Supreme Court Asked for Rule on Process Tax

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE

With BILL MAYES

We have a problem on our hands for this winter, about which we have already begun to worry, to some extent.

It is just this: Ranger High School now has a basketball court and will have some basketball games this year and, naturally we should get stories on them.

But being more or less honest we must admit that we know absolutely nothing about the game, never having witnessed a basketball contest, and must find out what it is all about some time.

We have a general idea that a bunch of boys, preferably who can play basketball, get together on a court inside some large building and toss a big ball around until one is inspired and throws it through a basket which has been suspended at one end of the court, or maybe stuck up on top of a pole with a wooden platform stuck up vertically behind it like a sign board.

But at that point our general knowledge, if any, of the game, ends. We have no idea how many points the team gets every time the ball is thrown through one of those affairs, or whether they are called home runs, touchdowns, goals, points, grand slams, or what, nor do we know if a team can just shoot at any old basket it happens to take a fancy to or if it has just one basket it must use.

We seem to remember teams being called quintets, so presume that there are five members on a team and we have seen pictures from time to time of more or less scantily clad youths jumping up to see which one can reach a basketball that is just out of the reach of one or both. And we don't know why they do that unless it is so they can get their pictures in the paper.

And while we are confessing our ignorance on the subject we might as well involve several others, because Wednesday morning as we were guzzling the morning cup of coffee the subject was brought up. In our naive innocence we asked how long a basketball game lasted. Al Larson didn't know. Pat Downing, who was sitting nearby, was

Lone Star to Have Health Program On Friday Night

In keeping with the company's health publicity campaign against the common cold and other seasonal diseases, Will C. Grant, advertising director of the Lone Star Gas System will address a large number of employees, together with their families and friends tomorrow evening at 7:15 p. m. at the Cooper School auditorium in Ranger.

"The common cold is costing the American public hundreds of millions of dollars yearly and doctors have found that one of the most fertile breeding grounds for this germ is the stuffy, overheated, poorly ventilated room in the average home," Mr. Grant said. For this reason the Lone Star Gas System is sponsoring an educational campaign in the interests of better health and better and more scientific heating of the home.

In addition to Mr. Grant's address, there will be a varied program of unusual interest not only to the employees, but particularly to their families and friends. An address by Prof. W. T. Walton, superintendent of the Ranger Public Schools, on "International Safety" is expected to prove a very interesting and instructive feature of the program.

L. H. Taylor, field safety director of the Lone Star Gas Company will speak on "Spirit of Thanksgiving." "Knothole Safety" will be handled by Spec Henry in a dark horse feature.

The Lone Star Band under the direction of Prof. W. G. Collum will be presented at the beginning of the program in a number of selections that have been arranged for the occasion.

The nature and variety contained in programs of this nature make it such that only occasionally is it possible for the company to sponsor them in this community, according to B. H. Peacock, program chairman. Therefore, those in the community who are in any manner interested in the health and safety campaign which the company is sponsoring, both in the interest of its employees and the public at large, are cordially invited to be in attendance tomorrow evening and enjoy the splendid program that is to be offered.

Checks Get Dusty Awaiting Call of Cotton Producers

Three hundred and twenty-five Eastland county farmers are either prosperous or are having difficulty in coming to Eastland for checks totaling $3,000.

That was the conclusion Thursday of A. E. Arthur, assistant in cotton adjustment, who has notified the group and made trips in several points of the country to distribute the checks.

The checks represent the second rental payment on this year's cotton contracts. Checks received recently for 1,240 producers approximated $12,000.

Remainder of the checks await request from the producers.

RESERVE OF FEDERAL BANKS IS MOUNTING

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Members of the federal advisory council discussed today with the federal reserve board the question of mounting bank reserves which may be preparing the way for violent credit inflation.

It was not learned whether any recommendations to cope with the situation were made by the council, which comprises representatives from federal reserve districts.

With excess bank reserves of about $3,000,000,000 it was seen the base had been laid for credit inflation of $30,000,000,000 by this factor alone.

This was believed the principal problem now facing reserve board governors and it was understood virtually all the council's time was devoted to the excess reserve situation.

ALL IS QUIET ON ETHIOPIAN FRONT TODAY

By United Press

The military situation in Ethiopia remained quiet today but the "war" on the European front gathered speed.

The League of Nations moved officially to tighten the throttling of Italy by depriving her of oil, coal, iron and steel to paralyze her war industries.

Augusto de Basconcellos of Portugal, chairman of the League's "general staff" committee of 18 key nations, convoked the committee for a meeting Nov. 28 to decide on extension of the embargo.

The feeling in League circles rightly or wrongly was the sympathetic attitude of the United States and other neutrals promised chances of making the embargo effective.

The committee of 10 experts on means of applying sanctions will meet Nov. 27 to prepare for the meeting of the larger committee.

Mussolini showed his determination to fight it out today when he decided to release from military duty 100,000 of the men he has mobilized in Italy. They will be employed to bolster agriculture and industry in an effort to offset the effect of sanctions. In event of trouble they can be recalled in 24 hours.

Another development was the London News-Chronicle's statement Italy is tying up British funds in that country and suspending payment. It seems the logical move on Mussolini's part in retaliation for Britain's leadership in sanctions, but probably will enrage Britain.

The Italian armies in Ethiopia are more or less marking time. Selassie visited his troops in the eastern central region and urged them to resist the invaders to the last man.

PAY FIRST AND THEN LITIGATE IS OBJECTIVE

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The administration asked the Supreme Court today to compel processors of farm products contesting processing taxes, to "pay first and litigate later."

A brief filed in the rice millers test case made the request at the same time that attorneys for farmers and processing interests sought to intervene in tests.

The rice brief was filed at noon, the deadline set by the court.

The tribunal had indicated it would decide Monday if processors may sue to restrain collection of processing taxes. The ruling may affect more than 1,000 suits seeking to enjoin processing tax collections and $150,000,000 overdue taxes.

Just before the government brief was received John W. Davis, liberty league lawyer and 1924 democratic presidential candidate and Nathan Miller, former republican governor of New York, sought to intervene as "friends of the court" for three nationally known processors in the processing act test case, scheduled for argument Dec. 9.

