Johnson Taking Up Eagles From Violators

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE

with BILL MAYES

Coach Eck Curtis has added considerable strength to the Bulldog lineup, according to a belief shared both by the coach and a large number of the Ranger fans, by switching several of the players to the positions they can fill to better advantage to the team than the ones they held down in the first practice games.

Elimination of Bryan from a tackle position because of an injury that will keep him out of the game most, if not all, of the season, necessitated some of the changes, while added strength to the line, without materially reducing the ball carrying ability of the backfield was a problem that Coach Curtis faced.

His first shift was made when Rankin Britt, who has been playing at fullback, was switched to left end, where he was an all-district selection last year, chiefly because of his ability to smear plays started with lots of hope by the opposing team and ending in despair near the line of scrimmage. It was chiefly Britt's rushing of Glenn Wyatt in the Ahilene game when Wyatt was attempting to pass, without success, that Britt first shone as an end. It was his working out of interference on plays started around left end that added to his work at the end position. This year, with more experience than he had last year, he should be a tower of strength at the position.

Jacoby, who has been playing at left end, will play at right end on the offensive and tackle on the defensive play. He will switch positions with Walsh, who will play end on the defense and tackle on the offense.

Speedy Gray, who has been used little season, will be a regular starter at right halfback and Joe Briley will start at left half. This will put plenty of speed into the backfield. Anderson and Cole will play at fullback and quarter, with Anderson calling the plays and passing and Cole punting. This is expected to be a good backfield combination with a better line defense and better chance at gaining ground.

Anderson and Love as line backers should be a hard combination to get around as they have the weight and ability to handle that assignment. Cole and Briley as defensive halfbacks showed what they could do in the Central game, while Gray at safety is back at the position where he stood out last year until an injury kept him out of the lineup.

The Bulldogs have been getting into better condition this week and the cooler weather is working in their favor, as it will not wear down the line so rapidly.

Although they will not be outweighed quite as much as in the Central game, the line will be meeting a line equally as good as that of the Panthers, while the backfield and passing attack of the Mountaineers is reported to be somewhat better.

With the defensive combination worked out, the Bulldogs should be a little harder to score on this week than last and should have as much ability in the backfield on the offense and more in the line. It sounds good on paper and if the Bulldogs put out Friday a decided improvement should be seen in the whole team. But at that they will have to fight the entire 60 minutes to win.

MRS. KELLY ON STAND TODAY AT HER TRIAL

By United Press
OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Oct. 11.—Katherine Kelly was pictured today as a free and easy companion of many men who married in the Urschel kidnaping.

Cross examination of the young woman, defendant with her husband, George (Machine Gun) Kelly as the last of the plotters in the case, resulted in a vastly different story from that she claimed in her testimony.

Between appealing smiles to the judge and jury, she told in the homely language of a farm girl a story of coercion by her husband in a mighty effort to clear herself.

Then, under the fire of Joseph Keenan, assistant U. S. Attorney General, she was forced to admit a story of the shady life of a gangster's wife more spectacular than any of the charges made against her.

She admitted that she and Kelly lived a life of ease with fine homes, expensive cars and high priced jewelry, though Kelly had no occupation "by which he earned an honest living."

Kelly, his attorney said, will not testify either for himself or to bear out Katherine's story that he threatened and forced her into a part in the abduction of Charles Urschel, Oklahoma City oil man.

The case was expected to reach the jury today unless delay developed.

In recounting events of the case, Mrs. Kelly said that after Harvey Bailey had been arrested on a farm near Paradise, Texas, she had stayed two days in Dallas, talking to attorneys. She then went to Mineral Wells, staying a week, she said. Kelly was not with her. She next saw him, she said, two weeks later at the Coleman farm, near Coleman, Texas.

DR. E. F. JARREL RESIGNS AS A BOARD MEMBER

By United Press
AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 11.—Dr. E. F. Jarrell, Tyler, today tendered his resignation as member of the state livestock sanitary commission to Governor Miriam A. Ferguson.

Dr. Jarrell had testified twice yesterday before a house committee investigating reported trafficking in state appointments.

In a letter to the governor, Dr. Jarrell said:

"I wish to reiterate the fact that I am entirely innocent of the charges brought against me and that are now under investigation by the house.

"After having spent the day with the investigating committee I am forced to the somewhat unpleasant conclusion that some of the members are actuated by the desire to make a political football of the investigation rather than to elicit any definite facts about the matter.

"It now seems to me that I can best serve you and the state of Texas by depriving certain members of the legislature of their 'Roman holiday' at which I am scheduled to be the victim. It also seems to me that the quickest way for me to clearly demonstrate my innocence of these charges is for me to force my accusers into the state courts."

The resignation is made effective immediately.

WARNS OTHERS TO FOLLOW IN QUICK ORDER

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—A major offensive against violators of NRA agreement opened today as the administration began to make good on its oft-repeated threat to take Blue Eagles from chizlers.

Administrator Hugh Johnson summarized Theodore Rathus, Gary, Ind., cafe owner, to turn in his eagle because of alleged persistent violation of his reemployment agreement.

Johnson repeatedly has warned violators, but this was the first action. He said that "almost at once" blue eagles would be taken away from violators in other cities.

On a list of complaints have been received against Blue Eagle merchants but the NRA said local compliance boards had found most of them to be due to misunderstandings.

FORT WORTH, Oct. 11.—Ranger Captain Odneal today announced six men had been rounded up by Texas Rangers and charged with three post office and several other robberies committed in North and West Texas.

Others are held at Mineral Wells and Hamilton. The charges included post office robberies at Gordon, Santo, and other places.

Country Club Members Meet Tuesday Night

Members of the Ranger Country Club met Tuesday night at the clubhouse to discuss plans for maintaining the club during the coming year.

