Eastland Coaches Begin Task of Building Team Around Lettermen

The task of building this year's edition of the Maverick football team around seven lettermen from last season's squad was begun in earnest Monday by Coach Johnnie Kitchen and Assistant Carl Miller at Welch Field.

Only drilling of elementaries for the next two weeks was in sight for the 20 youths who reported. A twice-a-day schedule of the fundamentals will be adhered to, it was announced by the coach.

Coach Kitchen started the boys out with passing and receiving the ball to get the future Maverick men acquainted with the feeling of the pigskin. It was evident that even the veterans would need several days of practice to dissipate the summer softness.

Although the squad as a whole is new to football, onlookers agreed the outlook isn't as dark as the lettermen balanced against the rookies appear on paper.

Jim Gilbreath, lanky rookie with the appearance of plenty of leg power, looked promising. Billy Blake Wood, another of the rookies, was catching on fast and from

NO CHANGES ARE NOTED IN STATE RACES

DALLAS, Aug. 24.—Representative Thomas L. Blanton, congressional "watchdog of the public treasury" for nearly 20 years, had been replaced today by County Judge Clyde Garrett of Eastland as tabulations of returns from the democratic runoff Saturday was resumed.

Blanton, admitting he could "take defeat on the chin," was buried under an almost two to one vote for his opponent.

The strict oil conservation policies of Col. E. O. Thompson of the Texas Railroad Commission, likewise appeared victorious as returns gave him almost double total of Frank Morris.

Thompson's victory boosted further political fortunes, expected to carry him into the governor's campaign in 1938, with Attorney General William McCraw as an opponent.

J. E. McDonald, agricultural commissioner, gained an overwhelming majority over George B. Terrell.

Albert Thomas, Houston attorney, had a sizeable majority over Mayor Holcombe of Houston in the eighth congressional district and Rep. W. D. McFarlane of Graham, apparently won nomination in the 13th district over Ed Gossett of Vernon.

The election bureau considered the results conclusive in the railroad commission and agriculture commission races and announced no further tabulation would be made. The tabulations showed:

Railroad commission, Thompson 449,719; Morris 290,649. Agriculture commissioner, McDonald 418,915; Terrell 301,219. Congressional district 17 (12 counties incomplete) Garrett 31,377; Blanton 17,059.

Mrs. Dixie Williamson of Eastland left immediately for Midland, as did Mr. Mouser from Ft. Worth, to be with Mrs. Leonard.

The funeral cortege left Midland with the body, Monday morning at eight o'clock for Eastland, where the body was to be taken to the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Poe.

Funeral services are to be held Tuesday, 4 p. m., Methodist church, with the pastor, Reverend E. R. Stanford, officiating. Interment will be in the Eastland Cemetery.

Next Term Will Be No Party For President

No matter who wins the coming election, a lonely and frequently very tired man is going to be occupying the White House during the next four years.

For the country is in the midst of a period of considerable stress, and the focal point of this stress will rest squarely in the middle of the executive mansion.

He will be forced to decide whether the United States is going to swing to the right or to the left during the next four years. Whoever the winner is, the pressure on him will be tremendous.

He will have to direct the foreign policy of the most powerful nation in the world at a time when—unless all observers are mistaken—the world will be in greater danger of stumbling into war at any time since 1918.

He will be faced with the titanic task of erecting defenses against the drouth and erosion that have become so dangerous to our future as an agricultural nation.

He will be held responsible, rightly or wrongly, for the maintenance of American prosperity in a world which is following selfish and blind nationalistic policies that lead away from prosperity.

It is the same way with unemployment. Here, again, the president should not be held wholly responsible, or even chiefly responsible, for the growth or diminution of that terrible problem.

Most important of all, he will have to furnish the people of America with a moral and emotional rallying point. The people are tired and confused, and they have been that way for years.

One of these days they may do some very distressing things if that conviction and that leadership are not given them. It is going to be up to the president to meet that demand.

It is hard to think of any man on earth on whom more will depend than the President of the United States in the next four years.

The campaign is beginning to speed up, and hard things will be said about both candidates for the next couple of months. Before we get too emotional, we might stop to give the winner, whoever he is—Roosevelt or Landon—our deepest sympathy.

Several learned interpreters of the Holy Scripture take this apostle to have been the same as Nathaniel, a native of Cana, in Galilee, a doctor in the Jewish law, and one of the seventy-two disciples of Christ, to whom he was conducted by St. Philip, and whose innocence deserved to be celebrated with the highest praise by the divine mouth of Our Redeemer.

