ORGANIZATIONS OPPOSING HIS ELECTION ARE NAMED BY BLANTON AT EASTLAND

Naming Washington plutocrat tax dodgers, communists and utilities as organizations who aid his opponent, Representative Thomas L. Blanton spoke to an attentive crowd on the Eastland square Thursday night.

Blanton stated he had challenged to meet his opponent, County Judge Clyde L. Garrett, but he refused. "But he knows what I have to say will disprove every charge. His affiliations won't stand the light of day," Representative Blanton asserted.

Blanton stated County Superintendent C. S. Eldridge had told Joe Barnett, whom he said was a farmer near Carbon, early in the campaign that "three powerful organizations are out to get Blanton's scalp and he wouldn't have to spend much money."

An evidence of the support of the utilities, Blanton said, is the maintenance of Garrett's headquarters in the Exchange Building at Eastland. J. E. Lewis, Sr., is a stockholder in the building corporation and the Texas Electric Service Company, for which the Eastland man is district manager. Blanton stated he had received threats from Hopson's Electric Bond & Share Company because he voted for the holding company "death sentence" bill. As a further evidence of utility support, Blanton charged the Washington Post received $1,500 from companies for printing an editorial against his re-election.

Blanton reminded the audience "Eastland hasn't got through asking me for things for the next 10 years. You're going to want lots of things. Of course, I'd get them for you, but you'd feel much better

CANDIDATES IN LAST APPEALS TO THE VOTERS

Oil and agriculture, the two basic industries of Texas, will provide the principal issues when Texans ballot Saturday for democratic nominations in the second primary.

Three congressional races and local issues will be the only other drawing cards in an election expected to bring out only a fraction of the record-breaking total of 1,072,000 votes cast in the first primary, July 25.

Col. Ernest O. Thompson, chairman of the railroad commission, fighting for re-election and Frank Morris of Dallas, his opponent, made the most of last minute campaigning Friday.

Thompson had the endorsement of Gov. James V. Alford and the state democratic executive committee, as well as independent oil producers of the state.

Morris, confined to a hospital in Dallas, left his speechmaking to his wife and commissioner Lon A. Smith, minority member.

George B. Terrell of Alto, former congressman who retired because he disapproved certain Roosevelt policies and Agricultural Commissioner J. E. McDonald were waging an active campaign.

The most spectacular of three congressional races was that between Rep. Thomas L. Blanton of Abilene, representative of the 17th Texas district for 18 years and County Judge Clyde L. Garrett of Eastland.

Also forced into runoff campaigns were Rep. W. B. McFarlane of Graham and District Attorney Ed Gossett of Vernon, in the 13th district; and Mayor Oscar Holcombe and Albert Thomas of Houston.

CENSORSHIP OF THE Daily Texan May Be Long Battle

AUSTIN, Tex.—Edward Hodge, El Paso, student-editor of the summer semi-weekly issue of the "Daily Texan," has dug in for a fight against faculty censorship, confident he will win when the regular student body returns to the University of Texas for the fall term.

Students elect the editor of their college paper. It is published in a university building with university owned equipment and university assistance. Independent publications are barred.

H. Y. Benedict, president of the University, maintains that because the Texan is issued as a university publication, the university has a right to control its articles. Regents took the same view and named the censor—an instructor in the University's department of journalism.

Banned by the censor are articles on national and state politics. Censorship was ordered after an editorial on Colorado River flood control and power projects had appeared. First to be deleted was an editorial on sulphur taxes.

Uncensored have been articles on the censorship. One praised President Benedict and the Regents sarcastically. Another was a "model editorial." It urged students to keep off the grass on the campus.

As news items, uncensored, were printed the statements of Congressman Maury Maverick, San Antonio. He threatens to make the censorship a national issue in a September broadcast.

Neutral was Texas' Governor, James V. Alford. He announced a "hands off policy."

