Dairymen Urged To Make Use of Trench Silo Plan

Because the feed crop in Eastland County has been cut short due to the drought, and burned up feed is almost worthless for hay, County Agent Cook is urging every dairyman and livestock raiser of the county to put everything available in trench silos. A letter on trench silos which has just been received from E. D. Euday, Extension Dairyman, covers the subject as follows:

"The dairyman in this sort of situation will have hard going this winter unless he takes steps to save the burned up feed in such a way that it will make good feed. This can be done. The answer is the trench silo. Put this burned up feed in a trench silo and add about five barrels of water per ton of feed, and it will make pretty good feed. Nearly every farmer can find something to put in the trench silo. He may use Johnson grass, sudan grass, sunflowers, carless weeds, blood weeds, tumble weeds, sorghums and corn.

The thing to do is to bury everything the farmer can get his hands on. The dairyman that has plenty of roughage can get by in good shape, since he can afford to buy concentrates, but he cannot afford to buy both concentrates and roughage.

These feeds when put in a trench silo will provide a succulent roughage which will produce more milk than will dry roughages. They can be put in the trench silo at very little cost. They may be cut with a grain binder, a row binder or by hand. The whole bundles or stalks may be put in the trench. Therefore, the silage cutter is not necessary. All the feed may be cut down before the farm starts filling the trench. By so doing, he will not need to hire any extra help.

Shingle the bundles in the trench and wet them good. A trench deeper than three feet need not be filled in one day. Put down a two-foot layer of feed each day and wet it good with water. When you have it full, cover with at least twelve inches of dirt. The trench may be opened and feeding started in three weeks after filling.

Every dairyman should plant one acre of small grain (wheat, barley, or oats) for each row. This should be done in September if he gets rain. Grain planted in September will provide more grazing in the fall and winter than will grain sown later on. Early sown grain will usually stand more cold than at sown grain.

Good small grain pasture will supply the cow all the feed nutrients she needs to produce two gallons of milk daily. If you have two gallons cows, you will not need other feed than this. Plenty of small grain pasture will provide the cheapest way to get through the fall, winter and spring.

Search Is Begun For Oldest Terrace

Where and when were the first terraces in Eastland County built? County Agent Elmo V. Cook is anxious to locate the farm having the oldest terraces in order to study the effects of terraces over a long period of years and to compare the productivity of land protected by terraces with fields exposed to erosion.

It is estimated that 12,000 acres of farm land in Eastland County have been terraced under the supervision of county agents. These terraces have been constructed largely with farm power and often with home made drags. Many hundreds of these acres have been terraced without any cash outlay, Agent Cook states. In recent years the county commissioners have used road machinery to build terraces on many farms. The cost of terracing with heavy machinery is usually below $1 an acre.

"In the early years it was difficult for the county agents to persuade farmers to build terraces," the agent said. "Here and there a few farsighted men agreed to use their farms as demonstrations. Before long the neighbors could see the improved crops growing in the fields where terraces protected the rich top soil from gullying and sheet erosion, and held the water on the land until most of it was absorbed."

Information in the form of a letter or a visit to the office about these old terraces in the county will be appreciated by the county agent. Stories about early terracing will be given to the newspapers as they are collected.

Political Influence, Organization Urged by State Medical Head For Fight Against Socialized Medicine

Organization of county medical societies to oppose any efforts to socialize medicine was recommended by Dr. H. R. Dudgeon, president of the State Medical Society, of Waco, to members of the North-west Texas District Medical Association in semi-annual convention Tuesday at Eastland.

Dr. Dudgeon, speaking at the Lyric theatre, where sessions were held, pointed out also that medical associations must exercise political influence to "stave off" socialized medicine.

The state medical association president interpreted security legislation as a wedge to socialized medicine. "We must keep the public informed and answer the charges against private practice," Dr. Dudgeon declared.