Rural highway surveys or road planning programs are now in progress or soon will begin, in 36 states, according to latest information received by the American Petroleum Industries Committee. These road studies are being undertaken to supply the necessary information to place future highway improvements on a sound and business-like basis.

Systematic highway planning has been advocated by the Committee for several years as an important method of reducing highway taxes, since such studies enable construction programs to be carried out with a maximum of economy and saving to taxpayers.

The U. S. Bureau of Public Roads has pointed out that, in the past attention has been centered chiefly on improving main highways, whereas, more attention in the future must be devoted to improving secondary and feeder roads as well as conditions at points where the main highways pour their traffic into cities.

In each state where road surveys are being undertaken, federal highway officials are guiding the work. Each survey consists of three parts, namely, a highway condition survey, a highway traffic survey and a highway finance study.

The highway condition survey consists of a complete road inventory of every mile of passable roadway existing in the state, showing the mileage, types, width of right of way, character of grades, slight distances, curvatures, grade crossings, sidewalks, and other forms, kinds and character of thoroughfares.

It also includes the plotting of regular bus routes, truck routes, aviation landing fields, railroads, navigable waterways, bridges over major streams (free and toll), ferries, and information on the location of dwellings, stores, factories, churches, schools, mines, oil fields.

The traffic survey shows the character and extent of traffic on the various roads of the state, accumulated through various types of counts and checks. The information obtained from these counts together with that obtained through the highway condition survey will indicate the road improvements needed, thereby enabling highway officials to gauge more accurately the revenues necessary.

The financial and use surveys cover the costs, expenditures and revenues of the highways of the state. This includes a study of gasoline taxes, registration fees, carrier special taxes, and diversions, the yield of the various taxes, who pays them and the share paid by rural and urban residents respectively. It will also include all other state and local revenues available for road purposes.

Tips Are Given On Preparing for A Fall Garden

COLLEGE STATION — "Fall gardening is a waste of time and effort unless the soil is thoroughly prepared," J. F. Rosborough, extension horticulturist, said recently.

"Most gardeners go wrong in turning under a growth of weeds and dried up spring vegetables. Cutting the weeds and throwing them over the fence before plowing is the first step toward a successful garden," he added. "Turned-under weeds heat and dry out the soil above and prevent thorough cultivation.

In most barn lots at this time of the year there is a layer of tramped manure that has dried out, losing the acids that burn plants. After the garden has been plowed, spread a coating of one to three inches of this 'summer manure' over the surface, then rebreak the ground or disc and harrow it until it is well mixed into the soil. This 'spongy' material will greatly increase the water-holding capacity of the soil and prevent it from packing. When fall rains come, the garden soil handled in this way will be ready for planting.

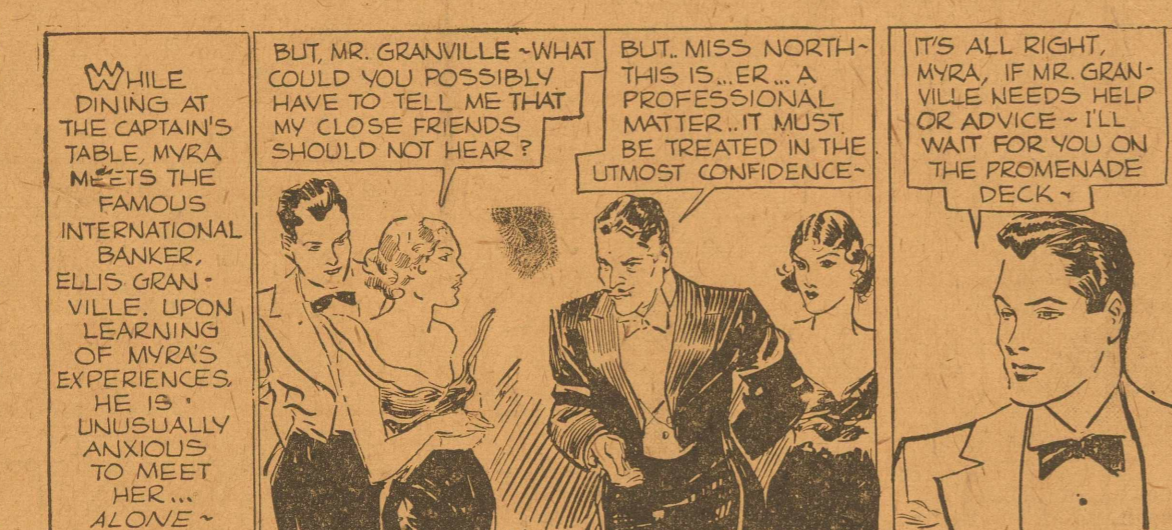

"It is often hard to get the fall crop of potatoes to come up even when there is enough moisture. Potatoes from the spring crop should have at least six weeks of rest between harvest and planting time before they can be expected to sprout. To encourage sprouting, there are two methods of treating seed potatoes that may be used. One is to cover the potatoes with damp straw, after placing in a shady location, and when sprouting begins, plant. The other is to treat seed potatoes with a solution of 1 pint of ethylene chlorhydrin to 4 gallons of water. This quantity of solution will treat 5 bushels of potatoes.

