Investigators Should Be Investigated, Too

It is an odd little comedy of errors that is being played in Washington these days, with the investigators for one government department investigating the investigators for another government department, and the investigated investigators investigating right back at them.

The Secret Service men of the Treasury Department seem to have been looking into the activities of the Bureau of Investigation men of the Department of Justice. Most recently J. Edgar Hoover, boss of the latter group, got on the trail to check reports that his own brokerage accounts—of which, he says, he has none—were being investigated by somebody.

Meanwhile, Treasury Department officials are reported to be investigating reports that their own Secret Service men have been investigating the G-men; and about all we need now to complicate matters for good is a congressional committee to investigate all of them.

But while the whole business does have some of the aspects of a rather bewildering joke, it is worth remembering that there is nothing especially funny about the idea of investigating the investigators.

These government sleuths who have compiled such brilliant records are, after all, public servants; and, however complex and peculiar the present tangle of mutual investigation may seem, it doesn't hurt to have everybody reminded that it is perfectly in order for their records to be brought out into full daylight any time the public demands it.

That point is worth knowing. The one thing that would end all the great usefulness of such an organization as that of the G-men would be for the organization to drift into a semi-sanctified position above the reach of inquiry.

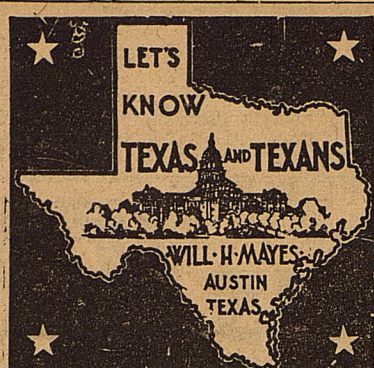

If that ever happens, we shall have perfected an ideal tool for the use of any administration which has hankers toward a dictatorship.

After all, the OGPU of Russia and the Gestapo of German yare nothing in the world but organizations of G-men which have been made superior to all criticism, inquiry, or restraint.

The dictators of those countries can use their outfits to strike down political opponents, because no one in either country has the right to ask what the organizations are doing, or under what legal enactment they are operating.

If the next session of Congress should desire to make a full public inquiry into the entire record of the G-men, the Secret Service, the postal inspectors, or any other group of federal employes, it would be entirely within its rights.

No such investigation seems especially advisable, as it happens; the thing to remember is that the right to make it exists.

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. As evidence of good faith inquirers must give their names and addresses, but only their initials will be printed. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayes, Austin, Texas.

Q. What was a "bond marriage" as practiced in Colonial days? T. Y., Barstow.

A. Mexican laws required marriages to be before a priest. Priests wishing to marry appeared before an alcalde and signed a bond or agreement to be married by a priest when one visited the colony and an ad interim marriage was recognized. The priests' marriage fee was $25.00 and often the ceremony was not performed. When divorces were desired the bonds were torn up in the presence of the alcalde.

Q. When and where was the temporary capitol building erected at Houston? R. E. P., Austin.

A. The first congress of the Republic of Texas located the temporary capitol at Houston and the building was erected there in 1837 on what is now the site of the Rice Hotel. After the permanent building was located at Austin the building was converted into a hotel, then known as the Capitol Hotel.

Q. What is the most northerly town in Texas? C. C., Decatur.

A. Texhoma, Sherman county, is on the Texas-Oklahoma line, population about 1,200 with one-fourth in Texas. The postoffice is in Oklahoma.

Q. What are some of the greatest benefits to Texans to be expected from the Centennial observance? T. E., Nocona.

A. A better understanding of Texas, past, present and future, greater State patriotism and pride, increased development of Texas resources of every kind, improved living conditions, broader views, and a stronger determination to make life in Texas all that it should be for every citizen.