Fifty-one members of the society had registered up to noon and many more from the 19 counties which compose the district were expected.

Also heard Tuesday morning were Dr. Don C. Peterson of Austin, of the State Department of Public Health, and Dr. O. T. Kimbrough, who led discussion.

Dr. L. H. Reeves of Fort Worth was the final speaker before the noon recess, when a luncheon was given by the Eastland County society on the Comelae hotel room in honor of the visiting doctors and ladies of the auxiliary.

Rev. Charles W. Estes of Eastland gave the invocation at the opening of the meeting.

TEXAS DEMOCRATS GETTING DOWN TO BUSINESS TODAY AT FT. WORTH CONVENTION

FORT WORTH, Sept. 8.—Opponents of ratification of the child labor amendment to the federal constitution gained recruits today at caucuses.

Hunt county and numerous others voted to oppose the proposed platform plank. So strong was the opposition that a hurried conference was held by sponsors of ratification. They decided to leave the plank in the draft to be presented to the platform committee.

Congressman Fritz Lanham of Fort Worth welcomed the delegates. He dubbed Roosevelt, Garner and Alfred as "the three mucketeers of democracy" as applause reverberated through the hall.

The announcement was made by R. L. Higginbotham, general chairman of the Kokomo Community Fair.

The reason given for the postponement was that so many farmers were busy gathering the peanut crop that they had little time in which to prepare their exhibits.

All farmers living in the Kokomo community were urged by Higginbotham to attend the fair and to have their exhibits prepared in time for the opening on Saturday morning.

DROUGHT CUTS COTTON CROP OVER SOUTH

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—American agriculture's worst drought badly seared Western fields of the cotton belt last month and today brought a federal crop reporting board estimate of an 11,121,000 bales of the 1936 crop, a reduction of 1,360,000 bales since August 1.

The drought effects were felt most severely in fields from Tennessee west into Texas and Oklahoma.

Despite the drastic reduction today's report presented an estimated crop of some 500,000 larger than the 1935 harvest and 1,500,000 bales greater than in 1934.

"The damage is most serious in Oklahoma and Northwest Texas, where many fields are almost a complete failure," the board said. In South Texas losses from the boll weevil have been heavy.

The reports showed Texas' acreage was 11,838,000; its condition 52 per cent of normal; the estimated yield, 123 pounds of lint per acre, and production of 8,036,000 bales.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Cotton futures advanced $1.45 to $2.25 a bale today on a forecast by the Government for a cotton crop of more than 1,250,000 bales below the August 1 forecast.

In War Or Traffic, Innocents Still Die

Americans read with horror the lurid stories from Spain of a conflict taking an average of perhaps 1000 lives a day. At least 30,000 are dead in Spain in the death struggle that is now more than a month old.

Horrible! Yet in the last seven months 18,560 Americans have also been killed, violently, their blood crimsoning the pavements, their mutilation and agonies no less sickening and sharp.

They are just as dead as their Spanish brothers, without even such satisfaction as there may be in dying for a cause.

They are the traffic victims. If their toll increases during the latter part of the year, as it usually does, then the casualty list will be higher this year than ever before. Last year 37,000 died, probably a greater cost in life than the Spanish revolt told to date.

This in spite of widespread safety drives and a mass of publicity for highway safety that has not been equaled in many years.

Get what solace you can from the thought that this increased toll probably is due primarily to more cars on the roads. Gasoline consumption was up 10 per cent in May as compared to a year ago, and traffic is probably up in proportion. Your own observation of tourists and traffic in town will verify this.

Statistical sharks figure that the deaths per 10,000,000 gallons of gasoline used have actually lessened somewhat, which is hopeful. But the fact that certain states have made marked reductions in their traffic toll augurs badly for the others.

New Hampshire, for instance, reports a 31 per cent reduction. That means that somebody else is falling down on the job.

Tentative figures do tend to show that states which have rigid drivers' license laws have been leaders in reducing their auto toll, since those laws make it easier to get obviously dangerous drivers off the streets.

