SECOND LOWE MURDER TRIAL SET FOR JUNE 24

Another Dog Head Shipped to Austin For Examination

Another dog head, taken from a dog thought to have had rabies, was prepared today for shipment to the Pasteur Institute at Austin for examination.

The dog was one belonging to a farmer residing about 10 miles from Ranger, Swift said today, and the owner became suspicious and asked the Ranger officer to have it examined.

It was not known to have bitten anyone, or any other dog, but because of its actions the owner feared that it might be mad and wanted to take precautions before some of his children were bitten.

The war on unvaccinated and unlicensed dogs is being continued, with a total of 84 dogs reported killed in three days.

"Sunday night I made a trip over practically every section of the town," Swift said, "and nowhere did I see a dog running loose that was not licensed and vaccinated. I have had a number of calls from people owning dogs, requesting that I come out and kill them. Some had fits and others were thought to have been bitten by rabid dogs and were killed as a precaution against spreading of the disease."

Swift stated that he had killed several dogs that had "typical" cases of rabies.

Siren to Blow to Warn Members to Be at Breakfast

The fire siren will be sounded at 6 o'clock Wednesday morning to awaken Chamber of Commerce members in time for the 6:30 breakfast at the Willows, it was announced today.

Plans have been made for an open-air breakfast for approximately 100 members and a short, snappy program will be put on following the meal.

Some have planned to arise between 5:30 and 6 o'clock for an early morning swim, it was stated today, while the majority are expected to be on hand in time for the breakfast to start promptly at 6:30.

Two to three-minute talks will be made by several of the officers and directors, and a report of the activities of the organization since March 1, when the new regime took over the reins, will be made by R. V. Galloway, secretary. The secretary's report will take about five minutes.

The group will be dismissed in plenty of time for the members to reach town before 8 o'clock, it was stated today, so that anyone will not lose any time from his business by attending. It was also pointed out that no drive of any kind would be made, nor would any contributions be asked, as the breakfast is entirely free of any charge.

It was pointed out that should the weather be rainy, the breakfast will be held in the Zuella Beauty shop building next door to Joseph Dry Goods company, where the same arrangements will be made that were planned for the outdoor breakfast at the Willows.

Presbyterians to Have Headquarters For Ticket Sales

Announcement was made today that the ladies of the First Presbyterian church had opened headquarters at the Southland hotel, where they would sell Passion Play tickets. This Presbyterian ticket headquarters will be in addition to the regular office in the Chamber of Commerce, where tickets may also be procured.

The ladies requested that all members of the church purchase their tickets from them at the Southland hotel.

Arrangements were made at a meeting Monday afternoon to have reserve seat tickets on sale at convenient places in Eastland and Cisco on Thursday afternoon, the tickets being on sale at Cisco from 1 p. m. to 3 o'clock and at Eastland from 3:30 to 5:30. Similar arrangements were made to sell tickets at Strawn and Breckenridge on Friday afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock.

Nine Professed Faith at Central Baptist Revival

The Central Baptist revival was well attended last night and nine professed and joined the church.

Rev. Martin's subject was "Hell," his text being found in the sixteenth chapter of Luke. He said that it was old-fashioned to speak on this theme, but that we still had the old-fashioned sin, still breathe the old-fashioned air and some still drank the old-fashioned water.

He further stressed the fact that the Scriptures taught in an eternal place of punishment and invited all to read the book for themselves.

Rev. Stephens reported that the prayer bands on last night numbered some 175 and that all the people were co-operating.

The ordinance of baptism was administered to a number of candidates at the close of the meeting.

There have been 47 additions to the church since the meeting began.

PRESIDENT IS ATTACKED BY REPUBLICANS

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 11.—Anti-New Deal speakers, before a Republican grass roots conference were cheered today, while the mid-western party's representatives' own resolution committee, was locked in debate over a set of principles on which to build a backfire against the 1936 New Deal campaign.

While the resolutions committee struggled toward agreement, the conference proper heard an attack on President Roosevelt and his administration by former Congressman Robert Simmons, Republican, Nebraska, who charged the President "has asked the American people to aid liberty to commit suicide."

