KIDNAPERS' HIDEOUT IS FOUND IN SPOKANE

Sunday Red Letter Day at Central Baptist Church

Sunday was red-letter day at Central Baptist church, according to announcement made by Rev. H. H. Stephens, pastor.

Rev. Stephens stated that 38 people made professions and lined up with the church Sunday. Some of the 38 were accepted by letter, a large portion however were for baptism, according to Rev. Stephens. A few had not made up their minds as to their church membership.

The sermon in the morning was on "Heaven" and the "City Four-Square." Rev. Martin, who is conducting the meeting, is an interesting and inspiring preacher and held the attention of the audience throughout the service.

At the evening service his subject was taken from John 3:16. He said that all Scripture could be lost except this verse, and still there would be enough left to preach innumerable sermons, and save the world by the preaching of the gospel.

The music is another feature at each meeting. Rev. Hugh Blair is leading the people in a great way in the musical devotion and all singers are co-operating. The orchestra arrangement is appreciated by the church and the public, according to Rev. Stephens.

Services will continue throughout the week. Sunday evening chairs had to be placed to take care of the large crowd.

Good Crowd Due at C. of C. Breakfast

Reports today indicated that a large crowd of members of the chamber of commerce would be on hand when the second early-morning breakfast for the entire membership is served at the Willows Wednesday morning.

A large number of the reservation cards have been turned in or mailed to the chamber of commerce, which indicates an attendance of at least 125 to 150.

Those who have not as yet returned their reservation cards have been urged to do so by Tuesday noon, in order that the correct number of meals can be ordered.

The breakfast is free to the entire membership and no collections, donations, drives or other financial or work projects started. The plans call for short talks by several of the officers and a report of the past three months activities by the secretary.

The meal will be served at 6:30 and the crowd will be released in time to get to work before 8 o'clock.

CAPITAL BEING SOUGHT TO AID IN RECOVERY

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The government moved today to attract private capital to re-establishing at 4 per cent the interest rate on its $900,000,000 public works fund.

PWA recently reduced the rate on loans to 3 per cent. This was done when President Roosevelt issued an order increasing from 30 to 45 per cent the amount of a project cost which the government would finance by a gift.

The interest rate was increased, Harold Ickes said, mainly to permit companies to supplement the federal grants through utilization of their own funds or credit resources, opening sources of private capital without recourse to federal loans.

If a city should borrow money from sources other than the government, PWA still is empowered to make the city an outright grant up to 45 per cent of the cost.

"GRASS ROOTS" CONVENTION HAS OPENED

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 10.—The mid-west grass roots convention, assembled here to "defend the constitution" and draft a farm belt political creed, turned suddenly, today under the oratory of party leaders, to move to split conservative democrats from the new deal in the 1936 presidential election.

Former Gov. Frank Lowden of Illinois raised a beckoning hand to democrats in an addition to his keynote speech. He charged new dealers in the "highest places" had challenged the fundamentals of constitutional government.

Stephen Douglas was the greatest democrat of his time, Lowden said.

"Douglas appealed to all his followers after the election of Abraham Lincoln to stand by the new president."

"He said there were only two parties, those for the union and those against it."

Lowden said the same choice must be made today on the issue of amending the constitution to give the federal government control over national and economic questions.

Youths Deplore Liquor, Pledge Lessening Work

Deploping the use of intoxicants among different groups of people in Eastland, a group of more than 50 young people assembled in mass meeting at the Baptist church Sunday evening and adopted a resolution pledging their every effort toward lessening and eradicating such practices.

Marshall Coleman was named chairman of the Better Youth movement.

An open discussion was held and talks were heard from representatives of the different groups. A recent marked increase in drink among younger people was pointed out. An attempt to create a sentiment against the practice was proposed, and an appeal was issued to older people to aid in the drive by keeping proper examples of sobriety before the younger groups.

The younger people emphasized the movement involves a moral issue and is not a political or denominational drive.

The pumps that keep the water circulating and running through the chemical purification plant, have been started, and they have caused the water to clear considerably, it was stated.

Although evenings have been rather cool since the opening of the pool on June 1, the attendance has been fair, it was stated, and is picking up rapidly now that the evenings are getting warmer.

It was pointed out that a number of members of the chamber of commerce, who are to attend the breakfast on Wednesday morning, plan an early-morning swim before the meal is served.

J. B. Ames Tells Experiences on Wild Horse Roundup With Modern Trend

J. B. Ames, rancher and farmer of Ranger, has recently returned from a trip into the great Northwest where he went in search of what he termed "thrills" and he says he was not disappointed.

