Selecting Head of Confederate Home May Be Delayed

Naming of a superintendent of the Texas Confederate home at Austin will be delayed considerably, and may wait until after a vacancy develops, Sept. 1, in the transfer of Supt. R. R. Patterson to the state children's home at Waco.
 John F. Wallace, member of the board of control is away on his vacation until the middle of next week. Member Adrian Pool will resign by the end of this month. All three members have their own separate choices for the place.

There is a deadlock.

The prospective vacancy was caused by the recent death of R. B. Walthall, who had been elected to the place from Sept. 1.

Mr. Patterson, who has devoted much study to administration and child welfare, is extremely happy over the prospect of taking charge of the Waco home, and will not be reassigned back to the Confederate home.

Nurse Accuses Star Poloist

Miss Eugenia Rose, above, nurse in an Evanston, Ill., hospital, has charged that Cecil Smith, Texas polo star, dragged her from an automobile after a two-hour struggle, and attacked her. Smith, who was in Chicago to participate in the east-west polo matches, labeled the accusation a frame-up.

at least a portion of their natural thinking ability . . . checking up on dad's bank account before deciding just how to take the fatal leap.

That's why we got off on all this. With all respects to dads.

A BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

YE WILL REAP WHAT YE SOW: Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting. And let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not.—Galatians 6: 7-9.

BACK IN STEP

When the legislature last spring cut the pay of its workers 25 to 35 per cent, there was no Blue Eagle, no blanket and industry codes, and no visible start on the huge increase in the cost of food and clothing. All these have come on since.

The legislature alone can raise or lower state salaries. Generally, this is done for a two year period. For that reason, while costs were at their lowest during the past two years, state salaries had not been reduced. Just now, after a new administration brings new people into the state service, and after costs and prices have risen, a two-year period of drastically-lowered pay has been ordered. That period will start Sept. 1.

So, the state is not now to be blamed that its policy is in such direct conflict with the national government policy in the recovery program. The only agency with power to conform the state has not been in session.

The legislature will meet very early in September. It will hear much of these heads of families who would have to work for $45 to $60 a month unless the severe injustices of the reductions in the lowest brackets are remedied.

It is probable that the legislature could not readjust any of the salaries, no matter how low they have been cut, or how much below normal of decent living standards they are, until some new revenues are found to protect all state employes from an 8 to 10 per cent discount on warrants, and for other purposes. Saving this discount will be a degree of raising the income of state workers.

But there will be new revenue measures, either to pay the bond issue or to pay the relief bill. It is better for the state—President Roosevelt says, for all employers—to pay living wages rather than force people onto the relief rolls and into the breadlines.

Surely the legislature in September will give its best thought to taking out the harshest terms of the salary-cutting, particularly as it affects those who are paid so little that no margin is left above the actual necessities of life.

LESS BITTERNESS

Prohibition battles in past political life of Texas have been among the bitterest of all.

It is striking that this year the political campaign over the repeal and beer amendments showed nothing of the old mud-slinging spirit. On both sides, the appeal was to reason, and dealt with issues, rather than being personal and an appeal to prejudices and hate.

This is a sign of advancement.

We have a new law now to protect "suckers" from unscrupulous promoters who issue questionable investments. The investors who gave away good money for bad bonds in the boom years no doubt feel that the legislation comes much too late to do them any good.

Some cities under the name of "Economy" have cut off many of their street lights, making the work of the highjacker safe and causing many accidents and deaths due to poor street lighting. These cities should turn on the lights an dagain make the streets safe for motorists and pedestrians.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

BRUCE B. BREWER, vice president of the Ferry-Hanly Advertising company, says:

THAT buyers today want facts. What article have you bought recently without thinking it over quite a bit? That means you, and everyone else, will read MORE about some article in which you may be, or can be, interested.

In the newspaper you have these facts logically presented to you. You can linger on a certain point of advantage; you can read it again; you have the evidence there which to base your decision.

News is "hotter" today. Things are changing rapidly. We wonder what is happening now, and what might happen next. So we keep in touch with today's events through the newspaper.

"Hot news" keeps people reading newspapers. They read the papers, too, for "hot news" about products or services they need. If the facts are there—enough facts and convincing facts—people will buy. And that, after all, is the purpose of advertising. To make the sale. The newspaper has a big advantage because it presents those facts so that the purchaser may think them over, study them again and again, as he makes his decision.

STEADY SMOKERS TURN TO CAMELS

A. M. WILKINS, air-mail ace, says: "It's a steady grind, all right, being a night hawk on the air mail. A man has to have healthy nerves to live up to our tradition that the mail must go through! That's why I smoke Camels. And I smoke plenty! Camels never ruffle or jangle my nerves, and I like their mild, rich flavor."

Steady smokers turn to Camels because the costlier tobaccos in Camels never tire the taste—never get on the nerves. Your taste and your nerves will confirm this. Start smoking Camels today and prove it for yourself. It is more fun to know!