"We should challenge the President to submit to the people of this country the specific constitutional amendment that he and his followers seek," he said. Simmons charged the President had identified himself with those "who would have us believe the constitution is dead by his statements against the decision of the supreme court—an attack not directed so much at the court as at the constitution."

FRESH TROUBLE IS EXPECTED BY CHINESE

By United Press

TIENTSIN, China, June 11.—Signs of a new Japanese-Chinese crisis were heard today as two Japanese destroyers moored along the waterfront and Major General Doihara, mystery man of the Japanese army, arrived to confer with the Japanese high command.

Two thousand Japanese soldiers are due tomorrow. Three factors indicated strongly that fresh trouble was near:

1. Chinese hints that though every concession will be made to Japan, the demands will not be carried out.

2. Japanese complaints that the Chinese agreement to comply with demands already is being sabotaged.

3. The fact that the extent of Japan's intention is not known, but that there is every sign of broadened demands for Chinese co-operation with Japan throughout Northern China.

Original Players In English Version Of Passion Play

When the Passion Play was first brought to the United States in 1927, it was brought by Dr. Alfred Wolff, formerly of Freiburg, Germany. Dr. Wolff was for years with the well known Freiburg Passion Play and has made an intimate study of the production as given regularly at Oberammergau.

For three years the Passion Play in this country was given in German but at the insistence of religious and educational leaders Dr. Wolff wrote the English version which his company is now giving.

The Great European Passion Play will be presented in Ranger by this company of original players under the auspices of the Ranger Passion Play committee, composed of religious and civic leaders of this community. For three performances in the Ranger Recreation building, June 17, 18, and 19. Special attention is called to the fact that this is a stage production and not a motion picture as is sometimes believed.

The principal players that will appear in Ranger have made personal studies of their characters and have interviewed many leading religious leaders about their various portrayals. Many have described these players in these roles as living their parts and not acting them at all. A better understanding of the sincerity of these famed players is to be had upon witnessing their fervor for their roles, which might be interpreted as an act of worship.

The members of the cast include the following:

The Christ, Venoy Skinner. Judas, Glen Wells. John, the Beloved, Anthony Wayne. The Mother, Mara Wells. Mary Magdalene, Verona Sampson.

Simon Peter, Fritz Stoebe. Caiaphas, Creston Wright. Dathan, Radchiff Hall. Nathaniel, William Wraye. Annas, David Becker. Pontius Pilate, Grant Redfelt. Longinus, Emil Lauder. Quintus, Ed Ireland. Herod Antipas, Nat Wade. Naason, Richard Martin. Barabba, Smith Hamilton. Blind Woman, Ruth Keyes. Angel, Elvira Glasen.

According to Miss Kaufman, the advance representative for the players, the continued tour of the production which continued without a break even during the peak of the economic depression, could not have been possible except for the support of the Catholic and Protestant clergy who have with few exceptions, wholeheartedly cooperated to make this outstanding civic memorial in the history of the communities where it has been presented.

HALF RANSOM MONEY FOUND BY U. S. AGENTS

By United Press

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Federal agents today, 10 days after return of George Weyerhaeuser, had recovered more than half the $200,000 ransom, captured two confessed participants and knew the name of a third.

The recovery of $90,700 buried in a canyon near Salt Lake City, was announced by J. Edgar Hoover, making a total of $110,555 recovered or accounted for and leaving $89,445 still in the hands of William Mahan, suspect, or hidden by him.

The record showed: Found buried, $90,700. Found in Mahan's car $15,555. Spent by Harmon Waley, $300. Burned by Waley, $4,000. Officials said they believed the abduction was a two-man job with Mrs. Waley aiding in disposing of the money and Mahan had the rest of the ransom.

Governor Alfred said he brought with him Willis' record to study while in Houston, to help celebrate Railroad Week.

"It was a terrible crime. Almost unbelievable," he commented on Willis' attack on a young bride at Tyler.

