Leaders of Grass Root Republicans Call for Democratic Aid

Leaders of the grass root republicans are organizing for the battle to come in the politics of the nation. They have issued a general invitation to "disgruntled democrats to join their ranks to save the constitution."

They overlooked the fact that Abraham Lincoln defied the constitution in the Dred Scott case. Indeed, the leaders of the old republican party flouted the Dred Scott decision until a bloody war was precipitated and the shackles taken from the limbs of the black slave.

In those ancient days. Southern democrats upheld the constitution and branded their political opponents as men "who are seeking to destroy the venerable document." Frank O. Lowden of Illinois appears to be the big ace among the grass rooters. He was a famous governor of his state and one of the ablest Illinois has known. Now he is for "the constitution and its preservation."

All sane Americans are for the constitution and its preservation with its marvelous bill of rights. Lowden in bygone years was a republican candidate for the presidential nomination. He was tossed aside by the reactionary leaders of his party. He refused second place on the ticket with Calvin Coolidge. Now he is in the picture again and would like to be the Moses in 1936.

Chief Justice William Pantangall of Maine is one of "the disgruntled democrats" who is going to help the grassrooters "to save the constitution and the government." Chief Justice Pantangall was a democrat until the campaign of 1934. He was the democratic member of the national committee for Maine. Mrs. Pantangall was the national committeewoman for the democratic women of Maine. Pantangall battled against the Klan. Mrs. Pantangall battled for the Klan. McAdoo lost the nomination. John W. Davis was selected by the bi-partisan leaders of Wall Street for the sacrifice. Pantangall returned to his home in Maine. He deserted the democrats. He was welcomed to the republican camp by the republican reactionaries.

He was made an associate justice and later chief justice of the supreme court of his state. Now he is ready for the new combination of "disgruntled republicans who supported Hoover in 1932 and now classify themselves as "disgruntled democrats."

Politics is a queer game. It's a queer game because there are so many queer people who masquerade as democrats in one campaign and as republicans in the campaigns to come. Bill Murray of Oklahoma and Pantangall of Maine would like a wonderful ticket, in a certain sense, for the grassrooters in the year 1936. They are political "has beans" seeking an ark of safety in their old age.

Democracy Permits Exchange of Ideas

In the flow of oratory that has been loosed at the college commencement exercises throughout the country, maintenance of principles of democracy continues to ride the popular tide.

This time, however, thoughts of democracy in a supposedly democratic government seem to be even more appropriate than ever. What is lacking is a universal agreement as to the meaning of democracy.

For today, as never before, the term democracy is undergoing a strange series of interpretations, each of which merely fits in with the peculiar ideas each person or group wants to foster, all for the good of the United States, of course.

To one set of individuals, democracy is endangered while college sophomores are permitted to study the Communist Manifesto of 1848. To another group, only by means of a liberal education, including the study of Communist teachings, can the meaning of true democracy be conveyed to the growing generation.

In one camp are those who would run out of the colleges those professors who dare to hint of more radical forms of government than that we enjoy in this country. And opposed to these are the professors and their champions who defend their liberal attitudes in the colleges with the contention that to eliminate such teachings would be substituting autocracy for democracy.

The fact is that no system of education is fair to its students and its teachers if it fails to include in its scope the entire record of governments and of political thought so that a true estimate may be had of the significance of each form of government in the lives of a people.

