ICKES CLAIMS COLLUSION IN STEEL PRICES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—PWA Administrator Harold Ickes said today he was sending President Roosevelt a statement of facts with prima facie evidence of collusion in steel bids on two government financed projects.

The material is for probable submission to the federal trade commission for investigation.

Ickes at the same time said he was increasing the 15 per cent differential allowed domestic steel over foreign produced steel to 25 per cent on all orders amounting to $100 or more.

Ickes' action came after American Steel company and organized labor protested against use of cheap German materials on a New York bridge and North Carolina ocean terminal.

Pep Squad and Band Need Cars For Trip Thursday

Members of the athletic committee announced today that the pep squad and band would make the trip to Brownwood Thursday afternoon, Nov. 21, to attend the Brownwood-Ranger football game, provided transportation could be arranged for the members of the two organizations.

Anyone who has a car and intends to attend the game has been urged to get in touch with high school officials as early as possible so that arrangements can be made for taking the two groups.

The pep squad and band will both be taken to the game under the sponsorship of the school and the sponsors of the two organizations, it was stated today, and as many parents as can do so were urged to attend and take several of the students.

SELASSIE IS PREPARED FOR HIS BIG PUSH

Weeks of comparative inaction in Ethiopia gave promise today of developing into real warfare.

Emperor Haile Selassie, who had announced he would lead his warriors in person when the time became ripe, left Addis Ababa by plane, presumably to take supreme command at the front. His movements henceforth will be secret.

Further indications the Ethiopians intend to start to fight was given when the correspondents at the capitol who have been held back by official orders, were permitted to leave for Dessye, Ethiopian war base on the northern front.

They set out by truck and automobile.

Ras Siyoum, one of the Ethiopian leaders, has occupied with 30,000 men the position west of the Italian right wing, apparently getting ready to fight. A battle of importance may occur there.

Lions Preparing For Ranger Game Next Thursday

BROWNWOOD, Texas, Nov. 19.—Determined to bring their most successful season in recent years to a close with a victory over the Ranger High Bulldogs, the Lions of Brownwood High resumed work in preparation for the Ranger game which will be played in Brownwood Thursday. Originally scheduled for Friday, Nov. 22, the game has been moved up to avoid a conflict with the Daniel Baker-Southwestern game.

Inactive since their 47-0 victory over the Fort Worth Vocational on Nov. 8, the Lions will be in the best of physical conditions for the Ranger tilt, their last of the season. The Lions have played seven games this season, winning five, losing only to Breckenridge and Abilene by scores of 18-6 and 13-7.

Coach Cagle is making every effort to schedule a game for his Lions on Thanksgiving.

Claude Teer Is Reappointed to Board of Control

AUSTIN, Nov. 19.—Claude Teer today was reappointed chairman of the state board of control for a six-year term.

Teer, formerly of Granger, served several years in the Texas house of representatives and during his last term was chairman of the appropriations committee. If he completes his new term he will have served longer on the board of control than anyone in history. In recent years the board's work has proven so valuable that the legislature insisted on giving it special "hard work" assignments. Chief of these was handling relief after the original state relief commission was disrupted.

IRREGULARITY IN HANDLING FUND IS TOLD

AUSTIN, Nov. 19.—Three witnesses testified as to alleged irregularities in handling special department of agriculture funds today in the House of representative impeachment hearing of J. E. McDonald, commissioner of the Department of Agriculture.

M. S. Frazee, employe in the weights and measures division told house members he had loaned money out of his own pocket for purchasing jacks and stallions for the state. The procedure did not seem "irregular" to Frazee, who said "he had to put out the cash" before dealers would transfer animals sold to the state. In one instance $1,015 was loaned to a Missouri horse trader to buy animals which Frazee himself was unable to buy for the state.

NO REVENUE FOR PENSIONS IS AVAILABLE

Three-Member Pension Commission and Director Are Provided in Bill.

AUSTIN, Nov. 19.—Gov. Jam Allred today announced the signing of the officers' salary bill at the old age pension measure, Texas' first major attempt at social security legislation.

The legislature adjourned last week, however, without passing also a revenue bill to provide funds for the pension payment. Controversy over various proposals for taxing industry to obtain pension funds blocked passage of the measure.