"Texas Empire Builders of '36"

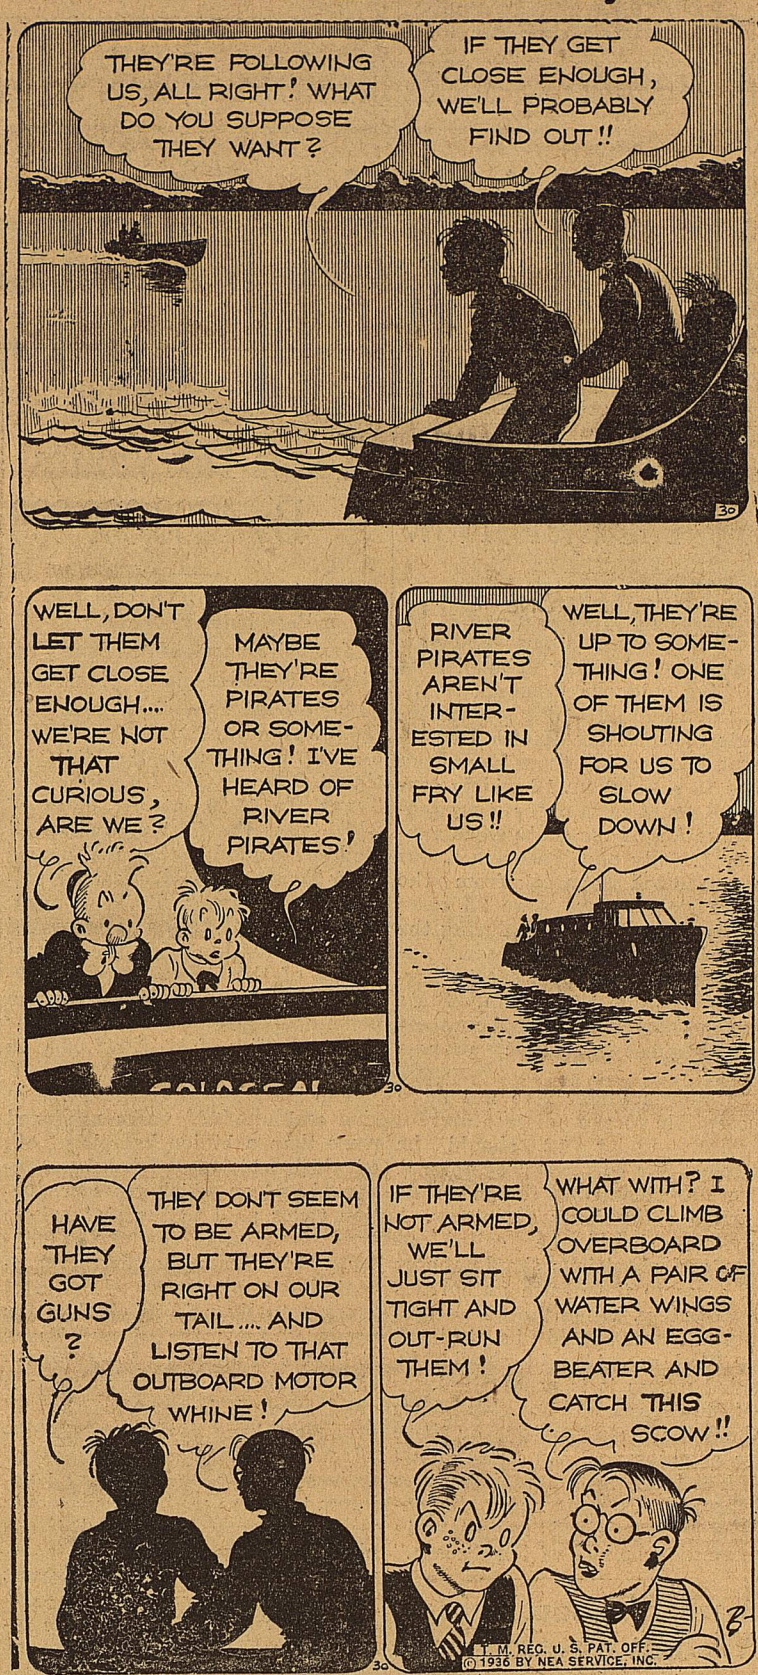

Every man, woman and child in Texas should know the principal events of the momentous period of Texas history from March 1 to April 21, 1836—events that changed the shape and the destiny of the United States.

