Authorities To Unite in Crime Campaign

Society has had no greater encouragement for its security than that derived from the latest accomplishments of the government's G-men in solution of the Weyerhaeuser kidnaping case.

But that is only one phase of an extensive program of federal, state, and local co-operation against criminal activities that the government at Washington is soon to put into effect.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings recently revealed the plans by which a scientific training school for state and local police officers will be opened, probably this summer. A similar training course will be made available to state prison officials; a federal bureau of crime prevention will be sought from Congress for co-ordination of federal, state, and local police efforts, and not only police officers, but federal attorneys, marshals, and commissioners will receive training that will help them in proper prosecution of criminals.

Never before in the history of the country has so complete a campaign on behalf of society been attempted, and for this Attorney General Cummings and his staff are to be commended.

"Plant, technical equipment, scientific facilities, lecturers, and instructors will be available," Cummings says, adding that the sole expenses for the "students" will be their transportation to and from Washington and their personal living costs during their stay there.

All that is needed now is co-operation of federal, state, and local authorities for this united battle against crime. Recent developments promise well for such joint effort.

"One of the major factors in such recent success as has been achieved has been the increasing co-operation among federal, state, and local agencies," Cummings asserts in this connection. "The future requires even closer co-ordination, and even more complete give-and-take in all our activities."