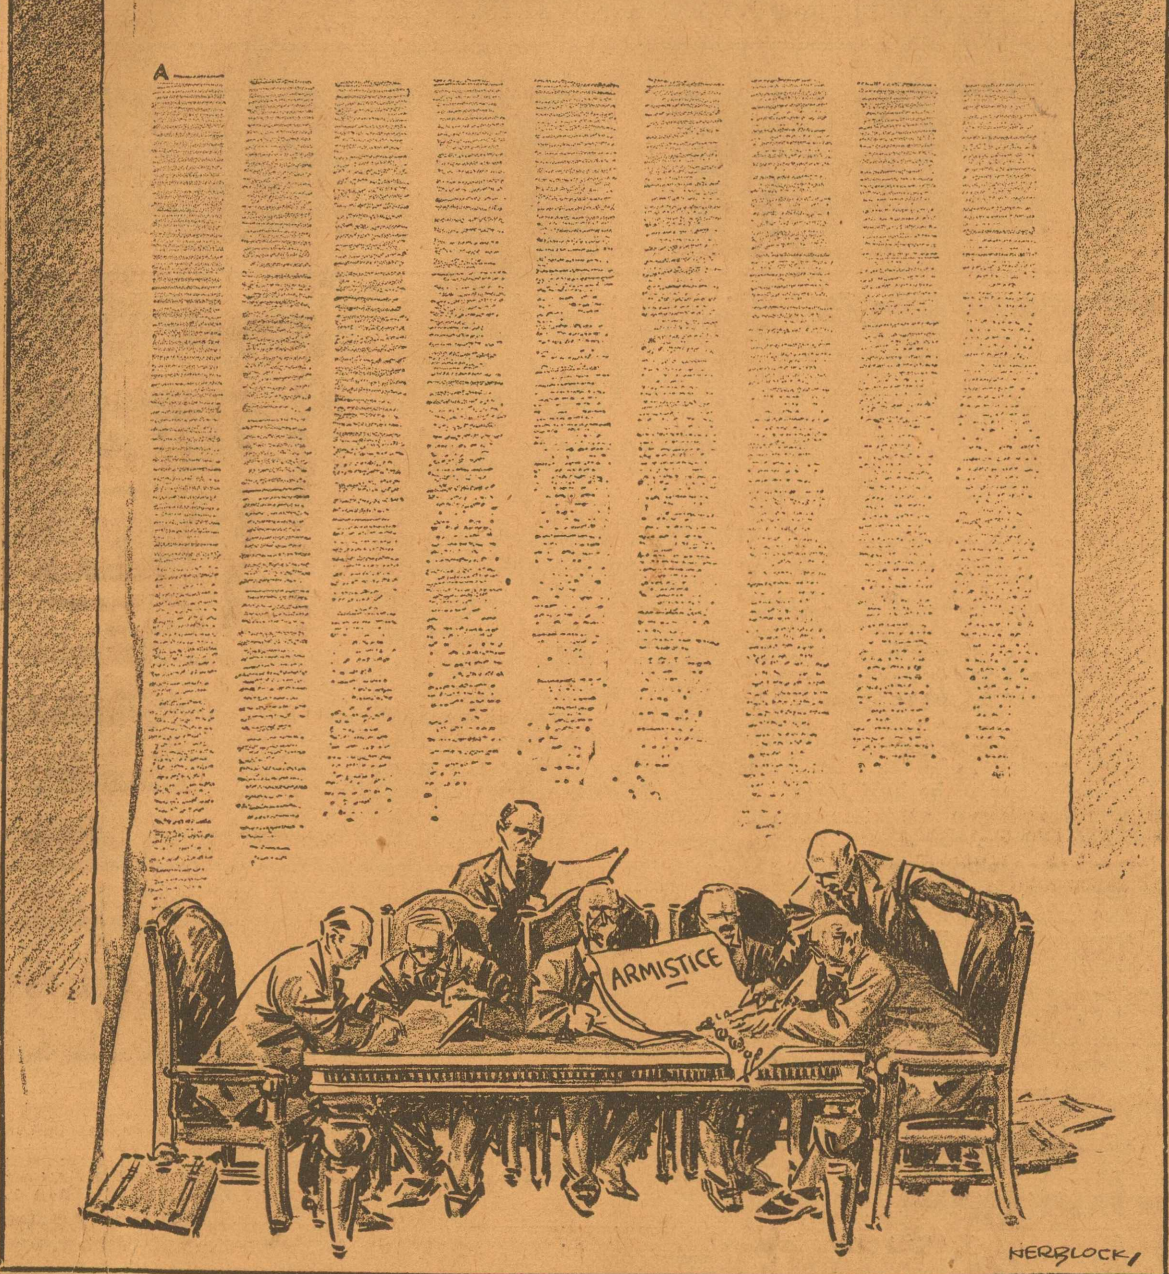

Study of the Communist Manifesto is not a novelty in American education. Neither is that of the various monarchies and other forms of government that have existed from earliest times throughout the world.

Liberal education for many generations has included everything from the most conservative to the most radical ideas of government in its curriculum. That it should eliminate one set of ideas from its course of study, for the sake of the other, would be discarding the very purposes for which democracy has been established.

