Records Show That White Stone Was Urged for Capitol

By United Press
AUSTIN, Texas—How nearly the Texas state capitol came to being a white stone building instead of a red granite one was recalled by a plaque recently placed in the south corridor of the ground floor of the half-century old capitol.

The plaque was erected in response to a resolution of the 46th state legislature which ordered some recognition of the "princely donation of the beautiful granite of which this magnificent capitol is built."

The plaque informs the reader that it was erected to the memory of N. L. Norton, W. H. Westfall and G. W. Lacy, who donated the granite used in the building.

Full plans had been made for a white limestone building. Elizabeth Ney, the celebrated Austrian sculptress then living in Texas, opened a studio in Austin and had begun figures for the capitol when Norton, Westfall and Lacy offered to furnish granite without cost.

The result was the opening of large granite quarries northwest of Austin which still are in operation.

Tiek passed through the reception center here with 125 real recruits, so young enough to be his even grandsons. He enlisted the first time on Sept. 17, 1905.

Between army enlistments, Tiek has returned to southern Illinois, intent on resuming civilian life, army officials said. Each time the call of army life was too strong, and back Tiek went.

He engaged in fighting native insurgents at Samar in the Philippine Islands and fought in the 21st machine gun battalion during the World War in France.

Mother of Mrs. Clyde Wellman Has Passed Away

Mrs. Clyde Wellman of Eastland has returned from Itasca where she was called on account of the death of her mother, Mrs. A. B. Cogdell, who died there Oct. 18 at the age of 86. She was recalled to rest in the cemetery at Covington in Hill county, a town founded by her father, the late Col. James Jackson Gathings.

Mrs. Cogdell, who is said to have lived in Hill county longer than any other person, was educated at Covington College, established by her father and named after her mother. She was one of Texas' first musicians. Mrs. Cogdell, as Carrie V. Gathings, was married in 1872 to A. B. Cogdell, a Hill county pioneer and a volunteer in the Civil War where he served with Company K, Ninth Texas Ross Brigade, and was classed by General Ross as one of the bravest soldiers in his command.

Survivors include nine daughters and two sons.

Woman Who Had 300 Descendants To Be Honored Again

By United Press
GONZALES, Texas—The clan of Mrs. Mary Jane Skinner, whose descendants numbered over 300 when she died last year, plan to continue their annual reunion at her former home.

Mrs. Skinner was called the "champion grandmother" before she reached her 100th birthday on April 23, 1939. The following March she died, leaving more than 300 children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren.

The family reunion at the Skinner farm home next year will be held Sunday, Aug. 30, when picnic lunches will be spread. During Grandma Skinner's last years, the meetings sometimes attracted more than 1,000 relatives and friends.

Mrs. Skinner, widow of a Confederate veteran, lived from 1870 until her death at her farm home.

Centennial Of Texas As State To Be In 1945-46

AUSTIN, Texas—Celebration of Texas' Centennial of Statehood was implemented today by the appointment of Karl Hoblitzelle, of Dallas, as chairman of the Texas Centennial of Statehood Commission.

The appointment of Mr. Hoblitzelle, widely known philanthropist and theatre head, followed a conference between Governor Coke R. Stevenson, Statehood Commissioner A. Garland Adair, Col. Paul Wakefield, and other leaders in the celebration movement.

The regular session of the 27th Legislature gave approval to a plan for state-wide observance of the 100th anniversary of Texas' admission to the union.

The celebration will be held in 1945-46, marking the Centennial of the occasion when the Republic of Texas became the 28th state admitted to the Federal Union.

Designation of Mr. Hoblitzelle as chairman by Commissioner Adair was approved by Governor Stevenson in a statement praising Mr. Hoblitzelle for his work in numerous civic and cultural undertakings. Governor Stevenson said:

"Mr. Hoblitzelle's valuable services during our 1936 Centennial, his production of a Cavalcade of Texas, shown at two world fairs, and his sponsorship and pioneering to success the Texas School of the Air, as well as many other public services to his State, have given him rightfully the description 'one of Texas' most useful citizens.'"

Legislation enacted by the recent regular session of the Legislature which extended official state sponsorship for the celebration plan was supported by Governor Stevenson, at that time Lieutenant Governor and President of the Senate. Both House and Senate gave unanimous approval of the statehood celebration resolution.

