COMMODITIES EXCHANGE IS RULED VALID

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 11.—The commodities exchange pact was held constitutional today by federal judge Albert Reeves in refusing a temporary injunction to prohibit its enforcement.

The Kansas City Board of Trade requested the injunction.

Judge Reeves ruled, in effect, it was too early to challenge the act as it does not go into effect until Sept. 13.

The act, passed by the last session of congress, as an amendment to the grain futures act, broadens the act to bring under federal regulation along with grain trading and other commodities, such as cotton, mill feeds, eggs and potatoes.

The act also imposes further regulations and provides that boards of trade shall by registrations accept the rules of the commodities exchange board, set up to administer the law.

Committee Named To Aid Coordinator Vocational Training

W. T. Walton, superintendent of the Ranger schools, today appointed an advisory committee of six men to work with O. L. McGahey in perfecting plans for the vocational training school being conducted in connection with the Ranger high school.

The committee is composed of Carl Garner, shop foreman of the Times Publishing Company; P. E. Moore, bookkeeper for Hassen Company; H. T. Schooley, local bakery owner; J. E. Meroney, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce; J. Cleo Powell, principal of the Ranger high school, and Walton.

The latter two are ex-officio members of the committee which is to advise with McGahey.

The first meeting of the group is to be held in the office of the Chamber of Commerce Monday night at 7:30, at which time the plan of apprenticeship and instruction is to be discussed and explained and plans formulated for putting the system into active operation in the Ranger.

This is a new phase of school work that is being introduced in this part of the country for the first time, but which has proven successful in other states and in several foreign countries. Under the system youths are put to work as apprentices in various trades while their education is being continued along lines that will aid them in their chosen work.

ALLRED WRITES FORMAL CALL FOR SESSION

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 11.—Gov. Allred today dictated his formal call for the special session of the Texas legislature to open Sept. 28.

It will convene the legislators to "fully finance payment of pensions to all those eligible to assistance" under the existing law. It will also convene to consider "such matters as the governor may decide to submit."

What these matters are has not been decided, Allred said he was undecided about submitting the topic of creating a state welfare department.

Two "fully financed" old age pensions will take $2,000,000 a month, according to a rough estimate made today by Orville Carpenter, state pension director. Half of this would be state funds and half federal.

Today Carpenter requested the national social security board to furnish $3,000,000 for old age assistance in Oct., Nov. and Dec. Carpenter estimated that the pension rolls will total between 100,000 and 125,000 when complete.

Allred planned to leave for the country "carrying a supply of tax information. While absent he will prepare recommendations for the legislature."

Spain today closed the eight weeks of its civil war.

Some of its architectural marks are in ruins, and even towns destroyed. Estimates put the death toll far above 60,000 and some estimated 100,000 had been killed. In the American civil war, which lasted four years, 163,000 men died.

The loyalists today besieged the Toledo-Alcazar historic palace and fortress, Huseva in the northeast and Oviedo in the northwest and other towns.

The situation was one of complete chaos. Fighting is going on all over the country in towns, cities, villages and in the open country.

The Real War Cost

If you would like to get a notion of the cost of the civil war now raging in Spain, you might cast your eye over this one sentence from a recent United Press dispatch from the scene of action:

"It is estimated that there are now 38,000 widows and 77,000 orphans as a result of the war."

It is hard to make those figures mean what they should mean unless you do just a little meditating. Picture, first, the despair, the loneliness, the sense of personal loss, and the haunting fear of the future which come to a woman when her husband is taken away—and then multiply by 38,000.

Next, imagine the tragic bewilderment, the incomprehending misery, the cruel desolation of a child which has lost its father—and, if you are able, picture 77,000 such children.

In that way you may be able to get a glimmering of the true cost of a war.

Fix The Pump

If President Roosevelt's extended tour of the drouth states had served no other purpose than to focus public attention in the need for a permanent rehabilitation program in the west, it would have been eminently worth while.