"The bill has its defects," Governor Allred explained. "And I am sure it is not exactly as any of us would prefer. I real feel, however, that it was lit short of an achievement to get a kind of an old age pension bill through."

He said he would call another special session in January to nance the pension payments.

The bill does not go into effect for 90 days. It provides for a tentative commission of three members and a director to administer the act.

Pensions will start not later than July 1, 1936 to 165,000 needy Texans past 65 years of age.

C. of C. Directors Vote to Move to A New Location

At a meeting of the board of directors of the chamber of commerce, held in the office of the secretary Monday night, it was voted to move to the location formerly occupied by the school tax assessor on Main street. The move is to be made by Dec. 1, it was decided by the directors.

J. J. Kelly, one of the two new directors selected by the city commission, was appointed as chairman from the chamber of commerce to serve on the local Will Rogers memorial fund committee, representing the chamber of commerce.

An audit of the seven month period of the organization was submitted by O. G. Lanier and was accepted by the directors.

At the suggestion of J. E. Matthews it was decided that the directors cooperate in trying to get signs within the city limits repainted so they would not present such a run-down appearance and would add to the attractiveness of the approaches to the city, since many of them were dilapidated and badly in need of paint. The sign "Welcome to Ranger" on the derrick at the foot of Main street was pointed out as one example.

It was also decided that the directors would try to influence the merchants to use merchandise to decorate vacant store windows and to take down old show advertisements that have cluttered up the windows for some time. The plan would not only improve the appearance of the town, but would be an aid to the merchants in displaying their wares, it was pointed out.

Those present at the meeting were S. P. Boon, F. D. Hicks, C. E. May, T. J. Anderson, A. J. Rath, R. V. Galloway, J. J. Kelly, C. D. Hartnett and J. E. Meroney.

Two Good Bouts Seen On Monday

Two of the best wrestling bouts ever seen in Ranger were staged at the Elks arena Monday night before a larger crowd than has attended the affairs at any previous show this year.

In the first match Albert Szasz, the "Hungarian Flash," and Blundy Chrane, the "Pride of Abilene" wrestled 45-minutes to a draw in one of the fastest bouts seen locally. By popular demand the Elks management is trying to get a return engagement between these two matmen.

In the main event Eddie O'Shea, "The Tough Irishman" downed Ace Abbott, ex-Texas amateur champion, in the best two out of three falls in another thriller that kept the fans on the edges of their seats throughout the bout.

Under the new arrangement better bouts are being furnished for the fans and the increased attendance Monday night indicated that they appreciated the better shows.

Remodeling of the brick building will employ 12 members of the building trades, in addition to six laborers. To be employed on the job are one mortar mixer, five carpenters, two painters, one plasterer, one plumber, one bricklayer and one electrician.

SENATOR NELSON PROPOSES UNICAMERAL LEGISLATURE FOR TEXAS PLAN TO RESTRICT MEMBERSHIP, MEETING IN CONTINUOUS TERM

"A two-headed snake was going to a creek to get a drink of water. Being in a hurry, it was not very observant of the dangerous path ahead and soon found itself caught by a twig, one of its heads on one side and one on the other. It was unable to get loose from its mooring and after about thirty days, it expired."

"That," Senator G. H. Nelson said, "is a fair analogy of what happens to laws the people want passed."

To make the state government more democratic, to simplify its workings so that the will of the people can be carried out with the least possible expenditure of funds Senator Nelson believes that Texas should replace the present Legislature with a unicameral body.

Recently he offered a resolution in the Senate asking Representatives to go on record favoring, at the regular session of the Legislature in 1937, the submission of a constitutional amendment to the people on the question of the adoption of a unicameral legislature. The resolution was sent to the State Affairs Committee.

Senator Nelson, who attended the University of Texas School of Law, 1921-23, has been in the Senate only a short time. He was elected to finish the term of the late Senator A. P. Duggan.

The proposal suggests a legislature of 42 members, two from each congressional district, to be elected for four-year terms. Each member would be elected from each district every two years. Each would receive an annual salary of $5,000 and would be precluded from taking or receiving any compensation from any individual, firm or corporation during the tenure of office.