Regents serve six year terms, so staggered that two retire each two years and are replaced. Succeding governors fill the vacancies.

Some newspapers are divided. Texas in the censorship of the "Summer Texan" a blow at freedom of speech and writing. Others distinguished between a college publication and others.

U. S. TO KEEP OUT OF STRIFE IN EUROPE

By United Press
 WASHINGTON, Aug. 21—The United States today stood firm in its determination to keep clear of European wars, to the extent of refusing to join proposed international mediatory efforts to stop Spain's bloody civil war.

William Phillips, acting Secretary of state, declined an invitation from the Urugdayan foreign minister to join in proposed mediatory discussions.

LISBON.—Lisbon was quiet today and conditions were normal. Excitement was raised in European capitals last night by reports there was a revolt against the right wing Portuguese government and President Antonio Carmona had been killed.

It appeared the rumor started in Madrid.

BERLIN.—Germany may alter her attitude toward a neutrality agreement in the Spanish revolt, it was believed today, and take a much firmer course.

MADRID.—A conglomerate loyalist army of soldiers, policemen and civilians is driving the rebels back in the country southwest of the capitol, at present the most vital area in Spain, it was announced today.

VERA CRUZ, Mex.—Thirty nine railway carloads of war munitions from Mexico City, reported to contain 50,000 rifles, arrived here last night. It was expected they would be put aboard a Spanish steamer today to be sent to the Spanish government.

LONDON.—Great Britain today officially notified both the Spanish government and the Spanish rebels that "British ships will be protected against any illegal interference."

Both sides were warned also that if their airplanes flew over Gibraltar, British guns would fire three times in warning, and then aim at the airplanes.

ROME.—Well informed quarters looked forward today to a lessening of tension over the Spanish revolt, due to an apparent approach to agreement between Italy and France on a neutrality pact.

IRUN.—In columns, Asturias miners, trained in dynamiting, arrived today from Oviedo, and went into action against rebels.

COUNTY JUDGE CLYDE L. GARRETT TAKES CAMPAIGN TO OPPONENT'S HOME TOWN

A crowd reported to be approximately 8,000 people on the Federal Square at Abilene Thursday night heard Judge Clyde L. Garrett, candidate for congress-man of the seventeenth district, and his supporters, of Eastland, Taylor, Comanche, Palo Pinto, and Jones Counties, defend themselves against charges made by Garrett's opponent, Thomas L. Blanton. Garrett also explained several planks in his platform including such issues as the old age pension, the franking privilege of congressmen, compensation to ex-service men, and farmers' relief.

The audience — said to be the largest addressed in this campaign — gathered at 7:30 o'clock p. m., for a thirty minute concert by the 50-piece Abilene High School band under the direction of R. T. Bynum. Of the large number, few left before near mid-night, when the final speaker closed the meeting. Judge York of Abilene acted as chairman throughout the evening.

In his opening speech, York explained how Blanton was "trying to scare the voters into backing him" by discussing Communism and the teaching of it in the public school systems. Judge York also denied the charge that Garrett is being financed by a "slush fund."

Rev. Fred C. Eastham, Eastland Baptist minister, who serves as Garrett's pastor, told the crowd that "it is more than a political campaign; it is a moral issue."

County Judge Omar T. Burleson of Jones County predicted that "Garrett would carry Jones County by a two to one majority," R. C. Thomas, head of the Credit

"MARIHUANA"

Seventy per cent of all drug addicts acquire the habit before they are of legal age, according to one of the well known authorities of the United States Government.

The vicious marihuana-smoking evil thrusts up its ugly, serpent-like head, irrespective of the social position of its victim, has been fought by our government for many years. According to an article on this subject, which recently appeared in the Fort Worth Press, Texas was the first state to legislate against this banned narcotic.

Dr. Lee Rice of San Antonio, speaking before the American Medical Association, recently stated that "the use of marihuana cigarettes is spreading among high school and university students, endangering their health and predisposing them to crimes of violence."