They contended the AAA is an unconstitutional invasion of state rights.

Package Murder Instigator Being Sought In Chicago

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 21.—Police today sought a man in Chicago for questioning in the distribution of "packaged death"—two-pound sacks of poisoned baking soda—which cost three lives and made three others ill.

Kaeding formerly was employed by the Manno Salvage Company, where damaged packages of a nationally advertised brand of bicarbonate of soda were broken open and their contents dumped into barrels and sold to a department store at a cut price sale.

Law's Ideals Mocked By Bad Examples

A conscientious man can make a fine living in the practice of law, but it can't be said that some of the overtones of his profession won't give him a headache now and then. Fine phrases about the lawyer's sacred duty to the public may ring through the corridors of law schools and the convention halls of bar associations, but down in the cockpit in front of the judge's bench it takes a pretty good man to decide just when, where, and how all these fine words apply. Some 190 young attorneys were admitted to the bar in New York the other day, and Justice Francis Martin took advantage of the occasion to warn them of their duties and responsibilities. "The type of lawyer who uses his ability to enable the dangerous criminal to escape the law or to take advantage of an opponent is an enemy of the legal profession and of his government," said the justice. "Your admission to the bar is not a license to exploit the public. "You start at a time of unrest and uncertainty and Communist radicalism, when it is more necessary than ever to support the Constitution."

Now it just happened that a day or so before this elevating homily was delivered, the Department of Justice revealed that lawyers for some of our leading gangsters are attacking the federal kidnaping and firearms registration acts on the ground that they are unconstitutional.

A precious group of distinguished citizens is represented in this action, including the kidnapers of June Robles and Charles Urschel. The best-known of the bunch is Harvey Bailey.

Their lawyers will presently tell the supreme court that the new federal laws under which these snatch artists were put away are unconstitutional; and the odd part about it is that their plea will be very like the one successfully raised against the NRA.

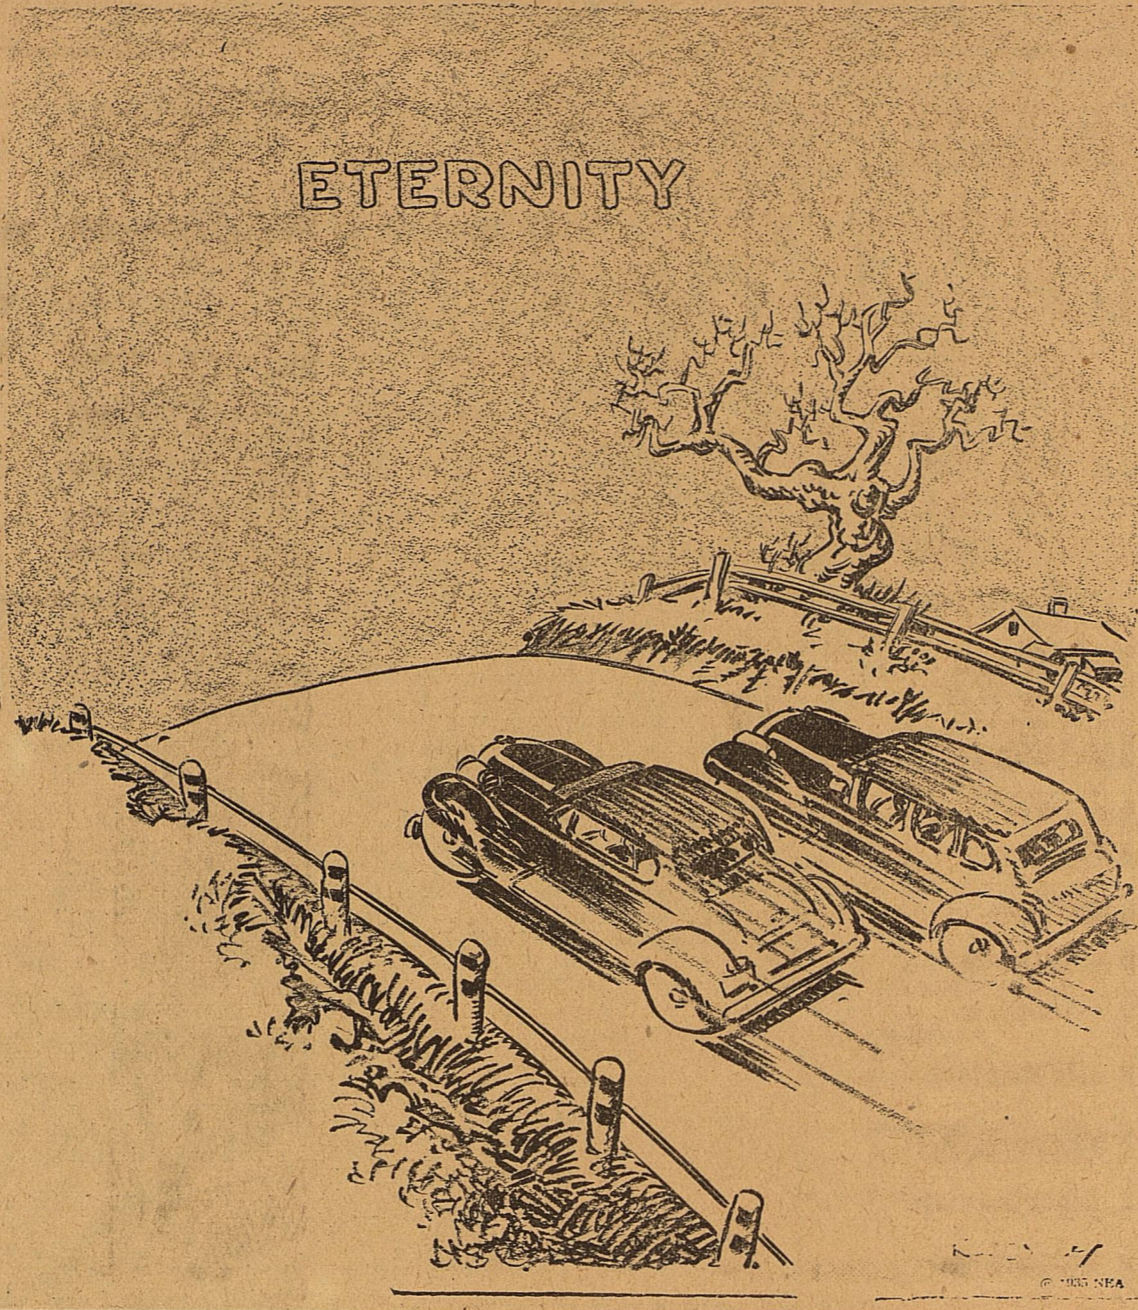

This federal kidnaping statute is based upon the power of the government to regulate interstate commerce—as was the NRA. The court held last summer that the NRA constituted an undue extension of this power. The lawyers for Bailey and his cohorts say the same thing about the kidnaping law.

