

"IRON MAN" TO APPEAR HERE IN FREE SHOW ON SATURDAY

Jack Kern, the "Iron Man" from local firms to exhibit his strength and will be seen pulling these 10,000 pound loads as unconcerned as you at your work, in his demonstration here Saturday.

He was featured in "Believe It or Not" as the strongest living creature for his size, and has for years baffled medical science by subjecting his body to strains that no human body is supposed to stand, yet in all these years he has sustained no permanent injury of any kind. He is a lover of children and is now arranging some special contests for the kiddies in which he will pay prizes to the winners.

The business men of Ranger who are enjoying this performance urge you all to come and be sure to bring your children as this will probably be Ranger's last opportunity to see this unusually developed man in exhibition.

There will be no collection taken and the performance will be staged only one time, promptly at 4 p. m. next Saturday. The Ranger Daily Times will carry complete information as to the arrangements in Wednesday's and Thursday's editions.

Watch for the "Iron Man's" show and plan to attend.

Evangelism Is Nightly Feature At Revival Here

One of the outstanding features of the revival meeting now in progress at the First Christian Church has been the keen spirit of evangelism that is manifested from the opening song until the benediction.

Last night evangelist Paul Campbell finished the message of "The World's Greatest Tragedy," and ended with the blessed climax of assurance—"He is not in the tomb. He is risen, and through His glorious triumph over sin, death and the grave, we are to escape the second death."

R. B. LaMance, with the assistance of Mrs. LaMance at the piano, sang the beautiful "Holy City," which was greatly appreciated by the entire audience.

Tonight services will begin promptly at 8:15 o'clock, at which time both sermon and illustrated crayon drawing will be "The Greatest Gift that Man Can Make."

Results of CC, Bankers Work In Agriculture Pointed Out When Two Service Clubs Meet Jointly

Tangible results of the cooperation of chambers of commerce and bankers of the county in extension service agricultural work were pointed out by speakers at a joint session of the Rotary and Lions clubs in Eastland Monday.

The specific occasion was the visit of nine 4-H club boys who Monday morning received registered jersey heifer which they purchased by cooperation of the county's chambers of commerce and bankers.

Speakers—including County Agent Elmo V. Cook, Assistant Agent Hugh F. Barnhart, Rural Rehabilitation, County Supervisor George I. Davis—traced the purchase as one of the results of chambers of commerce paying portion of the expenses of an assistant to the county agent.

The assistant agent, said County Agent Cook, is responsible for an increasing number of activities of boy 4-H clubs, of which Barnhart is in charge.

The 4-H club members, said Barnhart, will use the animals for demonstrations and will exhibit them at the county fair and centennial this fall.

Rev. Charles W. Estes, Eastland Presbyterian pastor, exhibited several types of soy beans and commented on the calf purchases. Rev. Estes stated the animals were purchased in Denton county, his former residence, cheaper than current prices elsewhere. He also announced a meeting of the Denton County Jersey Club starting Wednesday.

ROBBERS HOLD UP FORT WORTH STORE CASHIER

FORT WORTH, Tex., July 14.—Two robbers, one armed with an old-fashioned six shooter, robbed A. L. Seyster, cashier for Monig's Dry Goods Company of $4,500 in a daring, daylight hold-up, on a downtown Fort Worth street.

The pair met the cashier as he and Lawrence Barnes, a clerk, left the store enroute to the bank. Quickly they snatched away Seyster's satchel, got in their car and sped away.

Customers in the store, only a few feet from the entrance where the robbery occurred, were not aware of what was happening.

Seyster and Barnes were able to give only meager descriptions. One man jabbed a pistol into Seyster's midsection.

"Give me the bag," he commanded.

Seyster handed it over. The satchel, he said, contained $4,500 in cash and checks.

Police were summoned hastily and a checkup revealed that the car had been stolen in Dallas.

Man Is Crushed Between Two Trucks

Woman Refuses To Tell Officers About Slaying

ORANGE, Tex., July 14.—Mrs. H. W. Sarber, 39, frustrated from killing her four children and herself after she shot her husband to death, rebuffed officers here today as they sought a statement.

"I just had to do it" was her only comment.

Sarber, 47, a constable, was slain in his home at Vidor 18 miles west of here yesterday morning. Officers said the couple had domestic troubles.

