. Mitchell sold his entire share of the crop to Mexican traders for the sum of $1,200.

In 1824, Mitchell secured his headright certificate for a league and labor of land in Austin's colony at San Felipe. He located at the mouth of the Brazos, now Velasco. Here Mrs. Mitchell died in 1832. After her death the family moved to Washington county, where the home was maintained under 1847, when Asa moved to San Antonio. With 12 men, David Crockett spent the night at Mitchell's house in Washington county on his way to take a hand in the historic battle at the Alamo.

Mitchell and his family took a part in the activities of the new country. One son, Nathan enlisted in Capt. W. W. Hill's company, Burleson's regiment and served at San Jacinto and later became an interpreter for negotiations with the Mexicans. William, another son, was killed in the Fier Expedition. Asa Mitchell was one of the signers of the Texas Declaration of Independence. He built the first tanyard for the colony at old Columbia. He served on the commission of safety for the republic. He was president of the vigilance committee to put down unionism in Texas. He became quite wealthy, having by 1858 acquired a large body of land on Medina River, as well as some in the western part of the state, his holdings near the mouth of the Brazos River and his property in San Antonio. He was a leading member of the old Soledad Street Methodist Church in San Antonio, and in 1862 helped organize the first negro Sunday school in San Antonio.

8,300 Miles of Gas Lines Built in 1930

Eight thousand, three hundred miles of natural gas pipe lines were built during 1930, at a cost of $100,000,000, and brought the total to 80,000 miles. Gas statisticians predict the total will be 150,000 within the next decade.

Texas, which went into the lead in natural gas production in 1929, more than held its place in 1930 with a total output of 539 billion cubic feet against 400 billion for Oklahoma, in second place. Much of the new construction of pipe lines is for Texas gas, and since the first of the year plans have been announced for a new line from the Panhandle fields to Colorado, Nebraska and Montana.

Consumption of natural gas in 1930 was two trillion cubic feet, a gain of 83 billion feet over the 1929 total.

Lose Your Life to Save It Science and Bible Agree

By HELMAN ROSENTHAL, M.A. Director, Dallas Laboratories

Whoever will save his life shall lose it." And science agrees that the saying is literally true of that chemical laboratory which we call our bodies, for the body is an incessant spendthrift, the destructive spending element being more important to its existence than the building saving part.

What we call "the love of life" shown by activity, the chemist would call "destructive metabolism."

Many of us have experienced an internal panic when a doctor has talked solemnly to us about our metabolism. The word has a mysterious, sinister sound that catches us in a weak spot; but now that the chemistry of living is pretty well mapped out by scientists, the dangerous word is losing its power of frightening us into nervous collapse.

Metabolism, says science, is the body's ability to take food, air, sunshine, water, and change them into a part of the body itself. Sometimes a body cannot do it.

Occasionally someone has a body that refuses to take the sugar and starch that is eaten and change it into a part of the energy for which it is intended. Such a one has diabetes and must be given help from outside to carry on the processes of metabolism.

While most emphasis is placed on the tearing down, or destructive metabolism, the building up or constructive side is, of course, important too.

By means of sunshine through the orange, or ultra violet radiation, carbon dioxide and water are changed into the complex carbon and nitrogen compound that makes living material. Scientists know that the chemical laboratory in our bodies does this, and if they knew the exact process they might create life.

While we are young, the constructive side of the process is in the lead. When we grow old, the destructive takes the ascendancy. And all through life a delicate balance between the two must be maintained—an adjustment of two opposing chemical processes. This applies not only to the human body, but to all forms of life from the one-cell animal up.

Destructive metabolism is the using up, the burning of the food and stored energy of the body. It is this that enables us to run and swim and dance and enjoy life generally. Without the destructive end of the body's functioning, we would not only be static, but we could not live.

One authority has said, "Growth, reproduction, motion, irritability and constructive metabolism may cease as in a resting seed, yet life may go on for many years; but when destructive metabolism ceases, life ceases."

And so again science agrees with the statement that "Whoever will save his life shall lose it."

INCOME TAX

No. 4
If husband and wife should each have a net income in excess of $4,000, but neither a net income in excess of $8,000, it is to their interest, in filing separate income-tax returns for the year 1930, to divide the personal exemption of $3,500 between them, as shown by the following illustration, in which the husband claims $3,000 and the wife $500:

income in excess of the personal exemption and other credits, 3 per cent on the next $4,000, and 5 per cent on the balance, any other division of the personal exemption would have subjected part of the husband's or wife's income to the 3 per cent rate. The computations do not include the 25 per cent credit on earned incomes.

Aside from dividing the personal exemption, husband and wife often may further decrease the amount of their total taxes by filing separate returns and reporting their separate income therein, providing their joint income is sufficiently large to be subject to the surtax, which applies to net incomes in excess of $10,000.

Husband and wife may elect each year whether to file a joint return or separate returns. Where, however, a joint return or separate returns have been filed for a particular year, neither husband nor wife may afterwards file an amended return or return on a different basis for that year.

For GINGER'S SAKE

BEGIN HERE TODAY To keep life from growing too dull in Red Thrush, Iowa, Ginger Ella Tolliver organized a Junior Country Club.