"In treating the potatoes with this chemical, cut the seed in the usual way about eight hours before planting. Even where small potatoes are being used, cut them on one side. Dip the seed pieces in the solution and then place in to a barrel or tight box and cover for eight hours. Remove the barrel and plant immediately."

Strenuous Cure Is Used to Combat Bite of a Spider

By United Press
McALLEN, Tex. — L. A. Tipps, McAllen farmer, came forward this week with a strenuous but apparently effective method of combating the poison of the deadly "black widow" spider. Tipps told newspapermen he was bitten while in an outhouse at his farm. He captured the spider when he noticed the sting, then called his physician, to whom he gives full credit for his recovery.

Kerrville to Vote On a Bond Issue

KERRVILLE — In September, the city of Kerrville will vote on a $30,000 bond issue to raise funds for a city hall. The bonds will be self-liquidating, not requiring a raise in taxes. Rental for city offices and fire station amounts to $1,620, which sum would be used to retire the bonds and four per cent interest. Included in the plans for the proposed building are a main portion, 55 by 113 feet, fire station 36 by 40 feet, office spaces, city jail and council chamber available for public use.

Increase In Tax On Gasoline Killed In Pennsylvania

Opposition on the part of motorists and of the public has resulted in defeat of a bill at the special session of the Pennsylvania legislature, just adjourned, which would have increased the state tax on gasoline from 4c to 5c a gallon, and would have given the Keystone state one of the heaviest gasoline levies in the East.

From the opening day of the special session, when the measure was introduced, increasing opposition developed to the plan for taking $12,000,000 out of the pockets of the state's motorists to meet the general expenses of the state. As a result the bill died in the Ways and Means committee of the House, without being reported.

Mistakes Made In Montgomery Ward Ad in Sunday Times

In the advertisement of Montgomery Ward that appeared in Sunday's paper were three prices that were wrong. In the radio advertisement as shown in Sunday's Times the price appeared as $9.98 when it should have been $10.98.

The two-piece living room suite should have been $54.94, and the solid oak 5-piece dining room suite should have been $24.94.

In every printing office there is a "devil"—he is the one who gets the blame for everything that goes wrong. But in this case in the rush of getting the election returns and giving them to the proof of the Ward advertisement was overlooked and the Times is making the correction today.

BRENT sat in the office of the city's chief of detectives. "What do you know," he asked bluntly, "about 'The Red Poppy' and the man who owns it?"

Michael Donovan studied Brent thoughtfully for a moment before he replied. "Maybe more than has been in the papers. It's no place for fools and babies. As for the man who owns it—Black is his name—I'd say he has a tough heart under a soft shirt."

The chief went on to give Brent detailed information about Black, his dealings, and his methods. When Brent was gone the detective sat alone for a while, a frown between his keen, dark eyes.

The sudden notoriety that had come to "Franchy's" resulted in a capacity crowd for the evening meal.

One garrulous person on the grounds had won an audience of sensation seekers.

"I saw that couple—the robber and the girl—when they came in," he said. "She was pretty as a picture, but she looked worried and didn't seem to be eating much. She kept sending notes to the boys in the orchestra, asking them to play different pieces."

A man, who had driven up a short while before in an antiquated automobile, pressed closer while the short, baldheaded man was speaking.

"Then what happened?" the stranger asked.

"Then the police came," the baldheaded man said. "Everybody thought the place was being raided, but the police were after this bank robber and damn if they didn't draw a bead on him right over my head! My table was close to this couple, and if I hadn't

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MOLLY MILFORD, rich and popular, has received proposals of marriage from three suitors, but BRENT SQUART, whom she loves, has not asked her to marry him.

Bored with parties, Molly goes to "The Red Poppy," a questionable night club, with another admirer, WICK ROSS. The lights go out and when they come on Molly finds herself dancing with a handsome stranger. He tells her his name is "NELSON WHITE-TAKER." In reality he is NELSON FERGUSON, bank robber, one of a group planning to split Molly away and hold her for ransom.