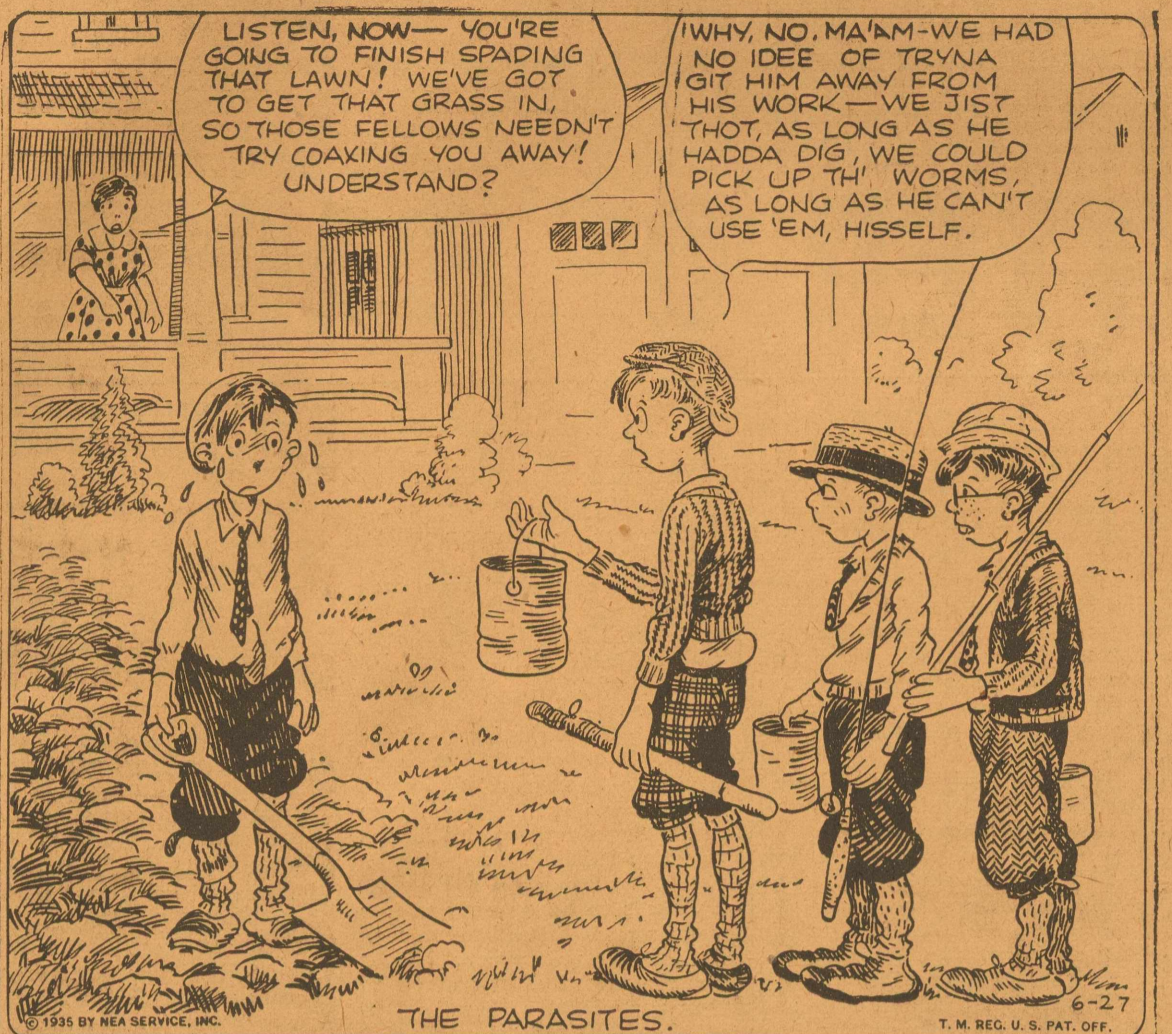

To attain this sort of co-operation, however, petty local pride and jealousy must be waived for the higher purpose at hand. Politics must be set aside entirely.

And there must be a willingness of local officers, at times, to work under others in a centralized effort to achieve a common end.

Activities of Uncle Sam's operatives against kidnapers, and the commendable aid given them by state and local authorities, points to the effective success of such program.

In 15 years Turkey has been made industrially and economically independent by one man, President Ataturko. Taturko boy.

recovery is so complete that he now is kinder to his children and gives his wife "a generous allowance and an occasional day off." Another, signed "Sally Smith," tells of having been a chronic complainer, with a tendency to criticize everyone. "Since I met a little blue-eyed woman named Lena Hickman, I'm cured of all that. Now I love everybody and can even sing a little while washing dishes."

That's all. There isn't any more. Not that there aren't more words, many more of them, all saying the same thing. When folks amongst whom a couple has lived for years, speak of them thus sincerely and affectionately, there's really nothing anyone can add.

 in spite of the heat.....

It's cool in spite of the heat at the seashore—why not bring the seashore right into your home, store or office?

Air conditioning can and will make any room cool and comfortable no matter how hot it may be outside. Cool, clean air, rid of all impurities, takes all the unpleasantness away from even the hottest, sultriest days of summer. Excessive water vapor is condensed from the air and drained away.

Phone or write the nearest office of Texas Electric Service Company—trained air conditioning engineers will gladly discuss your air conditioning problems with you.

Pictured at the left is an entirely self-contained air conditioning unit that will add to the attractiveness of any room in which it is placed. One unit of this type will usually adequately serve any one room of the home or office. Other styles and types are available, some one of which will surely meet your requirements.