And somehow this assault on the kidnaping law has an odd sound when placed beside the remarks of Justice Martin.

Here we have a law under which the Department of Justice has solved 55 kidnapings, broken up some of the worst gangs in the country, sent 22 criminals to prison, and landed 25 more in jail to await trial.

Would the justice tell his fledgling lawyers that an assault on this law comes under the heading of "enabling dangerous criminals to escape the law" or of "supporting the Constitution at a time of unrest and uncertainty"?

OLD Mother Nature visited an unusual number of varied cataclysms on her children during the past year, causing distress all over the nation to many thousands of men, women and children. Her repertoire of disastrous occurrences included drought and dust storms in the midwest; explosions, fires, floods, epidemics of disease, shipwrecks, tornadoes and hurricanes in many sections. As a result the American Red Cross reports that this year the organization gave relief in the greatest number of catastrophes in any one single year in its history. Relief was carried to victims of 128 disasters, which occurred in 37 of the 48 states and Alaska. Food, housing, clothing and medical aid were given to 110,000 persons in 306 counties—or in almost one-tenth of the territory of the nation. Two disasters which called into the field every available worker of the relief forces of the Red Cross were the floods in New York state in August, and the Florida hurricane in September, both of which claimed a heavy toll of life, and caused great property damage. In New York state the Red Cross had more than 5,000 families listed for rehabilitation aid, after the storm wreckage was cleared away. In Florida the Red Cross prepared to aid a thousand families, and also to act in problems of the dependents of more than 300 world war veterans in government road construction camps in the keys, who lost their lives or were listed among the missing in the hurricane. The work of mercy for these many sufferers was directed personally by Admiral Cary T. Grayson, new chairman of the Red Cross. Funds are provided for this type of work by memberships in the Red Cross and by special relief funds raised in a restricted area. Memberships in the Red Cross are sought each year at the annual roll call period, and support both the local chapter work and the national disaster, public health nursing, war veteran and other work of the society.

Inventor Says a New Process Makes Wood Like Iron

KENOSHA, Wis.—Shrunk wood, so tough an iron mallet will not dent it, may soon appear on the market, according to Alfred G. Olsen, Elkhorn woodworker.

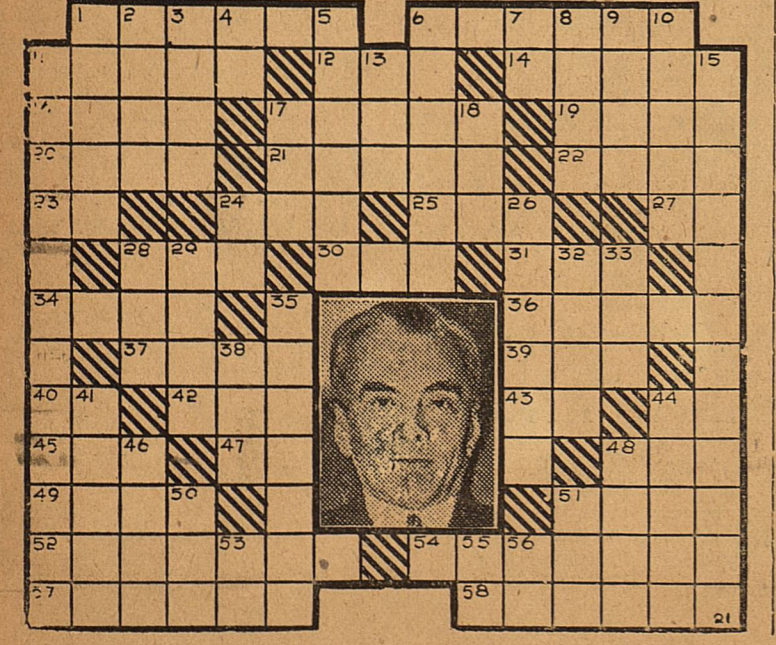

Olsen has patented a process which he says will make soft pine as strong as iron, as the result of 17 years' experimenting. Tests of wood treated by Olsen revealed it capable of withstanding pressure up to 25,000 pounds, while ordinary wood smashed at 750 to 1,000 pounds. While not revealing his process, Olsen explained that the wood is shrunk in chemical solutions, eliminating the lignin or pores. When shrunk, 100 per cent wood has withstood the equivalent of 10 years' wearing without showing it, he reported, predicting its invasion into fields exclusively held by metals.

MONTGOMERY WARD'S LARGEST TOYLAND WILL OPEN IN RANGER ON SATURDAY, NOV. 23, WITH LARGEST VARIETY IN THE HISTORY OF STORE

The largest toy department the local Montgomery Ward store has ever had on display is being made ready for the opening of Toyland, which will be staged on Saturday, Nov. 23, one week earlier than Toyland has ever been opened at the Montgomery Ward stores.

LET KIDNEYS FLUSH OUT 3 LBS. A DAY

Clean Out 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes
Nature put over 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters in your kidneys to strain the waste matter out of the blood. Kidneys should pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter.

much larger, too. A trip through the partly-completed toy section Thursday revealed that any child can find anything he wants in Montgomery Ward's toyland with everything from rubber balls to bicycles being offered.

Moving picture machines, with films showing Mickey Mouse, Tom Mix, Betty Boop and many other famous film characters, are displayed in one department.