But, in the long run, the law won't settle the problem. It can't. Nobody can make a genuine dent in the slaughter of the innocents except you, and you, and you. The man behind the wheel is the one who holds in his hands life and death, not only for himself, but for others.

There have been few campaign speeches so far, so Mother Nature must accept full blame for all that hot air.

HOPKINS, Minn., claims the title of "raspberry capital of the nation." In recent months, we thought Washington, D. C., had a monopoly on the crop.

TODAY IS OURS

by NARD JONES

BEGIN HERE TODAY
JUDITH HOWARD, engaged to STEPHEN FOWLER for four years, breaks the engagement because Stephen is unwilling to marry her and let her continue with her job. Judith is encouraged in this move by her friend, VIRGINIA BENT.

Lonely and unhappy, Judith goes for a walk and steps in front of an approaching automobile. To avoid hitting her, the driver swerves and strikes a fire hydrant. He is injured and taken to a hospital. Judith, feeling responsible, goes along.

At the hospital young DR. EDEN HARRIS tells her the motorist's injuries are not serious. Later Dr. Harris takes her home. In a burst of confidence Judith tells him about her broken engagement.

Next day Judith goes to the office of FRANCIS JARVIS, the injured man, to apologize for her thoughtlessness. Several days pass and Dr. Harris invites Judith to dinner. Later he is obliged to break the engagement.

Judith hears that Steve has landed a big contract and bought a new car. Francis Jarvis comes to see her. He has been drinking and Judith is wondering how to get rid of him when Dr. Harris arrives.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER X
DR. HARRIS' expression was so bland that for a moment Judith feared he had failed to understand she really wanted to be rid of Jarvis.

"Indeed yes," Eden Harris said. "I remember Mr. Jarvis perfectly." He held out his hand, and Jarvis accepted it without enthusiasm. "Personally I've no objection to your company," the young doctor added. "But if Miss Howard feels that you should leave, then of course . . ."

The other's face clouded unpleasantly. "Are you suggesting, Doctor, that you'd put me out?" "Oh, not at all," Harris answered. "At least not yet. For the moment I'm merely suggesting that you act the part of a gentleman, and accept Miss Howard's invitation to leave. If you don't do that, then it becomes a rather personal matter between us."

Jarvis said nothing. Slowly he got to his feet and walked toward Eden Harris. Then, without warning, he struck out at him viciously. But the young physician was apparently prepared. With surprising swiftness he blocked Jarvis' wild swing.

"Don't be a fool," he said quietly. "And don't make your presence here any more unpleasant than you have already."

Avoiding Judith's gaze, Francis Jarvis dropped his hands. Then quickly he took up his hat and stick and left the apartment.

Harris turned to Judith. "Tell me, what have you been doing since I abandoned you in that restaurant?" Judith laughed. "Oh, I've been ordering me 'ut of my apartment."

"So I see." She looked down at him affectionately. "Seriously, I've been bored to death."

"Wondering whether you needed a doctor?" "I wouldn't admit that."

"Have you forgotten—the boy friend?"

JUDITH was silent a moment, and Harris said, "I'm sorry. I shouldn't have asked that."

"Why not? I'll answer it. I—I'm afraid I haven't . . . quite."

"Well!" Harris reached into his pocket, brought out a well-worn pipe and a tobacco pouch. "What do you say we talk about something pleasant? And do you mind if I smoke a very reprehensible pipe?"

"Yes to the first question and no to the second," laughed Judith. "What had threatened to be an unpleasant evening turned out to be a thoroughly delightful one. Released from his arduous duties, Eden Harris relaxed entirely in Judith's company. When the Bents dropped in, an hour later, they found the two in the kitchen making candy."

And when Harris had gone, Virginia whispered to Judith, "Darling, I like that man!"

"So do I," Judith admitted slowly. "I . . . like him, too."