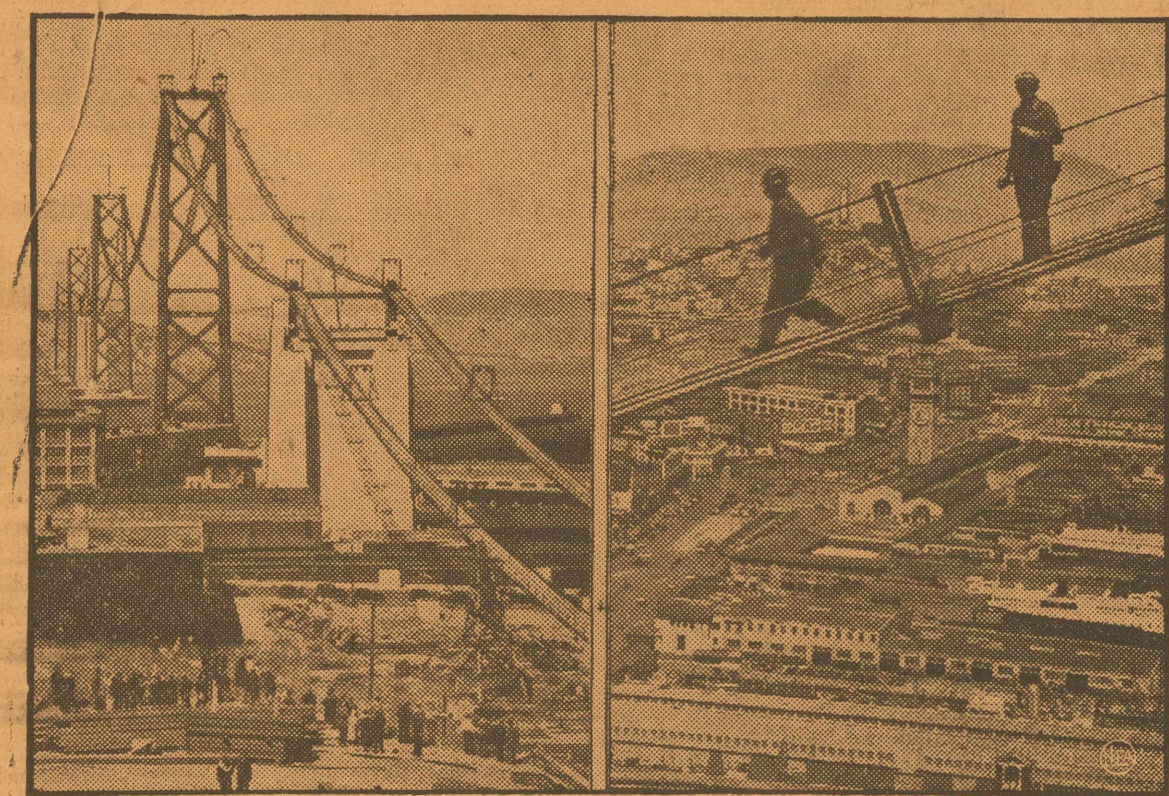

Politicians never built or operated a successful business.

Health Projects For the Past Year Add to Property

HAVING landed with a club that wins occasionally, Buck Newsom should shortly take his place as the American League's Dizzy Dean.

Competition was unfair in St. Louis, where the world champion Cardinals kept Dean on the platform. The Browns were such that they practically gagged even Newsom.

But now that Newsom is with Washington, Dean had best be re-wired for sound reproduction. It's going to be a contest.

When Bucky Harris closed the deal for Buck, who cost $5,000 of them, the large Carolinian was first to congratulate his new manager.

"Congrats, kid," chirped Newsom, extending his hand. "I am just the man this club needs."

strange out there. I guess that's why they got five hits, too. If I had been feeling right, they never would have gotten that many. Yes, sir, tell the fans of Washington I'm sorry I fell down on them. I'll do better hereafter."

"I was just giving them a chance to score," commented Newsom. "I wanted to see if they had anything to offer."

After his experience with the Browns this spring, having a working margin was something quite strange to the blatant bowler of Hartsville.

"Mebbe that was why I was so wild at the beginning," he said. "I hadn't had a run scored by my team in four games and I was kinda flustered when our boys got two in the first inning."