It was pointed out at the meeting that if from 50 to 60 members could be secured and all back dues paid up the club would be in good financial condition and plans for a membership drive were discussed.

The clubhouse and grounds are an asset to the city as the barbecue pits, grounds and clubhouse are always available to any civic organization or church when they want to give an outdoor picnic or barbecue and the club is glad to accord them the privileges of using the grounds. For this reason, if no other, it was pointed out by some of the members, the club, with its very small indebtedness, should be considered a civic project and should be supported to some extent by the citizens of the town.

Another meeting of the members is to be held on Tuesday night, Oct. 24, at which time the plans for the membership drive are to be taken up again.

League Chairman Urges Voters to Pay Poll Taxes

Frank Jenkins, chairman of the Liberal League of Eastland county, has issued the following appeal to the voters of the county to pay their poll taxes in order that they might vote on the various county and state officers and on the local option question, which is expected to come up for action again sometime in February or March, 1934:

"The coming year is freighted with political possibilities. The voters must elect a governor, congressmen, state senators and representatives, sheriffs, county judges, and all officers, both in state, city and county.

"In addition there will be a local option election to again determine whether we shall have beer legally sold here in Eastland county, or whether we shall continue to spend over a thousand dollars per day with the merchants of Stephens and Shackelford counties, as we are now doing.

"I am told by our hotel men and filling station proprietors that since Stephens and Shackelford counties have gone for beer, that 75 per cent of the through traffic over the Bankhead highway now goes by Breckenridge and Albany, over the north loop, while the attorney general rules that anyone may go to those counties and legally bring back to their homes in this county all the beer they desire.

"It is rumored that lager beer may be bought and sold illegally in Eastland county right now, but Eastland county loses all the revenues which her schools so badly need.

"It's a low estimate to say that we are losing $1,500 a day to Stephens and Shackelford counties for beer and an account of beer.

"I believe that if every voter will pay his or her poll tax for 1933, the county will go over in February or March by over 1,000 votes.

"We have October, November, December and January to pay our poll tax and qualify as citizens. Contrary to rumor, the tax is $1.75, the same as always.

"I urge all liberal minded people, who place the welfare of their county above the narrow bigotry of the fanatic, will pay their poll tax before the last day of January and join us in our fight for the new deal."

RUSSO-JAP OPEN BREAK FEARED TODAY

By United Press
TOKIO, Japan, Oct. 11.—Russian-Japanese relations, embittered for many months, approached an open break today over charges that Japanese officials conspired to seize the Chinese-Eastern railway.

Thoroughly angered by Russian charges, the government ordered a complete report from its ambassador and summoned the correspondent of the official Russian news agency to demand an explanation why he gave copies of the charges to Tokio newspapers.

Ever since Japan seized Manchuria from China, relations have been strained to a point where any incident might lead to a complete break.

BLANTON IS SPEAKER AT ROTARY MEET

Congressman Thomas L. Blanton, representative from the 17th congressional district, was a visitor at the regular weekly meeting of the Rotary club today.

He spoke to the club members on the postmaster's resignation, stating that most people believed that "the victor belongs to the spoils," but that President Roosevelt and Postmaster General James A. Farley did not adhere to this belief. He stated that they had ruled that where the Republican appointee was giving satisfactory service and there was no demand for his removal he would remain in office until the expiration of his term.

He stated that there were between 40 and 50 applications for the Ranger postmastership already in, and that when the time came for a selection he thought he would come to Ranger and let the people of the town help in selecting a man the citizens thought would make a good postmaster.

The speaker said that he had wired to Washington asking about the post office building for Ranger and was informed that too many sites had been submitted and that a selection could not be made from that end of the transaction. It was stated that when a site was definitely chosen the work of construction on the new building would start within a very short time, as the money had been appropriated for this purpose and was awaiting selection of the site.

Dr. Kuykendall asked the congressman to tell them something about the NRA and Mr. Blanton replied by stating that he had recently had a conversation with President Roosevelt, who had expressed confidence that the campaign would go over if congress and the people of the United States got behind the movement and helped it to succeed.

L. I. Gray of Eastland, Hall Walker and L. H. Flewellen of Ranger were guests of the club.

A BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE TENDER SHEPHERD: He shall feed his flock like a shepherd; he shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom.—Isaiah 40: 11.

Judge J. D. Moore of Travis county looms largely in the picture. He handed down a decision that will at least make him famous in state and nation. He ruled that the National Recovery Act and subsequent approval of an oil industry code is a bar to Atty. Gen. James V. Allred's anti-trust penalty suit. In other words the court sustained a general demurrer to the suit. Defendants are the American Petroleum institution, the Texas Petroleum Marketers association, and 15 major oil companies. Atty. Gen. James V. Allred gave notice of appeal. He will carry the case first to the court of civil appeals and if given a knockout there, he will carry it to the supreme court of Texas.

There are able attorneys who predict that the supreme court of the United States, the court of last resort, will say the last word. Well, courts interpret after lawmakers have enacted. Judge Moore's ruling was made orally from the bench. It created something of a sensation. Barristers for the oil companies were jubilant. As for the attorney general he admitted that he was a bit groggy but that he was going all the road in the prosecution of the suits. His appeal will be based on the proposition that the trust laws of the state of Texas "have not been superseded, at least to the extent of wiping out claims for violations antedating the NRA code."

A reminder that the suit was filed in November, 1931. In his decision the court said it was not a matter of expediency. Furthermore, he said: "I adopt in their entirety the decisions and conclusions presented by able counsel for the defendants. I am convinced absolutely that the decision is correct." Judge Moore is a democrat of the regular brand and has been an ardent supporter of the President and the national recovery acts.