Pat Bullock Is a Visitor Tuesday

Pat Bullock of Bexar county, candidate for the office of state school superintendent, was a visitor here Tuesday morning.

Bullock advocates an honest and economical administration of state affairs. Employees whose duties will necessitate travel will be required to use public carriers, since rates from these can be had at from one cent to two and a half cents per mile, and other expenses will be held within the statutory limits.

He also advocates developing the rural schools for rural children, that school officials be informed of the exact amount of rural aid they are to receive at the time the school is visited by the supervisor in order that budgets can be planned, and economy in the travel expenses of the superintendent and his aides.

SHOWERS BRING RELIEF TO BIG DROUGHT AREA

CHICAGO, July 14.—Cooling showers fought against a wall of hot air in the Midwest today promising relief by tomorrow, from an unprecedented heat wave that has taken at least 2,037 lives and caused upwards of $400,000,000 property damage.

"Thundershowers now falling over the Dakotas and Nebraska will reach Minnesota, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Michigan, Indiana and Ohio by tomorrow night," the forecast promised.

"Another mass of cold air is moving down from Upper Michigan and the two combined undoubtedly should break up the heat wave."

The welcome forecast came as nine midwestern states endured another day of blazing heat. Hospitals and morgues in Detroit, Chicago and the twin cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul were jammed with dead and dying heat victims.

It was the 11th day of 100-degree temperature for a large part of the drought area. In Montana, Nebraska, Wyoming and the Dakotas, where the heat originated July 2, comparatively cool temperatures prevailed after rains fell over the countryside.

Unbusiness-Like Policies Charged By W.H. McDonald

DALLAS, July 14.—Procedure inconsistent with good business practice in the leasing of Galveston bay was charged today by William H. McDonald of Eastland, candidate for state land commissioner.

"Some leases were given to bidders offering the most in cash; other leases were awarded to those bidding the most in cash and oil, mainly oil, which would be paid only if oil was found and in large enough quantities."

"When the state land office decided to lease the bay for drilling, the officials should have adopted a uniform course. If they believed the waters covered a large store of oil, they should have accepted the largest combination cash-and-oil offers. But if they were not sure that oil was there, they should have taken the offers that meant the most cash on the barrel-head."

"Such haphazard methods make possible the practice of favoritism in giving leases and emphasize the importance of having at the head of the department a man who has had practical business experience and who has an understanding of the oil industry."

Trouble Is Had In Picking Amount For School Books

AUSTIN, July 14.—A $500,000 difference between estimates on cost of school books by education and comptroller's departments today delayed the state board of education in determining how much state aid shall be granted public schools for the 1936-37 terms.

Upon the state aid granted will depend the state school tax, now 20 cents on $100 property value.

The state comptroller's estimate is $3,100,000 for new textbooks. State Superintendent L. A. Wood estimates $2,599,000 will be needed.

Drouth Cannot Daunt America's Hardy Farmers

A man from South Dakota wrote in recently to ask if something could be said to inspire courage and confidence in the hearts of people living in the drouth belt.

"We are going through the worst drouth in history," he remarked, "and the people generally are feeling pretty low."

Thumbing through the dispatches from the northwest, it is hard to blame them. Broad fields that should be deep with rippling grain are barren wastes. Livestock is being hurried off to market before it starves. Farms that have been built up by a vast amount of hard work seem to be ready to go back to the desert.

The men and women of the northwest have always had to fight for what they held. First of all, there was the climate itself—hot summers and cold winters, with wide plains exposed to the full fury of great winds. It never was a land for weaklings. To till that fertile soil one had to be tough.

Then there were Indians, in the early days, ready with gun and knife and fire brand to hold the land for their own. There were periodic drouths, plagues of grasshoppers, eras of "tight money" when the very richness of his acres seemed to the farmer to be an added curse, times when the railroads and the eastern bankers seemed to hold all the land in an unbreakable grip.

But somehow none of this ever brought discouragement or surrender. The people dug in and stayed on, following the dream that has always hovered over our western horizon—the dream of a land which human effort could make as free and happy as its borders were wide, where people could work out a new way of life that would bring them appreciably nearer to the millennium that man has always foreknown.