Orator Spurs Senators NEWSOM never runs out of reasons. Buck was hitting his weight, .195, when he joined the Senators, and had this to say when he obtained three in five trips.

AUSTIN—Health and sanitation projects completed by the Texas Relief commission during the past year with the use of work relief labor have added hundreds of thousands of dollars of value to public property, provided work relief for thousands of the state's unemployed, and have been of immeasurable benefit to Texas in the prevention of disease by the removal of cause, it was declared by State Relief Director Adam R. Johnson this week.

Using labor from the relief rolls, Relief commission engineers supervised construction of 32,640 pit type privies in rural Texas. From a health standpoint, the tremendous need for this type of work is illustrated by a survey in an East Texas county before the work was undertaken. Results of the study indicated rural school children had an average hook worm infection of more than 50 per cent. Dysentery and similar diseases were widespread and typhoid not unusual. Inspection of sanitation revealed a majority of homes equipped only with surface toilets and these often were located near the source of water supply. About 400 homes had no sanitation conveniences at all.

Just as important, the state director believes, is the work done in cities, where relief labor has built 254,200 feet of sewer lines and 17,900 feet of water mains, constructed eight sewage disposal plants and installed 1,025 septic tanks. In addition, repairs and improvements were made on 1,580 water wells, 106,170 feet of sewer lines, 11,220 feet of water lines, and 34 sewage disposal plants. The city of Plainview now has in operation a new disposal plant built entirely with relief labor. The city cooperated with the relief commission by furnishing materials, foreman, and transportation for the men. The completed monolithic concrete structure is 38 feet in diameter at the top, 31 feet deep and has outside walls 12 inches thick.

Approximately 25 miles of sewer line are being laid in South San Antonio by relief labor on a project which will cost about $185,000. When completed, the job will serve about 4,500 inhabitants who now are using septic tanks and open toilets.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON — The omnipomp of a dozen bands sounded in the ears of an expiring NRA.

There are two types of typhus fever—the epidemic or Old World type, and the endemic or New World type, known as Brill's disease. In the former the death rate is very high and in the latter, commonly found in Texas, it is very low. The most cases appear during the hot months. The rat and mouse are the reservoirs of this disease and it is spread to man by fleas, lice, or ticks that have fed on an infected rat. The cycle being rat-flea-man.

Rat-Borne Diseases Preval in Texas

AUSTIN—Wars have been lost by generals and won by epidemics of rat-borne diseases, according to Dr. Hans Zinzer in his recent book, "Rats, Lice, and History." Texas has more of the disease than any other state, according to Dr. John W. Brown, state health officer.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Katharine Strykhurst, 20 and beautiful, allows her emotions to rule her when she marries Michael Houghton, young riding instructor who comes into a title and fortune. Katharine's father is rich and her stepmother is snobbish. The night following his marriage Michael is injured in a traffic accident and when he regains consciousness his memory is impaired. He forgets the marriage.