There would be a continuous legislative session. The chamber would recess or adjourn from time to time and would be subject to call by 50 per cent of the membership. Should a district feel that its wishes were not being followed, it could recall its representative. The governor's power of veto would not be abridged.

It is Senator Nelson's belief that once the people of Texas are made to realize how inefficient the present system is, they will readily adopt the unicameral legislature.

The criticism by the public of the legislature is growing year by year. There are loud grumblings about costs of legislation, and about the type of legislation. These objections are valid, and once the people are shown how they can get what they want, they will not hesitate to give the order.

The senator has gathered a great amount of data on the subject. He has also collected figures which show that the cost of operation of each legislature per man, for each of the 181 solons, is approximately $6,129.

For the forty-second legislature, which he said was a fair example, salaries to members totaled $402,842.34; mileage amounted to $47,123.27; stenographic help, $241,378.06; postage, $22,435.52; telephone and telegraph, $33,861.71. Numerous other items make the total amount.

First, the one house legislature will save thousands of dollars to the state, Nelson said.

It conforms with modern ideas of business direction. It will not change our representative form of government because, like the present senator and representatives, the members of the one house would be chosen from identical districts by the same people. Each of the two would be paid the same salary.

The one house, instead of brooding corruption, will eliminate corruption. It will do away with the free conference committee, which in fact a separate house. Senator Nelson, on this point, explained that conference committees often inserted provisions in important bills which do not conform with the wishes of a majority of the legislators or of the public. When late in the session something like that is done, members of the separate houses have the alternate of refusing to adopt the report of the conference committee, in which case an additional expense is outlined because a special session generally has to be called, or of adopting the report, in which case they are being made to vote against.

A Hermit Comes Back to Topsy-Turvy Life

An old prospector came down from the mountains in Alaska the other day after having spent 35 unbroken years away up back of beyond. He got sick, at last, and someone took him to Fairbanks for treatment; and a brief news dispatch says that the old fellow was amazed and bewildered by the changes that had taken place during his long exile.

It occurs to us that if the changes in Fairbanks could startle this bearded hermit, a trip down into the states would absolutely paralyze him.

Never mind about the inventions and the gadgets that he would see for the first time—the autos and airplanes, the skyscrapers and radios, the concrete roads and moving pictures. Those would be the obvious, surface shocks. His real trouble would come when he began to find out how people are thinking and what they are trying to do.

Here was a man who went into seclusion just four years after Bryan's great free silver campaign of 1896. He probably supposed, when he went up there, that free silver was as dead as George Washington's horse; but he would find it livelier than even Bryan himself ever dreamed, being looked upon kindly in the national capital itself.

When this prospector went north, the United States was busy conquering the Filipinos; today he would find it equally busy setting the Filipinos free. If he remembered the growing murmur against the "trusts," back in 1900, he would see today's government feeling regretful because the supreme court wouldn't let it band the big combinations of industry together in a system designed to restrict output and maintain prices.

Remembering the anti-railroad agitation of the 1900s, he would see the government coming to the rescue of the railroads with millions upon millions of dollars. And then, of course, there would be the AAA for him to think about.

Probably it would all seem pretty confusing. If he looked abroad it would be even worse.

England, which he last saw descending on the South African Boers, preparing to wage war to protect the independence of an African nation... Russia under a despotism as rigid as ever, but turned upside down so that a different set of people is in Siberia... Germany minus its kaiser, with a former house painter ruling more autocratically than the kaiser ever dreamed of ruling... wouldn't that be enough to gewilder the most intelligent of hermits?

Indeed, the old gentleman could hardly be blamed for taking one long look at the nation and the world which he last saw 35 years ago, and then turning around and heading back for his Alaskan diggings at top speed. And he would probably be accompanied by the shouts of despairing stay-at-homes—

"Hey, buddy, is there room for any more of us up there?"

Security Body Begins to Protect Investor

If your enthusiasm got the better of your judgment back in 1929 and led you to buy copiously of some stock which is selling today at a tenth of its 1929 price, you might be interested in the case of Michael J. Meehan stock market speculator.