Elsewhere will be found G-men machine guns that snort realistic sparks as the gun's rat-a-tat-tat is heard. Rocket cars, which shoot sparks from the rear as they run in circles or in straight lines; electric stoves that will really cook; electric irons that will iron; mechanical trains; typewriters; filling stations equipped with grease racks, gasoline pumps, lights; sewing machines on which doll clothes can be made; dolls and dolls and dolls, including the Shirley Temple and Little Colonel dolls that are so popular this year.

Building sets; erector sets; desks; tables, chairs; tricycles with streamlined effects and electric lights; scooters with real pneumatic tires; carpenter sets with which things can be built; chemical sets with instructions; rocket pistols; blocks; balls; toys for infants; toys for small children; toys for older children are everywhere in toyland and whether one wants a mechanical fire truck with electric head and tail lights, searchlights and siren; a mechanical drawing set with triangles, T-squares, compasses and pencils or queer-acting mechanical toys of all descriptions, it may be readily found.

Adults, too, who can look back to their childhood days when toys were not so perfected nor were such a wide variety available, will get a big kick out of visiting Toyland at Montgomery Ward's Ranger store, but it will make him believe he was "born 30 years too soon" and he will wish that he was a kid again so that he could look forward to Santa's visit. No doubt many children will get toys this Christmas which the adults will almost confiscate, because they are so fascinating that no one can really resist them.

Although the diamond-studded James Buchanan Brady was goliath of gourmets and gourmands, he was not a glutton. He never merely stuffed but elevated a commonplace necessity to a fine art and was always as voracious for the last mouthful as for the first. He never napped after lunch or dinner. Nor did he permit business to be discussed during a meal.

Only once in all the times he dined at my restaurant at Lynbrook, Long Island, did I see Diamond Jim lose his appetite. In 1915, I happened to read him a letter that told of the starving children in France and the misery of the old folks waiting for news from the front. Tears fell from the kind eyes of my listener and glistened among the sapphires on his waistcoat. He cancelled the rest of the meal though he insisted upon paying for it just the same. The next day his secretary telephoned to inform me that a golden egg had come from Henri's duck. Mr. Brady had bestowed a half million dollars upon the orphans of the allies.

"I Knew Diamond Jim"

(By Henri Carpentier)
Always, I have loved to observe my patrons when the mask is lifted by the relaxation of the dinner hour, and I say of any man: "By the way he eats you shall know him."

So there we are. As soon as basketball practice starts we intend to go to a few sessions and try to find out what it is all about. If we can't fathom it we will probably call upon Red Moore to explain a few of the minor points of basketball etiquette and see if we can assemble enough information to tell which team wins when they play. It was a basketball game that caused Prexy Anderson's famous masterpiece about Ranger should go in for basketball because Abilene would beat the Bulldogs in 1932, '33, '34, etc. Or rather it was our lack of information about how the Ranger team fared in a game played at Eastland. But if we can master the subject in one season things will be different this year, because we plan to see at least some of the games and try to report on them. Which is the end of our first basketball column. Maybe our last

Clean Out 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes
Nature put over 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters in your kidneys to strain the waste matter out of the blood. Kidneys should pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter.

When the passing of water is scanty, with smarting and burning, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging headache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your body may take up some of these poisons causing serious trouble. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, which have been used successfully by millions of people for over 40 years. They give happy relief and help the kidneys to flush out 3 pounds a day. Insist on Doan's Pills.

QUINS BUTTON UP THEIR OVERCOATS FOR CANADIAN WEATHER, IL DUCE ON CANVAS LOOKS DOWN ON CONQUERED AREA

Tiny Marie, smallest of the quintuplets despite her 15 pounds, is much interested as Nurse Leroux adjusts her winter hat preparing for an outdoor excursion. But Annette, shown in the inset, seems to get an even greater kick from her new bonnet, and her pride in the new millinery is plainly evident.

Yvonne waves her hand gaily as she prepares to step out into the nippy fall weather. She's conscious of the fact that she looks very nice indeed in her new double-breasted winter coat with its cute fur collar, and the hat with the neat button of fur on its top. Those roguish eyes tell a joyful story.

As though looking out from one huge canvas at another, this likeness of Benito Mussolini seems to be gazing at a scene which faithfully typifies Italian progress in the war of conquest in Ethiopia. Italian troops march forward to new gains, past the row of camouflaged tents, leaving behind them the ruins of a fort near Adigrat over which waves the Italian flag. Away from the scattered fortress stretch the barren wastes where attackers and defenders laid down their lives.