For the LOVE of EVE by Lucy Walling

BEGIN HERE TODAY
EVE BAYLESS, pretty assistant to EARLE BARNES, advertising manager at Bixby's department store, marries DICK RADER, a construction superintendent temporarily working in Lake City. Dick wants Eve to give up working but she refuses.
ARLENE SMITH, stenographer in the advertising office, fancies herself in love with GEORGE BLISS, but he is vamped by MONA ALLEN, trouble-making copy writer.
Eve receives a letter from FREDERICK PRENTISS, former schoolmate who is playing the stock market. Eve decides to do the same thing. Without Dick's knowledge, she borrows money from her mother and with it buys stock.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XIX
THOUGH she would not have admitted it to anyone there were times when Eve Rader worried about her marriage. Was her work at the office making too many demands on her time and interest, she asked herself. Dick did not complain but nevertheless she sensed that something was wrong. Eve was dissatisfied but did not know what she could do about it. The night of Freda Carter's party Eve and Arlene went to dinner together and then took a cab to North Hills where Freda lived. Arlene's eyes brightened when she saw the tiny studio piano. It was an upright model and looked almost like a toy. Its tone was splendid and as soon as her wraps were removed Arlene sat down and ran her fingers over the keys. "Oh, I didn't know you played!" Freda exclaimed. "Now my party will surely be a success!"
Later Arlene played while the others sang. Her voice was a rich contralto, so sweet that presently when she sounded the first notes of "Love, Come Back to Me," the other singers gradually dropped out to listen to Arlene. Eve hoped her friend had not chosen the song because George Bliss was there. He had come with Mona Allen.
Someone suggested bridge but it was postponed until later. The apartment house rules forbade music after 11 o'clock and the crowd apparently wanted music as long as possible.
WHEN they sang "Will You Remember" from "Maytime," Sam Holeridge who was crippled and had been sitting quietly in a corner of the room leaped up and joined in the singing, letting his voice ring out lustily. "Play it again!" he pleaded when the song was ended.
But before the last notes of the chorus had been reached a second time Sam turned away abruptly. Freda Carter saw that his eyes were misted. "What's the matter, Sam?" she asked kindly. "It's that song-and what it brings back to me," he told her huskily. "I was in love with a beautiful girl once but it all turned out wrong. After that I thought I had to drink to bolster up my courage. I've been doing it ever since. Even tonight! I'm always drinking to forget myself and I'm a damned fool. Don't think I don't know it! And here I am flubbing all over your place. Why don't you give me my marching orders?" "That's all right, Sam," soothed Freda, patting his arm. "And I want you to stay, of course. Tell me-would you rather the crowd stopped singing?" "No. Ask the girl at the piano to play 'Liebesträume,' will you?" And Arlene played it for him. Afterward she sang again while the others listened.
It was a little later when everyone was feeling that the evening had turned into a distinct success that Theron Reece arrived, spoiling the party for Eve. Immediately he took his place at her side. "Does your hubby know you are out tonight?" he smirked. Eve's glance was frigid. "I'm afraid I don't know what you mean," she answered. "Come now!" he said triumphantly. "You didn't tell me you were spending your honeymoon alone when we met in New York. Does hubby know you were out with me there?" "I'm afraid you'll have to excuse me!" Eve said, rising. She could scarcely control herself, yet she did not wish to make a scene. And the apartment was so small she could hardly avoid Reece. She went into the kitchenette. "May I help you?" she asked Freda who was making preparations for the buffet supper. Eve wished Dick would come. He had promised to call for her and Arlene. "Who is he?" Eve asked. "Don't you know Sam? You should. He's a first rate advertising man. Working at Mason's now. Too bad he drinks so much-he has lots of ability."
Later when Eve looked into the living room she saw that one table of bridge had been organized but Arlene and Sam Holeridge were still at the piano. Mona Allen was holding Reece's hand, telling his fortune, and George Bliss stood alone.
Something impish tempted Eve. "Oh, Mr. Bliss!" she called. "Miss Carter would like a man with a good stroke to slice this ham." Bliss seemed glad to help in the kitchenette. He opened a bottle of olives, sliced the ham and prepared excellent coffee. "No kitchenette is complete without a handy man," sighed Freda with a twinkle in her eyes. "If you happen to find one who's unattached and not too antique, Eve, be sure to pull an oar for my side."
A moment later she called gaily. "Fall in line for supper! I'm sending you all home early because I've got to be on the job myself tomorrow."

PARIS STYLES
By MARY KNIGHT
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS.-Put people to work. Make mills and factories hum. This is the idea back of the Schiaparelli collection. Madame Schiaparelli has used an incredible number of new fabrics in her list of autumn models. Heavy and light weight woolsens, natural, artificial and stunning rayon silks, metal cloths, laces and a wide variety of cotton and linen weaves for Palm Beach and the Riviera.
All this means that hundreds of unemployed are being put back to work. The women of Europe and America are fast deciding that the economic crisis has lasted long enough and that it's high time to dress up again.