Stuart was convicted of killing a step-child because it cried too much.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED AAA PLAN VOICED

By United Press

NEW YORK, June 11.—Vigorous opposition to a proposed amendment to the AAA which would devote 30 per cent of customs receipts to bounties and subsidies to exports of American agriculture, was expressed today by Robert O'Brien, chairman of the Federal Tariff commission.

"This bill," he told the conference of seaport cities, "would make it mandatory on the treasury to spend about $100,000,000 annually, according to the present rate of trade.

"It would work out badly, for example it would enable Japan to buy cotton so cheaply from us she could take away our Central and South American markets with our own products. I regard it as a dangerous tendency and I feel we must lesson the stultifying effects of such a nationalistic policy."

Brazil Is Not Yet a Threat In Cotton Markets

By United Press

RIO DE JANEIRO, June 11.—Immediate threat of Brazilian competition with American cotton waned today as the Japanese mission studying the possibilities of turning its purchases to this country, apparently found the Brazilian market, thus far, unprepared for the exports required and now acquired from the United States.

Cotton circles here gained the impression the Japanese would continue their present method of making purchases, though keeping in close touch with the Brazilian situation. Many factors mitigate against large sales of Brazilian cotton to Japan, including quality of staple and prices. The latter are considered unsatisfactory, according to reports.

Singing Society Undergoes Change At Colorado Meet

Hero, Who Flew Fame, Cherished Life More

Perhaps the most interesting thing about this man Lawrence of Arabia was the fact that he turned down wealth and ran away from fame.

Here was a man who gave the twentieth century a unique flareback to the age of chivalry. In a time when men in the mass seemed to be all that counted, he restored the worth of the lone individual. He took one little corner of a war in which machinery and swollen battalions were all-important, and made it a one-man show.

And then, having done all this—having helped to remake the map of the world and written an epic of old-fashioned, knightly achievement—he voluntarily stepped out of the spotlight.

He dropped out of the service of the British colonial office and buried himself in the anonymity of an army enlisted man. He wrote one of the most absorbingly interesting books of modern times and withdrew it from circulation after it had paid his expenses—although it might have made hundreds of thousands of dollars for him.

He retired to an obscure country cottage and—at a time when newspapers and magazines would gladly have paid him fabulous prices for anything he cared to write—put in four years translating the Odyssey.

Now a man who could do all that can be set down as a freak, if you wish; but a verdict like that doesn't begin to cover the ground.

What is apparent when you think the matter over is that this Lawrence somehow learned something about life and the rewards it can give a man which most of us never quite discover.

It is as if he had quietly told us that all the things we prize most highly—wealth, fame, high position, leisure, and the acclaim of our fellows—do not, after all, amount to a pint of beans.

The things that make the difference between a good life and a failure lie deeper; they take place inside a man, deep in the recesses of his own heart, and the outward, visible trappings are less than the dust.

This, to be sure, is not a new discovery. Great men of all times and places have usually reached the same conclusion, have discovered that if a man can square matters between his own soul and the mysterious, God-given impulse that drives him forward, that is all that counts.

But the rest of us seldom get more than a suspicion of it. We want the outward, visible signs of success—even if these signs be no more than a fine home in the suburbs, or a 12-cylinder car, or our picture in the newspapers.

That, to us, is what makes victory complete—until a man like Lawrence comes along and tells us that we don't know what we're talking about.

HERE'S REAL ACTION BY A REAL FISHERMAN

This remarkable action picture of Jack Lamb, world renowned angler, was taken recently after a press photographer followed him on a trip of over 400 miles in an attempt to get an action picture of Lamb in action in a battle with a game fish. That their troubles were amply rewarded is proven by the above picture. Lamb is to give a demonstration of casting here the latter part of this week, and will answer all queries by novices.

Early History and Development Of Passion Play As Outlined By The Author of the English Play

The Freiburg Players are more liberal in their views, although I do not think any more commercially inclined than the Oberammergau villagers. They have become professionals, without, however, any serious impediment to the moral and artistic value of the play.