With the realization that she'd found a staunch friend in Eden Harris, Judith's dark philosophy changed as the days went by. Virginia Bent noticed it almost at once; and she told Bob, "Judith's coming out of it now. I was afraid for a while that she wouldn't. Bu, he is!"

She would never have been so optimistic if she had known that on this very day Steve telephoned Judith, asked her to meet him for luncheon, and that she had accepted.

AND it was indeed a different Steve who met Judith Howard in the little restaurant around the corner from the building where she worked. He wore a new suit—a better suit than he had owned for a long time. He seemed utterly sure of himself now, and much more like the Steve Fowler who had, so long ago, offered to see that her ice skates were sharpened properly.

"It's been a long time," he said, looking at her across the table. "Yes," Judith said, avoiding his direct gaze. "I know it has, Steve."

"Why did you let me see you today when all the other times you refused?" She looked up at him. "Because it'd been such a long time. I thought we could talk now—soberly and sensibly."

"Do you know why I wanted to see you?" The question startled her. What reason would there be, except that—well, that he wanted to see her?

"I've heard about you and this fellow Harris," Steve was saying coldly. "And I understand there's some doctor you've been running around with, too."

For a full half minute Judith was so astonished that she could not answer. Then she said, "Steve, that's too absurd even to comment upon." She paused. "I've seen Jarvis twice. And Dr. Harris three or four times. You know how I got acquainted with them?"

"Of course you'd say that." The remark was like a whip-lash. "I'm not asking you to believe it, Stephen. Because what I do now is none of your affair."

HER swift anger seemed to soften him. "But Judith, I . . . doesn't the fact that I still care what you do—doesn't that mean anything to you? Doesn't it mean that I still feel the way I always did?"

"I don't know what it means, Steve. All I know is that we came to the end of things for the two of us."

"But that isn't true," he said quickly. "Judith, I—I've had some luck. It looks now as if I'll be able to do what I wanted all along. Marry you on an income that will let you quit your job."

Judith's intake of breath was sharp and clear, as though someone had tightened a belt at her waist. There it was! Suddenly, unaccountably, here was the thing they had both wanted. But what frightened her, what sent the blood from Judith Howard's face, was not the sudden realization that Stephen Fowler was offering her a marriage that meant a whole new life relieved from office routine. What frightened her was the knowledge that his proposal struck no ecstasy into her being. She liked Steve, yes. Perhaps she still loved him. But something was gone now. Something had been lost, and the fearful thing was that she wasn't sure it would be found again.

"I . . . I don't know, Stephen. I'll have to think about it."