The facts essential to this understanding are briefly set forth in a 32-page booklet entitled "Texas Empire Builders of '36," telling of the stirring days which all Texans, native and adopted, are celebrating in 1936.

The booklet will be mailed postpaid for 10 cents. Send all orders to Will H. Mayes, Austin, Texas.

Form for ordering the booklet: Name, Address, and a note: "I enclose 10 cents in coins, securely wrapped, for a copy of 'Texas Empire Builders of '36.'" about five and one-half cents, and this is in lieu of all other taxes. In Louisiana, the crude oil tax ranges from four to eleven cents per barrel, depending upon the gravity of the oil produced, while the average tax is not more than six cents per barrel. In New Mexico, the oil tax has averaged less than two cents, also in lieu of all other taxes. Kansas levies no oil production tax, while their ad valorem tax averages less than two cents a barrel. California has no gross production tax on oil, while their ad valorem taxes average but 3.75 cents per barrel. No other oil producing state imposes as high an oil production tax as Texas. This huge tax bill represents only the taxes paid by producers of crude oil on production and operating equipment of leases. Additional millions of dollars in taxes are paid to the state and various counties by oil refiners, natural gasoline plant operators, producers and distributors of natural gas, transporters of petroleum and its products and marketers of refined petroleum products. Altogether, the Texas oil industry is the direct source of sixty per cent of the tax revenue collected by the state.

TO THE CITIZENS Of Eastland County. It is with a feeling of gratitude that I express to each of you my sincere appreciation for the liberal vote you gave me in the election last Saturday. By your vote and support you placed me in the second primary election to be held August 22nd. Out of approximately 7270 votes cast you gave Judge W. D. R. Owen and myself approximately 4441 votes, which to me indicates that the great majority of the citizens desire to elect to that important and responsible position a man who is qualified to perform the duties in an efficient and capable manner. If this is your desire, then I appeal to you to give me your support and vote in the second primary and if elected I promise you to perform the duties of that office in a manner that will be a credit and honor to the citizens of this county. Very sincerely, W.S. ADAMSON.

Texas Has Highest Crude Oil Tax In United States

DALLAS — Texas oil producers actually pay a total production tax of seven and three-quarter cents per barrel of crude oil produced, which tops the tax rate of every other oil producing state, according to data collected by the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas association of Texas. This fact is accurately revealed for the first time through the collection of tax statistics from Texas oil producers by questionnaire, the returns from which have thus far accounted for 60 per cent of the state's crude oil production in 1935. Production taxes paid within the state during the past year, by more than 4,000 Texas oil producers, aggregated $30,175,317 on a total production of 391,097,000 barrels, or an average tax per barrel of 7.72 cents. This makes it evident that the gross production tax of two cents per barrel on crude oil is only one of many taxes imposed upon the producing branch of the Texas oil industry. Last year, the gross production tax paid by Texas oil producers and royalty owners amounted to $8,126,995, which constituted only about one-fourth of the oil production taxes collected in the state. In addition, $22,048,322 was collected in the state, county, city and school ad valorem taxes, franchise taxes, regulatory taxes, gross receipts taxes and various other state levies on the producing branch of the oil industry. Texas oil operators are shown by these facts to be at a decided disadvantage with those in other oil producing states. In Oklahoma, the crude oil production tax is 5 per cent of its market value, which makes the average tax per barrel

Louisiana Families Show Drop In Size

By United Press
NEW ORLEANS, La.—New Orleans families are getting smaller, William Dinwiddie, research expert for the Association of Commerce, reveals.
The statistical figures are 5.3 persons per family in 1918, to 3.8 now.
Rents, surprisingly, have risen despite the decrease in family size due to the fact that there is a shortage of homes in the city.