And it is just this trait which is the drouth belt's encouragement today. It has not been decreed by some inexorable law of fate that that part of the country must go back to prairie grass and the buffalo.

The people are not helpless. They can win their fight if they will.

Co-operative human effort, for instance, can restore the water tables and rob the recurring dry spells of the worst of their terrors. Erosion by wind and flood can be checked.

Such simple modern devices as good roads and electrical appliances can turn the northwestern farmer's isolation into a blessing, instead of a curse.

These things can be done, with the help of Washington, and the region now stricken by drouth can be redeemed for the dreams of the pioneers if the people themselves are sturdy enough to make the fight. And are they?

Well, a couple of years ago, after a bad dry spell, a discouraged eastern functionary remarked that the whole region ought to be abandoned, given up as a land too tough for human settlement. . . and the northwest stood up with a growl of rage and almost bit his head off!

Give up? It isn't in their dictionary. They are equal to anything that can be demanded of them. And, because they are, they can face the future with full confidence.

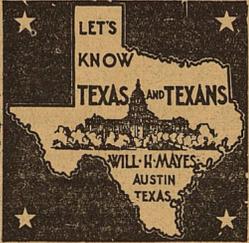

The dream that has glittered over those magnificent plains will yet be made a reality.

SOMETHING THAT GROWS ON BARREN SOIL

Life of the Saint Of the Day

By REV. S. E. BYRNE

Sanctity and learning raised Bonaventura to the church's highest honors, and from a child he was the companion of saints. Yet at heart he was ever the poor Franciscan friar, and practiced and taught humility and mortification. St. Francis gave him his name; for, having miraculously cured him of a mortal sickness, he prophetically exclaimed of the child, "O bona ventura!"—good luck. He is known also as the "Seraphic Doctor," from the fervor of divine love which breathes in his writings. He was the friend of St. Thomas Aquinas, who asked him one day whence he drew his great learning. He replied by pointing to his crucifix. At another time St. Thomas found him in ecstasy while writing the life of St. Francis, and exclaimed, "Let us leave a saint to write of a saint." They received the doctor's cap together. He was the guest and adviser of St. Isabella, the king's sister. At the age of 35 he was made general of his Order; and only escaped another dignity, the Archbishopric of York, by dint of tears and entreaties. Gregory X appointed him Cardinal Bishop of Albano. When the saint heard the pope's resolve to create him a cardinal, he quietly made his escape from Italy. But Gregory sent him a summons to return to Rome. On his way, he stopped to rest himself at a convent of his Order near Florence; and there two papal nuncios sent to meet him with the cardinal's hat, found him washing dishes. The saint desired them to hang the hat on a bush that was near, and take a walk in the garden until he had finished what he was about. Then taking up the hat with unfeigned sorrow, he joined the messengers and paid them the respect due to their character. He sat at the pontiff's right hand, and spoke first at the Council of Lyons. His piety and eloquence won over the Greeks to the Catholic union, and then his strength failed. He died while the council was sitting, and was buried by the assembled bishops, A. D. 1274.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

CLAIRE FOSDICK sets out to drive to the lonely mountain home left her by her eccentric uncle, LYMAN FOSDICK. Claire is trying to decide whether to marry NICK BAUM, to whom she owes money. She also hopes to find a valuable and mysterious jewel owned by her uncle and believed to be hidden in the house.

Her car is wrecked by a log across the road. PAT MAGAN, an old friend, and BOB STEELE, young engineer, arrive on the scene and take Claire to the mountain house where EB SPRATT and his sister, SUSIE, are the caretakers and DAN DALLAS is the hired man.

A strange series of events begins. The watchdog is shot. Claire sees a curious arrow carved on the wall of a bedroom and follows it to the cupola. There the lamp in her hand is shattered by a noiseless bullet. Ed Spratt disappears. Bob starts for the village and is found seriously injured.

HANNAH, Claire's housekeeper, arrives. He, trying to solve the mysteries, wanders into a deserted mine shaft where he is attacked by an unseen opponent and falls. Claire goes again to investigate the roof cellar. She hears a noise and with a crowbar, digs into the wall. The opening leads to a passageway in which a man is lying. Suddenly the lamp is shot from her hand.