Now what part will the lawmakers play in the battle for suspension or repeal of the anti-trust laws before final adjournment of the special session? Again, lawmakers enact statutes; courts interpret the statutes, and the people are responsible for their public servants, including all the major and minor officials and those who are selected to make the laws of the commonwealth.

HORSE RACING APPEARS TO HAVE THE CALL

California, by direct vote of the people, enacted a racing law and provided for the pari-mutuel system of betting. All this after Governor Rolph had vetoed a measure enacted by the California legislature. Arizona lawmakers enacted a race track measure. South Dakota lawmakers followed in the wake. Lawmakers of the state of Washington declared for the return of the race track and the pari-mutuel system for placing bets on the favorites of the racing stables. Now a bill that would clinch Texas' new race-horse betting law constitutionality and broaden the powers of the state commission named to regulate that sport has been enacted by the house of representatives and the senate.

Those who are familiar with conditions in New Mexico predict the enactment of racetrack legislation in that Spanish-American commonwealth. All this will make it interesting for the owners of the race tracks in a string of Mexican cities south of the Rio Grande boundary line in the Aztec republic. Texas in other years had many breeding farms, sent many stables of fleet runners and harness horses to the markets of the world, and made it possible for the playboys and the playgirls to place their dollars on their pets while the racing season was on. Public sentiment smashed the pool selling system and restrictive laws destroyed the race track and the sport of millions of Americans who are not gamblers but who dearly love the so-called "sport of kings." Now a come-back has been scored in many of the leading commonwealths of America. All in all, where do we go from here?

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

Usually there are two sides to every question. People want to know the truth; they want honest unbiased facts when it comes to the affairs of the home city. They want material with which to form their own opinions. They believe in progress and truth. Real citizens are always striving to promote the right and further the good. They are loyal to the home city. No man or group of men can control them. They are leaders in the fight for better business and civic improvement. If a whole lot of people would follow their leaders they would do better, the city would do better, and prosperity would come and stay with them.

Texas Cotton Crop Condition Above Ten Year Average

AUSTIN, Oct. 11.—The Texas cotton crop is estimated at 4,190,000 bales 500-pound gross weight from information furnished by crop correspondents on Oct. 1, 1933. This production compares with 4,500,000 bales produced in 1932, 5,319,000 bales in 1931, and 4,037,000 bales in 1930. The estimated yield this year is 178 pounds per acre which compares with a yield of 162 pounds in 1932, 173 pounds in 1931, and 120 pounds in 1930. The acres remaining for harvest are estimated at 11,290,000 acres which compares with 13,334,000 acres in 1931, 14,754,000 acres in 1931, and 16,138,000 acres in 1930. The acreage to be harvested this year takes into consideration the acres removed from cultivation as reported by the agricultural adjustment administration and the abandonment since July 1 on the area not under contract. There has been much improvement in the Texas crop since a month ago; the condition is now rated at 70 per cent of normal, which is the highest condition figure on record at this time of the year. The estimated yield of 178 pounds is the largest since 1914 when 183 pounds per acre were produced. The 10-year average (1922-1932) is 136 pounds. From present prospects, all sections of the state show promise of a larger yield per acre than last year; with the exception of a few scattered communities. However, the final outcome of cotton will depend upon whether the various influences affecting the crop during the remainder of the season are more or less favorable than usual.

"Junk Racketeer" Rung Thought Broken

WACO, Oct. 11.—Recent arrests by city detectives here are believed to have broken up a ring of "junk racketeers" who have been preying on the Lipshitz Smelting and Refining company.

The racketeers, officers, said, were making a tidy daily income by selling the smelting company its own brass, lead and other metals. The racket was worked with assistance of two negroes employed by the company. When junk dealers went to the plant with scrap metal to sell, the negroes weighed the lot along with other metal sold the previous day.

Thus the company paid twice. The scheme netted $10 to $15 a day, detectives said, the racketeers and the negroes sharing. The company reported it had lost approximately $6,000 to the racketeers since the first of the year. One junk dealer is under arrest and complaints have been filed against four others.

"Junk Racketeer" Rung Thought Broken

WACO, Oct. 11.—Recent arrests by city detectives here are believed to have broken up a ring of "junk racketeers" who have been preying on the Lipshitz Smelting and Refining company.

The racketeers, officers, said, were making a tidy daily income by selling the smelting company its own brass, lead and other metals. The racket was worked with assistance of two negroes employed by the company. When junk dealers went to the plant with scrap metal to sell, the negroes weighed the lot along with other metal sold the previous day.

Thus the company paid twice. The scheme netted $10 to $15 a day, detectives said, the racketeers and the negroes sharing. The company reported it had lost approximately $6,000 to the racketeers since the first of the year. One junk dealer is under arrest and complaints have been filed against four others.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY SISTER MARY
NEA Service Writer

An irritating tendency to present the too-familiar dish in the too-obvious way frequently prevails in family meals. Hamburg steak is a nutritious dish thus handicapped in many families. Considering that the beef creature furnishes comparatively few tender cuts and that these are high in price, it becomes necessary for the home-maker to make the less desirable cuts popular. These cheaper cuts are just as nutritious and if put through the food chopper and freed from gristle and tendons, the resulting "steak" can be made very appetizing.

Unless the meat is to be used very soon after it is brought from the market, it's a good idea to put it through the food chopper yourself. Chopped meat looses much of its juice and flavor if allowed to stand for some time. After chopping add 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper and 1-2 cup milk to 1 pound chopped meat. This addition of liquid insures juicy hamburg after cooking. A few drops of onion juice may be added, or an onion, a few sprigs of parsley or a green pepper may be put through the food chopper with the meat. It's the variety in seasoning and sauces that makes Hamburg steak into different dishes.