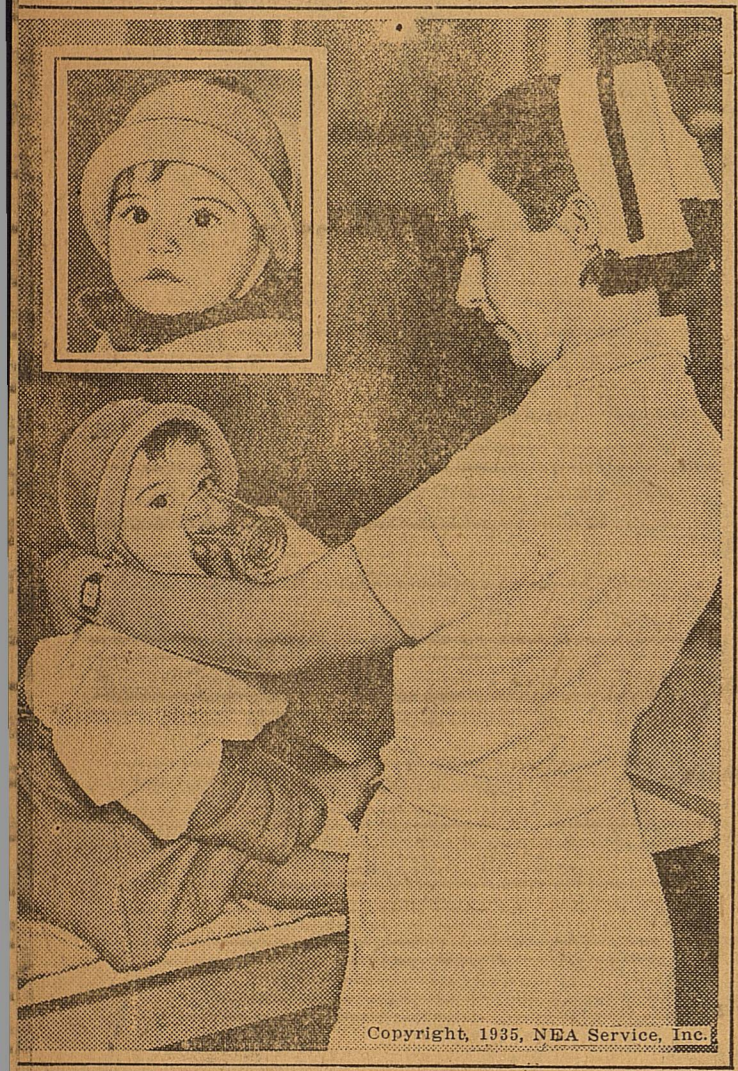

Grandpa of Cagers 'Army' Drops Out of the Sky, Launches Attack

When Dr. James A. Naismith invented basketball at Springfield, Mass., Y. M. C. A. College in 1891, little did he realize that some day he would be teaching the sport to a granddaughter. But here is Dr. Naismith, professor of physical education at the University of Kansas, celebrating his 74th birthday by giving 14-month-old Fransan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Naismith, Jr., of Dallas, pointers on the pastime at Lawrence, Kan.

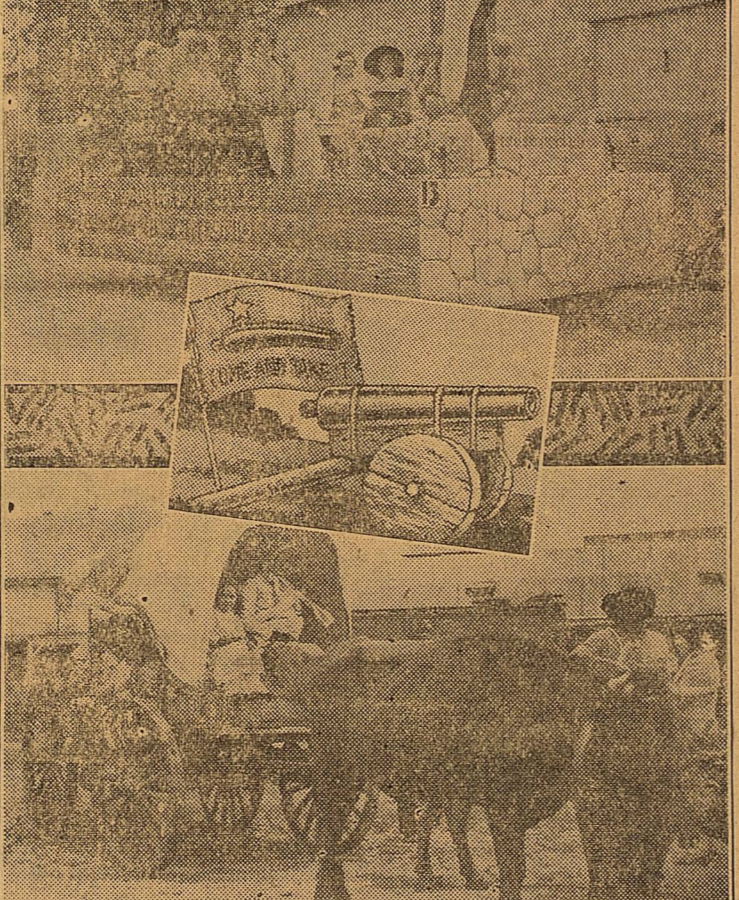

In this remarkable photograph, perhaps a pictorial prophecy of one form of attack in the warfare of tomorrow, an army is pictured literally dropping out of the sky and advancing to the attack. A few minutes before, this had been a peaceful country meadow in the Kiev district of Soviet Russia, with the sky above devoid of anything but clouds. Suddenly squads of planes appeared and disgorged myriads of parachutes. Here, after landing armed and ready for action, Russian infantrymen are shown rushing into formation, pending arrival of their descending comrades.

Emilie thinks it best to have an invigorating drink before she goes out for the daily siesta in the chilly fall weather. But both she and Cecile (inset) are well protected against the cold by their winter bonnets with the secure chin-straps, so that they really enjoy the prospect of winter's frosts and freezes.

Gonzales Opens Centennial Year

Historic Gonzales Sunday closed a six-day celebration that was opened Nov. 5 with a salute from a replica of the brass cannon which on Oct. 2, 1835, roared forth the opening shot of the war for independence. A mile long parade of colorful pageantry was witnessed by more than 30,000 persons, including state dignitaries and many persons prominent in civic and official life of Texas and the Southwest. Pictured top above is a float entered in the parade from San Antonio, representing an early day sewing bee. In the center is reproduced the challenging "Come and Take It" flag carried into the battle by the colonists, and the cannon. Below is an entry in the "Run Away Scrape" section of the parade. The historical observance opened at Gonzales will be continued through the year in celebrations in San Antonio, Houston, Fort Worth and other Texas cities, and in the magnificent exposition to be opened in Dallas next June.

Richest Girl Has Sunny Outlook

Sunning on a Honolulu beach Doris Duke Cromwell appears the picture of happiness. And why not? Hawaiian sunshine, a flowery beach suit, one of the biggest incomes in the world, and the return from New York of her financier-husband, James Cromwell, whom she married last February — all contribute to the contentment of the 'world's richest girl.'