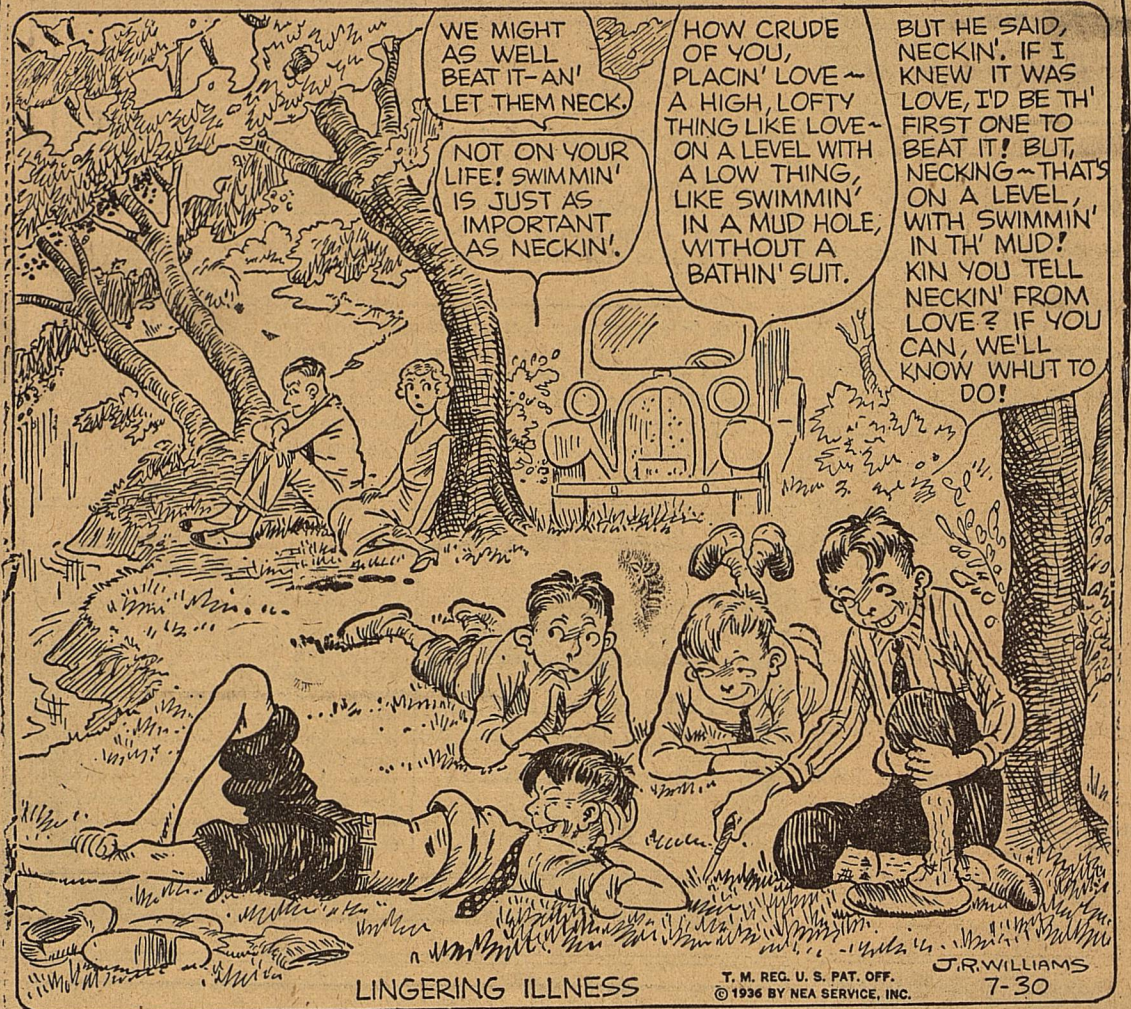

Mineral Wells to Stage Her First Annual Regatta

The stage is all set for the first annual Mineral Wells regatta at Lake Mineral Wells next Sunday, August 2, sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce and directed by the Fort Worth Boat Club. The boat club also has selected a group of expert racing judges.
Six hundred dollars in cash prizes await the first four men in the eight big races of the program starting at 1:30 p. m., each race getting off by a clock start.
Thrills for the spectators and spills for the race drivers will abound as a large field of drivers from all parts of the Southwestern United States compete in fast company on the five-mile course.
The entire race course will be visible to spectators at Civic League Island, the peninsula opposite the boat house, and the surrounding hillsides.
Plans are being worked out to have a loud speaker for the purpose of announcing entries and the winners as well as a description of the races as they are run.
Race drivers already entered include: Jack Mitchell, Tulsa, Okla., C-F Runabout, first to send in an en-

