EXTORTIONER ESCAPES A G-MAN TRAP

FLEES WHEN FLARE THROWN FROM TRAIN AFTER SAMUEL BUTLER TOSSES MONEY CASE

Extortionist Had Demanded $3,000 And Threatened To "Wipe Out" Two Children Unless Paid

An extortionist who threatened "to wipe out" one or both of the children of Samuel Butler, prominent Eastland resident and brother of Brigadier General Smedley D. Butler, was sought by Government officials after he escaped a net thrown earlier today.

Butler, following orders given by the extortionist, Thursday night boarded a west-bound Texas and Pacific train and was accompanied by two railroad agents and one Government official. He had been advised that a verbal order of "throw out the money" would be given between Eastland and El Paso. He had also been advised that he was to remain on the rear platform of the train.

Two blocks from the Cisco passenger station Butler heard the command and "threw out the money," said to be a considerable sum, in a brief case. Simultaneously one of the officials threw a flare which lighted up the countryside. A youth fled.

A cordon of federal officers searched to no avail. It was reported the first extortion note demanding the money and threatening Butler's children, Samuel, Jr., 18, University of Texas freshman, and Helen, 16, high school senior at Eastland, was received July 25. It was postmarked Eastland. The letter directed Butler to register at the Texas hotel at Fort Worth and further advice would be received there for the delivery of the money. Asked to communicate with the extortionist, Butler pursued this request and inserted a classified ad in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. The ad said Butler was unable to comply with the requests since the letter was received July 25, the date of the first primary, and the banks were closed.

It was understood 15 officials in three automobiles were included in the group to frustrate the plot Thursday night and this morning. At Cisco, where the brief case was thrown, one group of officers covered the Cisco station while others were going to Putnam, the next train stop. The signal was not given, however, until the train was a considerable distance from the Cisco station.

It was learned the letters were in printing. The Eastland Daily Telegram, in cooperation with Butler, recently printed a story that his children left for California in an effort to mislead the extortionist in event he planned violent action as indicated in the letter. In reality the children were in an Eastern city.

Butler is president of the Arab Gasoline Corporation and has other interests. Brigadier General Butler, brother of Samuel Butler, will receive a third of the $28,000 estate left by his mother, Mrs. Maude D. Butler of West Chester, Pa., who died recently.

The remainder of the estate was left in trust for four grandchildren. Mrs. Butler, widow of former U. S. Representative Thomas S. Butler, died June 20, at Eastland, at the home of her son, Samuel.

Among the early arrivals were former congressman Joseph W. Bailey and J. Evetts Haley of Texas. They explained they represented a Jeffersonian democratic organization, created in Dallas last week, and would urge the support of Landon.

The list of persons from whom acceptances have been received included Haley, Bailey, and John Henry Kirby, the chairman of the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution.

Change of Venue Hearing Started In Murder Trial

CENTER, Tex., Aug. 7.—Examination of state witnesses began today in the hearing for a change of venue for the murder trial of Mrs. Reable Childs and Terrence Bramlett, charged with slaying of Mrs. Childs' husband.

Mrs. Childs, 24, and Bramlett, a CCC worker, are accused of plotting the death of Marlie Childs, former Shelby County treasurer, so they would be free to get married.

Dr. Hussey is advocating creation of the proposed Inter-American court to settle international affairs of the Americas by compulsory arbitration, rather than recourse to war.

He points out that virtually all of the Latin American countries have already accepted the optional clause for compulsory arbitration at the League's Permanent Court of International Justice, The Hague. The fact, however, that the United States has never accepted membership in the Hague Court makes it desirable, he believes, that a separate court be established.

Landon's Uncle Labor Target

A request that Governor Landon investigate alleged "coercive tactics" against union organizers by the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, at Aliquippa, Pa., the firm for which Landon's uncle, William T. Mossman, above, is public relations counsel, has been made by Philip Murray, chief of the steel organizers. Murray suggested that Landon owed it to himself to reiterate his labor stand there.

America Seen In Own League

LOS ANGELES.—A new "League of the Americas" to replace Latin American participation in the Geneva League of Nations, is the prediction of Dr. Roland Hussey, professor of history at the University of California.

Dr. Hussey, who specializes in Latin American affairs, does not prophesy this will be the direct and immediate result of the inter-American conference to be held at Buenos Aires this fall, but is convinced that it will be a definite step in that direction.

More than 20 American nations have accepted President Roosevelt invitation to attend the conference, Dr. Hussey points out, while to date half a dozen Latin American nations have left the Geneva organization. Others are threatening to follow.

Latin American countries, according to Dr. Hussey, are losing faith in the League of Nations, principally owing to its failure to cope with the invasion by Japan of Manchuria and Italy's conquest of Ethiopia.

"At the present time," he affirms, "there is a more friendly feeling between the Latin American countries and the United States than at any other time in history."