Out of the tragic experiences of the last three years has come the realization that temporary measures aren't going to solve the problem. In the words of the Great Plains Drouth committee:

"Something permanent must be undertaken to check a condition which, since Jan. 1, 1933, has cost the federal government in relief expenditures and loans a total of $355,000,000, in addition to $140,000,000 for work designed to conserve physical assets, exclusive of the 1936 drouth expenditures."

It's about time we fixed the pump. It has been primed long enough.

With streamline trains getting popular, any live musician will see the possibilities in arranging "Casey Jones" as a rumba.

Expects 12-Ton Magnet to Bare Cosmic Ray Secret

By United Press
CHICAGO — A 12-ton magnet with which Prof Arthur H. Compton, University of Chicago physicist, hopes to probe deeper into the secrets of the cosmic ray, is nearing completion at university laboratories.

The magnet, designed by Compton and his research associate, Hayden Jones, is expected to den in turn cooled by running water. Effectiveness of the cooling system, Compton said, is an important element in the operation of the magnet because the limit to the amount of power developed is the amount of heat which is carried off.

Compton, leading cosmic ray vepol a magnetic field equivalent to 40,000 times the strength of the earth's magnetic field over a cubic foot.

It will be used in experiments on high energy particles—such as the cosmic ray—in an attempt to rewrite electrical laws which the high energy articles do not obey.

Five miles of three-quarter inch wide copper strips wound in spirals make up poles of the magnet.

Oil containers have been designed to carry off heat, the oil authority, concluded from experi-

29,653 Loans Made To Buy Livestock For Texas Farms

By United Press
DALLAS—The Resettlement administration has released figures showing loans made to 29,653 Texas farm families for the purchase of livestock, equipment and supplies.

The average amount of the loan was $304, repayable in one to five years. Interest is 5 per cent. One dollar out of every three loaned was used for the purchase of livestock, according to the RA.

Total amount loaned in Texas was $9,011,000. Livestock investment amounted to $2,866,404. This sum purchased 17,311 mules, 9,286 horses, 7,932 cows, 13,926 hogs and 80,186 chickens.

The RA has placed enough land for 553 farms under option. This Crawford, 56, Electra oil operator, land will be sold to farmers from low-income groups. These farmers will be selected with the aid of a death was suicide.

county advisory committee. They will be placed on the land under a five-year lease contract.

During the five years of their contract tenancy they will have an opportunity to accumulate enough to make a down payment of 15 per cent of the contract price. After that time, if both RA and tenant are agreed on the value of the farm, the tenant will execute a sale contract by which he will have 40 years to make payment, interest being set at 3 per cent.

Only the best land will be used for these farms, and it is supposed to be bought at such a price as is justified by past production.

Job Insurance Group Is Formed

AUSTIN — An organization already existing likely will be recommended to administer unemployment insurance in Texas, if it is found a bill of the subject can be enacted without a change in the State Constitution.

The State Re-Employment organization has been operating more than a year and is in an advantageous position to combine the two functions.

Principal practical drawback is that the re-employment administration has been placed under civil service. Jobs to be distributed are helpful in getting legislative support for the new function.

Costly Well Is Paying Farmer Big Dividend

By United Press
JUNEAU, Wis.,—Ed Uecker, owner of Hustisford farm, got the last laugh on his neighbors this summer.
Last year, the neighbors laughed when he hired an expert crew to drill a 600-foot well on his 40-acre orchard and garden plot. He installed a power pump with a capacity of 300 gallons a minute and constructed pipe lines to carry water to ditches dug through his farm.

While his neighbors saw their crops wither, Ed this summer enjoyed one of the best harvests in years. He believes this year's return will pay for the entire irrigation system.

MARRIED—On Wednesday evening, August 2, 1936, at the home of J. T. Champan at Gorman, Miss Betty Westmoreland and Mr. Odus Goforth were married in the presence of a number of relatives and friends. The bride is a graduate of the Gorman high school. The groom was reared in Desdemona.