Dan arrives and they discover that the man in the passageway is Pat.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XI

AS though Claire's cry had brought him back from a very long distance, Pat's eyes fluttered open.

Susie ran to get water which he drank eagerly. In a short time he was able to make it up the steps, with Dan Dallas' strong arm to help. As they came out into the open air, a sharp peal of thunder oared about them, and splashes of rain fell.

Once more in the shelter of the ouse, Pat rapidly recovered.

"You can't down an Irishman without a fight," he told Claire when he finished reciting all that had happened to him.

Dan Dallas had been listening closely. Now he leaned forward. "Then this guy who pushed you down the shaft evidently followed to make sure you were dead. He must be the one who shot at Miss Fosdick's lamp."

"Pat jerked around in astonishment. "You were there, Claire?" "I heard you tapping, Pat—the same sound that roused me up in Uncle Lyman's room that night. Later I heard it again in the library."

"But I was still in circulation that night you went up to the cupola," Pat reminded her.

"And so was Eb," added Dallas. "But since that side of the house seems to be the one where the noise is always heard, there must be some connection between it and the cellar."

Susie glanced at Dan with a new expression in her eyes. Then she said, "I told Eb I kept hearing queer things at night, but he only laughed at me. Said I had notions."

"You sure that's what he said, Susie?" gritted Dan Dallas. He suddenly rose from his chair and stalked over to her.

"Why Dan—" she began with a coquettish giggle. "Why, Dan, how rough you are all of a sudden!"

FOR answer Dallas stretched out his hand, showing her the official badge he held. "Yes, Susie, maybe I am rough. That's my business. When your brother found that someone had been chipping at the stone foundation of the house—you know you found it when your clothes blew off the line—he got the law to step in. Figured things had got out of his control. Now you'd better come across with what you know, or—"

A blinding flash of lightning cracked through the room, followed almost simultaneously by a deafening crash of thunder. Then, from outside, came another terrific, tearing noise. Everyone rushed to the window, just as the great twin-topped pine tree swayed violently once or twice, then toppled to the ground with a roar like a titanic shriek of despair.

For a stunned second no one moved or spoke.

Then a voice broke in from the doorway. "There! I saw him coming in the library window!" Bob Steele swayed weakly and clutched the door for support.

"Bob!" Pat ran to his side and eased him into a chair.

Dan Dallas did not wait, but snatched his gun from his pocket and ran along the hall and threw open the library door. The rest followed. The room was empty, but the window was wide open, letting in a blast of wind-driven rain which had created havoc in the usually immaculate room.

SUSIE gave one look at the place, then collapsed into the nearest chair. "Oh, what would Lyman say if he could see it now!" she sobbed. "His own room that he loved. And I promised always to keep it as it was."

Dan had succeeded in getting the window closed. Now he and Pat rushed into the hall to search for the intruder. Claire walked over to Susie and laid a firm hand on her shoulder.

"Susie, tell me, why did Uncle Lyman want this room kept so? He must have known that something it would be changed."

"He said he it was and I disobeyed him, he'd find a way to punish me. That's why he always left me home."

"But why shouldn't he leave you home, Susie?" Claire's grip on the woman's shoulder tightened. For a minute Susie did not answer. Then she suddenly broke down. "I was his wife—his common law wife, I guess you'd call it. We—we weren't never married." She wiped her tears and looked up defiantly at Claire.

THE clanging of the doorbell interrupted.

Claire ran to the door, just as Nick Baum came hurrying toward her.

"Claire, dear, are you all right? What's happened? I was delayed in the village, so I decided to come back here for the night. The tree!" He held both her hands tenderly as she explained, apparently oblivious to anyone else in the room on account of his anxiety for her. Dallas and Pat had returned from their search, and Pat halted in the doorway at the ardent scene before him. The girl turned, with a slight tinge of embarrassment in her manner, and made the necessary introductions.

"I didn't know you had company, Claire, or I wouldn't have intruded," Nick said coldly. "Of course, Nick. I'd have felt badly if you hadn't," she answered. "Susie can get you something to eat."

As though glad to escape, the housekeeper started for the door. Dan Dallas went after wood, but when Hannah would have followed, Claire motioned her to a chair near the window.