Only recently a concerted drive against the use of marihuana cigarettes has been put into effect by both federal and state governments, and it is believed by the authorities in charge that this frightfully devastating traffic can be controlled.

The true story of this terrible scourge and the exotic behavior of addicts while under its sinister influence, together with the effects on their minds and bodies, is frankly portrayed in the motion picture, "Marihuana," which opens Saturday, 11.15 p. m., at the Arcadia theatre, then shows Sunday at the Columbia theatre.

This picture, with its intense background of fact founded on laborious research, strikes squarely and definitely at the sinister results that come from the early use of marihuana cigarettes by unsuspecting or thrill-seeking boys and girls.

Names on Capitol Floor at Austin Puzzle to Visitors

AUSTIN—Names placed in the floor of the state capitol have sent many usually well informed persons on a history hunt. Palmito and Coletto stump most people.

Palmito might register with more Texans if its full name were used—Palmito Hill. It was at that spot in Cameron County that the last battle of the Civil War was fought in Texas. In these days of rapid spread of information it seems strange that this battle between the Blue and the Gray could have taken place 34 days after the surrender of Gen. Robert E. Lee at Appomattox Court House in Virginia.

Coletto Creek was the place where Colonel Fannin and his men surrendered to an overwhelming force of Mexicans. They were taken from there to Goliad, more generally associated with Fannin's name because of the execution of the Texans.

Rice Farmers Plan To Increase Crops

By United Press

ORANGE, Tex.—Rice farmers of Orange county plan to increase their crop from 9,000 acres this year to between 20,000 and 22,000 acres next year through use of the county irrigation system.

The system, which includes 80 miles of canals, was expected to serve the increase although it was designed to irrigate only 18,000 acres from the upper Sabine river.

Flumes and syphons carry the water over streams or under them to prevent mineral contamination from other sources. The lower Sabine river is contaminated with salt from the Gulf of Mexico and unsuitable for irrigation purposes.

Film Marihuana Arouses Interest Theater Patrons

Since the picture, "Marihuana," has been booked to play the Columbia theatre Sunday, with a midnight preview Saturday at the Arcadia theatre, the management has been answering numerous queries about the product, Marihuana, and the question that is most asked is: "Just what is Marihuana and where is it produced?"

Marihuana is secretly grown in Texas . . . in backyards and vacant lots. It is a weed that, when ground like tobacco and made into cigarettes, makes the smoker highly excitable and irritable. A person can commit murder while under the influence of the drug and afterward not remember what he has done. Therein lies the chief danger from the drug. Police authorities attribute many crimes each year to the weed.

Many people while driving in the country have seen the weed growing and not known what it was. It grows in small bunches—just a splash of color here and there, a reddish purple. Many think the blossom is a purple blue-bonnet, for Marihuana has much the same shape as the official Texas flower, but is really the purple loco weed, or Marihuana.

The film, "Marihuana," accurately and vividly depicts the life of a "weed" smoker with his wild parties and weird orgies.

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS - By Blosser

Rich and Reckless

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MOLLY MILFORD, rich and popular, has received proposals of marriage from three suitors, but BRENT STUART, whom she loves, has not asked her to marry him.

Bored with parties, Molly goes to "The Red Poppy," a fashionable night club, with another admirer, WICK ROSS. The lights go out and when they come on Molly finds herself dancing with a handsome stranger. He tells her his name is "NELSON WHITTAKER." In reality he is NELSON FERGUSON, bank robber, one of a group planning to "hit" Molly away and hold her for ransom.

A few days later he asks her to have dinner with him and she agrees. Waiting for him at a downtown store, Molly encounters a girl who is her exact double. Impulsively Molly exchanges her luxurious costume for the other girl's shabby one.

Molly and "Whittaker" go to a place called "Frenchy's." Police arrive and there is shooting in which "Whittaker" is fatally injured. Molly is forced into a car and taken to a deserted farm house.