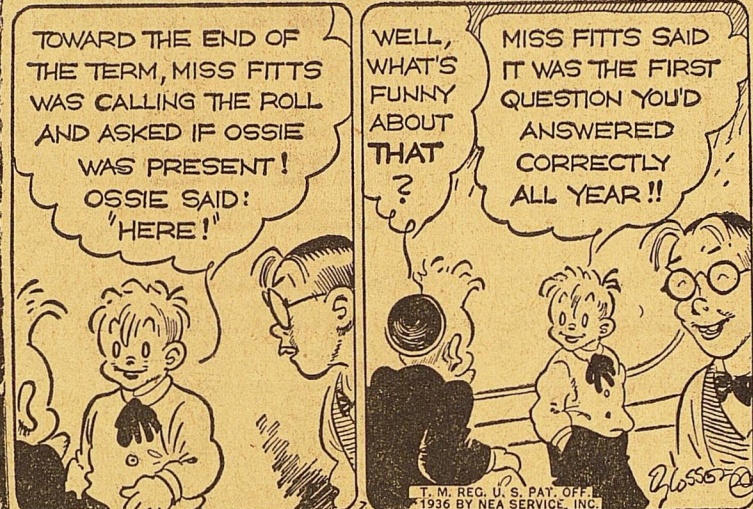

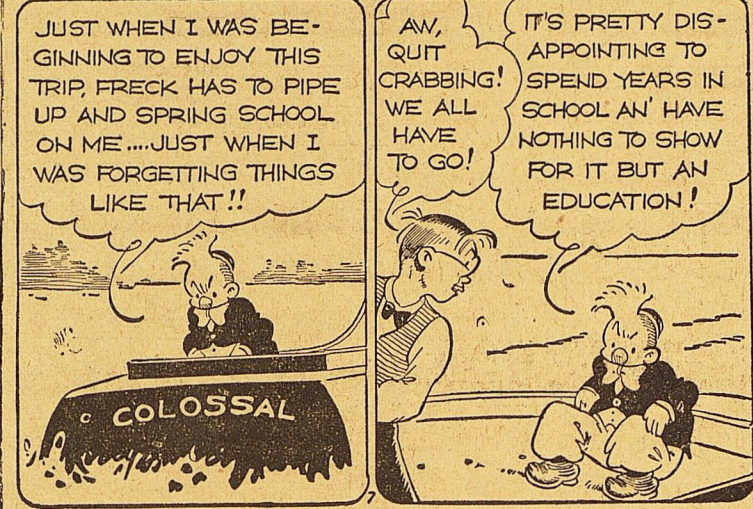

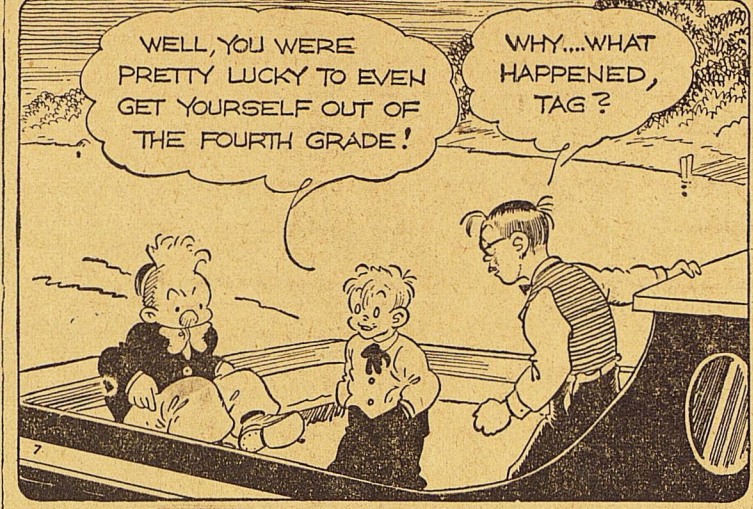

"Think about it! Why, Judith, we've been thinking about it for four years. We—"

Judith nodded slowly. "I know, Steve. But somehow it's all different now."

At 1 o'clock she left a puzzled Steve; and that night she hurried from the office early, avoiding Virginia. She held to her seclusion into the next day, going to work long before Virginia had come to her door. But at noon young Mrs. Bent sought her out, showed a newspaper in front of her. "You may as well see this now as later. Judith!"

worked on the theory that the average home or small office doesn't need a safe that will stand a fire that would destroy a building, since fires rarely burn more than an hour before being extinguished. His wooden safe affords more protection than an ordinary metal filing cabinet, which transmits heat readily and is no protection at all, even against a brief enveloping fire, Starker believes.
He found that a blowtorch, directed against a two-inch plank would not burn through in half an hour and in that time the opposite side of the plank was only moderately warm.

"WE NEED MORE VACATION TRADE"

GET YOUR SHARE WITH CONCRETE ROADS

It's big business—this vacation trade. Retail stores, restaurants, filling stations, hotels, garages, amusement places, farmers—all profit directly from it. And everybody profits indirectly.
Other communities are in competition with yours. That's why it pays to build concrete roads. For tourists like to follow the concrete—just as you do.
Your community will make money and save money if your roads are concrete. Concrete costs less to build than other pavements of equal load-strength, costs far less to maintain and less to drive on. Insist on concrete.