Both bride and groom are popular young people of the two towns. They are making their home in an apartment at the Bedford hotel. Their many friends are extending congratulations and good wishes to them.
Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Acrea and baby left for their vacation on Tuesday last week. They went by Ranger and her mother, Mrs. T. E. Pritchett, went from there with them to Dallas, where they visited relatives and attended the Centennial. They also visited several other places. During their absence his brother, Rollie Acrea, of Alexander, had charge of the Acrea garage.
Brown Ray of Freer came Friday for a visit with old friends and neighbors here and also to look after his property.
W. C. Bedford drove to Cisco Friday and brought home his daughter, Mrs. Betty Vestal, who had spent a week there visiting her aunt, Mrs. D. K. Scott, and also her friends, Mrs. G. W. Troxell and family.
Mrs. John C. Spradley and two sons left Saturday for their home at Longview after a visit of several days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Stover. Mrs. A. D. Jones of Gladewater, another daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stover, and her family, had also visited her parents the first of last week. The oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Jones, A. D., Jr., who is 13 years old, remained here with his grandparents and will attend our high school. He had spent the summer here and just after going home a month ago he was out at a lake and saw a fish and dived for it in the shallow water, and in some way a bone in his neck was broken. Fortunately a bone specialist from New York was in Gladewater and treated the injury, placing the boy's neck in a plaster cast which he will wear for quite a while.

TRANS-PACIFIC FLIGHT

Kay Dunn (Posed by Mildred Shelley of United Airlines)

BEGIN HERE TODAY

KAY DUNN, pretty young nurse, applies for a job as stewardess on Overland Airways. In the Overland office she encounters TED GRAHAM, veteran pilot of Trans-Pacific Airways, and, largely due to his intervention, is told she will be employed for a trial period, providing she passes the physical examination.

Kay hurries away and Graham stays to chat with his old friend, CHARLES BENTON, chief of the personnel department of Overland Airways. Graham, whose wife died 15 years before, has an adopted son, DICKIE, 7 years old.

Benton asks about Dickie and Graham says, "He's hard as nails. It's me. Doesn't need the female influence."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER II

Men looked up when the second girl was admitted. Doris Lee came in swinging her lamp at her side. Her face was flushed and the secretary appeared behind her, protesting.

"It was my turn and I'm here!" Doris Lee said. "Now you run along and shuffle your papers, young man."

The determined young woman sat down in the chair Benton offered her. "That secretary of yours didn't want to let me in," she announced, "and it was my turn. The idea! He said I was excess baggage! So I said to him—"

Ted looked at her and laughed. Her cheeks were still flushed with wrath and indignation. She was pretty, with blond coloring and her figure was robust, but not too heavy for the job of stewardess on a plane. She had an air of being able to take care of herself.

"Name?"

"Doris Lee."

While the chief of the personnel department went over the details on her card, Doris went on talking to much of which Benton did not listen. "And so one day I just got up and walked out of the hospital," she said. "I was fed up with the job."

"Just what were your duties at the hospital, Miss Lee?"

"Looking after the nuts!"

"Oh, a nurse at a hospital for mental disorders?"

"Disorders?" Suddenly Doris slapped a hand on her lap, and laughed. "They were nuts!"

Benton coughed discreetly, while the girl went on. "I never thought Doris Lee would spend two years playing tag with such a menagerie. There was one man who threatened every day to tear my tongue out. Said I talked too much and that I reminded him of his wife who drove him nuts. One day he actually got me by the throat—"

"Have you ever flown?" Benton put in hastily. "Have you had any experience in the air?"

"After the experiences I've had, flying in the air would be harmless. The way I feel now I could go hunt tigers. I'd slap them down like pussy cats! What I want is to get up in the air, where it's safe—"

TED laughed and said, "We need her on Trans-Pacific Airways when we are forced down on cannibal islands! Sorry we only have men on our crews."

"There's a run on one of our lines," Benton said thoughtfully, "where the planes are always and told her where to go for the physical examination.

When she had gone Benton stood up. "See what you made me do, Ted," he said. "Actually we needed only one of those girls, and now—if they all pass the medic—they'll go into training." He rubbed his chin.

Ted Graham seemed more puzzled than the chief of personnel. "Who'd have thought, 10 years ago," he said, "that girls would be leaving their typewriters, hospitals and nurseries to take up jobs in aviation? In the old days we thought we were made of pretty stern stuff, eh?"