A few days later he asks her to have dinner with him and she agrees. Waiting for him at a downtown store, Molly encounters a girl who is her exact double. Impulsively Molly exchanges her luxurious costume for the other girl's shabby one.

Molly and "Whiteaker" go to a place called "Franchy's." Police arrive and there is shooting in which "Whiteaker" is fatally injured. Molly is forced into a car and taken to a deserted farm home.

Brent Stuart, convinced that Molly is still alive, sets out to find her.

ducked when the firing began I wouldn't be telling this tale."

"Do you live on this side of the river?"

"Born on this side."

"You must know the locality pretty well."

"Every word of it."

"I'm thinking of taking a place out here. Maybe you could tell me if there are any empty houses around."

one he carried in memory. Perhaps there was another car in the garage. He straightened, and felt a heavy hand on his shoulder.

"What, my prowling friend, is the object of your call this evening? Chickens? Cars? You tell me."

Brent laughed. "I was looking for Mr. Black. This is such a queer, run-down place I thought Bill Patrick had made a mistake about it. So I was looking at the license number to make sure."

"Not so fast, my friend. What do you say to stepping inside?"

HE was trapped! And Molly was here. Brent was certain of it.

He controlled his voice with an effort. "Just as you say."

"We came out for a 1st. Black was nervous. And here Patrick sends you out. How'd it happen?"

"I was doing some work on the building," Brent lied glibly. "The roof leaked from that last rain. Bill needed somebody to take a message and he offered me $5 to make the trip. I was glad to do it, too."

"We'll see what Black thinks of your message. First I'll relieve you of your gun. Guess you wouldn't be making a lonely trip like this without carrying a gun. It wouldn't be right safe, would it?"

"I'd happen to bring one. I'll—"

"Patrick told you to bring a gun!"

"Not exact! He said it was pretty dark and he'd be afraid to make the trip. I said I wasn't, but I thought I might be held up. You never can tell on a dark highway."

"I understand. Guns is sure treacherous. While you're here I'll take care of yours. You don't mind?"

Brent handed over his gun, watching the bulge in the other's pocket that was partly a mean piece of artillery and partly a hand which he knew was accustomed to using it.

"Here's Black now."

Brent turned and faced the night club owner, whose dark eyes raked him ominously—taking in the laborer's garb and tumbled hair.

"Patrick said two men were coming to 'The Red Poppy' to talk with you tonight. He said it was necessary for you to be there."

"I'm going in, but not because of your message. I have an idea you're a damn sneak. I'm taking my wife back to town. There's a job Louis and I got so do before daybreak—maybe two jobs—that might bother her. Women are funny that way."

Hubam Clover Is A Good Erosion Control Crop

GARLAND, Texas — Approximately 4,000 pounds of Hubam clover seed have been harvested and threshed on 12.5 acres of land on five farms in the Duck Creek soil conservation service project area. The clover was planted in February in strips and on steep eroded areas for erosion control.

Hubam, unlike the biennial white sweet clover, is an annual and produces a seed crop each year while the biennial variety does not seed until the second year after planting. The clover has a tap root system with numerous lateral roots, making it an excellent crop for erosion control when planted in broadcast on the contour.

As a soil building crop, Hubam should compare favorably with the biennial sweet clover. According to P. B. Dunkle of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at Denton, wheat rotated with sweet clover increased its yield 117 per cent over continuous cropping; oats 66 per cent; corn 13 per cent and cotton 22 per cent.

The Hubam crop may be cut early for hay, and a second cutting may be made later for seed, or an early cutting for hay with the second crop turned under for soil building purposes. Hubam seed production offers some possibilities as a paying enterprise for the black land of Texas.

R. L. Hargrove of the New Hope community reports that Hubam planted on eroded Johnson grass land made fair growth. The crop was cut after the Johnson grass headed, and fed to work stock. Albert Corley of the Handley community stated that hay cut early in June made good forage

Smallest Rose Is Placed On Exhibit

DALLAS, Tex. — The smallest red rose in the world—so tiny that a thimble will fit over its bloom and a coffee pot over the full grown plant — was exhibited for the first time in the Southwest at the American Association of Nurserymen's convention at Dallas.

The rose was patented the Tom Thumb and is owned by Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa.

"The Tom Thumb," he said, "will grow where any good garden vegetable will thrive. It can be used for bordering, in rock gardens and is charming in children's gardens."

"The plant is adaptable for those who live in apartments, for one bush can be planted in a small flower pot successfully, provided it is given sufficient sunlight."