Boiled Meat Cakes

Prepare meat as suggested and shape in eight flat round cakes. Cook five to eight minutes under the gas flame, turning once or pan-broil in a hot, lightly oiled frying pan, turning frequently at first and afterward occasionally, allowing ten to fifteen minutes, depending on whether the cakes are liked "rare" or well done. Put on a hot platter, spread with butter and serve.

an inch thick. Wrap a slice of thinly sliced bacon around each cake and broil under the gas flame eight to ten minutes. Always pre-heat the broiler before broiling any kind of meat.

Savory Meat Cakes

Remove seeds and white pith from a green pepper. Chop flesh and cook three minutes in 2 table-spoons butter. Add to 1 pound chopped meat with 1 teaspoon salt and 3-4 cup canned tomatoes, omitting pepper and milk from foundation rule. Shape in flat cakes and pan-broil in hot, oiled frying pan.

Creamed Hamburg on Toast

One cup thin cream, 1 cup chopped meat, 1-3 teaspoon salt, few grains pepper, 4 slices toast.

Bring cream to the boiling point. Add meat and cook and stir until meat is lightly colored. Add salt and pepper, pour over toast and serve at once.

Salisbury Steak

One pound chopped beef, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 1-2 cup cream, coarse fresh bread crumbs, 1-2 cup boiling water. Add salt, pepper and cream to meat. Put on a hot platter and add water to fat in pan. Let boil up once and pour over meat cakes.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

This column, "Behind the Scenes in Washington," is being conducted by Willis Thornton during the vacation of Rodney Dutcher.

BY WILLIS THORNTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—What better illustrates the transformation of your capital than this: In the front window of "The Little Green House on K Street," where Harry M. Laugherty, Jesse Smith and other members of the "Ohio gang" did their midnight frolicking during President Harding's administration, the Blue Eagle is prominently displayed today. The Little Green House with the stone walls of greenish tinge that gave it its name, just happens to be a real estate office today, and the Blue Eagle in its front window seems to bear a double symbolism there, marking the passage of a whole nation from whoopee to wholesome.

It is typical, too, that Harold L. Ickes, the man who personifies so well this new wholesome-ness in government, sits in the very chair occupied by the unprincipled Fall—the chair of the secretary of the interior. Ickes is growing in stature every day. The newspaper conferences in his huge, brown-paneled office, its door guarded by two Alaskan totem poles, draw a more critical, more inquisitorial crowd of newsmen than almost any other. That is because Ickes' job as head of the Public Works administration is the most delicately critical one in Washington at the moment. And one of the reasons this vital program has tended to move slowly is because Ickes is so intent that the $3,300,000,000 public works fund be spent honestly.

HERE'S an untold story that illustrates the rigid honesty of the Ickes mind. The secretary has a son, Wilmarth, who works for a firm that would be a logical bidder on many of the big public works projects. But Ickes won't even let his son's firm bid on the work, let alone get the contracts.

Further, it is known that Ickes wants in the worst way to have his son at his side in the work he's doing in the public works program. It would comfort and sustain him greatly to have his son working shoulder to shoulder with him today.

But he won't do it, simply because he's in principle against passing out jobs to his own family. That's the man who today sits in the chair of Albert B. Fall. PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT will be able to see men at work under the NRA public works plan from his back windows. They're widening and realigning the street that runs directly behind the White House grounds. . . . It takes three minutes and 20 seconds of brisk stepping just to walk the length of the new Commerce Building, where the NRA is functioning. . . . step this off on Main Street some day and look back—you'll get an idea of how big this thing is. . . . Union musicians played for the opening of the A. P. of L. convention the other day; but they didn't donate their services—they got full-time pay. (Copyright, 1933, NEA Service, Inc.)

Centennial Would Bring Millions Into the State

AUSTIN, Tex.—An adequate Texas centennial exposition would bring to this state $572,950,000, according to estimates of the committee named by the forty-second legislature. It is to report to the forty-third legislature on advisability of such an exposition in 1936.

"Any exposition patterned altogether after any previous one would be foredoomed a failure," said the report. "The public demands change. Rightly combined, expositions and anniversary celebrations marking outstanding periods have the greatest popular appeal."

Past large scale centennials have differed to greatly in methods and financing that it is impossible to draw direct conclusions, the legislature was advised. There is the added warning that "1936 may laugh at old-fogy ideas of 1933."

The committee's general conclusions gathered from a study of past American and European expositions follow: That expositions do not pay in dollars and cents at the gate for the expenditure, but they leave permanent buildings which more than offset the difference.

That daily paid attendance averages nine and one half per cent of the population of the centennial city and between five and six per cent of the population of the territory in a 50-mile radius. (Here the committee points out increasing automobile and air-transportation use and increasing attendance. Past expositions have had attendance 20 times the population of the exposition city. This ratio has been regardless of length of the exposition.)

Considered from the boxoffice standpoint, the committee says, centennial celebrations seldom have paid. They have had a gross outlay of $1.37 1-2 for each 60 cents collected at the gate. But excluding the outlay for buildings and grounds, paid admissions have left a profit of 15 1-2 per cent. They have been highly beneficial in increasing business and causing improvements in the centennial cities. The Philadelphia Centennial (1876) took in $8,004,000 in paid admissions; it expended $8,980,000 of which $6,165,000 was for permanent buildings.

The Chicago World's Fair (1893) took in $21,480,000 and spent $27,292,000 of which $18,670,000 was for permanent buildings. The Louisiana Purchase Exposition (St. Louis, 1904) took in $12,804,000 and spent $26,564,000 with an $18,034,000 expenditure for permanent buildings.

The Panama-Pacific Exposition (San Francisco, 1915) received $13,127,000 at the turnstiles and expended $24,690,770 of which $14,847,607 was for permanent buildings.