"Well, so are these girls!" Benton said. "And that's progress in the air. We've gone a long way. And you have done more than any other man I know, Ted, to make flying safer!"

TED stood up, shaking off the compliments as a dog shakes off water. "The old baloney from you!"

"No, I mean it. At 20 you were a daredevil pilot in the war. An ace. And what a devil-ay-care flying fool you were!"

Ted squirmed uncomfortably. "Then you settled down to acquire something like 12,000 hours in the air," Charles went on. "A pioneer in long-distance flying in the tropics. Now, at 40, you're flying the Trans-Pacific Airways route, to Honolulu, Guam, Manila. Everybody knows what you've done to develop commercial aviation. And now this new crop of pilots you're working on, to make trans-oceanic flying fool-proof—"

Nothing irritated Ted more than praise. He shied from it. To distract himself now, he got up and walked to the window, watching a private plane come in to make a three-point landing. It was still a thrilling sight to him.

He turned to see Kay Dunn in the doorway. Her eyes were bright, her cheeks flushed, and she waved the yellow card gaily. "It's okay!" she said. "I can go in training. The doctor said I'd make a good pilot, even. I'm so happy—and oh, I'm going to work in the air!"

She looked up and saw Ted Graham regarding her with a curious smile. Suddenly the hand she had lifted excitedly, fluttered to her side. She had talked so fast she was gasping for breath, but she laughed.

"Forgive me. I didn't mean to become so excited. But I am thrilled!"

"After the first hundred flights," Ted put in, laughing, "it's not very adventurous. Just work. And responsibility. But it's our life," he added.

"Our life?" she repeated slowly. "Then you do—you already accept me as one of you?"

"Of course," Ted said. "As a matter of fact, we were just going to lunch in the airport restaurant. Want to come along?"

Kay glanced through the glass corridors toward the glittering restaurant where passengers dined and where natty young pilots lounged about the cigar counter and the fireplace.

"Why, of course," she said. "If you're sure that I won't—"

Ted took her arm with a gesture of real camaraderie. "Come on!" he said, smiling.

filled with college boys who make a lot of noise. I think she could keep them in order."

"Of course I could!" Doris said eagerly.

"I think I'll put you in training!" the chief told her. "Take this card down to the doctor's office for a physical examination."

Doris eyed the yellow card with firm distrust. "I'll go," she said determinedly, "but if that doctor is a friend of yours, you'd better give him a ring on the telephone, and tip him off that I'm coming. If he's anything like the wise-cracking internee at that hospital I left, he'll get his stethoscope wrapped around his neck!"

Charles pressed another button. Doris Lee got up and flounced down the hall, self-sure and confident. At the same time the door to the outer office opened and the third girl came in, timidly peering about the room.

While the chief looked at her card, Ted Graham showed her a chair.

She was a meek little girl of about 19. Her features were delicately shaped and exquisite. Her forehead was high and white. She was plainly dressed, and while she waited, her fingers pulled nervously at the neat black gloves in her lap. She was obviously embarrassed.

To Ted there was a look of desperation about the girl. Her dark-brown eyes carried a mute appeal.

THE chief of personnel looked up from the card and frowned. "No business experience. You've never had a job of any kind?"

"No. But I have tried hard enough to find one," Alice Miller said tensely. "I went to business school—a night school—we couldn't afford a regular course."

"Just my mother and I." The little girl's eyes lowered. "She's ill, bed-ridden. The little money we have isn't enough. I have to have a job."

Charles rubbed his chin, trying to avoid looking at Ted Graham across the table. "But you haven't had nursing training—"

The girl looked from him to Ted Graham again, and her eyes carried the same desperate appeal. "I'm sure I could do the work. So much of my life has been spent looking after the comfort of—others. I have patience, tact. I like people. I make friends easily with them. And, oh, I can work!"

"And I think you have courage!" Benton said shortly. "I think you'd be at home in the air. Of course this will only mean that you go in training for three weeks. If you like the job, and the job likes you, we stick together, see?"

He handed her the yellow card,

When Andre Kostelantetz raises his baton at precisely nine o'clock Wednesday evenings and ten o'clock Friday evenings, what many critics have called Radio's most versatile music show goes on the air from coast to coast over the Columbia Network.