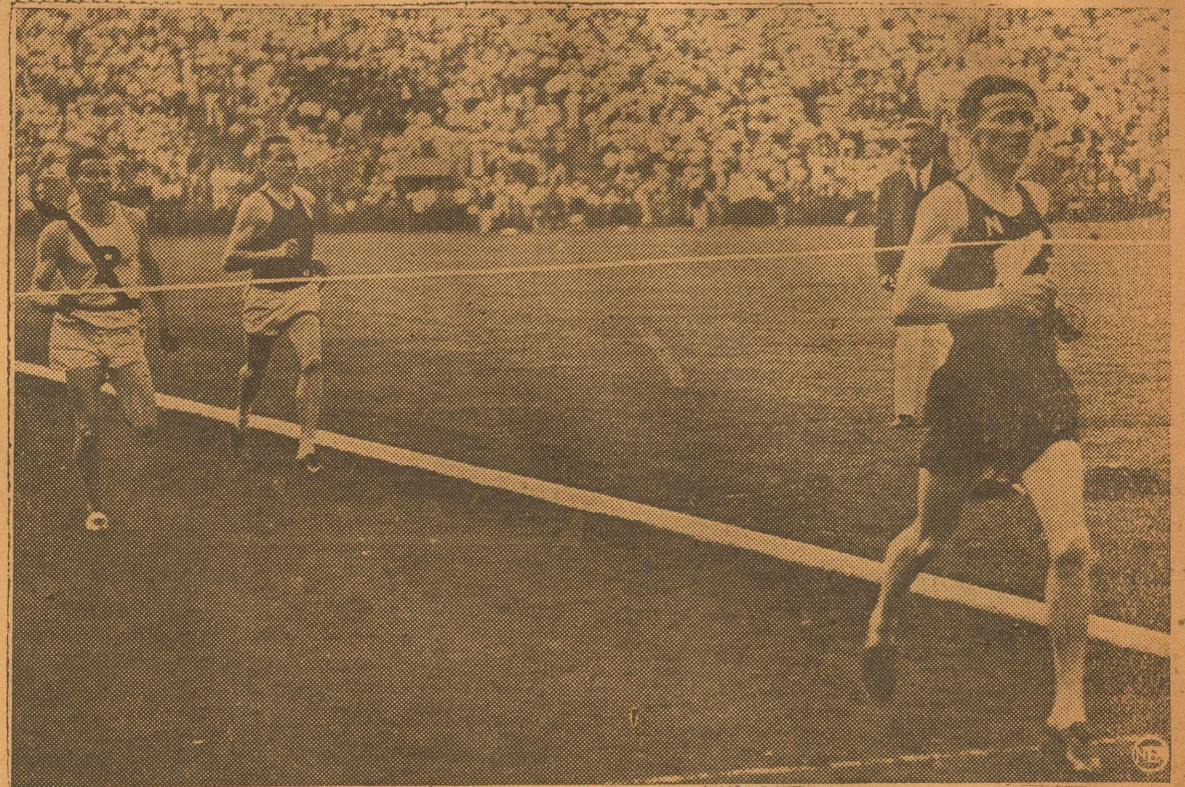

Katharine, unaware of this, believes he has deserted her. She plans to leave for New Mexico and her friend, Violet Merseur, agrees to engage a lawyer in her absence to arrange an annulment of the marriage.
Dr. John Kaye, an old friend, sees Katharine off on her trip. He tells her he has always loved her. Sally Moon, who has snared Michael into a sort of engagement, plans for their wedding, unaware of Michael's marriage to Katharine.

Dark polished floors. Indian jars in unexpected niches. Rugs, brightly colored and geometrically gay. Thick pottery cups and a plaid cloth on a sturdy oaken table in the patio. This, for the moment, was Katharine's domain.