This resolution named A. Garland Adair, curator of the Texas Memorial Museum, as general commissioner to appoint associates and set up an organization which will develop a program and plans to be submitted to the 48th Legislature. Members of the Texas Centennial of Statehood Commission will serve without pay.

"The selection of Mr. Hoblitzelle as chairman of the commission has provided history-proud Texans with the highest caliber of leadership in the celebration of our statehood," said Commissioner Adair. "I know the people will respond to his leadership and join in the appropriate observance of one of the most glorious events in Texas history."

Charges Hurl'd By C.I.O. Organization At Sidney Hillman

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23. — A. D. Lewis, chairman of the construction workers organizing committee of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, charged today that the Office of Production Management chief, Sidney Hillman, had acted as recruiting agent for the American Federation of Labor construction unions and had granted the American Federation of Labor a "monopoly" in national defense construction.

Articulation Is Main Speech Need Professors Find

AUSTIN, Texas—How's your articulation? Do you have difficulty pronouncing "th" or "ng"? University of Texas speech professors find articulation is the predominant speech deficiency, more than one-fourth of all cases treated in the University's speech clinic evidencing this defect. Thirty-seven cases revealed faulty articulation, out of a total of 132. Stuttering is the next most prevalent speech bugaboo—28 cases. Dialect caused difficulty in 21 cases, chiefly among Spanish-speaking students.

The first year's record of the speech clinic revealed complete cures of 59 cases, with only seven out of the 132 showing no signs of improvement. Of the total number served by the clinic during the last year, 86 were University students. The clinic, however, is open to non-students, and many of its "patients" have been small children in the Austin public schools.

1,008 Youths Get Jobs In Industry Through N. Y. A.

AUSTIN, Texas—With 1,008 young people having left National Youth Administration projects in Texas for jobs in private industry in September, an increase of 181 placements over the August report was shown. J. C. Kellam, state NYA administrator, said today. During August, 827 youth went from NYA projects into private employment. These placements were made by the Texas State Employment Service.

With increased emphasis being placed upon work experience designed to help meet the needs of defense industries, NYA is co-operating with the State Board for Vocational Education and the Texas State Employment Service to speed up the defense training program in Texas.

As a result of receiving work experience and training upon NYA projects in such basic manual skills as welding, sheet metal, machine shop, foundry, and power sewing machine work, these young people have been employed by the following firms, among others: Consolidated Steel Corporation, Orange; North American Aviation Company, Grand Prairie; Hughes Tool Company, Reed Roller Bit Company, and Air Activities Company, all of Houston; Houstoun Shipbuilding Corporation; Wyatt Metal and Boiler Works, Dallas; Consolidated Aircraft, Fort Worth; Texas Steel Manufacturing Company, Fort Arthur; Morris Rig Company, Denison; Hawk and Buck, Crawford-Austin Manufacturing Company, W. A. Holt Company, and Clifton Manufacturing Company, all of Waco; Decker Tool and Supply Company, Electric; Hortex Manufacturing Company and Hicles - Hayward Manufacturing Company, both of El Paso; Williamson-Dickey and Dickson-Jenkins Company, both of Fort Worth; and the Bowling Machine and Welding Company.

Kellam said the NYA jobs left vacant by these youth are being filled by other boys and girls who are unemployed, out of school, and in need of the work experience upon NYA projects.

A Central Taxing Office Is Urged

AUSTIN, Texas—B. D. Crane, director of the ad valorem tax division in the Oklahoma Tax Commission, recommended to the recent tax assessors' institute here that Texas establish a central state assessment agency to bring in more tax money.

"It is practically impossible to assess utilities in Texas when the state has given those powers to local assessors," said Crane. "It would be more practical to put such assessing powers in the hands of a central state agency as most states do."

At the regular session of the Legislature, some utilities company spokesmen expressed a wish for more orderly—and more limited—taxation of their properties. State and local agencies compete with each other to collect money from utilities, spokesmen said.

The utilities officials, it was said, are chiefly concerned about a "street use tax" that originated in Texas. That is a tax on gross receipts—four per cent in one instance—that cities charge the utilities for use of their streets and alleys. How great a tax the courts would permit, the utilities are trying to find out.

The third court of civil appeals at Austin has put into effect one of the new rules of court procedure recently authorized by the State Supreme Court.

This is Rule 452. Usually the published law books carry the opinions of the Eleven Texas Courts of Civil Appeals in all cases decided with written opinions. Rule 452 provides that opinions shall be ordered not published when they present new question or application of any rule of law of interest or importance to the jurisprudence of the state.