LEOLA BARLOW, the girl with whom Molly changed clothes, is found dead. Newspapers report that the dead girl is the heiress, Molly Milford. Molly's keepers believe she is the Barlow girl and that they have been double-crossed. Terrified, Molly waits to learn what will happen next.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER V

THE servant said, "A young man to see you, sir."

Brent Stuart stood before a window in the library of his home. It was a room filled with mellow charm and warm color. "I've told you, Simpson," Brent said, "that I won't see anyone today."

"Yes, sir. But this is the young man who waited for hours, Mr. Brent. He seemed so upset, sir, when you didn't come in last night. If you'll pardon my saying so, sir..."

"Yes, Simpson." Brent's tone revealed none of the anguish in his heart. He had spent all the night searching the city for Molly. He had telephoned, and Donna had told him that Molly was out with a strange man—a man she had met at "The Red Poppy." Donna had kept Brent on the phone while she talked about how dreadful it had been of Wick to take Molly to such a questionable night club.

Then Brent had dashed off to make the rounds of the dining and dancing places. He was thoroughly alarmed.

Morning had come, and someone had telephoned that Molly had been found. It was all like a horrible nightmare—that message had torn Brent's world apart.

Molly was dead. Gay, laughing, beautiful, and sweet Molly was dead. With everything to live for, she had found life not worth living. She must have known how he loved her, and yet she had not wanted to stay here with him.

SIMPSON was still waiting in the doorway, watching his young employer anxiously. What was the matter with Simpson? Didn't he understand how to do as he was told? Couldn't he realize how much Brent wanted to be alone now?

"Forgive me, sir," Simpson was saying, "but the young man is so anxious, so excited, Mr. Brent. He said he couldn't leave without seeing you."

"But, him in," Brent spoke hoarsely.

A moment later Simpson ushered in a dark-haired young man. The stranger stood regarding Brent timidly out of dark, melancholy eyes.

"I have a message for you, Mr. Stuart. That is, I had a message for you and then I lost it."

"I see." Brent's tone was hollow. "Then what was the good of coming here?"

"I was pretty sure I knew what was in the message. The young lady trusted me. In fact, she paid me handsomely to bring it to you."

"I don't know what you are talking about," Brent said. "Won't you sit down?"

"I hurried off as soon as I could," the visitor began abruptly. "I had to tell 'Frenchy' something, give him some excuse. He's the man who owns the place where I play in an orchestra. When I was half-way to town I put my hand in my pocket and the slip of paper the young lady had given me was gone. I must have pulled it out with my handkerchief. I remembered your name, though, and I looked up your address in a directory."

"Yes," Brent put quietly, "then you camped on my doorstep all night, I hear. Or practically."

"She seemed such a nice girl," the stranger said. "So worried and excited. She looked relieved when I nodded my head to let her know I would go. I think she wanted you to come very much. If I had only read the note—but I didn't. I'm pretty sure she was afraid something was going to happen. And it did, Mr. Stuart, while I was gone. The man she was with was killed by the police."

"She was little," mused the young man. "She wore a green dress and a hat with a green feather on it. Wait a moment—I have something here I'd forgotten."

He pulled out a crumpled piece of paper. "She wrote some request numbers. This is one."

Brent barely glanced at the crumpled paper. Still holding it, he said, "I appreciate your coming here. It was good of you to be so interested. I have had a great shock today. You'll excuse me now."

The young man bowed and went out.

THE front door closed and Simpson turned away, mournfully. He had been quite taken in by the young man. There, that was the bell again!

The young man was standing there, hat in hand. "I forgot to tell him—"

"I suppose you'll say again it's something important?"

"Yes. Very important."

"I regret, sir, that it is quite impossible for you to see Mr. Stuart again."

"Then you'll take a message for me?"

"Gladly."