The Securities and Exchange Commission has ordered Meehan to answer charges that he had been manipulating an aircraft stock on the New York Curb Exchange in violation of the securities exchange act.

The order calls on him to show cause why he should not be expelled from the stock exchanges of which he is a member. Members of the SEC stated that they believe he has been entering "matching orders" in aircraft shares since last April, creating "actual and apparent active trading" for the purpose of boosting the security's price and inducing its purchase by others.

Whether the present charges are substantiated remains to be seen. The important thing is that the SEC is at last moving against traders who seek to manipulate the market—and, in that way, is offering a real protection for investors.

Such manipulation was a common practice back in the 1929 boom. When a new stock was offered to the public, a canny operator would be retained to make the stock look good. Frequently his activities would take the form of promoting a series of sales from his right-hand pocket to his left-hand pocket, so to speak.

The volume of trading in the stock would rise, the price would begin to go upward, and the innocent outsider, beholding only that which appeared on the surface, would edge himself up to the conclusion that here was an excellent buy.

Then the new issue would be marketed, and the operator's careful work would keep the market active and the price firm until the last of it had been disposed of. After which the operator's interest would cease—and if, as not infrequently happened, the price had been artificially maintained above the level warranted by the stock's intrinsic merits, the eager investors would presently find themselves holding a large and empty bag.

If the public has real assurance that stock prices really reflect actual values, instead of being produced by the clever work of insiders who are trying to sell something, the whole securities market will be in better shape.

THE Michigan system may still be a punt, a pass, and a prayer.

Cedric Sweet does the punting. Capt. Bill Renner the passing, and this fall the answer to the prayer is seven sophomores.

The Western Conference again is suffering from the Michigan jitters, and the septet of peacocks is largely responsible. They are Johnny Smithers, Stark Ritchie, and Bill Barclay, backs; Arthur Valpey, end; Mel Kramer and Earle Luby, tackles; and Sol Sobsey, guard.

Injuries have prevented Michigan from using nine first year men a good share of the time, something almost unprecedented in the Big Ten.

Bob Cooper, who was considered the most formidable of the novitiate backs, is not likely to get into a battle this season. Joe Rinaldi, who appeared to be the starting center, thus far has not been in condition to participate.

The seven sophomores already have helped to restore much of the prestige Michigan lost in 1934. The presence of nine so able young men gives followers of the Maize and Blue every reason to suspect that the Ann Arbor entry has launched another glorious gridiron reign.

Michigan Regains Stride After Dismal Start

MICHIGAN STATE, Chicago, Illinois, Wisconsin, Ohio State, Minnesota, and Northwestern took keen delight in giving Michigan, mightiest of Western Conference powers down through the years, the boot last season.

And when Michigan State repeated the dose in the opener this autumn, the great majority of Wolverine rooters were reconciled to the belief that Harry Kipke would require at least another year to rebuild.

J. Has neither husband or wife able to secure adequate support.

One of the provisions in the old age pension is that the petitioner may establish his age by a birth certificate. There is in the Bureau of Vital Statistics a birth certificate of a woman born in Texas in 1859. It stood up through the courts of Denmark. The grandchildren of that woman participated in the division of her grandfather's estate.

Those who expect to secure old age pensions should file their birth certificates now, but in handling those records, there are several things that you must remember:

- 1. Neither the state nor the city will pay the fee for these records.
2. The expense must be borne by those wishing to file the certificates.
3. There must be two affidavits attached to each certificate.
4. The certificate must be written as a statement of the facts as they existed at the time of the event. If the physician is dead, the record may be signed by a relative or any person who was acquainted with the facts at the time the event occurred.
5. The person who signs the record must execute the first affidavit. (A)
6. Some person not related by blood or marriage but who is acquainted with the facts must execute the second affidavit. (B)

Full instructions and printed forms with affidavits attached will be furnished by your local registrar. Records on typewritten forms will not be accepted.

When the record is filed, a certified or photostatic copy may be secured and attached to the petition for an old age pension as establishing the age of the petitioner.

For instructions see Mrs. John Matthews, 212 North Walnut street, Eastland, Texas.