Summer Sweethearts

BEGIN HERE TODAY Katharine Stryker, 20 and beautiful, allows her emotions to rule when she marries Michael Heathere, young riding instructor who comes into a title and fortune. Katharine's father is rich and her stepmother is snobbish. Michael, hurt in a traffic accident, loses his memory and Katharine, unaware of this, thinks he has regretted his bargain. She goes to New Mexico to forget and on a trip to the desert becomes lost. Michael, meantime, has recovered his memory and set out to find Katharine and explain. Back home Katharine's friend, Zoe Parker, learns of the marriage of Katharine and Michael when a servant shows her the certificate. Dr. John Kaye, in love with Katharine, unwittingly picks up the certificate when Zoe drops it. Go On With the Story XLIII A brassy sun wheeled across a molten sky. Here and there were clumps of mesquite and sagebrush. But there was not one single living thing in sight save the tall, slim girl in riding things who stumbled across that dreary desert. It seemed to Katharine she had been walking for hours. The wrist watch strapped to her slender wrist told her it was half-past 11. Any moment now, she told herself gallantly, she might see the car and the tent and the little group of civilized human beings she had left behind. Any moment . . . meantime she must keep on going. To stop meant madness. If she only had a single drink of water! Just half a glass . . . quarter of a glass to quench the thirst that already tortured her. She thought of the mountain stream in which she had carelessly bathed yesterday morning, thinking nothing of the largesse flowing over the golden rocks. She thought of mounds of sherbet, pale green, lemon yellow served at dinner parties. She thought of ice, tinkling in a tall glass. . . . Your head whirled, dwelling on these things. Better to think of something else. She sang songs, lightly, until her cracked throat rebelled. She was deadly tired now but still she stumbled on, he harsh sand drifting above the tops of her jodhpur boots. Once she tore at the top button of her pongee shirt and released it as if better to breathe. Frank Millard would find her; or Dirk. They both knew the country like a book. They would laugh at this adventure later on. Or would they? She remembered reading the story of a man and woman lost in the desert. They had been middle-aged lovers. The man had left his heart medicine at home so as not to appear handicapped to his bride; the woman had not worn her spectacles for the same reason. And so both had perished, one because of his seizure, the other because she could not see to lead them out of their trouble. Ah, but Katharine was young and strong! She shuddered, remembering the story. That could not happen to her. Death was something far away and unreal, not to be faced just now. She saw a far-away speck in the sky and whirled, her heart in her mouth, thinking it might be a plane and that she might signal it. But it was only a great bird—there were other birds in its wake—wheeling and circling. Buzzards! Horror—horror! It tore at her throat. The sense of it, closing in on her, made her shiver as with ague. Five minutes—had it only been five minutes since she glanced at her watch dial last? It seemed hours—years! A sagebrush root tore at her ankle. She stumbled. Fell. Rising again, she realized that she had hurt her ankle, cruelly. Not a sprain, perhaps, but nearly so. She stumbled on . . . There was no pity in the aching sky, no living thing in all the world to pity her. Only the burning and heat and silence, and far-off, the birds wheeling and swooping. There were no planes to be had nearer than Claymore, Hilda Hillard told Michael lifelessly. Fifty miles back, the way they had come. Even then it was not certain. It was an emergency landing field. "Will you come with me, so that I shan't lose the way?" Michael demanded. Evelyn Vincent stepped forward. Of course Hilda must go. It was their only chance. Michael winced at the words. Hilda climbed into the seat, and the motor of the shabby car spun and roared. Michael remembered little later of that mad ride. Fifty miles over desert roads. Claymore in the distance and—merciful God!—the wings of a ship visible over the little rise. The pilot was a lumpy little man with a mustache. Clem Wilbur from Santa Fe, he said, introduced himself. His own ship—he made a hobby of it—but if the lady or the gentleman wanted to go up, why, sure, he'd be glad to. Michael, briefly, explained. Clem Wilbur whistled. Yes, he knew the region. Come along—they'd get started pronto. Hilda got back into the car Michael had been driving. She said she would go back to Miss Vincent. The poor lady would be half-distracted, Hilda, as yet, wouldn't let herself think of Dirk—or Frank either. Of course, they were old hands at this desert business. And yet—you never knew! By the time she's got the motor running, Clem Wilbur had taxied to the end of the field. The little ship rose—surely. Hilda brushed her hands across her eyes. Of course the whole thing was a nightmare. . . . The ship made steady course southward. Michael's heart was hammering against his ribs. This man Wilbur was a clever pilot. He banked and swerved, dipping low, and Michael strained his eyes until they ached. Once he saw something white fluttering and his heart leaped, but coming closer—dangerously close—to the earth they saw it was only a woman's torn scarf, caught on a jagged root. The little ship circled and swooped. "She's here—some place," Michael said. "We can't help but find her." "Oh, sure, certainly," the fat man said politely. But he was not so sure they would be in time, if they did find her. He knew the desert. Michael Heathere had not prayed since he was a child. His mother had taught him to pray, but somewhere along the line he had forgotten. The words came back to him now. Child's words. Simple, imploring. "God, don't let anything happen to her." That was a prayer, if a crude one. There was a pain in his chest, as though a giant hand squeezed his heart. "Want to go on, brother?" That was the pilot speaking. The fat, amiable pilot who had a date that night back in his home town and wanted to keep it. "I'll make it worth your while to keep going." "Oh, that's okay, brother." There was silence, for a while, during which Michael's eyes raked the countryside spread below him. A barren, hellish waste, he told himself. A cruel land. Then