The foundation of the program is a 45-piece orchestra that can interpret—and does, every kind of tune the Nation is dancing to. Even other well-known dance band leaders admit that the Chesterfield orchestra is in a class by itself. If it is a dreamy waltz you want, Kostelantetz will give it to you—or, perhaps, you are in a mood which calls for "Alexander's Ragtime Band" or something like the "Sugar Foot Stomp"; the talented Chesterfield conductor is ready to oblige. With the use of brilliant arrangements, Kostelantetz transforms his orchestra from an ensemble of melodious strings to a band of "hot brasses" almost, it seems, with magic. And his renditions of rumbas and tangos are outstanding in their faithfulness to the Latin musical traditions.

Against this background of distinctive music there is the singing of Kay Thompson, Ray Heatherton and the Rhythm Singers. Many of Radio's leading commentators are saying that the Chesterfield people have discovered in Miss Thompson a song stylist who is on the way to winning a generous share of Radio's laurels. Her solos are bright spots in a program that never lags in any part, Miss Thompson has her own way of lifting a song out of the commonplace, demonstrating a rare knowledge of musical composition. Perhaps this comes largely from Miss Thompson's earlier training as a concert pianist. And when Miss Thompson and her Rhythm Singers—15 boys and girls—present such numbers as "Knock Knock," "I Can Pull Rabbits Out of a Hat," "Who's This," etc., they become miniature lyrical comedies. When, for example, Kay Thompson and the Chesterfield Chorus sang "Us on a Bus," it was transformed from an ordinary song into a musical trip on an international bus, at a breathtaking pace that was speeded up with fast interpolations of witty dialogue to fit the changing scene.

But to demonstrate his showmanship, Conductor Kostelantetz balances these novel arrangements against Ray Heatherton's smooth baritone voice. Mr. Heatherton excels in romantic ballads and popular classics. A complaint the Chesterfield people often receive—if you can call it a complaint—is that Kay Heatherton's songs are all too few.

All together the Kostelantetz program is a unique contribution to radio entertainment combining, as it does, the rhythm of popular songs with the sway of dreamy romances and rumbas, ballads that everybody loves, and just a bit of musical mischief for added spice.

Q. Why was the town of Santa Anna named for Texas' most noted enemy? E. T., Bangs.

Q. What was the first county seat of Comanche county? S. D., Sipe Springs.

A. Troy, also called Cora, about 14 miles from the present town of Comanche, was the county seat, when the county was organized in 1856. There had been a town of the same name, sometimes called Pine Bluff, established about 1847, in Freestone county, near which the West line of Anderson county, which was once a chief town of that section, there is now a prosperous town of that name in Bell county.

Q. Where was the first white man's settlement in Williamson county? R. T., Liberty Hill.

A. Between the present towns of Leander and Cedar Park, settled in 1835, a small fort being erected there by the Provisional Government of Texas. The place is near the Leander-Round Rock road and is known locally as the Block House Springs.

Stop, Look, Listen Doesn't Save Drivers

CALDWELL, Ida.—After they narrowly escaped death when a railroad train hit their motor car as they stopped to "look and listen" at a crossing, Grant Ward and Floyd Southward decided there wasn't much truth in the old railroad warning sign.

The men stopped their car on a siding to let a train pass on the trunk line of the railroad. The train unexpectedly turned off on the siding, striking the car. Had they gone on, disregarding the "stop" sign, they would have escaped unscathed, they said.

Question About CARDUI
PERIODICAL PAINS
"Why do so many women take Cardui for functional pains of menstruation?"
Each dose of Cardui contains a purely vegetable sedative and antispasmodic—that is, a pain reliever and cramp-relieving medicine that is especially effective at monthly periods.
This fact about Cardui (that it helps to relieve many of the ordinary functional pains of menstruation with a beneficial plant extract, not habit-forming, not objectionable to take) is greatly appreciated by thousands of women. They recommend it to others.
Cardui is purely vegetable, liquid in form, and comes in 9-ounce bottles, with full directions for use. Try it! Of course, if it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.