"The feeling of good will which exists now has been stimulated by a definite abandoning by the United States of any imperialistic measures in South America."

Dr. Hussey points out that in the past five years four measures have been taken by the United States, which have gone a long way toward allaying all suspicion in Latin American countries and as constituting a basis for a future understanding that may soon result in a "League of the Americas."

These measures, he says, are as follows: Removal of marine troops from Haiti and Nicaragua.

Granting independence to the Philippines.

Abrogation of the Platt Amendment to give Cuba complete freedom.

Revision of the United States-Panama treaty, removing all allegedly unreasoned control by this nation.

Dr. Hussey is advocating creation of the proposed Inter-American court to settle international affairs of the Americas by compulsory arbitration, rather than recourse to war.

He points out that virtually all of the Latin American countries have already accepted the optional clause for compulsory arbitration at the League's Permanent Court of International Justice, The Hague. The fact, however, that the United States has never accepted membership in the Hague Court makes it desirable, he believes, that a separate court be established.

Germany IS PROTESTING TO SPAIN TODAY

BERLIN, Aug. 7.—The German representative at Madrid has demanded compensation for the killing of four Germans in Barcelona, it was announced officially today. Germany protested vigorously against the incident.

To make the protest more formal, Admiral Carls, commanding the German fleet, rushed to Spanish waters to protect German citizens, and was expected to protest directly to the commander of the Spanish loyalist fleet.

Adolf Hitler was reported enraged by manifestations against Germans and there was doubt that in view of reports he would subscribe to a French plea for neutrality.

MADRID, Aug. 7.—The government is dispatching an expeditionary force to the Balaric Islands, off the east coast, from the rebels, it was announced officially today.

Eleven bombing seaplanes, three submarines, two destroyers and a converted liner and 14,700 men will take part.

GIBRALTAR, Aug. 7.—Gibraltar residents watched from rooftops today, one of the biggest bombardments of the Spanish war. A loyalist battleship, a cruiser and two other warships bombarded Algeciras, started several waterfront fires and set fire to a rebel gunboat.

The British and Argentine consulates were damaged by vibration caused by the bombardment.

ROME, Aug. 7.—Italian belief crystallized today that the Spanish revolt is a test between fascism and communism in which some foreign governments are siding with communism.

HENDAYE, Aug. 7.—The important northern Spanish port of Gijon was reported in flames today as the result of heavy shelling from a rebel Spanish cruiser.

Linked With Mary Astor's Husband

"I was only a patient of Mary Astor's husband," protests Broadway's blonde Norma Taylor (above), whom a nurse testified to seeing in Dr. Franklin Thorpe's bedroom at breakfast time on several occasions. The testimony was given in Miss Astor's suit at Los Angeles to regain custody of her daughter.

Uneasy Denmark Strives To Avoid Becoming Germany's War Pantry

COPENHAGEN.—Reports not official — from Germany suggest that a representative section of the German people is getting tired of the government's theory that it is more important to have guns than to have butter, and therefore Denmark is uneasy.

Denmark has plenty of butter — and plenty of other food products which Germany needs — and it fears that some day it may become Germany's pantry.

After the big European countries, where the specter of war is hovering, Denmark seems a haven of peace — until the name of Germany is mentioned. Then the shadow falls.

It is not the question of Schleswig that worries most informed Danes. It is true that German infiltration in Schleswig has been systematic, that German-owned banks have carried on methodical campaigns to assist Germans to take over the land, but it is not simply the possibility that Germany will one day take back the part of Bismarck's conquest which

Magnolia and Lone Star Gasoline Are Winners Thursday

The Lone Star Gasoline team of the American League defeated Strawn in a good game Thursday night, to topple Strawn out of a tie for first place and at the same time leaving Lone Star on top of the heap.

The pitching of Boyd, one of the outstanding pitchers of the League was not up to his first tow first games, when he fanned a total of 26 batters, and Lone Star outhit Strawn throughout the game.

In the National League contest another excellent game was played when Magnolia defeated Schooley's Bakery. Both games were much better than the contests that have been seen during the past two weeks.

All Presbyterians and friends are urged to hear this consecrated layman Sunday morning.

Accident Toll Is High On Farms

NEW YORK.—Farming ranks first as a hazardous occupation with fatal accidents averaging 4,400 annually, a survey by the Country Life Magazine reveals.

"In a factory," the farm publication says, "where machines are inspected regularly and carefully, accidents are relatively few. In almost every occupation accidents are foreseen and forestalled. But recognizing and eliminating potential accident hazards in farming is far more of a job because of their wide variety and their deceptive commonplaces."

"There are three major and frequent causes of farm accidents: poor repair of farm buildings, careless handling of livestock and improper use of farm equipment. And the sad part about all these accidents is that they are unnecessary. They could easily be prevented."