You can have speed—with safety—when you travel by train. Western railroads have speeded up many train schedules but in the whole year of 1935 not one passenger life was lost in a train accident, while millions were carried in perfect safety. This is a record which western railroads strive day and night to maintain.
What makes this fine record possible? Constant vigilance, ceaseless inspection of roadbeds, rails, signal systems, automatic safety devices, engines and cars. Brakemen, conductors, dispatchers, engineers, firemen, inspectors, maintenance-of-way men, oilers, signalmen, switchmen, telegraphers, Pullman porters—all railroad men keep the first railroad commandment, Safety First.
Train travel offers speed with safety, plus air-conditioned comfort, money saving fares and economy meals, new coach comforts, world's finest sleeping cars, dependability in all weather. Ask the railroad agent about travel or shipping by train.

"BLACK-DRAUGHT IS PURELY VEGETABLE" — What Does That Mean?

A great many things can cause constipation and there are many remedies to relieve it, but possibly none more popular than the "vegetable" laxatives.

Among these, Black-Draught is outstanding. In its manufacture, leaves of a certain plant are used, and the roots of certain others. These are dried so they will keep without preservatives... no other chemical change from the way they grew in "Mother Nature's medicine garden." By their being finely ground the digestive system extracts the active medicine right where it is needed. Constipation is relieved.

Black-Draught is so economical that a 25-cent package averages upwards of 25 doses.

Shady Grove Man Tells How Grain Exhibits Prepared

J. W. McKinney of Shady Grove community, who has a reputation at fairs with his grain sorghum exhibits, made the following explanation Saturday to Elmo V. Cook, County Agricultural Agent, of his methods of selecting and preparing heads:

"I go in the field with my knife and a light box and hunt for the low rich spots, where the cane makes the largest growth. I look for the heads that come up to the standard; usually I'll select about one hundred heads to get the ten that I intend to use.

"Then I go to the house and spread them out on a table in rows, being careful that no head loses even a single grain. I then go over them all and select the best head there is in the pile. Size and purity both considered, I then get nine more heads just as much like the first one as possible. "I put the heads in the shade for about six days so that they will dry out, and then wrap each head individually and put them away from mice and weevils."

Confederate Home Property Does Not Have Much Value

AUSTIN—Sale of unused property at the State Confederate Home would not make a dent in the deficit in the Confederate Pension Fund, Claude Teer, chairman of the state Board of Control, believes.

He considered impractical a suggestion that such a sale be made to help overcome the deplorable condition of the Confederate Pension Fund, now more than $5,000,000 in the red.

There are 80 veterans living at the Home. The grounds on West Sixth Street, Austin, are extensive. The buildings would not bring special invitation to attend and all visiting chapter Masons are urged to be present.

Notices have been mailed over the district and a large crowd is expected to attend.

much at sale, Teer said, and the real estate would have a low price because of a ravine that traverses it. It might be used as a real estate venture by dividing it into home sites.

The property is held by the state. It can be disposed of only by act of the legislature. Teer considered it doubtful that the legislature would authorize a sale. Later, when the handful of Confederate survivors become still smaller, he thought it possible the state might use the property and buildings for a hospital for crippled children.

The Confederate Women's Home, Austin, will be needed for many more years for its present uses, Teer said. It houses about 100 widows of veterans. The widows have a much younger age average than the veterans.

Library Notes Births And Assists Parents

FOND DU LAC, Wis. — When babies are born in Fond du Lac, not only are they greeted by happy parents but by a representative of the city library as well.

Miss Lella Janes, staff librarian, explains: "When a new baby is registered, the municipal health officer notifies the library, furnishing the name and address of the parents. We send out to the mother a list of books on the care of infants."

Not only do parents benefit, but potential library customers are secured, Miss Janes admits.