Until 1264, the Passion Play largely was presented in tableau. Those scenes which were of the spoken dialogue, were spoken in Latin. In the second known script, the one of 1604, the German language has replaced the Latin, from there on, the words of the Passion Play were spoken in the German tongue.

The Easter plays represented in their days, the highest development of the secular drama. They were about the first form of intellectual entertainment that the people ever received. They caused the people to think, and the people saw that the mere story of the Crucifixion was not enough. The people had the instinct to desire a play which would present the entire life of Christ—which would go far back of the Christ to the very origin of mankind.

Slowly, this form of drama grew up, rounded out, completed itself and became wholly dramatic, with the Passion of Christ as its central episode and climax.

The Life of the Old Testament entered into the play with all of its Oriental mysticism and color of its symbolism. The plays began with the Creation, the sin of Adam and Eve, and the fall of Lucifer and the rebellious angels.

Next, two short dramas were inserted; the Lament of Mary, and the Mary Magdalene play, the first, represented Mary the Mother at the foot of the Cross, then the introduction of Jesus and John, with the bystanders taking part in the lamentations. The Magdalene play represented the seduction of Mary Magdalene by the devil, and her sinful life up to her conversion. In her sinfulness, the people saw the depraved condition of all mankind after the fall of Adam.

ten in the books. He studied these game fish for years, and even today he experiments with every kind of new lure that is produced. He is thoroughly conversant with the habits and traits of game fish, and knows exactly what they are likely to do under all conditions. It is no accident that he catches fish every time he goes out. He simply puts into fishing what it takes to get results, and fills the creel so easily that thousands have marvelled at his uncanny fish-catching ability.

Many people in this section have heard his weekly broadcasts over radio station WBAP. His articles on bass fishing have been syndicated throughout the world, and his book "How To Catch Ol' John Bass" is recognized as the last word in authority upon this subject. If you want to take free lessons bass fishing has never been written from the man who stands at the top in bass fishing, don't fail to come out and see Lamb do his stuff. On his occasional fishing expeditions into different territory Lamb pauses in cities where there is fishing interest long enough to give these free casting schools for the benefit of those who like to fish.

Since there are more people who fish than indulge in any other sport, Lamb always finds a huge crowd awaiting him wherever he goes countless people have benefitted from viewing his demonstrations and it is anticipated that a throng will turn out to greet him here. The exhibition will start promptly at 5 p. m., and afterward, Lamb will answer any and all questions asked him regarding bass fishing.

Lamb Will Answer Fishing Questions After Demonstration

Jack Lamb, world champion bass fisherman, arrived here yesterday and will demonstrate his skill with bait and fly rods Wednesday at the high school grounds. Jack has been fishing in nearby lakes for the past several days, and you may have run across this celebrated angler out on the creeks without knowing it. For many years he has worked in the Fort Worth offices of the Gulf Production company, but since he has gained a national reputation as a fisherman, his employers let him go on occasional trips into fishing country to teach casting to less successful anglers. Lamb has demonstrated his prowess in cities throughout the south but explained that in some manner he had always missed Eastland Ranger and Cisco. He is coming here with the hope of being of some benefit to novice anglers. It has been a lifetime custom with him to aid beginners, and he has taught more than 2,000,000 men and boys how to fish.  Now Go On With the Story
 CHAPTER XXIX

Sally said furiously, "I don't understand it, I simply don't get it at all!" She glared at the inoffensive Tips and at Clarence, stooped and graying, in the background.
 "You say he said he was going to the city?" Sally demanded.
 Clarence nodded. They had been over the ground several times before, but if the young lady wanted to ask the same questions over and over he had no choice but to answer them.
 "He say he goin' to the city," Clarence elaborated, with a side-long roll of chocolate eyes in a dark face. "He say fo' me to lock up."