"All of our friends seem to come here on account of accident, Nick. Mr. Magan and Mr. Steele were going along the road in their car the night I came and heard me almost wreck myself against a log that was across the road. They turned back and brought me here."

"And of course stayed on. How could any man tear himself away, Claire?" smiled Nick Baum easily. "Right," remarked Pat. His eyes swept the other man's face. "Haven't I met you before, Mr. Baum?" He asked the question abruptly.

"Afraid not. Sorry," Nick Baum took out a cigaret and offered the package to Pat.

Just then a piercing scream came from the hallway, followed by the crash of a trayful of dishes. Everyone rushed to the door. There stood Susie in the middle of the broken dishes, staring with blanched face at the emaciated figure of Eb, coming in from the porch outside. He towered to an uncanny height above her. His hair was matted with mud, as were his clothes, and across his forehead ran a wound which had been dressed with a white bandage, now soiled and disreputable as the rest of him.

"You—you better be scared, Susie!" He pointed a thin, shaking finger at the cowering woman. "The vengeance of Heaven is about to catch up with you and your wicked ways!"

"zippiness" of the new era of rail travel have convinced boys and girls, young men, and women, that going places on steel ribbons is "the thing to do."

How railroads, and everything pertaining to them, are taking long strides into the affections of modern youth was revealed here today by Harry G. Taylor, chairman of the Western Association of Railway Executives, while discussing plans for the second annual "Railroad Week" under the auspices of the Western Railroads, beginning July 13.

Among the barometer readings which show how up-to-date railroad innovations are catching on with the citizens and citizenesses of tomorrow are the following incidents:

During a recent showing of one of the new streamline trains in a southwestern city, school children inspected the string of shining metallic coaches at the rate of 2,100 an hour. The railroad's "literature" was virtually all taken home instead of being scattered about, as such reading matter is often dispensed with by children.

The next day classes at the public schools were turned into lectures on modern railroading, owing to the flood of intelligent questions on the subject asked by the pupils of their teachers.

Through their engineering instructors students at Ann Arbor, Mich., and again at Ruston, La., successfully petitioned railroad executives to change schedules of stops by new trains on special runs, so that they might have a chance to inspect the speed marvels. Like the youngsters, the engineering students showed a sound grasp of and an intense interest in the latest transportation developments. Candies in "railroad lantern" containers are selling on station newsstands as they did when father was a boy.

An Oklahoma lad, motoring with his parents, heard via radio that one of the new trains was being exhibited at a certain point. He induced them to race 100 miles out of their way in order that he might see the train before it pulled away. As a reward for his eager interest, he was allowed to inspect the power car, containing the powerful Diesel motors.

An 18-year-old Chicago youth, when told by his father that the family planned a motor trip to the Pacific coast, pleaded to be allowed to make the whole trip by train. So the family did, riding westward in a time-slashing streamliner, taking other fast trains on their bargain-rate sight-seeing jaunt, which included the Grand Canyon of Colorado, great national parks in the Rocky Mountains, and the wonders of the far west, from San Diego, Calif., to Seattle, Wash. The family went home in another streamliner. When the young fellow was asked what had impressed him most on the trip of wonders, he replied enthusiastically: "Why, the railroads, of course!"

Young ladies are designing, mentally at least, gay summer frocks which are appropriate to the dustless, air-conditioned interiors of trains on the Western Railroads.

In many a community it is a safe bet that in a good percentage of families where there are boys, the basement workshop contains a home-made model of a streamline train.

And did you know that in a large new public school which adjoins the track of a railroad in a midwest city, classes are now being suspended daily at 1:50 p. m. so that all may see the streamliner breeze past?

"The turning point in the attitude of American youth toward railroads comes at a time when 70 per cent of our youngsters in their teens have never had a ride on a train," said Mr. Taylor, "but children nowadays are being 'carried away' by the new forms of train travel, mentally at least. Later on their dreams of riding on the trains that are making transportation history no doubt will come true. And the youths and girls approaching maturity are becoming more and more convinced that it's 'smart' to see and be seen on a modern fast train, and that when going places it's 'the thing to do.'"