The young man spoke quickly. "He wanted to know what the girl looked like, the one who sent the message. Tell him she looked exactly like that girl whose picture is on the front page of the newspapers today."

"But that is Miss Molly Milford, and she's dead," Simpson's voice sank dully.

"Yes, I know." The visitor brushed this aside impatiently. "But this girl was her living, breathing image. Tell him that."

The door closed and Simpson's breath came heavily. What a narrow escape! So all this time he had been talking with a lunatic. Last night he had been alone with this crazy man for hours. Of course it wouldn't do to worry Mr. Brent with this ridiculous message. Simpson knew better than that. Mr. Brent was suffering almost more than he could bear, as it was.

In the library Brent stood looking down at the piece of paper in his hands. The words blurred at first by the mist in his eyes, were gradually taking shape. "Please play Buttery's 'Some Day He'll Come.'"

Brent's hand began to shake. The writing—no, he must be losing his mind. He was about to say the writing was Molly's. The girl who had written this had been living last night. And Molly had been in a department store—dead. Brent rushed into the hall. "The young man who was here," he called wildly.

"He's gone, sir."

"Gone?"

"Yes, sir."

Simpson took in his young master's eyes, the white, anguished face. Everybody was going crazy. Maybe he was doing wrong to tell Mr. Brent what the stranger had said.

Nevertheless Simpson went on. "He told me to tell you, sir, that the girl who sent you the message last night looked like Miss Molly. She was the living image of the picture in the paper," he said.

"Get me the paper," Brent cried. (To Be Continued)

NOTICE

Friends advise me that enemies of mine are in charge of certain election boxes and that I should protest. I have such an inherent faith in our institutions, that I cannot believe any attempt would be made by any enemy to do an unlawful act, especially when it is a penitentiary offense to tamper with any ballot or return or to make a false count. Under the circumstances, however, I request all of my supporters to make a note of and remember the number of their ballot.

A Message From Ranger Friends of

Judge W. S. Adamson

Who Is A Candidate For

COUNTY JUDGE

of Eastland County

W. S. ADAMSON

The many friends of Walter S. Adamson in Ranger are asking the people to vote for him for county Judge in the election to be held tomorrow, for several reasons:

First—He is qualified by experience and training to fill the place of County Judge with dignity and to be able not only from the layman's point of view but from the legal end as well to render verdicts and make decisions that involve legal matters, especially in probate Court, where minors and widows estates are involved.

Second—He served as county Judge of Scurry County and is thoroughly familiar with the functions of the office.

Third—The experience he has had while on the City Commission of Ranger, in helping to cut expenses and put the city of Ranger on a cash basis, where its credit is now 100 per cent, should certainly be of great benefit in helping him to keep the expenses of the county down to the minimum and will be able to save the county money.

Fourth—No man has ever questioned his honesty and integrity. His character is that of a real good man. We, his friends in Ranger, are asking the people to vote for him tomorrow.

(This advertisement paid for by friends and neighbors of Judge Adamson who have known him a long time, who respect him and trust him and we wanted to remind the voters again to think seriously and vote for him for County Judge tomorrow.)

END THE FEEL-PUNK, DRAG-FOOT DAYS

Dull headaches, poor appetite, sleeplessness are warning signs. You feel low—hate to work. These symptoms may point to constipation due to "low-bulk" meals.

Why throw these days out of your life—particularly when regular habits make you feel so good. Get "bulk" by eating a delicious cereal: Kellogg's ALL-BRAN.

There's nothing experimental about ALL-BRAN. Millions of people have used it successfully. Scientific tests prove it is safe and effective. Within the body, it absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, gently cleanses the system. ALL-BRAN is guaranteed. Try it a week. If not satisfactory, your money will be refunded by the Kellogg Company.

Just eat two tablespoons daily. Stomach cases may require ALL-BRAN often. Serve as a cereal, or cook into delicious recipes.