Ames left Ranger, drove to Denver and then on into Salt Lake City and from there to Flagstaff, Ariz. It was at the latter place where Ames participated in the roundup of wild horses.

Getting in touch with some ranchers in that country he went to the Sun ranch, where the cowboys and horsemen were on a big roundup and the story told by Ames is very interesting.

The cowhands have automobiles that are stripped of everything except the tank and two men take off in search of the horses. They usually run into a drove of some 40 to 60 horses and the chase begins. The herd is led by a large stallion weighing in the neighborhood of 1,100 pounds and the driver of the car will head for the leader.

In the chase Ames was the passenger in the car, he states, and they ran up beside the stallion and chased him for 15 miles with the drove of mares following. The chase is continued until the horses are driven into a corral that has been camouflaged by being built in a canyon or the foot of a mountain and there they are broken for riding by the cowboys. The corral is so arranged that the horses do not know they are prisoners until they are securely penned.

The pen consists of four sets of heavy woven wire securely tied to nine-foot cedar posts and he says when the horses are first put into the corral several of the leaders break their necks in attempting to escape. After the leaders go down the others mill around in the center of the pen and are easily subdued.

The stallion leading this particular bunch was a beautiful black with long mane and tail and would open his mouth and bawl and attempt to bite the car and driver while they were running at a terrific rate of speed.

The door of the corral is a piece of canvas that the leaders will go through but the leaders will not go near the entrance.

In the race that Ames participated in, he states they drove off an eight-foot bluff and stopped, only low enough to throw the car into the side of the cliff, which he stated would have been a job for a man to crawl up. All during the chase, Ames said, he promised himself that would be the last wild horse chase for him. He had all the thrills of this sort he wanted.

From there he went to Pie Town, N. M., and saw another roundup of the animals. Ames says that frequently one driver will drive up beside a large stallion and take hold of his mane or tail and swing onto the animal's back and there the battle will begin. In most cases the horse is subdued and brought back to camp.

Large numbers of the animals are shipped, some are broken for saddle and some are sent in carload lots that are broken only for halter. The cowboys tie the animals' tails and front feet together and drive them long distances to the railroads. They also stake them out by cross-tieing—that is tying their right front foot and left hind foot, in this way the animals are tied this way a few times soon learn not to run away.

Ames was very enthusiastic about the country he saw and said that if he could purchase some of the horses that were broken and gentle he would probably bring a car to Ranger.

The horses are easily broken by the punchers, with few exceptions, said Ames, and sometimes a stallion will die rather than lose his freedom.

In a question put to Ames about cattle stealing in Utah and Arizona, he states there is no such thing out there. He did say, however, that if one rancher wanted a beef to kill he would kill one that belonged to another ranch and that this was the custom and no one thought anything about it.

"All in all," said Ames, "one would not believe the things I saw, but according to information I received the great picture show companies are going to produce pictures of these round-ups in the near future and probably a large number of people will see these shows and then I will be vindicated for this yarn, which is all true."

Jack Lamb and Average Catch

Jack Lamb, world renowned expert in the art of casting and who knows bass as does no other man, who will give a casting demonstration here this week. He will also teach novices how to catch fish and will answer all questions from his vast store of information.

Free Fishing Lesson To Be Given Here By a Real Expert

Jack Lamb, Texas' own fisherman who has gained national fame with his rods and reels is coming to Ranger Wednesday to conduct a free casting class for the benefit of local novices in the piscatorial art. Everyone in the south who reads the papers has heard of Lamb and his uncanny fishing ability. It has been said that he can catch fish out of a dry creek, but Lamb says it can't be done. He does, however, toss in his lures and jerk our members of the finny tribe from many places where the layman would not think a fish could possibly be.

Hailed as the champion bass fisherman of the world, Jack has caught and released more than 42,000 black bass during his long fishing career. He is a deeply imbued sportsman who preaches conservation and practices what he preaches. Since 1920 he has obtained from the fish hatcheries

thousands of fish and planted them all through the state. He stocks every lake and stream he sees that looks like good breeding grounds for bass. If you wake up some morning and see big bass leaping in your barnyard pond, don't be surprised. Jack loads his car with small bass and starts down the road, planting a few seedlings in every pond along the way, regardless of the owner. You can bet he always has plenty of places to fish, too.