 "And that was day before yesterday?"
 "Yes'm. In the evenin'. We ain't heard nothing from him since."
 Sally waved an afternoon newspaper in his eyes. "Have you seen this?"
 "No'm. Ain't seen nothin'!" Clarence's eyes executed a sudden roll of apprehension. "They ain't nothin' in it 'bout Mist' Michael, is they?"
 Sally laughed—an unpleasant laugh, drawing back the corners of her lips from small predatory teeth.
 "Read it."
 Tips bent over, "Pa can't read," he said. "Lessen he pa a magnifying glass. His eyes is bad."
 "What do it say?" Clarence wanted to know.
 Tips bent over the newspaper, reading slowly. "It says how Mister Michael is a lord or something," he said slowly. "It says how his daddy was a son of a lord in England or Ireland—and now Mister Michael, seems to comes into the business."
 "Exactly," Sally Moon, with a sound that was more like a snort than the sarcastic laugh she had intended, slipped down into the shabby porch chair. Over her linked, gloved hands she regarded the two shabby men.
 "I believe you two know more about this than you pretend to," she said on a note of angry suspicion. "I believe you perfectly well know where Michael is."
 "No'm," Clarence shook his head.
 "Well, I'm going to find out," Sally said swiftly. Before either one of them could stop her she had flung herself inside the door of Michael's house. "I'm going to search his papers," she said. "And don't either of you interfere!"
 She was inside the room which had served Michael as a bedroom before either one could say a word. Tips looked at his father, and the older man looked back apprehensively.
 "She ain't got a bit o' business in there," the boy said humbly.
 "How we goin' to stop her?" Clarence wanted to know.
 Sally went through bureau drawers like a whirlwind. The neat, plain, bare chamber did not afford many hiding places. A bed, tidily made up with a mended white spread, a common oak chest of drawers, a wardrobe with one of the old-fashioned doors swinging wide—she went through them all.
 There was little enough. There was pitifully little. A handful of old letters with the postmark of a little town in a western state. A thick, clumsy old gold watch. A button box.
 Sally rifled through the letters. The stable boy came to the door to stare at her.
 "You go away, Tips," she said crossly. "Don't you bother me. This is my business."
 "Ain't nobody got any right buttin' into Mister Michael's private things," he said stubbornly. But he dared not interfere. After all, she was the girl his employer had been engaged to marry.
 Clarence had shuffled out into the kitchen. You could hear him rattling pots and pans and setting down the cups with angry gusto. Sally paid no attention to all this. She had come with a determination to go through Michael's belongings, to see if she could find any clue to his disappearance. She flounced into the living room after a busy five minutes, a small bundle in her hand.

of Michael Heatheroe and Katharine Strykhurst.
 Sally announced firmly. "Something happened to Michael the night he came into New York." She saw it all now. She had been stupid to be so frightened and angry. Of course Michael had been hurt. He had no reason on earth to run away on the eve of this triumph.
 Her manner softened perceptibly. She had met Mr. Downrigg with an air of challenge, thinking he knew something about the absent Michael, thinking, perhaps, he had aided and abetted him in his escape.
 "You must help me," she said, her voice taking on its cooing note. "We must search the hospitals—the morgues."
 "My dear young woman!" shuddered Mr. Downrigg. "Surely you don't think—"
 She was firm, but to show him how deeply she was affected by the thought of Michael injured or dead she wept a little, quite prettily and convincingly.
 "We must," she said. "We dare not do otherwise. After all," she reminded him, with a liquid glance of those dark, opaque eyes, "I'm his promised wife, you know."
 She could see herself telling the story to newspaper reporters. Dead or alive, Michael should not escape her.
 (To Be Continued)

Sally rushed to her room and opened the letters she had found in Michael's bureau. They were not very interesting letters. There were several notes from the bank about the mortgage. There was a bill of sale for a mare. There were one or two brief and badly written personal letters from a man in Montana—a man who signed himself simply "Bill." Nothing incriminating, nothing to point the way Michael had gone.
 Sally stood staring at the letters in bafflement and anger. Her temperament demanded that she expend energy on someone. So she dressed herself in plain dark silk and boarded a train for the city. The clipping about Michael's inheritance lay in the smart dark blue handbag.
 She went straight to Mr. Downrigg's hotel and that gentleman came down to the foyer to meet her. He was a lean, elderly Englishman with astoop and a courteous, tired voice. No, he hadn't had any communication from Mr. Heatheroe as yet. And that was odd because Messrs. Malley & Gerhardt had assured him Michael was easily to be found. All his telephone calls on the day before had been fruitless. Mr. Heatheroe, the servants said, was away and it was not known when he would return. "Something's happened then,"

Plans Completed For Construction For Centennial

DALLAS, June 11.—Preliminary plans are now complete for Texas' 100th birthday celebration which will center in the spacious exposition grounds, here commencing June 6, 1936.