Aged Ranger Man Is To Be Buried In Brad On Friday

Funeral services for James Thomas Lockabay, 86, who died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. C. Croon of Ranger, at 10:15 o'clock Thursday morning, will be conducted from the First Methodist church of Strawn Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Burial will be in the Brad cemetery.

The decedent was born in Falcon, Ark., May 27, 1855 and came to Texas when he was 12 years old. In his early life he became associated with the Texas & Pacific Railway and helped lay the first railroad tracks through Eastland and Ranger.

During the pioneer days in this part of the country he had many interesting experiences. He excavated the stone that was used for the cornerstones of the Carnegie Library at Fort Worth, and in his later years, after he had retired, he spent his time searching for bones of extinct animals. He discovered bones of the rarest mastodons that were ever found in this part of the country, which are now on display at the Boy Scout Camp at the Worth Ranch.

He was married to Miss Mattie Demaras in Palo Pinto in 1875. Three children were born, Mrs. Ann Mayo who died in May of 1940; Mrs. Croon and Mrs. Bean Robinson of Mineral Wells. Survivors, in addition to his two daughters, include seven grandchildren. They are Mrs. Eve Hamill, Ranger; Miss Bernice Croon, Marlin; Lionel Croon, Dallas; Miss Maurice Croon, Miss Mary Croon, James and Lewis Croon of Ranger. Also surviving are one great-grandson and three great-great-grandchildren.

Active pallbearers at the services will be R. E. Thomas, Guy Robinson, A. N. Barnett and J. E. Messimer, all of Strawn; P. T. McQueary, Fort Worth and L. H. Flewellen, Ranger.

Hitler Would Find Dribble Invasion In Texas Is Easy

By United Press
PORT ARTHUR, Texas—It is a good thing Hitler has not tried an invasion by dribbling a few uniformed men into this county at a time, believes Immigration Inspector John Harris.

"I don't believe anybody would notice them," he said.

Harris was brought to his observation on how unobservant most persons are by a recent occurrence in his department.

Newspapers for three days carried news items that the immigration service was seeking a seaman who left a British ship in nearby Beaumont. The man was easily recognizable—he had tattoo marks over his body, including a prominent star on his forehead.

But no one reported seeing him. Finally the seaman himself read that he was wanted. He was in Beaumont. He came here and asked the location of the immigration office. He reached the police station instead and later was turned over to Harris.

"No one he talked to recognized him from published descriptions or knew we wanted him," the inspector said.

City Gets Profit Selling Its Swans

By United Press
TAYLOR, Texas—Texas poultrymen have overlooked something i. e., white swans.

The surprising profit in the swan industry was revealed by a deal between City Manager H. C. Richards of Taylor and a party of Orange, Texas, business men. Taylor was the beneficiary.

For relinquishing four white swans at Taylor's Murphy Park, Richard received $140, or $45 a bird.

A pair of five-month-old swans brought $40. A pair of two-year-olds sold for $100.

"It's clear profit," Richards said.

"To be a successful swan raiser, all you need is a lake."

Old Apple Game

AUSTIN.—Highway officials were worrying only a few months ago that national defense would bring on highway demands that could not be fulfilled. Today they are worrying lest national defense block a considerable part of the road program.

Effect of national defense priorities was felt this morning when two West Texas projects had to be eliminated from bidding because it was impossible to get the steel required for them.

The projects have been withdrawn temporarily. Whether it will be possible later to get the needed steel or become necessary to revise the construction, has not been determined.

Unless priorities become acute the highway department bids fair to set a record in the year's construction. Bids are being taken this month on contracts estimated to run to $4,000,000, and the present financial outlook points to a highway building fund for the year of more than $40,000,000.

Expenditure for state highway building for the year ending Aug. 31, 1941 (last fiscal year) was less than $24,000,000.

American Publisher Of Chinese Paper Object Of Attack

SHANGHAI, China, Oct. 23. — John B. Powell, Marion County, Missouri, editor and publisher of the China Weekly Review, escaped injury today when a terrorist threw a hand grenade at him.

Powell was saved only because the grenade failed to explode.

Adolph Hitler poured cavalry and air power into the retarded drive on Moscow today and British Parliament members demanded an expeditionary force be sent to Caucasus, to Spain or even to Italy to support Russia's attempts to stop Nazi forces.