This noted angler was born in Oklahoma, but came to Fort Worth at the age of 17, and has lived there ever since. He is 40 years old now, but his life in the open has kept him fit as a fiddle, and he can leap over barb-wire fences with the agility of a deer. In 1918 he entered the employ of the Gulf Production company and has spent considerable time in this section in connection with their natural gas properties. It is said that he can create more enthusiasm in fishing than any man in the United States. One thing is certain, whenever he arrives in town, everyone becomes fish-minded, and his bubbling enthusiasm makes everybody's feet itch to get out on the stream. Jack appeared in Shreveport recently, and they estimated that 1,500 cars filled with disciples of Izaak Walton took off

Law's Bell Ends Fun for Pussy

All the fun has gone out of life for Mickey and he yawns disgustfully at these meddling human beings who decreed that every cat in Lake Bluff, Ill., be belled to save bird life in the Chicago suburb. It's tough when the bell warns mice and even tougher to endure Cock Robin's sneers as the tinkling warns the redbreast away.

for the fishing grounds the next day. Jack teaches people how to fish. He not only loves the sport, but lives it. He has taught more than 2,000,000 men and boys the proper use of bait and fly rods. Incidentally he is one of the top-ranking fly casters of the nation, and if you think you are good at fly casting, Lamb might be able to set a pattern for you and give you a goal to shoot at.

His exhibitions are entirely free for the benefit of novice anglers. He does not try to teach the old heads anything, but merely devotes a lot of time and money to help those fishermen who have a difficult time making Old Mr. Bass take hold of their lures.

His exhibition here will be staged at the high school grounds at 5 p. m., Wednesday, and from the thousands of people who have been attending in other cities where he has shown, it is expected that everyone in this section who likes to fish will be on hand to learn some of the basic principles of successful fishing from this twentieth century Izaak Walton.

Ideal Spot Suggested As National Park

Away up in Lake Superior, where the water is blue and cold and the shores are still fringed with gree forests, lies one of the most romantic islands under the American flag—Isle Royale.

Up to this lonely island, centuries before the first white man came, Indians from bar to the south came in flimsy canoes to mine for copper. Where they came from, how they managed to cross Lake Superior in their frail craft, where they got the metallurgical knowledge that enabled them to dig and use copper—these are questions no one can answer authoritatively.

Some archeologists suspect that these mines were the source of supply for such far-off people as the Toltecs of ancient Mexico and the Mayas of Central America—which gives you a dizzying idea of the scale on which long-range commerce may have been carried on in the days when America was peopled by "savages."

But anyway, Isle Royale lies there, a blue smudge on a blue horizon to the passing freight steamers, covered with virgin timber, inhabited by moose, its icy streams and lakes teeming with fish, a remote and almost untouched bit of wilderness out of 9merica's prehistoric past.

What makes it all worth talking about here is the fact that a movement is now under way to have the entire island set aside as one of Uncle Sam's national parks.

Our great chain of parks already stretches clear cross the country, and its establishment and maintenance represent one of the wisest steps the nation has ever taken.

In it are preserved for the employment of all of us plots of ground of great scenic beauty and strong sentimental charm, where we can go and get ourselves lifted out of the ordinary press of every-day worries and difficulties.

The chain of parks constitutes one of our most precious possessions. It goes without saying that a judicious extension of the chain from time to time is well worth the price; and whenever there is a region like Isle Royale, untouched and lovely and filled with the mystery and romance of ancient tradition, all of us are served when it is added to the chain.

There is another point to consider, also. For obvious reasons, most of the great national parks are in the west. The bulk of the population lies in the east. The Lake Superior region may not be exactly next door to New England and New York, but it is a lot near than the Yellowstone.

The whole park chain should be expanded. It is hard to think of a better place for the expansion to begin than in this remote and glamorous island in the world's greatest lake.

Free Fishing Lesson To Be Given Here By a Real Expert

Jack Lamb, Texas' own fisherman who has gained national fame with his rods and reels is coming to Ranger Wednesday to conduct a free casting class for the benefit of local novices in the piscatorial art. Everyone in the south who reads the papers has heard of Lamb and his uncanny fishing ability. It has been said that he can catch fish out of a dry creek, but Lamb says it can't be done. He does, however, toss in his lures and jerk our members of the finny tribe from many places where the layman would not think a fish could possibly be.