That night at the opening Bard realized he was falling in love with Ginger. The event was a great success.

Remembering Speed's boyish attractiveness, she was sure his presence would serve at least as a temporary check-rein for Ginger's affairs of the heart.

But Ginger had strong ideas of her own. If Phil or anybody else thought for one minute that Ginger was going to shut herself up with Speed Roney...

Ginger, hard pressed, pitying their sad state so similar to that which had threatened her adored father, had received them without bitterness...

At first he was a pitiful, not in an accidental encounter with old Bard Baldwin, the motivating spirit of the blind group, had entered upon a farcical pretense at blindness in order to gain temporary admission to the parsonage.

HUMOR IS TRAIT OF LECTURER

What is a Charm School lecturer like—close-up?
Is she charming—really? Temperamental? Young?
Since The Times announced the impending arrival of Nancy Earle in Ranger to conduct one of her noted Charm Schools under its sponsorship in the Masonic building from Feb. 10 to 13, these questions have no doubt been flitting through the minds of those who have been reading of this unusual event. From a correspondent of this newspaper who has attended some of the Charm School talks in another city, and who has been fortunate enough to talk with Miss Earle in rather intimate, unprofessional surroundings, passes on these impressions.

"A ruthless breaking of this week's social engagements," writes our correspondent, "and no doubt, too, many a basket of darnings left undone, has been the enthusiastic response of the women of this city to Miss Earle, for judging from the crowds, they have, one and all, marked their calendars for the entire week with 'Charm School'." Old and young, fat and thin, tall and short, they have packed the auditorium each day in mounting numbers.

"The homage of attention which has been accorded Miss Earle," continues our correspondent, "is not hard to understand. Just a few moments spent listening to her are enough to convince one that she herself possesses charm of a most distinctive variety. She is a brilliant speaker, and with incomparable versatility leads her listeners with easy grace through the multitude of subjects which she discusses. Earnest, serious, practical she is, and the profundity of her understanding of human nature, as well as her wealth of scientific information, is astounding.

"But the thing that impressed one most was the liting delight of the whole affair. Miss Earle has a sense of humor that flashes through her most serious moments. One was constantly surprised to find oneself caught up out of some earnest philosophizing, or some very practical and prosaic discussion of hygiene or beauty problem, and tossed into gales of laughter. There was not a dull moment, and we all wished it were not time to go home.

After one of the talks, our correspondent attended a social function given in Miss Earle's honor, and her impressions of the lecturer in this close-up view, are interesting.

Among other enthusiastic things, she writes of Miss Earle, "Charm is indeed the word which expresses her. A cold mental analysis of her, as she sat relaxed, in an easy chair sipping tea, with all thought of the Charm School apparently gone, brought out one, two, three, just the things that she had spoken of as the elements of feminine charm. Simplicity, poise, grace, she had all of those as she sat there, perfectly at ease in strange surroundings.

"Her vitality, her aliveness, even at the end of a long, strenuous day, and even though she was relaxed and resting, was striking. Her low, musical voice was delightful to listen to, and she didn't talk when she had only obvious things to say.

"She made no effort to appear clever or to dominate the scene, yet her presence filled the rooms. One was aware of a positive electric charm, even when she sat quietly listening. This vital positiveness combines strangely in this strangely charming woman with simplicity and superb understated poise. She is totally unaffected.

"Her age? Yes, we wondered, too, as we sat there and watched her in a completely unguarded moment. Her maturity of judgment, and the depth of her thought as evidenced in her lectures, her long professional career, her travels the many experiences to which she casually refers, these do not indicate youth. Yet she looks quite like a girl. Her smooth lovely skin has the freshness of youth, her slim graceful figure is certainly youthful, and none of the telltale marks of advancing years on throat and eyes are there. And her sparkling humor, the real giggles that she can indulge in with thorough enjoyment, those too are an evidence of her youth. We didn't learn how old she is, but it didn't seem to matter."

Miss Earle will be presented to the women of Ranger at 2:30, Tuesday, the first of her series of five free talks on personality, homemaking charm, health and beauty to be held in the Masonic Temple. You'll want to see her, and listen to her entertaining and beneficial talks. The talks will be given at Masonic Temple Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons at 2:30 and Thursday night at 8 p. m.

Men will get so tired of women using cosmetics, says a beauty expert, that they will turn in relief to milkmaids. But on cold winter mornings, even milkmaids handle cold cream.

3 things to stop a cold "Pape's" does them all!

Now, just a pleasant tablet and relief for your cold begins, instantly. And Pape's Cold Compound relieves all symptoms of colds. It does the three things any doctor will tell you are necessary to check a cold.
"Pape's" reduces irritation and swelling of the nasal lining. So breathing becomes easy; discharge stops; the head clears. "Pape's" encourages perspiration; banishes that achy, feverish, weak feeling which is due to inactivity of the pores. "Pape's" kills cold germs; opens the bowels; takes germs and the acid-wastes of colds right out of your system.
Next time a cold starts, try Pape's Cold Compound and learn the reason for its tremendous sales and popularity. Just remember the name "Pape's." All druggists —35c.