It is the little things that cause the most tragedy — loose floorboards, broken stair treads, defective stepladders, loose matches, improperly marked poisons, improper use of kerosene and gasoline, not keeping a close eye on the bull in the pasture lot, and so forth, the magazine says.

And then, of course, there's the fire, which last year cost farms and rural towns a quarter of a billion dollars.

Three a Crowd? Not for Manville

"I'm five months behind on my marriages now," Tommy Manville, much-wed asbestos heir, announced on his return from Europe, accompanied by, left, brunet Jacqueline Dahlia, French tutor, and blond Dolly Goering, his secretary. Which is why he wishes Marcelle Edwards would hurry his divorce. Nancy Carroll, not one of these fair charmers, is his nominee for Mrs. Manville No. 5.

There Is Zest And Ruggedness In America

The Englishman is famous for taking long walks beside his celebrated lakes, the German for planting himself comfortably in a bierstube and inhaling sausages and beer, the Italian for gathering in public squares and hollering "E viva il Duce!"

And the American is beginning to acquire an equally distinguishing national habit; he likes to get into the car, and drive out into the open country, whenever he gets a chance.

Considering the awful beating that his climate gives him every so often, he must have a strong, ingrained love of nature to do this. For he does not live in a kindly land.

In winter it freezes his bones, and in summer it bakes him to a crisp. It drowns him in floods and dries him up in droughts. It smites him with dust storms and tornadoes, and now and then it gives him the jar of an earthquake.

And yet, in spite of everything, he knows that it is a grand, grand country for a man to live in. The earliest settlers knew it, when they had Indians and tangled forests and swamp fever to contend with; their up-to-date descendants know it, and wheel the family bus out along the country roads on the slightest excuse.

We seldom realize just how effectively our landscape and our climate mold our national character. We take after them, so to speak. If we are vastly unlike our European ancestors, it is because our land is so vastly unlike Europe.

Everything is built to a larger scale over here; it is more spacious, more untamed, more boisterous and rugged.

An English river is an orderly and neat sort of stream, flowing placidly between grassy banks, fit for the meditations of a man like Wordsworth.

The contrast is the same all the way down the line. Our mountains sprawl in jumbled thousand-mile chains, splendid beyond words and always a bit harsh and threatening. Our great inland farm belt rolls on and on for league upon league, big enough to swallow all England without notice; its wheat fields ripple in the sun like a great golden ocean, its corn belt is a limitless green wilderness.

All this has done things to us. It is not for nothing that our heroes of folklore are brawling giants like Mike Fink and Paul Bunyan; that our national game, baseball, is tinged with rowdyism; that while we are generous and friendly, we also are capable of towering anger and heedless cruelty. These things have grown out of our countryside.

And a grand, grand countryside it is. We love it with a vast and inarticulate love.

We seldom bother to say much about it; but from earliest spring to latest fall we crowd the roads with unending lines of cars, look at our endless earth, and breathe the drifting sea of its wine-like air—and understand anew that we are lords of a great land, on which can be built mankind's fairest society.

A woman was branded with the letters, "C. L." Our first thought, that an irate husband who just saw a bill, was registering his protest at the cost of living, was wrong.

Life of the Saint Of the Day By REV. S. E. BYRNE

Cajetan, the son of noble and pious parents, was born at Vicenza in 1480, and at an early age was dedicated to our Blessed Lady. From childhood his holiness was evident, and in later life he was given the title of "the hunter of souls." Having distinguished himself in his studies he left his native town to seek obscurity in Rome, but was there forced to accept office at the court of Julius II. On the death of that Pontiff he returned to Vicenza and displeased his relatives by joining the Confraternity of St. Jerome, whose members were drawn from the lowest classes. He spent his fortune in building hospitals, and devoted himself to nursing the plague-stricken. To infuse new life into the clergy, he instituted the first community of Regular Clerks, known as Theatines. They devoted themselves to preaching, the administration of the Sacraments, and the careful performance of the Church's rites and ceremonies. St. Cajetan was the first to introduce the Forty Hours Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament, as remedy to the heresy of Calvin. He had the most tender love for Our Blessed Lady, and it is related that his piety was rewarded on one Christmas eve when she placed the Infant Jesus in his arms. When the Germans, under the Constable Bourbon, sacked Rome, St. Cajetan was scourged in an attempt to discover his riches, but these he had long before used to the benefit of his fellow men. Worn out with toil and sickness, he went to his reward in 1574.

The United States soon is to acquire a 1,500 square mile plot of territory in Colorado. It's not too early for Farley and Hamilton to claim it.

Fine Feathers to Make Fall Hats

NEW YORK. — Calendar and thermometer to the contrary, the millinery designers are announcing the imminence of fall with a collection of new chapeaux designed to dispel heat wave consciousness.