Hailed as the champion bass fisherman of the world, Jack has caught and released more than 42,000 black bass during his long fishing career. He is a deeply imbued sportsman who preaches conservation and practices what he preaches. Since 1920 he has obtained from the fish hatcheries

● "Let's have a Camel," says Mel Ott, heavy-hitting Giant outfielder, to Harold Schumacher, ace pitcher. They agree that Camels have real mildness. Mel says: "I smoke all I want, yet keep in good condition. Camels are so mild, they never get my mind or bother my nerves." And Hal adds: "To my mind that settles it! Camel is the cigarette with real mildness. I'd walk a mile for a Camel!" ● In baseball, and in all the strenuous sports, leading athletes cite the fact that Camels are mild. And to this impressive evidence of Camel's mildness is added the experience of people in every walk of life who wish to smoke freely and keep fit.

Summer Sweethearts

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 Katharine Strykhurst, beautiful, 20, falls in love with Michael Heathere, owner of a riding school. Katharine's father is rich and her stepmother a snob.
 Zoe Parker, Katharine's friend, has an unhappy love affair and is saved from suicide by young Dr. John Kaye.
 Overhearing two detectives ask for Michael's address, Katharine rushes to warn him, although she has not seen him since his engagement to Sally Moon, local coquette has been announced.

 Michael refuses to go away unless Katharine comes with him. They are married in an obscure little town. Then Michael insists on returning to face the detectives. He learns he is heir to a fortune and title in Ireland. Michael leaves at once for New York see the lawyer handling the case. He is injured in a traffic accident. Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER XVIII
 Katharine threw wide the case-ment window, looking down at the garden below. The long shadows of morning lay everywhere; the borders were starred with dewy drops. Yesterday, yesterday, she said to herself, had been her wedding day. Today she and Michael would what's up? Can I help?"

 Katharine sat down and the whole story poured from her lips. She held nothing back. Violet Merser did not interrupt once, but her dark eyes reflected a boundless sympathy.
 "What am I to do?" Katharine finished dully. "I must have been mad yesterday. He's run away now. Evidently it was all a horrible joke to him..."
 Shocked by the other's suffering the older woman sought for words to comfort her. "You couldn't be so wrong in trusting him. He has a good face. I liked him from the start."

The girl lifted her head. "You did? Really and truly?"
 "He's not bad," Violet Merser assured her. "There's some mystery here. It can probably be cleared up. Wait and see."
 "If my father finds out—or Bertine—" Katharine went on, "I might as well be dead."
 "Don't talk like that. Do you suppose," ventured Mrs. Merser, "that neither one of them—your father or stepmother—has a single folly with which to reproach themselves?"
 "I don't know. Probably not."
 "Nonsense," said Violet briskly. "Anyhow, you're not to worry about them. Brace up, child. The world hasn't come to an end. I know it looks frightful to you, but probably in a week from now the whole affair will be straightened out."

"You think so?"
 "I really do."
 But after the girl had gone away Violet Merser was not so certain. What a strange tangle of circumstances it was! Certainly, on the face of it, one wouldn't say that a young man who was engaged to one girl and married to another and who, further, disappeared on the night following the ceremony, sounded particularly honorable. Especially since two detectives had visited him just an hour or two before his departure.

 In a hospital ward in the city, high above the turbid stream that was the East River, Michael Heathere lay. He tossed and turned on his narrow bed, and occasionally muttered an incoherent word or two.
 Miss Smithers, the nurse on duty in the ward, glanced at him interestedly as she made an entry in his chart.
 "Good-looking fellow," she said to the supervisor who was a friend of hers. "It's too bad."

A newspaper reporter whose "beat" included this particular hospital wrote a brief paragraph about a hatless young man "possibly 27 years old" who had been injured in a taxicab accident at Park avenue and 48th street. The city editor ran a blue pencil through a good many items that night. So the story of Michael's misadventures appeared only in the early editions of the newspaper. The late edition, which came to the Strykhurst table at Innisck did not contain this account. Katharine, distraught as she was, searched the papers for mention of accidents, since Violet Merser had, sensibly enough, suggested that some such happening might explain Michael's silence. She did not really believe in the possibility. By this time she was fairly well convinced that Michael Heathere had played a cruel joke on the girl who had married him.
 So the day passed, and the mystery deepened. And in Katharine's sick heart hope fluttered and died.

acknowledge their marriage before all the world. She had decided that in the still watches of the night. There was to be no more waiting, no more pretense or secrecy. By this time Sally Moon would have heard the news, no doubt, from Michael's own lips. Sally would be angry—furious angry—but that would pass. Pride would come to her rescue. She could make it appear that she had discarded Michael.

At the thought of him, Katharine's eyes darkened suddenly. She drew a long breath. She was Michael's wife. The miracle had happened yesterday...