Girls in Art Show Draw Police Ire

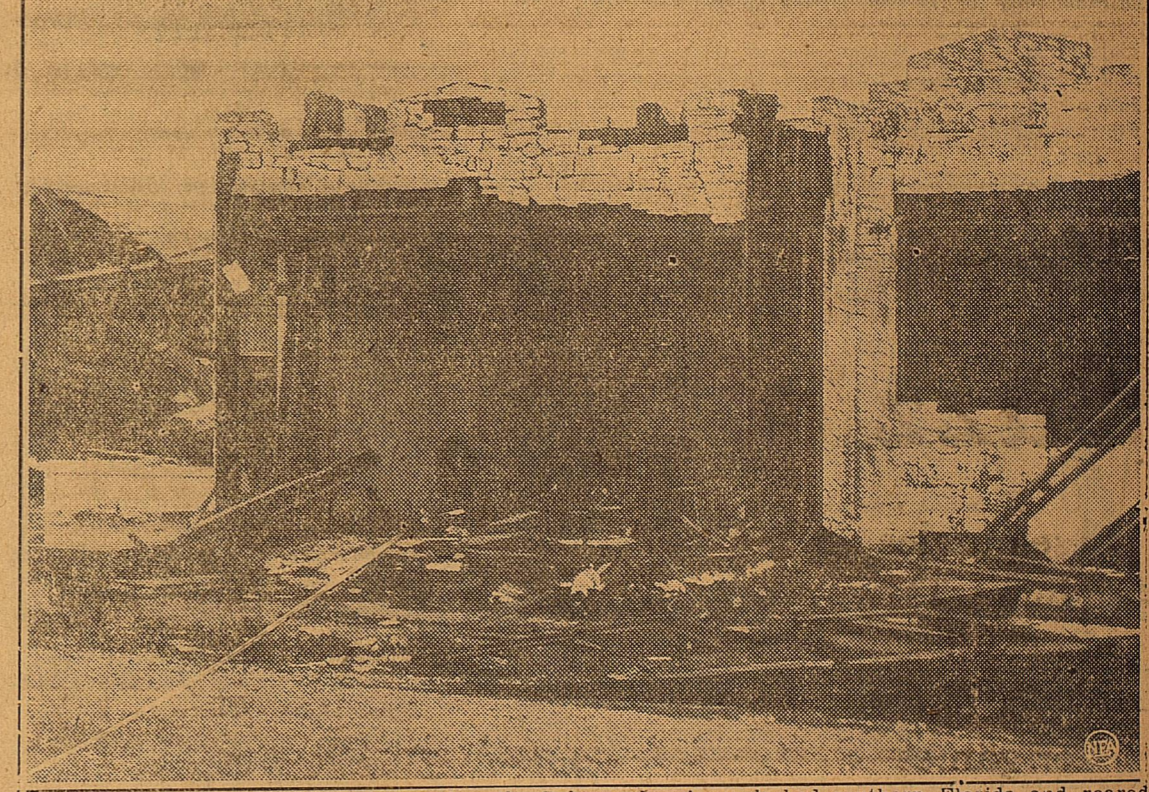

The noted artists, models and celebrities attending the annual Illustrators' Society Show in New York City got a big laugh out of the police raid act until they learned that it was a real raid, and that the show had been stopped on charges of being "indecent." Five girls who took part in one of the acts were seized and held for trial. Pictured is the sequel to the not-on-the-program act—the scene outside the theatre as the arrested girls covered up, a bit too late, according to police, while being escorted from the building.

Pucksters Show Old Fight

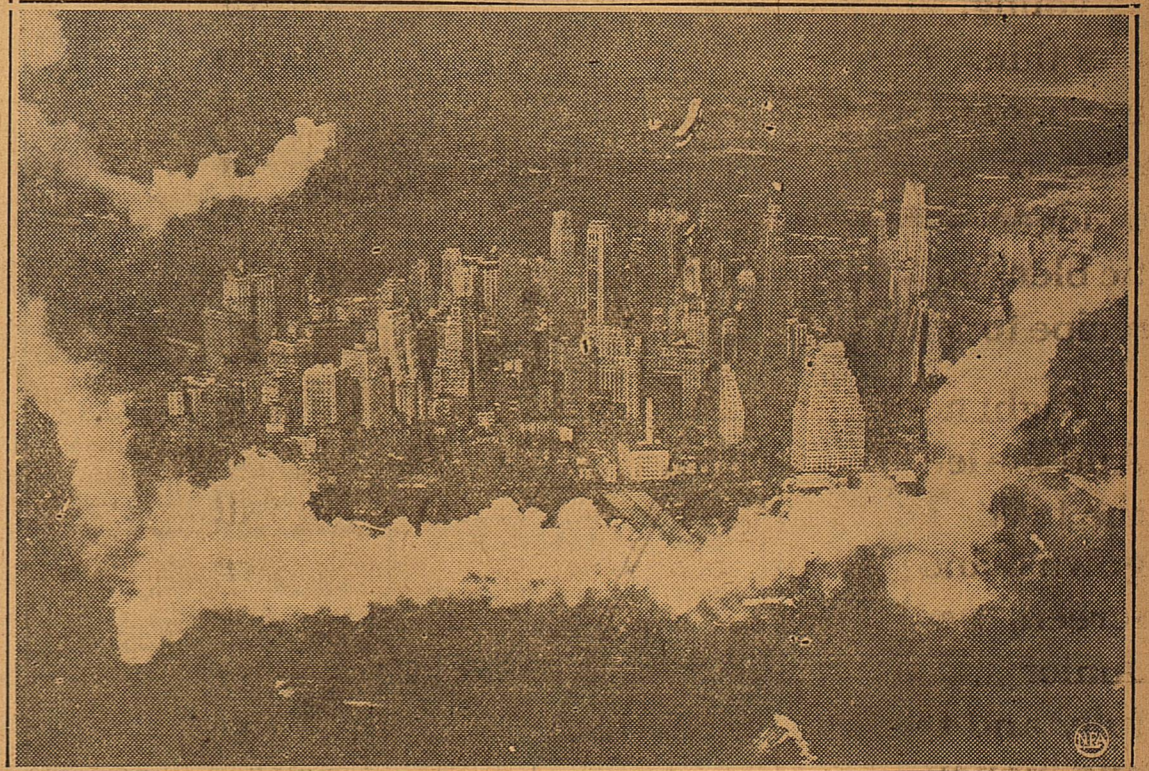

The National Hockey League season got off to a grand opening in Chicago when Hal Cotton, New York American forward, and Paul Thompson, Chicago Blackhawk left wing, staged an old-fashioned barroom brawl on the ice before 13,500 spectators. Here's the fight at its height. Thompson on the rail, Cotton directly behind him, with teammates and referee trying to separate them. Lower right a spectator is seen as he dodged a wild blow in the melee. The Hawks won the game, 3-1.