Summing up the new showings, two trends are definitely established—that crowns are getting up in the world and that fine feathers make chic hats. For it's a rare hat that appears at a fall style show without a feather in its crown.

Although the classic felt is an inevitable part of any autumn millinery assembly, many of the more interesting models are appearing in dressier mediums and velours, velvets, hatters' plush and waterproof crepe will be much worn during the coming months.

Even felts adopt the dressier note with vari-colored stitching on the brims and feather bands and pompons for trims. Color also plays an important role in fall millinery and, with black nominated as the favorite of the dress designers, hats turn to bright hues to strike a note of contrast.

Wine, the fruit reds, rust, saddle brown, green and bluestone will be leading colors say the style arbiters, and the more somber shades with bright contrast also will be smart. A black tricorn uses a pair of coral ostrich tips for a note of gaiety and a midnight blue felt wears an emerald green quill through its high pinched crown.

In the matter of shapes there's almost one for every face. Both the Tyrolean and Directorate influence are evident in any number of the more important models and high crowned postillion hats rub brims with pill box types and forward thrust brims. Cuffed turbans are seen in the same gathering with wee tricorne hats having gay wisps of tulle or chiffon floating from the rear and broad-brimmed velvet shapes stand ready to complete the Gibson Girl silhouette.

Gay V. Carroll, chemist, are here to find out. Samples of dust from stone industry plants and workshops are being collected by Carroll. They will be analyzed in state laboratories to determine if the dust is a health hazard to workers.

Texas Memento Is Placed In Library

Texas' most precious memento, next to its Declaration of Independence, has been placed on Centennial display in the State Library. It is Travis' letter written in the Alamo in which he appealed to Texas and all Americans. "I shall never surrender nor retreat—Victory or Death" are easily read in his large flowing script.

Travis' Bible; Stephen F. Austin's hatchet and pistols and treaties of the Republic of Texas with the United States, Great Britain and the Netherlands are displayed also. The display is from the State's historical collection. Lack of facilities limits the display, and the things displayed will be changed from time to time.

The Declaration of Independence is constantly on display in a specially lighted niche in the state capitol corridor.

Garage Apartments Banned for State University Men

AUSTIN — Experience has led the University of Texas to frown upon garage apartments for students. A rule against them will be enforced strictly next term. Arno Nowotny, assistant dean of men, expects the rule to lighten this work of keeping morals straight.

"More than 90 per cent of the disciplinary cases that arise out of immorality or improper conduct can be traced directly back to garage apartments," Dean Nowotny said.

Nowotny asked that no landlord rent such an apartment to undergraduate men students unless the students had secured a special written permit from the office of the dean of men.

"A serious minded student who wishes uninterrupted study or more privacy will have no trouble in securing the written permit from the dean's office," Nowotny said. "Past figures show that persons living in such places have a definitely lower scholastic average. This indicated that immature men students need the restraining influence of an approved house or dormitory."

Approximately 5,500 men students attend the university. Of this number more than 1,000 live in dormitories or fraternities; about the same number from Austin families, and the rest live in approved rooming houses and private homes. On the approved list at present are 1,575 rooming houses and private homes.

Sioux, 75, Recalls Custer Massacre; Saw Battle As Boy From Top of Hill

By United Press
WINNIPEG, Man.—Sixty years ago a young Sioux Indian lad stood on a hill and watched a terrible scene as the tribesmen of the plains cut down the soldiers of Gen. George A. Custer. Today Charlie Cuiyukoa, 75, is a respected citizen of the Indian reserve at Pipestone, Man.

Clearly, as an often recalled scene, Cuiyukoa remembers the day when the throbbing tom-toms called the braves together in their feathers and war paint. All through the night war dances roused their frenzy against the white man who had stolen their lands, killed their game and run "iron horses" across the buffalo range.

Cuiyukoa recalls that the attack on the Indians by General Custer did not come as a surprise. The Indian warriors awaited the attack near the headquarters of the Little Bighorn River.

At daybreak the United States troops crossed the river and immediately there was pandemonium as Indians and soldiers closed in combat. The battle raged until late afternoon.

Cuiyukoa says that his father, Chief Kichmani, and his brother, Kai-yo-za, and two cousins, O-lak-san and Jesse Wakpa, all fought that day and escaped. Wakpa later became the constable of the Pipestone reserve.

that in spite of the improvement in general business and international trade from the depression lows, we are still far below normal. Industrial production is now back to the levels of 1930, the first year of the depression. Population in this country has increased by more than six millions since that time. Assuming that the increase in per capita consumption which has prevailed consistently in this country with only intermittent interruptions for more than a century, will ultimately be resumed, it can readily be seen how much farther we still have to go to reach our old stride in industrial production."

Cotton Tariff Is Worrying Japan

By United Press
TOKYO—Japan's cotton industry is suffering from the twin specters of over-production and a slackening of the export trade.