he gasped. "Good God—I think—look there!" He handed over the field glasses. The pilot nodded. "Think so—yes." It was a huddled figure they saw ahead on the desert floor. Khaki-colored clothes. A bright scarf. Wilbur made a beautiful landing. Michael never knew afterward how he got out of the plane. He remembered stumbling as he ran, and he remembered hearing the soft, hurried breathing of the little man who followed him. "Got her, brother?" Michael nodded. He had Katharine's head in his arms. Now he was lifting her, carrying her gently as though she were infinitely fragile. She was unconscious—she was breathing! She was alive, thank God! Her poor, pretty lips were swollen. Her face was stained and streaked. There was a scratch across one cheek. They had her in the plane now, Michael holding her close. "Guess she had a bad time of it, huh?" The fat little man turned his ship back toward Claymore. There was a doctor there, he said. They put her to bed in the house of the woman whose husband was in charge of the flying field. A bare ranch house, but the linen was clean and the little bare room had a shade at the window. The doctor came, a shabby man in baggy clothes, and Michael waited in the agony as Mrs. Darragh and the physician disappeared within. "Guess I'll be pushing off, brother," Wilbur said. Michael said, "Wait a minute." With hands that shook a little, he fumbled for his wallet. The pilot shook his head, as though regretfully. "Sorry, brother, but I can't take it. 'Twouldn't be right. I've got a girl myself." "She's my wife," Michael said. "No fooling? Well, congratulations, brother." "You think she's going to be all right?" "Why, sure. She'll be might as rain. See if she isn't." Michael wrung the pilot's hand. Whatever happened, he could never thank this man. Some day, perhaps, he could try. (To Be Continued) promptly spent and not held over until later years. (e) In all cases projects must be of a character to give preference of employment to those on the relief rolls. (f) Projects will be allocated to localities or relief areas in relation to the number of workers on relief rolls in those areas. (g) Projects should be planned to move from the relief rolls to work on such projects or in private employment the maximum number of persons in the shortest time possible. Important part of the procedure will be the planning of projects with relation to the number, age, sex, and occupational characteristics of persons on relief within the locality where the proposed project will be executed. Projects should also be so planned that continuous work may be available for such persons. Projects may include work relief projects previously submitted to Texas Relief Commission, and upon work has not been started. A project may cover more than one particular job, but all jobs included should be under the jurisdiction of the same sponsor, all of the same type, and where sponsor's jurisdiction covers a large area, all in the same general location. In formulating projects, each governmental agency should confer with the local office of the Works Progress Administration (the county relief office until such Works Progress Administration offices are established) for information concerning the number and occupations of persons on relief rolls who are to be put to work. Governmental agencies should utilize the facilities of local and state planning boards in the formulation of projects, the statement of aid. The sponsoring governmental agency is expected to contribute equipment, materials, and services to the maximum amount possible. The priority of the project will depend in part on the amount of such contributions and the extent to which they increase the proportion of labor cost to the total federal funds required for the project. Sample of the form on which proposals will be prepared was in tors. Using the project proposal the hands of county administrators, an analysis can readily be made to determine the tentative eligibility of the project. It is necessary that the labor cost from federal funds represent a major portion of the total federal funds required; that the federal expenditure per man-month be kept low so that employment can be given to as many persons as possible; that workers from relief rolls constitute at least 90 per cent of the total number of persons working on the project. This should be tentatively determined by consulting county relief officials. If this analysis of the project shows that it fails to meet these conditions, sponsors should confer with the local Works Progress Administration officials, who may assist by suggesting change of design, specifications, or other items in the proposal. Alternations as a result of these suggestions should make the project suitable for more detailed presentation and save much time on a detailed labor study. As has been previously announced, the nation was divided into four regions for the establishment of the earnings of workers on these projects. Texas was included in the third region in which salaries will range from $21 per month for unskilled work in rural areas to $75 per month for professional and technical work in the larger urban areas. For the purpose of estimating labor costs of projects, labor will be classified under four types: First, unskilled work will include manual labor for building and construction laborers, janitors, caretakers and the like, and non-manual work for messengers, errand boys, etc. Second, intermediate work to be provided for such manual workers as truck drivers, blacksmiths and machinists' helpers, and non-manual work for typists, stenographers, calculating machine operators, etc. Third, skilled work will cover manual labor for carpenters, brick layers, machinists, electricians and other skilled workers, and non-manual work for laboratory technicians, secretaries, bookkeepers, etc. Fourth, professional and technical work will cover the field of professional, scientific and technical types of employment as well as work in recognized fields of art. Employees under this schedule of monthly earnings will work not more than eight hours a day or 40 hours a week. Those ineligible for employment in the program include: (1) persons under 16 years of age; (2) persons whose age or physical condition makes employment dangerous for them or endangers the health of others; (3) persons who are currently serving sentence in a penal or correctional institution.