Stores Ripped Open at Miami Beach by Hurricane

Leaving a $3,000,000 trail of destruction, the Bahama hurricane lashed southern Florida and roared into the Gulf of Mexico at a 130-miles-an-hour clip. The havoc wrought is evident in this scene at Miami Beach, where store fronts were blown in and roofs stripped from many buildings.

Where There's Smoke, Something's Hidden From Enemy Fire

New York wearing a halo? No, no! It's still too venial a place for that! The effect of a halo encircling the towering skyscrapers of lower Manhattan is just part of the smoke screen by which U. S. Army planes concealed the city to defend it from attack by a supposed "enemy" air fleet. The army strategists reported the maneuver successful—and the picture attests the photographic success of the flight.

CHAPTER I
A SLENDER girl with a charming, eager face and rich chestnut hair took her traveling case from a taxi driver and stood holding it until the rattle of the cab died down the quiet street. She thought, looking up at the big weather-beaten old building in front of her, that it looked very weary, almost as though it were ready to give up.

There was nothing familiar about it. Nothing even faintly resembling the house of which she had dreamed since she was a child.

She had asked the cab driver, puzzled, "You're sure this is the Cameron home? Mrs. Willard P. Cameron, you know?"

"Yes, miss. I know the place well."

And so Dana Westbrook had climbed out. And now she stood staring up at the old house supported by immense Corinthian columns that had once been white and now were only a dirty gray.

Soberly, she picked up her light case and opened the old iron gate, sagging dejectedly on rusty hinges. And then up the long, brick walk from which many bricks were conspicuously missing.

A moment later she pulled down the ancient bronze bell. A hollow peal, which she knew must be resounding hideously within, greeted her.

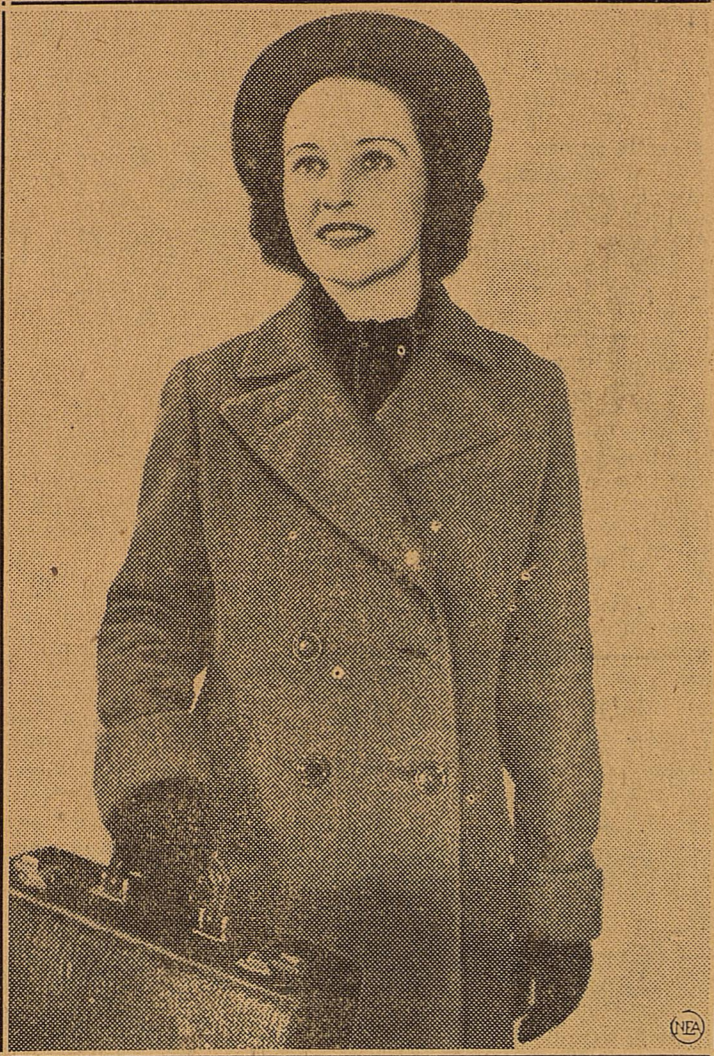

The door was opened. Very little at first, as though by a cautious hand. And then wider, permitting the face of an old lady to peep through. She had gray hair, drawn back neatly, and blue eyes that held a hint of surprise in them.

"IMPETUOUSLY, Dana put down her traveling case. There was a joyous note in her voice: 'You're Grandmother Cameron, aren't you?'"

"Goodness me, no!" The old lady's voice rose in protest. Then, "Why, you must be Dana. Come in, my dear. And where is your grandmother? She went to meet you."

"I don't know. You see I hadn't the faintest idea what my grandmother looked like. No one seemed to be looking for me, and so I got a cab and came out."

"Yes, of course," said the old lady, her eyes darting anxiously from Dana to the door. "I'm afraid though, your grandmother won't see it. You see, in our family we always meet trains. And it is rather a reflection on us that you should come home for the first time in twenty-odd years in a cab."

Dana Westbrook stood, holding her traveling case, looking up at the big, weather-beaten old house. There was nothing familiar about it.

"For the first time," Dana corrected her, her eyes dancing in amusement.

"Yes, yes. But you are so like your mother—" Suddenly she placed her arms around the young girl, strained her close, and gave her a quick bird-like peck on each cheek. Kisses that were somehow not without warmth.

"You're Aunt Ellen!" Dana exclaimed. "I should have known, because you are exactly as my mother described you to me—only—"

"Only older." The shy blue eyes smiled understandingly.

"It doesn't matter if you're sweet," Dana said quickly.

"Thank you, child. There, I hear your grandmother's car."

Dana heard it, too. It was evidently old, just as everything else around her was. The automobile was making a great deal of noise as it came up the drive.