Taking stock of the industrial situation after a period of rapid expansion, Haruteru Miyake, writing in the periodical Industry and Education, declares that raising of tariff walls against Japanese goods has presented many difficulties.

The article quotes statistics showing that at the end of 1935 there were 10,330,520 spindles and an annual output of 3,560,724 bales of yarn, as compared to 7,045,029 spindles and 2,524,696 bales in 1930.

Comparing Japanese cotton cloth exports with those of Great Britain, Miyake states that Japan exported 2,725,109,000 square yards in 1935 and Britain only 1,948,884,000. In 1932 Britain was exporting more than Japan.

"Despite its impressive progress, one may legitimately ask whether the cotton industry will continue thriving forever," the writer continues. "Several problems must be discussed before an answer can be attempted."

"First of all, it must be noted that the rate of increase has begun to become smaller, despite the fact that cotton cloth exports last year were the largest on record. Still more significant is the fact that apprehension of over-production is being felt, due to the great expansion of productive facilities and the continuous increase in output, while the rate of consumption is remaining static."

"As a means of mitigating the threat the Spinners' association has enforced a quota system of production among its members, but this has led to constant disputes among spinners, weavers and traders. On the whole, it is safe to say that the cotton industry is facing a period of trial."

Discussing possible methods of dealing with the situation, the article states:

"There are a number of ways in which the situation might be met; for example, a further cut in the production cost, the manufacture of high quality goods, transformation of the cotton industry into a 'comprehensive' fiber industry, and more vigorous efforts to develop foreign trade might singly or in combination prove instrumental in furthering development of the cotton business."

"There is no possibility of restoring the old free trade system and discriminative barriers against Japan's goods are being strengthened."

Most Resettlement Loans Help Buy More Livestock

By United Press
DALLAS — One dollar out of every three which was loaned this year by the Resettlement Administration to low-income farmers in Texas has been invested in livestock, D. P. Trent, regional director, said in making public a summary of rural rehabilitation activities for the past six months.

Trent said that out of $9,010,971 which was loaned to the 29,653 borrowers in Texas, investments in livestock amounted to $2,866,404. This sum was used for the purchase of 17,311 mules, 9,288 horses, 7,932 milk cows, 13,926 hogs, 1,263 sheep, 1,251 head or other livestock, 80,186 chickens and 5,626 other fowls.

The livestock program of Texas' low-income farmers is also being promoted through loans to cooperative groups, Trent said.

Port Arthur and Beaumont Again Stop Grid Classic

By United Press
PORT ARTHUR, Tex. — The Port Arthur and Beaumont high schools have severed a football rivalry of 25 years standing.

Trouble between the Beaumont Royal Purple eleven and the Port Arthur Yellow Jackets developed over the local 12-grade school system, the only one in Texas.

The Beaumont Athletic council decided the extra year of school gave Port Arthur an "undue" advantage, despite a ruling to the contrary by the Texas Interscholastic League.

When she first heard the phrase "lunatic fringe," Dora thought it meant her brother-in-law's mustache.

4-H Club Reporter Writes of His Recent Trip to the Short Course With the Other 4-H Club Members

Johnnie Evans, member of the Scranton Boys' 4-H club, who was chosen the best 4-H club reporter in District No. 7, gives an account of his trip to the Farmers' Short Course. Johnnie was a club reporter on the Short Course Daily Star, a newspaper published daily during the short course. His story follows—

Large Group Attends the 27th Annual Farmers' Short Course At College Station

The week following July 20th, about three or four thousand boys, girls, men and women gathered at the A. & M. College of Texas to study and learn from lectures and observation many useful plans for better farm and agricultural activities, also how to overcome some of our everyday agricultural problems.

On Monday morning the groups met in the large auditorium (Gulon Hall) where "The Centennial Year Farmers' Short Course" was opened. Mr. Walter Jenkins of Houston was the song leader of the group. Every boy and girl in the auditorium thoroughly enjoyed the singing of club songs, and they enjoyed particularly the wonderful way in which Mr. Jenkins had in leading the boys and girls in their songs.

Mr. L. L. Johnson, State Boys' 4-H Club Agent, made a very interesting talk to the boys and girls, which will be of value to the main feature. Each morning different men and women gave talks on various subjects such as "Wild Bird and Animal Life," "How to Choose Your Clothes," and other things which were of importance to all of the group. The boys and girls were divided into groups which attended classes and lectures on various subjects. Lectures were given on subjects varying from Agricultural work to any kind of machinery in which the modern farmer would be interested. Lectures were given on "How to Kill Farm Insects," along with demonstrations of the various kinds of poisons used on different experience as a reporter on the Short Course Daily Star. May I take this opportunity to thank all of the newspapermen in Eastland County who so generously contributed to my trip to the Farmers' Short Course this year. JOHNIE EVANS, 4-H Club Reporter.