HUGE INDUSTRY VISIONED FROM NEW PLANT TO DISTILL ALCOHOL FOR MOTOR FUEL

First of what is expected to become a chain of plants to produce power alcohol for automobile fuel from grain and other farm products, this factory is ready to begin production at Atchison, Kan. At left, workmen are installing the huge stills, and at right is shown the plant itself, with one of a battery of 100,000-gallon fermenting tanks. General use of such fuel is expected to relieve strain on the decreasing supply of oil in the ground and create a use for surplus farm products.

By NEA Service ATCHISON, Kan.—Years of talk about alcohol-bearing motor fuel are crystallizing here into a group of buildings, huge tanks, and intricate machinery.

What is expected to be the first of 500 "power-alcohol" plants strung across the farm belt is nearing completion, and the fuel will be on the market soon.

The Chemical Research Foundation, incorporated after the World War to take charge of certain foreign and industrial patents, is directing installation of the alcohol plant here. But it owns none of the plant, which is being built under the name of the Bailor Manufacturing Co.

Orders are already on hand, reports Dr. Leo M. Christensen of the Foundation, to absorb the 10,000-gallon-a-day capacity of the factory. It is estimated that this will utilize the production of 50,000 acres of farm land.

Such crops as sweet potatoes, artichokes, corn, rye, wheat, oats, barley, molasses, potatoes, and soy beans are the commonest products used in making the alcohol.

The industrial alcohol obtained by distillation of these products is denatured with fusel oil and other lubricating media, and then blended 10 or 20 per cent with regular automobile gasoline.

Value of such blended gasoline compared with regular motor fuel is still in dispute but should not be generally adopted and the Atchison plant be only the first of a country-wide chain of such plants making fuel-blending alcohol from farm products, it is expected that three things will be accomplished.

1. Employment for up to a million or more men.

2. Utilization of surplus grain supplies and a wider market for farm products.

3. Conservation of the rapidly dwindling reserve supply of petroleum.

The nearly-complete Atchison plant will also leave a byproduct from corn, consisting of protein cattle feed. It will market its product throughout Kansas, Iowa, and South Dakota. In the last-named state, alcohol-blend fuel is already being used to some extent in automobiles.

The aim in establishing a string of plants similar to the one at Atchison, is, of course, to eliminate freight rates in shipping the grain and farm products to the plant and in distributing the fuel.

Dr. Christensen sees the possibility, if a fuel of 10 per cent alcohol blend should come into general use, of jobs for 1,000,000 men and a market for the product of 25,000,000 acres of farm land.

Hot Weather Calls For Careful Living

AUSTIN, Tex.—Keeping cool and standing the heat during the hot summer months is in a large measure dependent upon the individual, health authorities agree. Over indulgence in food or exercise may cause much suffering.

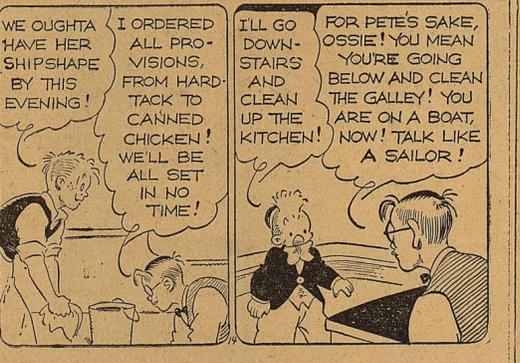

digested foods. Fresh vegetables and fruits are particularly desirable as hot weather foods because of their ease of digestion and wide range of variety in the manner they may be served. Meat and heavy pastries should be eaten sparingly. A balanced diet may be maintained without these foods. Do not eat when you are tired.

Plenty of rest is necessary during hot weather. Sleep a sufficient number of hours and eat at regular meal times. Acquire regular habits of living and develop a cheerful outlook on life, and you will find that it will help you to spend a comfortable summer at home or on vacation.

Cooper Circle Spends Hour in Quilting

Four circles of the Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist Church carried out their Monday afternoon study as was announced in Sunday's paper with the exception of Cooper Circle. Members decided to turn the period into that of industrial work and quilting occupied the entire hour until the serving of a dainty refreshment course.

Next Monday afternoon the Young People's Department, under the general supervision of the superintendent, Mrs. Lee Mitchell, will have complete charge of the program.

Cashier's Office at J. C. Penney Changed

In order that more room might be converted into merchandise for infants, the cashier's office at J. C. Penney's has been moved to the opposite end of the building on the second floor.