Receipts of the Chicago Century of Progress exposition are estimated between $30,000,000 and $40,000,000 by the officials. The "expenditure within the state" estimate is made by the committee on the basis of expenditures by the 1,390,000 tourists who visited Colorado in 1931. If a centennial exposition attracts only three times the number normally going to Colorado, gasoline tax alone will amount to $25,000,000, they say. The average stay of a visitor is 30 days and the average expenditure $4.80 a day.

No recommendation is made on the type of celebration. A single central exposition, a central exposition with allied expositions at historical points and several expositions at various places all have their respective advantages. For the several expositions, greater local support and greater distribution of tourist funds about the state are suggested as probable advantages.

Canada Nearer Gold Basis Than In Years

By United Press
 MONTREAL.—Technically, or "on paper," Canada is nearer an absolute gold basis in Dominion note coverage today than it has been in years.

Canada now owns $71,924,000 of gold against its note reserve, and the Mint price at present on gold is $32.15 per cent, but as there is a premium of 55 1-2 percent, the value of the gold held by the Dominion as note backing is really $111,841,000 which, if technicalities were regarded, would mean that there is more gold held today by the Dominion than there was Dominion notes in circulation on Aug. 21, of this year, the total at that time being $106,430,000.

Goat Man, "Goat" of Many Jest Riding Crest of New Prosperity

SAN ANGELO.—Last year the favorite joke in West Texas concerned the man who was given a bunch of goats and who demanded that his benefactor cut out the inferior individuals. Everybody laughed at the goat business, they get as low as 50 cents and even 25 cents a head.

But in the last few weeks there was a changed sentiment in the business. Some men, such as O. L. McNealy of Rockspring, Adolph Steiler of Comfort, L. J. Wardlaw of Laguna, Smith-Woodward of Pecos county and Sabinal, began to buy up these cheap animals and move them to their ranches through a lane of laughter. Reports coming from Boston said there was a scarcity of mohair, new buyers were running up and down the road upholstered in mohair, the newbies were buying furniture—more mohair was needed and today the United States finds itself unable to produce the quantity it uses. In Boston there has been a lot of mohair resold at a profit.

The effect of the rising mohair price is to change the entire business complexion of about 12 counties in the San Angelo area of West Texas and to increase the collateral of the goat country by at least $7,000,000.

Some of this country with its heavy liveoak brush, its juagilla, its other shrubs fit for goats and goats only and before they came to the southwest about 60 years ago, there was little use made of some section of these counties. They have other businesses, they raise sheep and cattle but a large area of their land is adapted chiefly to the raising of mohair.

These counties: Edwards, Val Verde, Kerr, Bandera, Uvalde, Mcnary, Pecos, Sutton, Real, Kinney, Terrell today see their land increased in value and the value of their collateral enhanced by a great deal. Monroe Kirkland of Sonora, warehouse executive and ranchman, said that goats ought to be worth $3.50 to $4 now. A few months ago a committee from the Hill Country Bankers' Association, consisting of Frank Montague, Fred Earwood and E. B. Prescott, asked for a raising of loan values on goats. Most of the agencies were taking goats as extra collateral but they would no more lend money to them than they would listen to a bootlegger preach.

They were almost laughed at. It is their time to laugh today. They pointed out that average prices of mohair over a decade or so was about 49 cents a pound, well Radio once touched 549, they said and look where it is today. But Radio was not mohair. A total of 3,421,000 goats were shorn in Texas in 1932, as against 3,600,000 in 1931 and 3,518,000 in 1930. Since there have been heavy losses among the flocks. One estimate last spring placed the number of goats in Texas at 2,800,000, an estimate that seems correct as the fall clip is placed at 7,000,000 pounds, the goats averaging about 2 1-2 pounds. The new prices for mohair have added at least $7,000,000 to the collateral value of these animals.

The records of the Wool Growers Central Storage Company show the prices received for mohair since 1917, with kid and grown hair reported separately from 1917 to 1922.

Law Makes Tapping Pipe Line a Felony

A law which makes it a felony to tap a pipe line or other container of oil, gasoline, gas or other petroleum product, was passed by the regular session of the legislature and recently became effective, it was pointed out by Olan Calvin, local manager of the Texas-Louisiana Power company.

The act makes it a penitentiary offense to tap these lines for the purpose of taking any of the products from them. The act reads, in part:

"Any person who shall unlawfully tap any pipe line, conduit or storage tank, constructed for the purpose of transporting or storing crude oil, gasoline, naphtha, natural gas, casinghead gas, or any petroleum product without the consent of the owner and with intent to injure such pipe line, conduit or storage tank or to permit the contents thereof to escape, or with intent to appropriate any portion of the contents shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be punished by confinement in the state penitentiary for a term of not less than one year nor more than five years."

An Assist for Connie

MASTER CONNIE MACK, referred to frequently as the lean and kindly leader of the A's, isn't playing out there on the field any more, but he must be given credit for an occasional assist, and far be it from this column to refrain from giving credit where credit is due.

The man Connie assists now and then is R. Moses Grove, sometimes called Lefty, who happens to be a pitcher. One of the assists I am thinking about occurred in Washington recently.

A Cinch!

A YOUNG, ambitious lad named Tim McKeithan started to pitch a ball game for the A's. The Senators got six hits off his delivery in four innings. At the end of the fourth inning the score was 8 to 3 in favor of the A's. It appeared that McKeithan was in for a pleasant afternoon since Washington, with a pennant clinched, and with General Crowder knocked out of the box, wasn't particularly anxious.

In fact Joe Cronin so nearly reached the point of yielding that he sent in a rookie sou'waw fresh from Albany—one Ray Prim—as an experimental gesture. There was no indication whatever that the Senators were about to get tough.