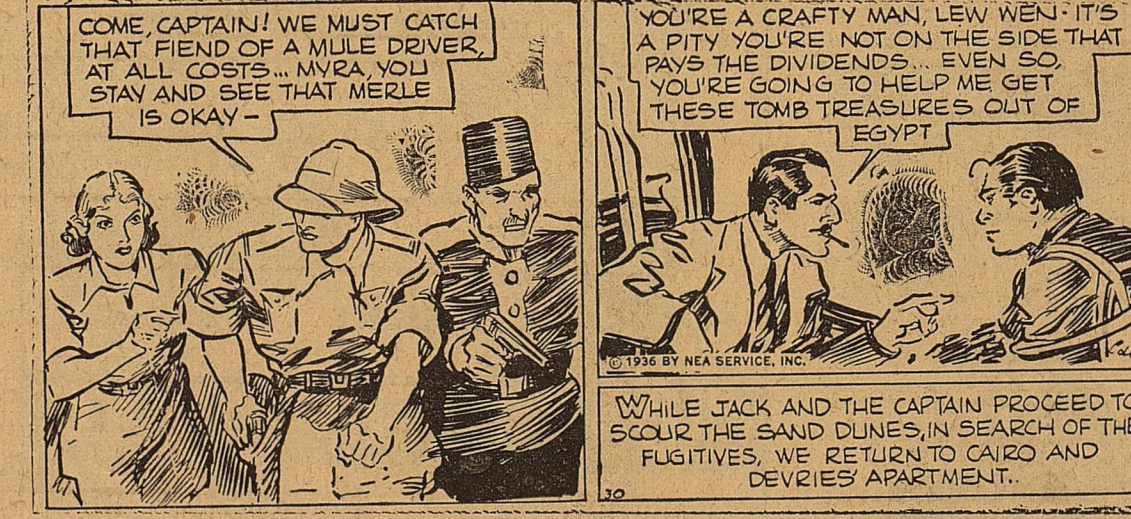

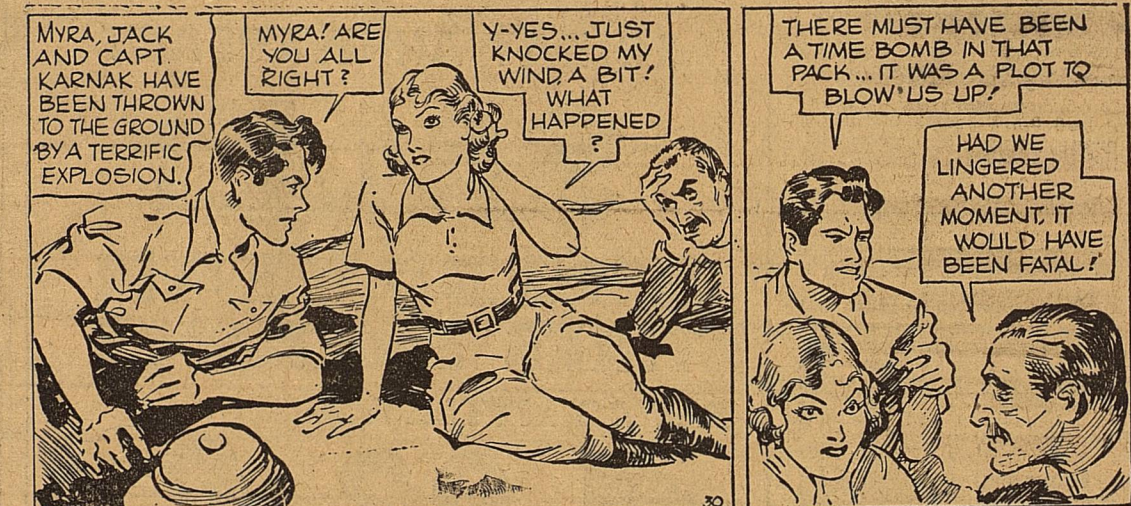

No Weary Mothers On Western Trains

CHICAGO.—A whole family, even on of quintuplets, may now tour the North American continent without a sign of prickly heat or a smack from a tired mother. More than any other group of travelers, perhaps, women and children are benefiting by the remarkable progress which the Western Railroads are celebrating in their annual observance of "Railroad Week" from July 13th to 18th.
The regulated, even temperature of air-conditioned cars, now used on all the principal trains of the western roads, makes a vacation trip cool and comfortable instead of the nightmare it once was for mothers of young children. From midwestern heat and dust, the family may step at once into fresh, mountain atmosphere aboard a train, and the relief to fretful children and tired mothers is immediate.