News From 4-H Clubs of County

Elroy Bethany, member of the Grandview 4-H Club, and son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Bethany, has become fully convinced that green feed, when buried in the ground in a trench silo, will not "rot" or spoil. Elroy realized what a trench silo would mean on the farm on which he is living. With this idea in mind he is constructing on his father's farm one-half mile south of the Grandview School, a two-ton trench silo, to be filled with hegaria the last of this week.

Donald Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Jones, and a member of the Morton Valley Boys' 4-H Club, states, "I weighed my beef calf on July 31st and found that he had gained 112 pounds during the past sixty three days, or approximately one and three-fourths pounds daily." Donald and his father have recently finished a new barn on their farm located two miles north of Eastland. Donald expects to move his calf in its new home next week where he expects to make some exceptional gains during the next month.

Jack Walker, member of the Alameda Boys' 4-H Club, has begun fitting his Registered Jersey Heifer for the Eastland County Centennial Fair. Jack states, "If my heifer makes as much improvement the next thirty days as she has the past thirty days, I am going to give someone a tight race for that blue ribbon at the County Fair."

ANN HAMILTON, pretty young secretary in a large business office, goes to a travel agency to make plans for her two-week vacation. BILL WARE, travel bureau employee, persuades her to go to Lake Racine. Bill is obviously attracted by Ann, but she gives him little thought. Ann goes to the mountain resort and at first is lonely. Then she meets RALPH SPRING, head boatman, who tells her he is not interested in girls. Ralph introduces her to JAIMIE LAIRD, wealthy playboy. Jaime is handsome and attentive. Ann tries to persuade him to do something useful with his life but he laughs at this. She also meets LEFTY PONDS, married but flirtatious. On her way to go swimming with Lefty, Ann is surprised to meet Bill Ware.

ANN went to the steak roast with Bill Ware and Lefty Ponds. Aimee, the hostess, in her amiable way cornered Bill and made him help with the fire. It was a task he enjoyed. There had been six years since he had last experienced the clear tang of the north woods. After so long in a city office, the kindling of a flame under the stars with pine sticks was an incredible adventure. Ann watched him closely as he attended to the fire. The tired lines under his eyes seemed somehow to have been erased. In the reddish glow his white face was like that of a blond Viking, looking over a brazier of coals on the prow of a ship. He had dressed for the part of the fire-tender. He wore an old gray flannel shirt and dungarees. His feet were encased in a species of ancient sandal. In front of the flames his open throat was like a rugged column. It was a revelation to Ann. The office worker had vanished, and William Ware had become a romantic personage in his own right, like that Viking she imagined. When he rolled up his sleeves she saw well-developed muscles in his arms. Evidently he kept fit in the city. At intervals Ann saw Bill's eyes following the languid young bond salesman who had somehow monopolized her for this evening. She remembered Bill's hurt look when he had first seen her with another man at the hotel. But Bill hadn't had a chance to talk with her alone. HE got his chance when Ann walked down to the sandy beach to rub sand in the skillet and clean it—this being regarded as a feminine job. Bill caught up with her, as she dipped her hands into the sands. "Let me do that," he said, his eyes shining with the glint of the moonlight on the water. A moment later, busily scouring the vessel with sand, he turned

Fogs Are Charted For the Airlines

MONTREAL, —Canadian, British and Newfoundland aviation authorities are pursuing a "safety first" policy in preparing for the first North American air mail service across Newfoundland and Canada to Montreal. Fog is the great enemy in the Newfoundland area, and the British Air Ministry, Canadian and Newfoundland authorities, and Imperial Airways are all co-operating in the preliminary work of studying atmospheric conditions over the mouth of St. Lawrence River and on the coast and inland districts of Newfoundland. Pilots and meteorologists have been stationed in Newfoundland, since the autumn of 1934, investigating conditions in the upper atmosphere. Although ground data were available, there was no adequate information on upper-air movements such as will be required for the experimental Britain-Canada flights by Imperial Airways long-range flying boats and the composite craft in which a long-range seaplane will be launched in midair from the wing of a flying boat. A Canadian government meteorologist is in charge of upper air observations over the St. Lawrence and two Imperial Airways pilots are flying the planes from which observations are made. The pilots are Capt. D. C. Fraser and C. S. Kent. The Newfoundland authorities have established a 21 fog-reporting stations, inland and coastal. Observations from these stations indicate that while difficult flying conditions persist around St. John, there is a central area which might be described as fog-free. A spot in this zone may be chosen as the Newfoundland airport for the Atlantic route from England to Montreal. Fraser, a native of Newfoundland, flew extensively there before joining Imperial Airways. His colleague, Kent, has had long experience of commercial aviation dating from the early days of the Continental services from Britain. He has also had experience of ground organization. He has had plenty of opportunity of studying the route to Montreal. Canadians are awaiting with interest the forthcoming trial flights on the North Atlantic service. In addition to work on the eastern section, the ground organization is being prepared for the Trans-Canada Airway, which after months from Britain have reached Montreal, will carry them by day-and-night services to Winnipeg and Vancouver. A further link in the air-mail chain will be from Montreal to New York.