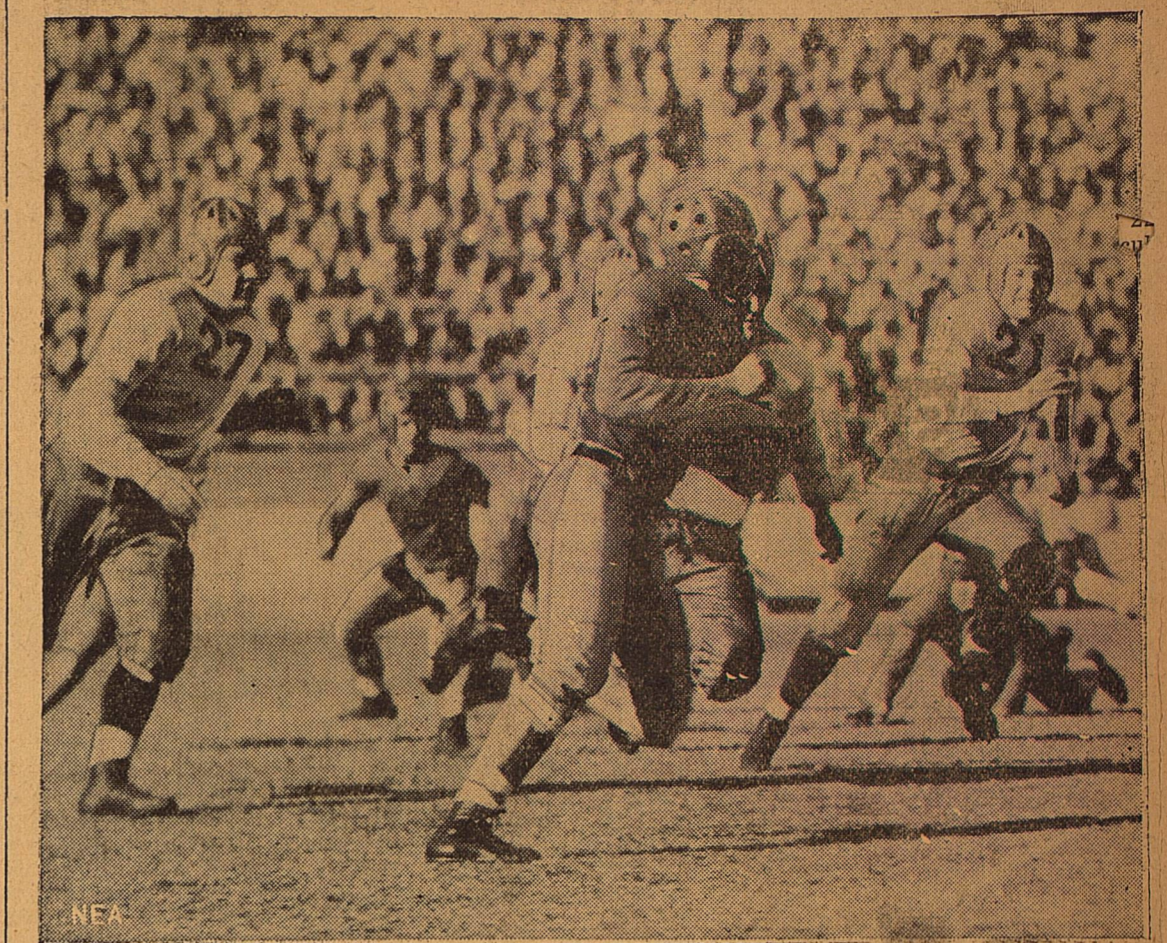

Abilene's Moser May Be Out For Eastland Game

ABILENE, Nov. 19.—Regular schedule of practice for the Abilene Eagles was resumed yesterday, after a layoff that covered most of last week following the defeat by Breckenridge's Buckaroos. The club was given complete rest Tuesday and Wednesday, and had only short workouts Thursday and Friday.

Within the next ten days Dewey Mayhew's squad will play two games closing its schedule. Friday the Eagles will be at Eastland, and Thanksgiving day they will come home to battle the Cisco Loboes. They probably will need a victory in both games to hold undisputed claim to second place in the final standings of the Oil Belt.