Mack Looks Around

But in the fifth innings, when it came the young and ambitious Tim McKeithan's turn at bat, the lean and kindly Mack bade him be off to the showers. A pinch hitter would go in for him. Mister Mack looked over the bench and up and down. There were not many pinch hitters around. So he sent Meritt Cain, another pitcher, to go through the exercise of tapping the plate and swinging at a few of Prim's benders.

Now to find a pitcher to replace McKeithan. Who would protect the A's five-run lead in this desperate and crucial struggle of the diamond? Why, to be sure, there was Lefty Grove sitting there as big as life—and didn't Lefty need a couple of games to fatten his record to the point where he led the league in victories?

Here's the Rub

Grove was sent in, and the scorers dutifully put him down as the winning pitcher when the final score was 11 to 4.

You see, it happens to be a custom among scorers not to credit a starting pitcher with a victory unless he has twirled five full innings. Add another game to Grove's fat record—and let's be home to supper!

Forgotten Sweetheart

MARY RAYMOND

BEGIN HERE TODAY

BOB WESTON, son of a millionaire, has fallen in love with JOAN WARING, pretty Memphis girl. Bob has come to Memphis in connection with his father's new textile plant. He first saw Joan on a train when she was returning from college because of her family's financial difficulties.

BARBARA COURTNEY, society girl, is scheming to win Bob away from Joan.

Pat, Joan's younger sister, is infatuated with JERRY FORREST, ER, son of her employer. MRS. WARING is hopeful that her two daughters will marry well and escape the drudgery that has been her lot.

Barbara is invited to a house party and, to persuade Bob to come, she arranges to have Joan invited. Joan and Bob arrive at the house party. The others go for a horseback ride but Joan, who has no riding clothes, remains at the house. She meets JIM WARFIELD, attractive and indolent. He likes Joan because through Barbara's pretence.

Joan, jealous of Bob's attentions to Barbara, plays into the other girl's hands by accepting Jim's invitation to drive to a barbecue supper with him. This ends Bob's NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XII

KAY and Don Trent led the way to the barbecue site. It was an open space hewed from the woodland. Stumps of trees, like huddled black dwarfs, showed eerily in the light from the big bonfire where wieners were to be roasted. At one side was the barbecue pit. A colored man was turning the meat on a long fork. Two tables were covered with bowls of salad, huge loaves of bread, paper plates, and cups.

"The individual tables—the stumps—have been arranged for two. Choose your partners," called Kay gaily.

Bob looked at Joan. She was standing not far away, her dark coat about her, her face a white blur. When the blaze sprang up fitfully her eyes showed like dark, deep pools. He was fighting an impulse to join her, to say, "Joan let's go over here." But you'd hardly say that to a girl who had deliberately ditched you for a man she had just met.

"Bob, please help me with these plates!" called Barbara. Jim Warfield thought she was like a restless little cat; her bright, alert eyes traveling from Joan to Bob.

"Here we are, Joan," said Jim.

IT WAS a gay party, but Joan was never to remember it as gay. Joan and Jim pointed long sticks with their knives. The sticks were to be used by the guests to roast wieners. The crowd moved about and plates were being passed and re-filled. The fire died down and sprang into flame again as fresh wood was piled on. The savory odor of the barbecued meat was tempting.

Always Joan would remember Barbara and Bob, sitting together. Barbara's caressing voice, her hand on Bob's arm.

Somebody suggested old-fashioned ghost stories. Everybody tried to think of an old thriller.

Barbara called out once, "I'm just one big shiver! Hold my hand, I'm frightened to death, darling!"

"Need an excuse, Barbara," drawled Jim.

"No, of course not," Barbara slipped her hand frankly into Bob's. Joan saw his hand close over Barbara's just as he had clasped her own. What a fool she had been, fitting all the tender, thoughtful things he did into a romantic pattern for herself!

And then someone said it was one o'clock, time to begin the drive back.

Joan thought that was something to be thankful for. It would have been unbearable to go inside the house and dance to music with Bob, trying to reach him through this wall of constraint growing up between them.

BARBARA, slumped down in the roadster, her head companionably close to Bob's shoulder, was talking animatedly. "I do love house parties, don't you, Bob? They are so informal. You get to know what people are really like."

"What are you talking about?" Bob asked. He had an idea that Barbara was driving at something and he was suddenly unaccountably irritated with her.

Barbara answered easily, "About Jim."

"Oh," said Bob, relieved and a little ashamed of his suspicions.

"When you first meet Jim he appears such a cynic, without much interest in anybody or anything. But he's really capable of a grand passion. Anybody with eyes can see that."

"What do you mean Joan," said Bob harshly.

"Yes," said Barbara. "Haven't you noticed?" Then, as he did not reply, she said gently; "don't think me a cat, Bob, but I hate to see someone I care about being made to look a fool."

"What rubbish!" Bob said hotly.

"It isn't, Bob. What would you think if you knew the very first afternoon—while we were riding—she and Jim were sitting off in the garden? You can imagine how surprised I was when Carol told me. I thought she was really tired."

Bob drove silently but Barbara could see the stern set of his mouth and chin. She smiled, satisfied.

After a while she sighed.

"Of course I knew, Bob, that I ran a terrible risk in telling you but I simply couldn't bear seeing you so gone on her. Girls know things and the first time I laid eyes on Joan I knew she was the type who wouldn't flirt openly but was not nearly as naive as you thought she was. Oh, Bob, do you hate me?"

"Of course not," Bob said roughly. "But you're wrong about Joan. She's not that kind at all, Barbara. If you think she and Jim Warfield planned to stay there alone you were never more mistaken in your life. Why they hadn't even met until we got here! And besides Joan isn't like that—." His voice rose.

"Oh, for goodness sake, don't get so excited!" Barbara said. "Perhaps I was wrong about it. Forget what I said."