ANN HAMILTON, pretty young secretary in a large business office, goes to a travel agency to make plans for her two-week vacation. BILL WARE, travel bureau employee, persuades her to go to Lake Racine. Bill is obviously attracted by Ann, but she gives him little thought. Ann goes to the mountain resort and at first is lonely. Then she meets RALPH SPRING, head boatman, who tells her he is not interested in girls. Ralph introduces her to JAIMIE LAIRD, wealthy playboy. Jaime is handsome and attentive. Ann tries to persuade him to do something useful with his life but he laughs at this. She also meets LEFTY PONDS, married but flirtatious. On her way to go swimming with Lefty, Ann is surprised to meet Bill Ware.

ANN went to the steak roast with Bill Ware and Lefty Ponds. Aimee, the hostess, in her amiable way cornered Bill and made him help with the fire. It was a task he enjoyed. There had been six years since he had last experienced the clear tang of the north woods. After so long in a city office, the kindling of a flame under the stars with pine sticks was an incredible adventure. Ann watched him closely as he attended to the fire. The tired lines under his eyes seemed somehow to have been erased. In the reddish glow his white face was like that of a blond Viking, looking over a brazier of coals on the prow of a ship. He had dressed for the part of the fire-tender. He wore an old gray flannel shirt and dungarees. His feet were encased in a species of ancient sandal. In front of the flames his open throat was like a rugged column. It was a revelation to Ann. The office worker had vanished, and William Ware had become a romantic personage in his own right, like that Viking she imagined. When he rolled up his sleeves she saw well-developed muscles in his arms. Evidently he kept fit in the city. At intervals Ann saw Bill's eyes following the languid young bond salesman who had somehow monopolized her for this evening. She remembered Bill's hurt look when he had first seen her with another man at the hotel. But Bill hadn't had a chance to talk with her alone.

HE turned to the skillet again and, silent, scoured it to shining radiance. Ann got up and went back to the fire, and joined Lefty Ponds. Lefty asked, "Who is the boy friend with whom you've been exchanging confidential words?" "Oh, just a boy I met in the travel office back in the city," she said. "He sold me this vacation. He thinks he goes with it." Lefty was a little indignant. "Well, he had cheek, I must say. He talked as though he had known you a million years."

"I think he means well," Ann said. "And I don't think he's had much time for the amenities—the little things he should know about courtship and girls." "Well, tell him not to practice on you," Lefty said hotly. "This was to be my evening with you. Let's leave this crowd and go on some place else."

"No, no," Ann said. "I couldn't do that. That would be selfish. This is the hotel party. We have to be loyal." Lefty tossed a stone into the fire. "Just as you say," he told her. "Can't we take a stroll down the lake shore and then come back?" Ann eyed him with a knowing smile. "You think a lot of yourself, don't you?" she said. But she smiled when she said it. "I have no doubt that you are attractive to a lot of women. You are ruthless."

Lefty laughed. "Not when my wife is around. But don't get a rise out of me. I'll just stick around. I like you. I like your reserve. And please, don't be so exclusive!" "I think he sells bonds, or something of the sort," she said. "Oh!" "He used to play football at Princeton. That is, before he was married." "I used to box at college. It was a small middle-western school. But you say he's married?" Bill faced her with large, hurt eyes. Ann laughed. "Don't be shocked. And don't look so indignant." "But—but he's married!" Bill murmured incredulously. He continued, his eyes still wide. "But you don't go out with him? Not dates?" "Something in Ann rebelled. Perhaps Bill, in his gray flannel shirt and dungarees, seemed a bit callow beside the breezy Lefty Ponds. She said, "What gives you the right to be shocked at anything I do? I don't seem to recall—"

"Oh, I'm sorry!" Something of his hurt was revealed in his face. "You are going to enjoy this mountain air," she said. "Do you like to climb?" "Will you?" he said eagerly. "I mean—will you climb a mountain with me? I've just rented a canoe for the two weeks, and I intend to go in for everything. G—G—G—the old grind again. Feel like a man. How about tomorrow?" "I'm sorry. I promised to go sailing on St. Regis Lake with a boy. I'll take all day."