At any moment now he would telephone her. The bell would ring and before one of the maids could answer it Katharine herself would do so.

His voice would sound in her ears. That deep, drawing, wholly delightful voice of Michael's.

Katharine bathed and dressed, still wrapped in the dream. Her green linen frock and the brown and white shoes with the buckskin fringes and a string of dull white beads that looked creamy against her sunburn...

But Michael didn't call. Breakfast passed. Bertine said something about missing the rolls for lunch the day before, and Katharine came out of her trance to stare at her stepmother as at a perfect stranger.

"What did you say, Bertine?"
 "I said that Cook was furious when the rolls didn't arrive yesterday. We waited and waited, Victor," said Bertine, with that infuriating smile of hers, "and this girl never showed up. Nora Willis was here and there wasn't a thing but whole wheat bread in the house. You know Nora hates it—"

This went on for some time. Katharine, breaking bits of toast and arranging them in a geometrical pattern on the pink Spode plate, paid little heed. Bertine was trying to irritate her, trying to goad her into some sort of explanation. But this particular morning her stepmother's jibes simply could not reach Katharine.

Her father granted over his newspaper which he had folded back to the financial page. The telephone rang in the study. Katharine could hear the jangling of the bell and every nerve in her taut body responded to the summons. Any moment now Ellen would call her...

But it was only Leonard Willis, making a golf engagement with her father.

Her heart raced and slowed again. Not for her.

The morning droned past. Michael must be angry with her—she must have been too repressive in her manner when he called her last night. Oh, he'd have to learn to understand her better—he'd have to see it meant nothing when she was cool and stand-offish. She had crawled into her shell for so many years that it was hard, all at once, to break the habit. And she loved him so terribly!

At last, unable to bear the silence further, she got into the car and drove over to the riding school. Tips was in the yard, feeding some chickens that fluffed about on the bare earth. He looked up expectantly.

"No'm, Mister Michael, he ain't come back, miss." Tips' white teeth showed. "Pa, he thinks it's mighty funny. He went off last night soon after those men left..."

"Yes'm. He say he goin' to New York, and he say for Pa to lock up. This morning when I goin' to call him for breakfast, sure enough, he ain't been back."

"Well, thank you very much, Tips. No, I won't make an appointment to ride just now."

Katharine went back to the car. Automatically her fingers turned the ignition key. She started the motor, drove off almost blindly.

Michael had gone away! He hadn't let her know. What in heaven's name did this mean?

Had he told her the truth when he said those men could not possibly bring evil tidings to him, that his slate was clear? She would have staked her life yesterday upon his honesty, but this new development brought terror to her soul.

What was she to do? There was no one she could tell, no one she could turn to now.

Or was there?

Violet Merser's wise, kind, gentle face came to Katharine's mind. In spite of her instinctive distrust, her impulse always to stand upon her own feet, she was drawn irresistibly to this new friend.

Violet was in a basket chair under the apple trees, knitting a pink sweater for Sybil. "How nice to see you! We've been missing you." Then her keen perceptions told her something was wrong. "My dear,

WHEN LIVES ARE AT STAKE
You need the same protection that race drivers demand

KELLY PETILLO ON MAY 30, WON the 500-Mile Indianapolis Race on Firestone Tires, breaking the track record and driving the entire distance at a rate of 106.24 miles per hour.

This record is an outstanding demonstration of tire efficiency. To go 500 miles in less than five hours on this rough and bumpy 26-year-old brick track, without tire trouble of any kind,
demonstrates the strength and blowout protection that Firestone builds into their Gum-Dipped Tires.

AB JENKINS ALSO RECENTLY demonstrated the stamina, efficiency, and blowout protection built into Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. He drove his 5000 pound car over the hot salt beds at Lake Bonneville, Utah, 3000 miles in 23½ hours. This was an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour, and although temperatures were as high as 120°, he had no blowouts or tire trouble of any kind.

These records are made possible by special construction features built into Firestone Tires.

Take no chances—protect your life and the lives of others by letting us equip your car with Firestone Tires and give you the Safety and Blowout Protection that race drivers demand.

Before you buy new tires ask yourself these three questions

- 1—"Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"
- 2—"Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"
- 3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

- ANSWER No. 1—Leading university tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop your car 15% quicker than the best of all popular makes of tires.
- ANSWER No. 2—Unequaled performance records for sixteen consecutive years prove that Gum-Dipping gives you the greatest blowout protection ever known.
- ANSWER No. 3—Thousands of car owners report unequaled mileage records—evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.