"I will," Bob said. And knew he wouldn't.

Silence. Trees along the rural highway flashing by in orderly sequence and occasionally the dark outline of a cottage. Barbara moved closer to Bob. Once she sighed.

"What's the matter," Bob asked kindly.

"I'm afraid you're terribly angry with me."

"Don't be an idiot, Barbara." He added after a moment, "but let's get this straight. I won't discuss Joan again with you or anybody. It's sheer idiocy to think that she—." There he was, off again. He stopped.

Barbara said in a low voice, "You are crazy about her, aren't you?"

She did not pause for his answer, but continued, "I can't help being sorry, Bob. Don't ask me why. But I'll try to believe she is all you say she is. I think she is terribly attractive!"

Bob decided that was rather generous, this frank acknowledgement of Joan's charms. He reached over and squeezed her hand.

EVERYBODY slept late next morning, straggling down in relays to be served broiled ham, hot waffles with drawn butter, eggs and coffee.

Later Joan joined a group for tennis. It was a game in which she had always excelled. But Bob was not there to witness her gallant fight and triumph, climaxed by Jim's, "Hot stuff! you're the best girl player I've seen in a long time!"

The game had scarcely begun when Barbara, a spectator, decided she must rush off to Greenville for some shopping and Bob was corralled to take her.

In the afternoon bridge foursomes were formed. "Do you play?" Barbara asked Joan.

"Not very well."

A few minutes later Barbara called from across the room, "Fred and I will take you and Bob on, Joan."

Joan sat down with a feeling of panic. She had played contract bridge a few times at school and only with girls who, like herself, did not take bridge seriously.

At school a casual game of bridge had been diverting when there was nothing better to do. Whether one won or lost made no difference.

But soon she saw there was a difference here. Barbara spread the deck out for a cut and Joan drew the king of hearts.

"You win. It's your deal," Barbara said.

Joan started to deal. Barbara laughed. "You forgot to let Fred cut them."

Joan flushed. "I'm sorry," she gathered up the cards again hurriedly.

On the first hand Joan realized how insufficient was her bridge knowledge. Bob made a two spade bid and Barbara passed. Joan, having only one spade and no biddable suit, as she thought, passed also. Bob got the bid at two spades.

"Great Scott! That was a two demand, Joan!" he exclaimed when Joan laid down her hand. "We could easily have made game at something."

Barbara's eyes glinted. "That's a lucky break for us, Fred," she said.

Bob made four on the hand. He wrote down the score grimly. "Two extra tricks," he said. Barbara laughed again.

"I'm afraid I don't know much about bidding," Joan said in a low tone. She was very nervous now. As the game progressed she realized how little she did know. One bad play followed another. They missed several slams by her failure to bid correctly. At one time she even revoked at a critical period.

"Rather careless, Joan," Bob said. (To Be Continued)

Joan thought that was something to be thankful for. It would have been unbearable to go inside the house and dance to music with Bob, trying to reach him through this wall of constraint growing up between them.

BARBARA, slumped down in the roadster, her head companionably close to Bob's shoulder, was talking animatedly. "I do love house parties, don't you, Bob? They are so informal. You get to know what people are really like."

1 JAR RESINOL HEALED SEVERE ECZEMA

"More than 35 years ago, when I was a child, I developed a severe case of eczema behind my left ear. In spite of all the remedies used the disease spread rapidly over my head. Finally our doctor, one of the best in Kansas City, told Mother to try Resinol Ointment as he knew it was good. It was wonderful and after using a full jar the affection was entirely healed. Since then I have been an ardent user of Resinol for burns, cuts, and all manner of skin affections, and have never known it to fail. There is nothing like it for the skin disorders of babies, it is so soothing and healing." (Signed)—Mrs. O. S. P. At all druggists. London Metals Show a Slump

LONDON.—Led by copper, the London metal market developed a generally downward tendency throughout September, much to the surprise of observers, who had expected a substantial improvement.

There was no adequate explanation of this sagging. It was due to a widespread lack of interest. It was the most surprising in the case of tin and zinc for the outlook for these two metals was deemed fairly satisfactory.

As regards copper, the London and New York markets drifted apart considerably. For instance, London ceased to be so strongly influenced by the course of events in the New York market. Prices there remained steady but in London they weakened conspicuously.

HOT DOG STANDS BANNED

BAKERSFIELD, Calif.—Sandwich stands and the like will be conspicuous principally because of their absence along the new Golden State highway in Kern county. The board of supervisors recently passed an ordinance forbidding construction of such buildings along the road.

Bronchial Troubles Need Creomulsion

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, and attacks the seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Your druggist is authorized to refund you money on the spot if your cough or cold is not relieved by Creomulsion. (adv.)

CLEAN FOOTBALL

FOOTBALL gets its classification as a rough sport through the action of a few fellows who take every opportunity to break the rules. These poor sports cause many accidents on the gridiron each year.

Clipping has been illegal for some time, but despite the penalties invoked on infringement of this rule, the poor sport still throws his body against the back of the legs of a speeding runner, with the result that the runner seldom escapes injury.

Officials, in the hope of curbing this action altogether, have reduced the penalty from 25 to 15 yards, believing that the shortening of the penalty will bring punishment for every case of clipping.

The accompanying sketch illustrates the prohibited "clip."

Versailles Opera May Be Revived

VERSAILLES.—A move to restore the Versailles opera and make it the Beyreuth of France has been launched by Paul Valery, author, critic and member of the Academy.

He urges that the famous opera house, "one of the finest theaters of France," and an integral part of the Palace of Versailles, be rescued from oblivion and neglect.

"What better setting," he asks, "can be found for the music of Lulli, Gluck and Rameau, or for the plays of Racine and Moliere?"