All members of the team expect Odell Herman, end, who played with a fever at Breckenridge, and Leonard Joeris, tackle, are well. They are still suffering with colds. Mayhew said that if Ray Moser

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS—By Blosser

The GOLDEN FEATHER

by Robert Bruce © 1935 NEA Service, Inc.

Jean Dunn delays her answer when Bobby Wallace asks her to marry him. At the Golden Feather night club she meets Sandy Harkins whose business connection is vague. Sandy introduces Bobby and Jean to a Mr. and Mrs. Lewis. Bobby sells some bonds for Lewis, who buys a car.

Larry Glenn, federal agent, is trailing Wingy Lewis, bank robber. He learns about the bond transaction and questions Bobby. Larry believes the car Lewis bought is armored. Bobby undertakes to find out.

Jean agrees to a secret engagement with Sandy. The bank of which her father is president is robbed, and Larry starts a search for the robbers.

Jean goes to see Sandy who has been injured. He and the Lewises are staying at a farmhouse. She soon finds herself a prisoner. The whole party leaves the farm.

Meanwhile Larry has discovered Jean is with the robbers. He and his men reach the house where the gang is. From an upstairs window Jean sees Larry. He calls out and is answered by gunfire. Jean faints.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

When Jean Dunn fainted, the last sounds she heard were the ear-splitting noises of a large-scale and sustained gun battle. When she emerged from her stupor, three or four minutes later, the sounds were still in her ears.

She lay on the floor of the bedroom, blinking at the darkness, as her senses returned. Someone had come into her room and was kneeling there, tense and motionless, for a moment; then his trigger finger moved, and the sharp rattle of his weapon drowned out all the other noises.

Acid powder smoke was on her lips and in her eyes, as she lay there dully watching. The night had gone insane; it seemed as if she would always be in just this position, groveling on the floor while a nerve-destroying racket filled the air and shadowy figures moved about in the half-light on errands of violence and destruction. The man had stopped firing, and dodged down below the window sill, his bulky weapon clutched in his hands, its muzzle touching her knee. The man blinked and saw her recumbent figure in the dusk. "Hey!" he said hoarsely. "Who is it?"

Jean made no answer, and the man evidently took it for granted that she had been killed. He wasted no time on vain regrets, but slowly raised himself to peer out of the window. After a long look, he got to his knees again and raised his weapon to shoot; but before he could press the trigger he unexpectedly spun half around, teetered drunkenly on his knees, and then collapsed on his face. The machine gun lay beneath him; Jean found herself stupidly wondering if it wasn't an awfully uncomfortable thing to lie on—until, suddenly, she realized that the man was dead.

With this realization the lethargy that had held her seemed to fall away. Outside, somewhere, was Larry Glenn—and Larry represented safety, rescue, a return to the old life which, half an hour ago seemed forever out of her reach. No longer could she lie here in a half-stupor, listening to the clamor all about her in a drugged detachment. The fight that was going on was her fight. If the people in the house won, then she lost—everything that made life worth living.

She raised herself to her hands and knees; conquering her revulsion, she crawled to where the dead gunman lay. She wanted a weapon and she meant to have one. . . .

Tugging at his shoulders, she rolled him over. The sub-machine gun lay there, vicious-looking—and, she realized, altogether too complicated to do her any good even if she did take possession of it. Did this man carry a revolver? Jean bent closer. His coat had fallen back, and a shoulder holster was visible under his left armpit. She reached in, pulled out a revolver, and looked at it curiously.

At last, now, she was armed . . . and if worst came to worst, and Larry's fight failed—

There was a momentary lull in the firing; and in the lull Jean heard hurried footsteps coming along the hall. A voice called, "You, Spike, in there—what's the matter?"

She moved before she had time to think—one quick lunge that hid her in the shadows in the corner of the room. The door swung open and someone came in and went to where the dead man lay. Jean could see him squatting down, could hear him mutter something; then she saw him pick up the machine gun and move cautiously toward the window. As he came into the moonlight, she saw his face. It was Red Jackson.

Jean never quite knew, afterward, how she managed to do what she did then. She could only remember raising the heavy revolver, gripping it with both hands, pointing it at the man at the window, shutting her eyes tightly, and squeezing the trigger. Then, for the second time that night, she collapsed in a faint.