The change is a most attractive one, and enables a large display of garments for the little tots. It also adds to the displays for adult in the ladies' ready-to-wear, which now offers the most attractive values imaginable on mid-summer frocks, hats and other garments.

Comings and Goings

J. S. According to Mr. Reynolds, Mrs. Reynolds is doing nicely and it is thought she will be able to be brought home within the next two weeks. Her many friends here are more than pleased to learn she is doing so well.

Robinson, Caddo Still In Playoff For First Half

Caddo and Robinson Grocery went into the semi-finals of the softball playoff Monday night by winning in two thrilling games that were more closely contested than the scores would indicate. Caddo had little trouble beating Magnolia by a score of 9 to 0 as Magnolia had five regulars working out in the field who could not be present for the game. In the second the Elks held Robinson Grocery to a 4 to 3 lead until the seventh, when the Grocers ran wild and scored seven runs on five hits and three Elk errors.

The two winning teams meet tonight in the semi-finals, the winner going into the finals with Lone Star Gas for the championship of the first half. The championship game will be played Thursday night.

Caddo scored one run in the first inning without making a hit and were held scoreless until the third, when they batted around and scored six runs on three hits, two walks, two errors and a fielder's choice, which got no one out but allowed a score to come home when good baserunning crossed up the defense of Magnolia.

Caddo scored again in the fifth on three hits, one a double and one a triple, while Magnolia was limited to one Texas leaguer and two scratch hits throughout the seven innings. Grounds, Caddo windmill pitcher, fanned six Magnolia batters and didn't issue a free pass to first.

Robinson Grocery scored twice in the first inning, while the Elks were accounting for one run and the score was tied at two-all in the third Robinson Grocery forged ahead in the fourth by making two tallies and the Elks retaliated by taking one to make the count four to three, where it stood until the first of the seventh.

In the seventh the Grocers scored almost at will to put the game on ice and assure a place in the semi-final game tonight.

Quicksand Kills Desire for Treasure

By United Press
HOUSTON, Tex.—George Hopper, 11, and Raymond Richard Mathis, 13, Houston youths, think maybe there is a wealth of Spanish doubloons buried along Buffalo Bayou—but that doesn't interest them.

The two boys came within inches of losing their lives in a quicksand bed on the bayou while hunting "treasure."

Raymond sank into sand up to his armpits trying to pull George out. Realizing his efforts were futile and that both were about to be suffocated to death, he freed himself from the treacherous sands and went for aid.

By the time Raymond returned with 15-year-old Eugene Strada, George was in the sand—up to his month.

Raymond and George scooped the sand from around George's head and neck and succeeded in getting him free.

"We thought we might find some treasure there," the boys said, "but we're not interested any more."

Robinson, Caddo Still In Playoff For First Half

Caddo and Robinson Grocery went into the semi-finals of the softball playoff Monday night by winning in two thrilling games that were more closely contested than the scores would indicate. Caddo had little trouble beating Magnolia by a score of 9 to 0 as Magnolia had five regulars working out in the field who could not be present for the game. In the second the Elks held Robinson Grocery to a 4 to 3 lead until the seventh, when the Grocers ran wild and scored seven runs on five hits and three Elk errors.

The two winning teams meet tonight in the semi-finals, the winner going into the finals with Lone Star Gas for the championship of the first half. The championship game will be played Thursday night.

Caddo scored one run in the first inning without making a hit and were held scoreless until the third, when they batted around and scored six runs on three hits, two walks, two errors and a fielder's choice, which got no one out but allowed a score to come home when good baserunning crossed up the defense of Magnolia.

Caddo scored again in the fifth on three hits, one a double and one a triple, while Magnolia was limited to one Texas leaguer and two scratch hits throughout the seven innings. Grounds, Caddo windmill pitcher, fanned six Magnolia batters and didn't issue a free pass to first.

Robinson Grocery scored twice in the first inning, while the Elks were accounting for one run and the score was tied at two-all in the third Robinson Grocery forged ahead in the fourth by making two tallies and the Elks retaliated by taking one to make the count four to three, where it stood until the first of the seventh.

In the seventh the Grocers scored almost at will to put the game on ice and assure a place in the semi-final game tonight.