This theater, begun by Gabriel in 1753 and completed two decades later, is theoretically one of the meeting places of the French Senate, which seldom uses it. Indeed, it receives few visitors and it is a part of the palace to which tourists seldom go. All this, contends Valery, should be changed by resurrecting the theater.

DEFEATED TWICE BY 1 VOTE

SHAMOKIN, Pa.—A single vote has defeated Cornelius Heim in his campaign for public office in two successive elections. He was a candidate for township supervisor in the 1931 primary and his opponent won by a one-vote margin. A candidate this year for the same office, Heim was defeated by John Tressler, who received 183 votes to 182 for Heim.

DEFECTIVE HIGHWAY CAUSED DAMAGE SUIT

VISALIA, Calif.—Because, it was alleged, a county highway was in defective condition, Tulare county today was named in a suit for damages arising from a man's death. Mrs. Jessie L. Cullen sued the county, charging that her husband, Clarence A. Cullen, was killed when his automobile struck a soft spot in the road and overturned.

FARM LECTURE HELPED

WINONA, Texas.—Will Bean, negro farmer, listened carefully to the county agent's agricultural sermon on "living on home products." He returned to his little East Texas farm, planted some seed procured from a friend, and already has gathered 35 pounds of coffee from 12 stalks. Bean parches, rolls, grinds and drinks his own coffee.

Rogers Gets All Dressed Up For Title Role In "Doctor Bull"

Overalls... Battered hats... Boots... Those articles, so closely identified with Will Rogers, picture star, Folies comedian and humanitarian, are not included in his wardrobe for "Doctor Bull," an adaptation of "The Last Adam," which will introduce a new and different Rogers to his millions of fans and followers. It comes to the Arcadia theatre today.

In "Doctor Bull," Rogers portrays a new type of character—the village physician and health officer in a small New England town who occupies the position of both doctor and town confessor. He has seen most every human foible, is no longer surprised at anything that happens, is more or less indulgent to all and has a rich humor and a mellow fatalism.

Not since Fifi Dorsey made such violent and almost successful love to him in "They Had to See Paris" has Rogers tried anything so daring as he does in "Doctor Bull." He plays the role of an unmarried man, he has simply called on Janet Cardmaker for 15 years, and gives cause for plenty of surmise and no little talk as to his bachelorhood.

Why these two have never married is understood by no one and perhaps less of all by Dr. Bull himself. Maybe he just never got around to the question. But if the quality of his affection for Janet is not certain, his need for her is. Always, after some strenuous setto with his patients or fellow townsmen he drives his muddy roadster up the hill that leads to her home. Familiarly known as "Doc" to the hangers-on, he must, of necessity, have his enemies among the more socially elite, led by the blue blooded Mrs. Banning. Sometimes he is remiss in his scientific duties, but never in human feeling and the handclasp of good fellowship.

He likes applejack—perhaps, too well. For the new fangled scientific jargon and instruments adopted by Dr. Varney in the neighboring town, Dr. Bull has profound contempt. His most specific prescription is castor oil and a slap on the back. Day and night he goes on his rounds among his fellow men with no certain goal ahead of him other than the continuation as near as possible of the status quo.

He hides out, now and then, to go duck shooting, or fishing, or to spend the evening at Janet's house. These, plus a drink in the drug store, a session with the boys in the barber shop, are the realities of his life, his pleasure and his joys. He is a philosopher as well as a physician and his comments on the world and its ways are full of understanding and wit—a wit that sometimes bites into the posing and thick-skinned people who are the elite of the town.

"It's all new for me," said Rogers. "And, well, I think it's a swell role."

If you want to GET RID of Constipation worries—

Science says Today use a LIQUID Laxative

- 1. Control intestinal action exactly—no "purging"
2. Measure to suit your individual needs to the drop
3. Banish Bowel Fatigue and the laxative habit

Here's Why:

Any hospital offers evidence of the harm done by harsh laxatives that drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and in some cases even affect the liver and kidneys.

A doctor will tell you that the unwise choice of laxatives is a common cause of chronic constipation.

Fortunately, the public is fast returning to the use of laxatives in liquid form.

A properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement. There is no discomfort at the time and no weakness after. You don't have to take "a double dose" a day or two later.

In buying any laxative, always read the label. Not the claims, but the contents. If it contains one doubtful drug, don't take it.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription preparation in which there are no mineral drugs. Its ingredients are on the label. By using Mrs. J. A. Ross, Mrs. Artie Liles, and Mrs. J. H. Fry, M. E. C. There were 15 members in attendance.

Valuable Book Is Given to Library

AUSTIN—A volume that was in the first issue of the first edition of the King James translation of the Bible, described by Librarian Fannie Ratchford as the "most important single book in Texas," has been added to the University of Texas archives.

It was given to the university by Mrs. Lusher Stark of Orange.

Many scholars have declared this translation of the Bible, ordered by King James about 1611, influenced history more than any other important work. Previous to the King James translation, the Bible was printed only in Greek, Latin and Hebrew.

read "He went into the city," while in subsequent editions the sentence was edited to read "She went into the city."

Appointments: Mrs. T. L. Amis, mission study chairman; Mrs. Temple Harris, social service chairman; Mrs. Claud Maynard, benevolence chairman; Mrs. Morgan Myers, periodicals chairman; Mrs. Horace Condey, stewardship chairman.

When you're HEALTHY you're HAPPY

HAPPY days are usually healthy days. Why not add to these sunny days!

Poor health and constipation go hand in hand. Get rid of common constipation by eating a delicious cereal.

Tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to aid regularity. ALL-BRAN is also twice as rich in iron as an equal weight of beef liver.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. How much better than taking pills and drugs—so often harmful.

Two tablespoonsful daily are usually sufficient. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

At all grocers. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in a Bottle with Cereal