Lovelock Leads Way to Tape in Big Three's Last Mile

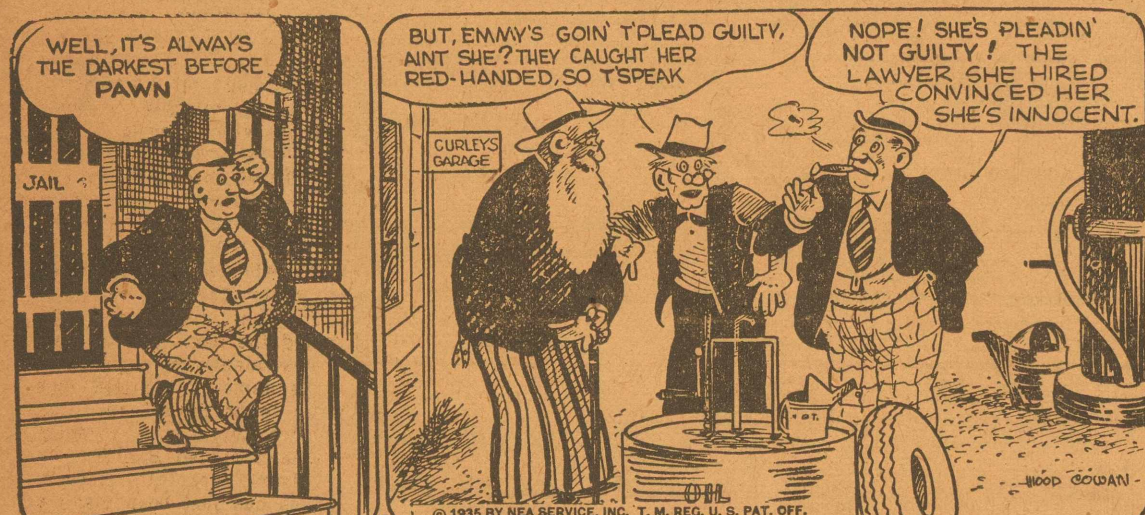

Unless Bill Bonthron changes his mind about racing again, there never can be another track spectacle like that presented at Princeton's Palmer Stadium when Jack Lovelock, Gene Cunningham and Bonthron—the world's most brilliant runners—lined up to run the "mile of the century." As they came thundering toward the finish, bunched together, watching for the opportunity to win, it was Lovelock, the New Zealander, who put on a dazzling burst of speed to lead home the pack, with Bonthron closing fast and Cunningham, world's record holder, relegated to third place. That stirring finish is pictured above.

Houghton, had given to her desert inn. It was informal and charming. There was always enough hot water for baths in the deep coral tub which had been brought from San Francisco five years before; there was delicious food—hot, spicy meats and crisp green salads; there were gorgeous, blazing sunsets and blistering noontides and purple nights, spangled with stars. At present Mrs. Houghton had only a few guests. Besides Katharine there was a tall Englishman who vaguely "wrote." No one quite knew what. And there were two maidens from Boston who raved about the climate and kept delicate lace shawls wrapped around their shoulders against the night air, and who read "dear" books and discussed them in cultivated accents over the luncheon table.
Katharine felt as one feels whose soul has been torn and who feels the stitches healing a little. The first day after her arrival she had been actually, physically ill. Evelyn Herbert had been frankly alarmed, and had spoken of sending for the girl's parents. But the quiet, the blessed peace of the place, had taken some hold on Katharine; her naturally splendid physique had asserted itself. She had crawled weakly to the patio, had stretched herself in a deep chair, letting the sun soak into her very bones.
The little Mexican maid, Margarita, came out and began in leisurely fashion to set the table. "Only t'ree for lunch today," she said companionably, with a flash of white teeth in a dark face, to Katharine who was sketching the angle of the creamy adobe wall with a splash of tree-shadow sharply etched against it.
"Only three?" Katharine looked up with an answering smile. "Then Mr. Delafield has gone into Santa Fe as he planned?"
Margarita nodded, slapping down the thin silver knives and forks and moving the amethyst tumbler into place. The little fountain splashed merrily in the silence and overhead a great bird wheeled and circled in the blue arc of the sky. Katharine put down

COOL IN COAL CRISIS

Minds of these two notables were on coal and winter rather than on their natty new ice cream suits as they strolled away from the White House. John L. Lewis, left, and Senator Joseph P. Cuffey of Pennsylvania just had been heartened by President Roosevelt's endorsement of the Cuffey bill to stabilize the coal industry, a measure also strongly backed by Lewis, which served to bring postponement of the mine strike set for June 17.

was because she had slept rather badly the night before. Nights were so long, and moonlight on the desert so hauntingly beautiful.
When she awoke Miss Vincent was tapping at her door. "Aren't you coming, my dear? The Millards will be disappointed!"
Well, she might as well go. It would be something to do.
What were the lines of that poem of Margaret Widdemer's she had read aeons ago, not realizing the truth of it?
"They're flowers and cakes and candlelight,
And chair by crowded chair,
And I am very sweet and kind
Because I do not care...
I think that I am hoping still,
If I am very good,
And talk to these around me
As a courteous lady should.

folks
And colored things and light
And let me run into the grass
And climb a sunset hill,
And find three hours one year ago,
When I was living still."
Well, that was the way you felt. You talked and smiled and went through the motions, but it didn't really mean anything. That poem told it all.
Presently she put on a sleeveless green frock and a little belted silk jacket that matched it, and she rouged her lips carefully because she was so pale, and she ran down into the patio where Evelyn Vincent was waiting.
"Dear me, aren't you splendid?"
Miss Roxana, recovered from her headache, was stretched out in a deck chair in the shade, knitting. She looked up admiringly. "All the young men will be flocking to Silencia when they know Miss Strykhurst is about, won't they, sister?"
Miss Daisy nodded, and Katharine smiled dutifully and thanked them both for their compliments. She went down the flagged walk to the car with a dull pain at her heart. She would rather, she told herself passionately, be like Miss