"With that married man?" Bill asked hotly. "With Lefty—?" She smiled. "No, not with Lefty. His name is Jaime Laird." "Oh, that lad!" Bill said, and his spirits fell. "I talked to him—at the office. Playboy. I sold him this vacation." He laughed, a little ruefully. "Now I wish I had sent him to the seashore. But look here—" He realized his bluntness had taken her away from him again, that his presumption had repelled her. "It is selfish of me, I guess. Perhaps every man is selfish about the girl he loves." Ann looked up at him, her face troubled. He was gazing at her as if he expected her to vanish in the air and be forever lost to him. "But, Bill, I didn't know—" There was nothing she could say. She hadn't dreamed this boy regarded her in such a light. They had met so casually in the travel office. He was just another boy in the workaday canyons of the city. "Perhaps I'd better listen to you some more." Ann went on, regaining her poise. "How about climbing a mountain—the day after tomorrow?" she said. "Sold!" Bill replied, in his best business manner. (To Be Continued)

Central West Texas Oil Field

AUSTIN, Aug. 6.—The Hickok No. 2 well on the airport land north of Cisco was swabbing Wednesday afternoon to clean hole after the cement plug, holding a five inch string below the six-inch, had been drilled out. The core barrel was run during the morning but efforts to obtain samples of the soft formation were unsuccessful. Bits taken from the drill showed a considerable mixture of sand in the black lime. The first runs of the swab each time brought up considerable oil through six or seven hundred feet of water. It was expected that a few more runs would cause the well to clean itself and remove the water which had been placed in the hole to kill the oil and gas production so that the five-inch could be cemented. A test showed the well to be making a million feet of gas through the water. ANONYMOUS DOLLAR IS RETURNED By United Press MONROE, Nebr.—Twenty-seven years ago C. W. New York State Starts Campaign For Motor Safety

By United Press
ALBANY, N. Y.—The state bureau of motor vehicles has embarked upon an intensive campaign to reduce automobile accidents and fatalities to a minimum in New York State, where never in history has automobile and truck traffic been so heavy.

Aware that more than 2,100,000 motor vehicles are being operated on New York's highways, the National Safety Council and the Motor Vehicles Bureau are collaborating with newspapers throughout the state to educate more than 13,000,000 pedestrians and motorists in safety on the streets and highways.

Motor Vehicle Commissioner Charles A. Hartnett, leading the safety drive, calls attention to a number of vehicle laws passed by the 1936 state legislature. He asserted that "mere enactment will not solve our problems."

Stress Rigid Enforcement
"Enforcement must be more rigid than ever before, or the whole structure of official supervision will fall," he said.

Figures show that while motor vehicle registrations are increasing rapidly from year to year, motor vehicle fatalities and accidents are on the decrease.

During last year there were 2,917 motor vehicle fatalities in the Empire State against 2,975 in 1934, a decrease of 58 deaths, or approximately 2 per cent—a saving of more than one life a week for the year. In the same period there were 79,592 accidents against 82,875 in 1934, a decrease of 3,283 accidents, or approximately 4 per cent.

At the same time, motor vehicle registrations in 1935 increased 2.77 per cent over those for 1934 and gasoline consumption gained 2.56 per cent.

In 1934 automobile registrations totaled 2,330,570. Last year registrations rose to 2,395,144, an increase of 64,574. A corresponding increase in the number of licensed drivers also obtained last year, the total rising from 3,304,501 on December 31, 1934, to 3,396,533 a year later.

Revenue Up Millions
Revenues jumped from $37,534,559.80 in 1934 to $38,740,767.82, an increase of $1,417,876.59.

this year the gross motor vehicle receipts showed a gain of $2,366,003. Receipts were $40,925,794 against $38,559,791 for the five-month period in 1935.

Total registrations in the five-month period of 1936 were 2,134,071, an increase of 104,009 over the corresponding period a year ago.

In an annual report, the bureau advocated uniform laws and regulations, asserting that "a multiplicity of conflicting laws and regulations leads to confusion, invites accidents, and promotes disrespect and violation of law and ordinance."

The intoxicated driver was attacked and compulsory safety instruction in state schools was urged.

An Invisible Ray May Oust Traffic Police In London

LONDON.—Extensive experiments in traffic control by invisible ray, with a view to extending the system to all over Britain, are to be instituted by the Ministry of Transport.

The experiment at St. Helier, Morden, on the borders of London where pedestrians may operate traffic lights by invisible ray, is considered as having proved its worth. Rays to be operated alike by vehicles and foot passengers will be tested in all the principal traffic centers.

Three new ray systems are to be installed in the immediate future. They will be followed by the installation of rays at a series of busy traffic junctions, where a whole sentence of traffic lines and footways will be brought under automatic control.

Should these experiments succeed, the whole road system of Great Britain may be covered with a network of invisible rays controlling every vehicle and every foot passenger with the uncanny precision of a scientific instrument.

London and Liverpool have been selected as the centers most suitable for the experiments in their secondary state. Later other cities and busy traffic centers are to be selected for a further extension of tests.