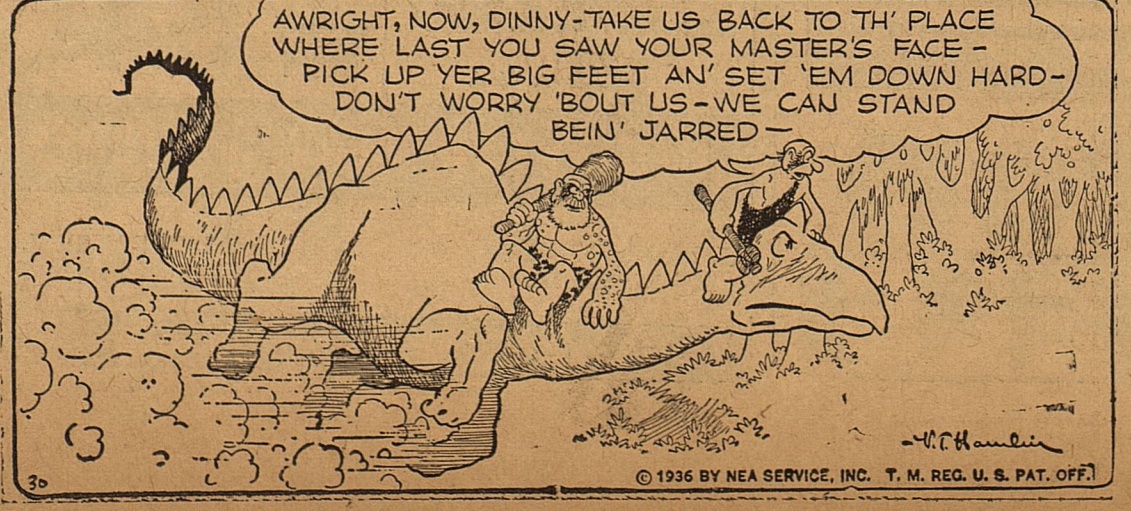

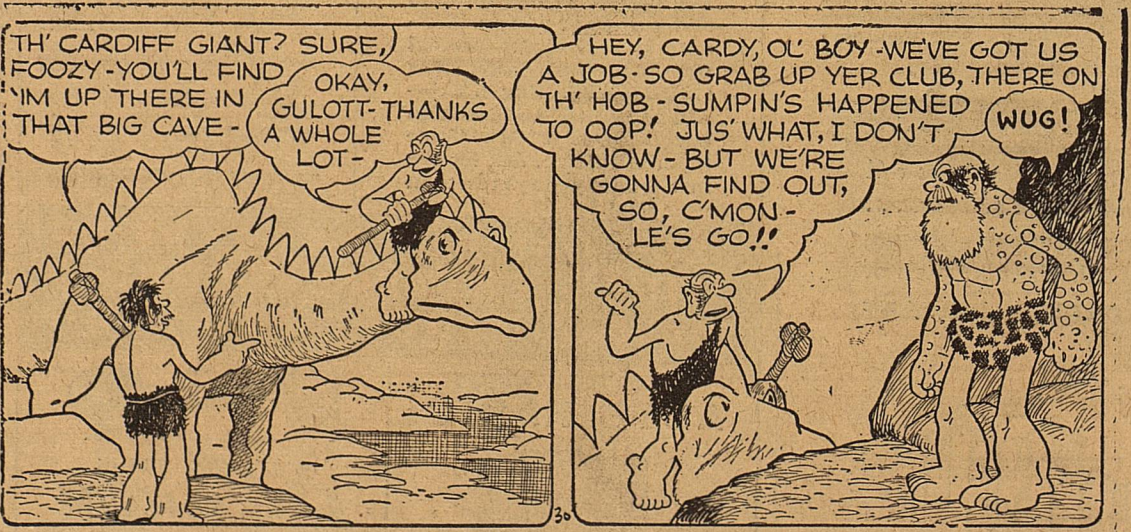

"OUT OUR WAY" - - - - - By Williams

MYRA NORTH, Special Nurse - - By Thompson and Coll

ALLEY OOP - - - - - By HAMLIN

"On our last trip to the coast, three years ago," said one recent passenger, "I changed Jean's dresses at least five times a day. And in spite of that, she looked the coal mines, most of the time." On the same trip this year, both Jean and her younger brother can romp in spotless aisles, press their noses against dustless windows and manage to stay cleaner than they do at home. The end of an air-conditioned railroad trip finds mother with a much smaller heap of clothes for the laundry, and none of them begrimed by soot. In planning more comfortable family travel the Western Railroads have added many features to the prime feature of air-conditioning. Special cars on many trains are reserved exclusively for women passengers. Stewardesses and trained nurses are in attendance on many vacation trains to aid in the care of child travelers. Thus, the mother traveling alone with her children has that precious chance of occasional relief when she can turn her charges over to an experienced nurse.

RESORT HOTEL

ANN HAMILTON held herself erect as she walked down the avenue. There was new life in the air, reflected in the quickened step and eager eye of every passerby. The boys and girls, strolling during their lunch hour, were well-dressed and confident. The summer heat had not yet begun. Under the cloudless blue overhead the colors were gay. Life was gay. "Spring on Silk Stocking avenue in any city in the world!" Ann thought, with a sensation of joy. She felt like singing this refrain. The words had a lilt to them.
She stopped before a shop window to admire some brown suits and yellow sweaters. "For travel," a card said. There was a profusion of travel advertisements and booklets in the display. Vacation in the Adirondacks. Dude ranch days. The Minnesota lakes. The Catskills. Les Cotes D'Azur.
Ann looked at the attractive posters and sighed.
Each year in July she looked at travel advertisements and sighed just this way. What person doesn't, she thought, look ahead longingly to a summer vacation?
Ann's secretarial job kept her busy all year. Her annual vacation kept her keen on living, and brought her back eager for the job again. And each year she seemed to live her vacation more intensely, both in her dreams, and in reality. She was 26, and she had made her own way in the world for exactly seven years.
When she glanced into the show window mirrors, conscious of her dark good looks and trim figure, she saw a young man looking at the travel folders, almost over her shoulder.
She noticed that he wore soft, expensive woollens and carried a downy polo coat over his arm. His collar was snug and high. The very crush in his hat was redolent of good taste and luxury. He had brown hair and blue eyes; his face was pale, and he looked tired.
When he moved away from the window, swinging along gracefully, Ann started after him with faint recognition; she had seen his likeness somewhere—perhaps in a rotogravure section.
Ann didn't quite realize what want to go away for a rest—some quiet spot in the mountains."