When she woke the noise had ceased. She was lying on a bed, the lights were on, and someone was bathing her face with a cold cloth. She stirred, blinked a couple of times, and then looked up.

Larry Glenn bent over her, a damp handkerchief in his hand. On the bed beside her he had put an enormous, old-fashioned china washbowl from the stand in the corner; for some reason this was the first thing that caught Jean's attention, and it seemed so utterly ridiculous that she began to laugh.

"Larry, where ever did you get that and what's it for?" she said. He stopped mopping her brow—he was doing it rather clumsily—and begged her to tell him that she was all right.

"Of course I am," she said, "but what on earth are you doing with that bowl?"

He looked at the bowl, straightened, then tossed the damp handkerchief on the bed, and laughed. "Well, if you aren't a cool one," he said, gripping her hand. "Here you come through something just one size smaller than the battle of Gettysburg, and you want to know what I'm doing with that washbowl. Listen, Jean, I had to have some water and that was the only container I could find and—"

"All right." She swung her feet down and moved to a sitting position, helped by his arm. She looked up at him, and realization came to her; she was safe, free, rescued!

Then she remembered something else, and looked cautiously toward the window. There was a stain on the carpet there, but nothing else.

"We carried 'em out," said Larry briefly.

"Were they—were they—" she began.

"One was," he said. "Jackson wasn't. He was lying there unconscious. A bullet had just creased the top of his skull—just enough to put him out cold. YOUR bullet, I think."

He looked at her quizzically. She rubbed her forehead.

"I'm glad I didn't—kill him," she said.