What an improvement over pills and drugs. ALL-BRAN is a food—buy it at the grocery store. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Hawaii Is Warned Of A Lava Flow

HONOLULU — Sunset colors and planetary positions, as well as movements of the sun and moon, hold the keys to weather and seismic disturbances for Brother Othmar of St. Louis College, Honolulu.

Brother Othmar, who seems headed for a reputation as great as that of Father Ricard, late famed "padre of the rains," at Santa Clara College, Cal., already has listed a probable series of events for Hawaii this year. He predicts a major eruption of the volcano Mauna Loa on the island in February, 1937.

He also has predicted a flood in the Nuuanu Valley above Honolulu in September, and continuation of rainy weather in Honolulu proper all summer.

Next February the planets Jupiter, Saturn and Venus will be in superior conjunction, with only the moon between them and the earth.

"There is going to be a lot of fun when this happens, and Hawaii can expect another major eruption," he says.

A fiery, blotchy-red sunset in Hawaii may be followed shortly by typhoons in the distant Philippines, according to Brother Othmar. He said that "red" sunsets seen for five months in Hawaii in 1853 likewise followed a terrific earthquake in Japan.

"The stars can talk if you can only listen long enough," he cryptically contends.

Jupiter controls earthquake movements, he insists. Once, he says, he noticed the Pleiades were shining with unusual brilliance.

Diversion Issue Taken To Polls In Maine - California

NEW YORK—The question of whether highway funds may be diverted to other uses or will in the future be used only solely for highways will be decided by the voters of Maine and California this fall.

On September 14 Main will hold a referendum on the issue, while in California signatures of more than 200,000 voters have been obtained on an initiative petition permitting a popular vote on a constitutional amendment prohibiting any diversion of gasoline tax revenues. After a scrutiny of the signatures or the petition by the Secretary of State, as required by law, the amendment will be placed on the ballot to be submitted to the voters in November.

The anti-diversion amendment to the California constitution is being sponsored by the California Highways council, and the efforts of the Council have been endorsed by the directors of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

In a statement sent out by the Club, Standish L. Mitchel, secretary and general manager, said, "The only way effectively to stop diversion is by action of the people. The club unqualifiedly recommends adoption of this anti-diversion measure."

According to the bill to be voted on in Maine all revenue received by the state from registration fees, drivers licenses, gasoline taxes and other highway fees would be allocated solely to the general fund and used solely to meet highway bond payments and to defray the costs of the state highway department. Neither the general highway funds nor any other fund derived from direct taxation im-

You Can't Advertise Today and Quit Tomorrow

You're Not Talking to a Mass Meeting . . . You're Talking to a Parade . . . !

BRUCE BARTON

Ceaseless hammering on the same spot helps win prize fights . . . it is the essence of advertising success. Not until enough individuals in the same neighborhood have been sufficiently saturated with a certain slogan, say, to cause them to react on one another does advertising become a social phenomenon.

The modern business man realizes that his best customers wear out at a rate of nearly 3 per cent a year. Advertising-made prospects disappear far faster. Casual impressions, however favorable, dry like dew in the heat of competition.

"Cumulative" effects of advertising come not from one advertisement paving the way for another. This is negligible, to say the least. Cumulative effect, on the contrary, comes from salvaging as customers half-finished prospects.

Each advertiser is in much the same plight. If he quits successful, he loses money. If he quits unsuccessful, he tosses away an equity in public recognition far more valuable than the money: So many thousand partly manufactured customers. The second group are spending as little money as they can and still keep their names before the public. They believe themselves wise spenders because they spend so very cautiously—or perhaps reluctantly is a better word . . . THE BALD TRUTH IS THAT THESE RELUCTANT SPENDERS ARE, AS A CLASS, THE REAL OVER-SPENDERS IN ADVERTISING!

in their hospitals, lights, parks, swimming pools, tennis courts, golf courses, polo fields and play grounds.