Ann's adventurous spirit fell; she was planning on the seashore this summer. Buck up, old girl, she thought whimsically, perhaps this just isn't the man for your vacation romance.
Ann had a way of kidding herself out of adversity. She was always "bucking herself up," as when she sent the checks back upstate to help support her widowed mother and two small brothers. But she was still naive enough to admit that each year she hoped for romance on her vacation. All the girls in the office did that. On their two weeks' vacations they were looking for "the right guy," who didn't seem to exist in a workaday world.
Vacation romance! One always met attractive young men at resort hotels. They were like flying fishes; you had to go to the South Seas to find them.
Ann moved away from the young man and idly fingered the romantic descriptions of summer travel on the desk. She glanced at a picture of Cape Cod. Every year in July Ann entered this travel agency, and asked for folders. Every year the same young clerk who now was waiting or Jaime Laird had planned a vacation trip for her. He always greeted her with that faint look of recognition that automobile salesmen have for their infrequent clients. He never seemed to recall her name, but he talked in a pleasant way when he figured out the details of her summer trip.
ANN didn't remember his name, though it was neatly inscribed on a little bronze plaque. She eyed it closely now while she waited, and then glanced at the plain dark suit and white shirt he wore. The young man's name was William Ware. Just plain Bill Ware, she mused. Like thousands of other counter men in a city, always ready to serve one but preserving an anonymous role.
But suddenly a face appeared behind that anonymity of man-behind-the-counter. It was a surprisingly attractive face, with clean-cut features. She thought he must be about 27 or 28. His blue eyes had tiny wrinkled crow's-feet under them which Ann found engaging.
But when he turned and spoke to her it was his smile that caught and held her attention for one breathless moment. "Good afternoon, Miss Hamilton!" he said briskly. "Where is it going to be this year?"

Ann didn't quite realize what she was doing, but she found herself following the course the young man took. He walked a few blocks and entered the arcade of the tallest building in the city.
JUST as he went into the smart travel bureau which occupied half of the ground floor she remembered who he was. He was Jaime Laird, a rich young man who followed the races from Hialeah to Santa Anita to Saratoga again. Ann thought that he must have been ill, for a man who followed the sun all the time as a vacation should have a tan complexion.
This was the travel office in which she had made arrangements for her vacations each of the past seven years. Ann hadn't intended planning her vacation today, but the sight of Jaime Laird in the bureau gave her an adventurous spur. She entered the room with its attractive travel displays, and waited while the fabulous Jaime Laird was served.
Ann stole furtive glances in the mirror as she waited. Her dark brown hair was parted at the side and waved back softly. Her face was radiant. Her blue eyes sparkled.
"I've just had an operation," Jaime Laird said to the clerk. "I to the fortress can be seen on the bottom of the gulf.

The island of Cheleken gradually is being connected with the Turkmenian coast and is becoming a peninsula.

Investigation of the condition of the Caspian basin, precipitation and evaporation show no essential changes in climatical conditions, according to Apollov, who therefore concluded that construction of dams, growth of cotton plantations in Transcaucasia, utilization of water for irrigation in a large scale and development of intensive early sowing, keeping the snow on cultivated lands to the last minute possible, was responsible.

With plans for further utilization of the waters of the Volga, Kura and other rivers already developed, Apollov became alarmed for the future and suggested remedial measures to the government.

6,885 DEATHS IN CANADA

OTTAWA, Ont. — A total of 6,885 persons in Canada died violent deaths during 1935, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports.

I wish to express my thanks and appreciation to my friends and the good people of this precinct for the fine vote and support in the July primary.

During the course of the last 100 years the level of the Caspian rose and fell alternately but in 1925 fell sharply 24 inches below the average level, according to the geologist.

Because of severed communication lines, the safety of Claude G. Bowers, United States Ambassador to Spain, remained in doubt while embassy attaches in Madrid prepared to care for Americans imperiled by the revolution.

As a result in the gulf of Baku the towers of the ancient fortress of Salkhir, built in the 12th Century, which was submerged by a geological disturbance, now protrude from the water.