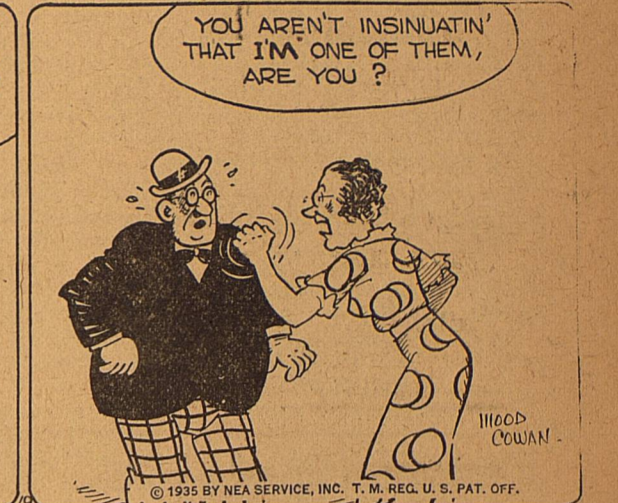

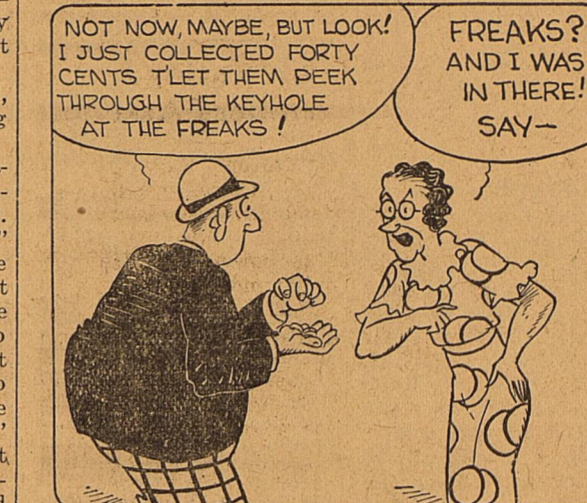

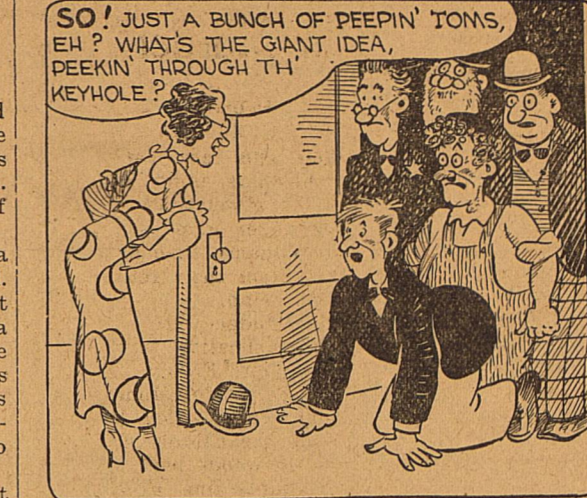

It was an hour before they were ready to leave. A patrol wagon was backed up against the carriage house to receive the bodies of two gangsters who had been killed in the fighting. Four others, including Red Jackson and Sandy Harkins, who had been wounded, were being loaded into another patrol wagon for removal to the prison ward of the Portsmouth hospital—three men, and white-faced Evelyn Brady—had been manacled and put in one of the sheriff's cars for removal to the jail.

Of the government's force, four men had been wounded. They had already been taken to the hospital, and the report had come back that all of them would recover. Under Larry's direction, the officers who were not busy looking after the prisoners had been searching the house from top to bottom, collecting a small arsenal of firearms and a cache of bonds and currency worth many thousands of dollars.

"It's a cleanup," Larry jubilantly told Mike Magan. "We got 'em all. Jackson'll keep, now, until he's put on trial for murder. We have plenty of evidence to get the electric chair for him and for

I never eats onions, yet he ordered a dish "soubise." Can you imagine his chagrin? For any time you see "soubise" you may know there'll be onion flavor. Just as "Florentine" means spinach. An omelet Florentine is an ordinary French omelet on a bed of spinach.
It's important to know some of the more commonly-used fancy names of dishes. They come about in various ways. Sometimes a noted chef wants to honor a locality, a hotel, a club or a famous person and names a dish accordingly. During the last three or four centuries many dishes have been named in these ways and have become universally known. Peach Melba was christened in honor of the great singer and consists of sponge cake, ice cream, peach and raspberry puree.
May Indicate Style of Serving
Many names attached to dishes are French and indicate method of preparation or seasoning.
Thus a roast au jus is served in its own unthickened juices.
An beurre noir means with black butter.
Bearnaise sauce is a rich sauce thickened with egg yolks and characterized by the flavor of shallot and tarragon.
Blanquette is white meat in a cream sauce that has been thickened with eggs.
Here are other terms and their meanings:
Bœuf à la jardinière—braised beef with vegetables.
Champignons—mushrooms.
Chateaubriand—center cut of fillet of beef.
Creole—with tomatoes.

GOOD NEWS... Long Distance Night Rates Now Begin at 7 P.M.

It's true. You no longer have to wait until 8:30 p. m. to enjoy lowest long distance night rates. The bargain rates now begin at 7 o'clock. It's much more convenient...you seldom leave home before that time...and the person you call is more likely to be at home, too.
After 7, the rate for most station-to-station calls is about 40 per cent less than during the day. (A "station-to-station" call is a call on which you are willing to talk with anyone who may answer at the called number.) You can talk 100 miles for 35 cents the "station-to-station" way after 7 p. m.
Call an out-of-town friend or relative tonight. You will enjoy the experience. Long distance talking today is almost as simple as calling a neighbor across the street. Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.
These reductions do not apply to "person-to-person" calls, which cost the same at all hours.

Perpetual Puzzles!
These puzzles we have married are disturbingly feminine. They sit across the table from us and smile riddles. They treat us like spoiled children, and yet like kings. They ferret out our secret poker games—and collect! They devastate our reasoned actions by a caprice... and we love it.
How do these wives of ours manage to keep so young, so attractive, so full of life? Well for one thing, they have learned that the advertising pages are their willing servants. Here they read of an appliance that turns mornings of drudgery into hours of leisure. There is a cosmetic blended to fit the skin like a glove. Or a new recipe to tempt your appetite.
Right now, your wife is busy with fall buying. And she lets the advertisements shoulder part of the task. They bring her good news about fall gowns and gloves, blankets, perhaps a fire screen, new slippers for you, a sweater for Junior... She reads the advertisements carefully and they save her time, trouble, worry—and money.