"But," explained Blanton, "you don't get any benefit. Only the Washington people get the benefit. I held hearings night and day. I know how to get the truth out of the witnesses."

Blanton declared that many high-salaried executives had paid no taxes for years until a stop was put to the practice. Blanton stated Garrett had printed in circulars a letter from Bernard L. Henning, Washington taxicab company operator, that he sent him $5. Blanton ridiculed the small contribution report because, he claimed, Henning had the biggest taxicab monopoly in the world. He stated his efforts at rate cuts has brought taxicab fares in the city to a reasonable figure, and 3,000 veterans are drivers.

If Garrett was elected, Blanton said, his obligations would make "him stand up to the lick log and there he'd be as helpless as a little kitten."

An individual who interrupted Blanton was booed down by the crowd.

Blanton charged that forces opposed to him have lately been circulating the district with many misrepresentations against him, "including a malicious and wholly false accusation that I have been writing laudatory letters to myself, saying they were written by colleagues in congress and reading them at my speaking dates."

"Within the past few days such a circular has been given wide distribution, and among other untrue statements was one to the effect that two letters which I have received from Congressman J. E. Rankin and Wilburn Cartright are forgeries, written by myself, and demanding that I produce the original letters."

"Well, my friends, here they are," Blanton said, exhibiting the letters. "Here in Clyde Garrett's home town I am showing you the originals and I want you Garrett men to come up here on the platform and see these letters and satisfy yourselves that instead of being forgeries, written by myself, they are genuine letters from Rankin and Cartright and that I have been quoting exactly from them."

Rankin is chairman of the committee on world war veterans legislation. On his congressional stationery he wrote Blanton last July 30. Excerpts from the letter:

"I have often wondered how far that bunch in Washington would go towards trying to help defeat you. I know the power trust which is robbing the people of Texas of more than $25,000,000 a year on light and power rates—I know they will do anything to defeat any man who tries to protect the consumers of electricity from the highway robbery which they are perpetrating through unreasonable light and power rates."

"But I don't know how far these Washington tax-dodgers will carry their fight. I have said time and again that you have the hardest job of any man in congress, as chairman of the subcommittee on appropriations that handles the appropriations for the District of Columbia. The people of the District get more out of this government than any other people in the United States, and manifest less gratitude for it; and every time we get a man like you who tries to hold down expenses and curtail their raids on the treasury, then they set in to destroy him. I hope you whip them to a frazzle, and that you return to congress by an overwhelming majority."

Cartright Letter

Cartright is chairman of the house committee on roads. His letter to Blanton, dated August 6, said:

"It has just been reported to me that one Clyde Garrett claims that he caused the Cartright road bill to be passed. He certainly is a bold and presumptuous mortal. I never knew such a man existed. He had no more to do with that bill than a man in the moon. I had charge of the bill from start to finish and his name was not mentioned in any way in connection with the bill."

"You had as much or more to do with the passage of that bill as any member of congress not to be a member of the roads committee. You made a good speech in support of the bill and very materially assisted in its passage."

VOTE FOR Loss Woods for SHERIFF

Eastland County is fortunate in having two excellent candidates seeking the Sheriff's office — one, a young man, the other thoroughly mature and in his prime.

Loss Woods has lived in Eastland County for 46 years, the last 7 1-2 years he has served as deputy in the Sheriff's office. Previous to this time he made his living from revenue earned on his farm in the Staff community.

His neighbors in the Staff box gave him 38 votes and his opponent 4, which proves beyond any question what they think of Loss Woods and his family.

Now is the time to place Loss Woods in the Sheriff's office, and thereby elect a man who by training, experience and natural ability is thoroughly qualified to serve Eastland County as an excellent Sheriff.

In appreciation of the long and faithful services rendered the people by Mr. Woods, his many friends believe that he should now be rewarded by electing him Sheriff of Eastland County.