DANA'S heart was suddenly beating much faster. She thought of something her mother had said to her which she had never forgotten. "Most people have been frightened by your grandmother, for she is rather a stern person, Dana. But I was never really frightened until—until the last. Because I knew she loved me very much."

Dana had puzzled over the words "until the last." It was not until she herself was almost grown that she had learned what her mother meant.

It was this knowledge and the realization that she was now about to face the stern old lady that caused the blood to mount swiftly to Dana's face and her heart to beat wildly. In that moment she wished unhappily that she had kept the ocean between herself and this queer old house.

There were hard, firm steps outside. Her aunt rushed to the door. "Sarah!" began a harsh voice.

"Sarah's busy Tuesday's wash day, you know, Agatha." Aunt Ellen said apologetically. "I opened the door for Dana—" Her face broke in excitement. Dana had risen. She walked bravely toward the newcomer, none of her uncertainty and unhappiness showing in her eyes.

The old lady who had entered the big, gloomy room had almost white hair, aquiline features and dark eyes that burned in a thin veil. She stared down at Dana coldly, terribly.

"I'm very glad you've come," she said, but made no move forward. "The child has come a long way. I is very tired." Aunt Ellen said a gentle, troubled tone.

"Yes, yes," muttered the old lady. "She must want to go to her room."

"RANDOMOTHER CAMERON" sank into a chair, heavily, her hooding eyes fixed on a familiar pattern of the rug. She said with out lifting her eyes, "You are welcome here. We hope you will be happy. You must excuse me for not accompanying you to your room, but I, too, am very tired."

"It isn't necessary," Dana said through stiff lips. "If you'll only tell me where to go."

"Ellen, call Sarah."

Her sister flew to pull a long rope that was concealed behind the faded draperies between the hall and living room. She pulled it twice in her agitation.

An old colored woman answered the summons, grumbling as she came: "Yes'm, I'm coming, Miss Ellen. Fas' as ever my laigs can ca'y me."

She stopped at the sight of Dana. "Fo' de lawd," she whispered, her face gray. "Fo' de lawd!"

"Sarah!" the harsh tones of Grandmother Cameron recalled her. "This is Miss Dana. You have prepared her room?"

"Oh, yes'm." Knotted black hands released the apron corners they had been clutching. Sarah lifted Dana's traveling bag and started up the stairs.

The girl followed, conscious of pitying blue eyes and burning dark ones watching her as she went up the wide, walnut stairs.

The old colored woman led the way down a long hall on the upper floor. The walk seemed endless. And then, suddenly, a door was flung wide.

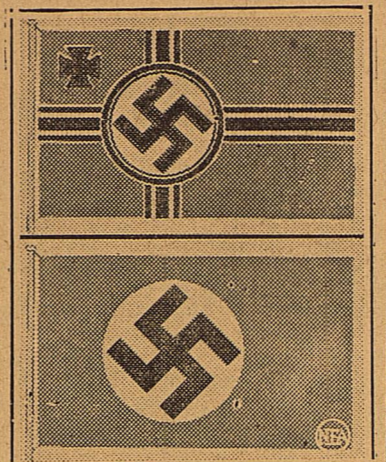

Sarah whispered: "Go on in honey child. You're the spiff image of yore pore young ma who sleep in this room. It ain't never been opened till today since the night she run away with Marse Dana lovin' him so and missible married to Marse John. I dunno what come over yore grandma, 'lowin' it to be open for you. Mebbe she's gettin' soft in her old age."

"Thank you, Sarah," Dana said with a lump in her throat. The door closed. She could hear the old servant shuffling down the hall.

New Battle Flags Germany Salutes

"I give you a new war flag. Its swastika is the symbol of national unity. Its Iron Cross will remind you of the tradition of the old army," Chancellor Adolf Hitler proclaimed as Germany's new banners were unfurled over every army barracks and warship. On a red ground and divided into four quarters by black and white stripes, the war flag design, just received in America, is shown at top, with the simpler warship flag reproduced below.

Perpetual Puzzles!

These puzzles we have married are disturbingly feminine. They sit across the table from us and smile riddles. They treat us like spoiled children, and yet like kings. They ferret out our secret poker games—and collect! They devastate our reasoned actions by a caprice... and we love it.

How do these wives of ours manage to keep so young, so attractive, so full of life? Well for one thing, they have learned that the advertising pages are their willing servants. Here they read of an appliance that turns mornings of drudgery into hours of leisure. There is a cosmetic blended to fit the skin like a glove. Or a new recipe to tempt your appetite.

Right now, your wife is busy with fall buying. And she lets the advertisements shoulder part of the task. They bring her good news about fall gowns and gloves, blankets, perhaps a fire screen, new slippers for you, a sweater for Junior.... She reads the advertisements carefully and they save her time, trouble, worry—and money.

Mmes. Blanche Murray and Daughter Mrs. William Rawland Honor Popular Bride-Elect With Lovely Crystal Shower

One of the loveliest courtesies among a series to have complimented the popular bride-elect, Miss Dorothea Outlaw, was held at the home of Mrs. Blanche Murray, Strawn highway, Wednesday afternoon, with her daughter, Mrs. William Rawland, of Cleburne, acting as co-hostesses.

Guests were graciously received by the hostesses at 2:30 o'clock and welcomed into entertaining rooms, beautifully graced with winter's ever-favored blossom, chrysanthemums, filling handsome containers and used in advantageous places. The mellow glow from shaded lights reflected a harmonizing color tint over the floral design, one of unusual beauty.

Little Misses Betty Lou Rawland, daughter of Mrs. William Rawland, and Marilyn Murray, daughter of the former hostess, presented to the honoree a wagon load of gifts, with a little jingle in keeping with the happy occasion said by Marilyn. The wagon decorated to striking advantage, sounded the pretty bridal colors of orchid and gold. The gifts an exquisite array of crystal, was made

Just a Bit Personal

Rev. H. H. Stephens returned from Eden, Texas, Monday, where he was called on account of the death of a nephew who was killed in an automobile accident.

An editorial points out that Greeks voted not only for George II, but for his son, grandson, etc. On the other hand, a vote for a U. S. congressman apparently includes more distant relatives.