Just one year is left for construction of a $10,000,000 exposition plant, and ground will soon be broken for the first of the scores of unusual and artistic structures, international exhibits and al-embracing amusements.
 When work actually is started on the grounds it is expected thousands of workmen will labor 24 hours each day in eight-hour shifts.
 Ample funds are available to make the Texas Centennial Exposition one of the greatest international expositions of its kind in history.

The State of Texas has appropriated the sum of $3,000,000 of which more than a million dollars will go into the construction of a State of Texas building which will be permanent on the exposition grounds.
 The City of Dallas is issuing $3,500,000 of bonds for exposition purposes. The Texas Centennial Central Exposition, Inc., has already sold practically $2,000,000 of bonds to private individuals and corporations to aid financing of this Texas World's Fair.

It is considered more than likely congress will appropriate another $3,000,000 for a federal building and other features. This appropriation has already passed, the senate and is now being considered by the house.

Walter D. Cline, managing director of the Central Exposition at Dallas, expects to make it a 20 million dollar show for 15 million people.

Frank N. Watson has been selected as the promotion manager for the central exposition and has plans under way to tell the story of this great Texas celebration in all parts of the nation and throughout the world. He will aid in the creation of a national "urge" to visit Texas next spring and summer, and will advertise far and wide Texas historical background, her unparalleled resources and the business advantages of the Lone Star State.

Frankly—Who Pays the Bill?

When government steps out of its sphere and tries to operate or control business, who pays the bill? THE PEOPLE PAY THE BILLS! It might be in the actual cost of service or it might be in higher taxes, but THE PEOPLE PAY THE BILLS!

When the government decided to operate the railroads, what happened? Chaos and confusion followed. When the railroads were returned to private ownership there was a tremendous deficit. Who paid it? THE PEOPLE DID WITH HIGHER TAXES!

When more and larger government commissions and bureaus are created, who pays the bills? THE PEOPLE DO!

Taxes in the United States have INCREASED more than a billion and a half dollars IN THE PAST 12 MONTHS! Who paid these increased taxes? THE PEOPLE!

This bill is aimed solely at the electric industry.

The provisions of the bill are so severe and restrictive and so revolutionary in character that the companies could not live under them. The bill would give government a vise-like grip on the management and control of these companies and in doing so would create new federal commissions and bureaus. As usual, more bills for THE PEOPLE TO PAY.

The inevitable result of such a program would be the complete collapse of the electric industry with losses running into the billions for 10 million investors. Again, THE PEOPLE WOULD PAY THE BILLS.

This would lead to socialization of the industry and bring the risk of inferior service and higher rates to be PAID BY THE PEOPLE.

The record of privately-owned electric companies needs no defense. They have contributed generously and unselfishly, through excellent service at low rates, to the communities of which they are an integral part.

We don't believe we deserve to be singled out as the next national experiment—the 1935 "business guinea pig."

Make HAPPINESS a Habit

Wouldn't you like to step up the amount of enjoyment you get from life? The knack of keeping fit is largely a matter of regular habits. Your happiness may be hampered by common constipation due to insufficient "bulk" in your meals.

Your grocer has a natural cereal food which corrects this condition. Kellogg's All-Bran, eaten regularly supplies generous "bulk." Also vitamin B and iron.

The "bulk" in All-Bran is gentle—and safe for normal individuals. More effective than the "bulk" in leafy vegetables, as it does not break down within the body.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Isn't this natural food much better than taking patent medicines? Set Kellogg's All-Bran at your grocers. It contains much more "bulk" than part-bran products. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.