Wednesday Meeting
 Royal Neighbor camp had a very interesting meeting and social at the hall Wednesday evening, with the deputy, Mrs. Carrie E. Henry, presiding.
 Mrs. Nell Whitton, state supervisor, was introduced and given a cordial welcome.
 Refreshments of punch and cake were served a number of members and guest of honor at the close of the program.
Three New Members Added
 To Julia Alexander Grove
 Mrs. Ruby Greer opened the meeting when a group of 10 members met at the I. O. O. F. hall for the regular Wednesday afternoon session of Julia Alexander Grove No. 1954, Woodmen Circle chapter.
 Included in the hour was the initiation of three new members, making a total of seven in the past two weeks.
 An interesting routine of work and study has been outlined for the summer course and even though the attendance has not been so good due to members vacationing, members attending are manifesting a great deal of interest.
 Penny cash prize, given by Mrs. Verna Ringold, was won by Mrs. Ann Webb.

More Suggestions—

 be unity, co-operation of all and plenty of hard work.
 My Idea
 I understand that 300 seats have been purchased. O. K. Now let the school board select a committee of three as a control board to devise ways and means of selling these seats, and empower them to select such salesmen as they deem necessary to put over the sales.
 My suggestion is, that this sales committee sell the seats at $1.50 each, giving with each seat sold three tickets valued at 50 cents each. Now before disclosing what the tickets represent, I want to step back to the school board. The board will select another committee of three. This committee will be known as the entertainment committee. Their duties will be to select from the array of talent in and around Ranger, acts, monologues, etc. Divide this talent into three groups and give three amateur stunt nights. The artists taking part must give their services gratis. These shows can be given one each week. Now back to the tickets. With each seat sold three tickets are given. These tickets are good for any or all of these shows. These tickets and stubs will be numbered numerically (stubs retained by seller) and each ticket will also be good for a drawing of two prizes. Two $25 orders for merchandise from the merchant that will honor the orders. The control committee to see the merchants and get them to agree to give the board a 5 per cent discount, the merchant, whoever it might be, receives $2.50 for the order, thus giving $2.50 for his part towards the debt. In giving tickets to the shows and also a chance at the two $25 orders you are giving the public something worth while for their money.
 Stubs will be placed in a container, shook up and a drawing held, and the first and second numbers drawn will be the winners of the two $25 orders.
 There must not be one red cent of expense attached to the above idea, except the cost of the tickets and that not to exceed $4.50. Otherwise you will lose.

Clean Out Kidney Poisons
 Wash Out Your 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes
 If kidneys don't pass 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters may become clogged with poisonous waste and the danger of acid poisoning is greatly increased. Bladder passages are difficult, which often smart and burn like scalding water and cause discomfort.
 This acid condition, brought about by poor kidney functions is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.
 Most people watch their bowels which contain only 27 feet of intestines but neglect the kidneys which contain 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters. If these tubes or filters become clogged with poisons, it may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't run any risk. Make sure your kidneys empty 3 pints a day.
 Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

Gulf Refining Is Starting Series of Ads On Gasolines
 The Gulf Refining company is today beginning a series of advertisements, to be carried in the Ranger Daily Times, featuring a new booklet put out by Gulf entitled "15 Ways to Save Gasoline Money."
 The advertisement today, which is the first of the series, calls attention of motorists that 750 automobile owners made a comparison of Gulf gasoline with their own brand for mileage, starting, pickup, power and all-around performance and seven out of 10 found Gulf better in one or more of the five ways, many finding it better in all five ways.
 The free booklet on saving gasoline money can be obtained at any Gulf service station, all of which display the famous "sign of the orange disk."