The angry British Parliament exchange was featured by a challenge from Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, government critic, to make a showdown on aid to Russia by moving for a vote of no confidence in Prime Minister Winston Churchill and a revelation by Lord Beaverbrook of Stalin's intimate opinions of the progress of the Russo-German war.

There was terrific fighting on the fronts around Moscow, where the Nazi high command insisted the capital's outer defense ring had been broken on a wide front and that German spearheads were within 37 miles of the Kremlin.

The Moscow front was described as almost static for the moment but to the south the German attack upon the Donets area moved forward without check. The Nazis hinted that the capture of Rostov was near.

There was evidence that British frustration, anger and dissatisfaction with the lack of offensive power was boiling more strongly than ever before, despite the statements of government leaders.

The government position as outlined by Eden said that Britain lacks resources to launch a second front campaign, while continuing to dispatch to Russia huge quantities of material necessary to keep the Red Army at top fighting pitch.

Eden said that after Dunkirk, 16 months ago, Britain virtually was stripped of all armed resources.

At Kuibyshev, the temporary Russian capital, it was revealed today that Stalin had assumed supreme charge of the defense of Moscow and had relieved Marshal Temyon Timoshenko in the first big shake-up of the Soviet high command as the battle for Moscow approached a climax.

Stalin, who is remaining with the chiefs of the Soviet government in the Kremlin, made it plain that the Red Army was determined to defend Moscow to the last ditch.

Directing the military operations himself, he placed in the field on the Western Front, defending the Russian capital, Gen. Grigori Zhukov, chief of the general staff.

THE PAY OFF

NEA Service Sports Editor

PITTSBURGH de-emphasized everywhere but in its schedule. Pitt is taking on a smattering of Ivy by taking 40-0 lickings from Western Conference teams in hope of being admitted to the six-man, intramural variety.

If the plan is to demonstrate by performance to Commissioner John L. Griffith and the Big Nine that there really has been a tightening up in the athletic department, the Panthers are doing a grand job.

Pittsburgh already has lost to Purdue and been belted by Michigan. By the time they finish their program, the Panthers will have convinced all hands that the intense fire of the glorious and golden days of Dr. Jock Sutherland has been rendered almost totally ineffective.

It is sensed that purity was going to make the Panthers as futile as they were against Michigan. Director Jimmy Wagan certainly wasn't thinking of his boys when he booked Purdue, Michigan, Minnesota, Duke, Ohio State, Fordham, Nebraska and Penn State on successive Saturdays. Whew!

The Panthers do not arrive at an oasis, where they may rest and doctor their wounds, until they close against Carnegie Tech, Nov. 29, and by that time it will be too late.

De-emphasizing also, Carnegie Tech wisely lessened the pressure of its schedule by going to Westminster, Allright, Geneva, Case and Cincinnati. Only Notre Dame and Pittsburgh of the old days remain, and they no doubt because of contracts.

MEANWHILE the city of Pittsburgh's third term, Duquesne, having built up to the former size of Pitt and Carnegie Tech, now finds itself all dressed up with no place in particular to go in search of Ivy. Pitt will have nothing more to do with what once was Holy Ghost College. Inasmuch as it is no longer looking for trouble, Carnegie Tech feels the same way about it.

Duquesne grew up in what was a rousing intra-city series. Without it and with an unsatisfactory schedule, half of it played at night, the Dukes are having a tough time making both ends meet.

WITH the panic on financially, Buff Donelli, the man who put Duquesne where it is today as a football power, resigned to coach the Pittsburgh Steelers.

There is talk of Duquesne dropping football altogether. The moral seems to be that unless a school has a sprinkling of Ivy, it doesn't pay to play too rough.

Commercial firms lend blue ribbon stock for the exhibit. Hereford, Angus and Shorthorn beef cattle; Holstein and Guernsey cows; Berkshire-Hampshire pigs, and prize young colts were among the exhibits.

Dr. James A. Cameron, veterinarian, periodically checked the stock to prevent any sickness while park employees furnished extra care and clean quarters for the animals.

Apartment-reared youngsters visited in school groups, alone, with parents or with buddies to learn just what lies behind a slab of butter or a wool sock. The causes of his gustatorial delights are fast ceasing to be mysteries to the "Urban Child."

SERIAL STORY

MURDER IN PARADISE

BY MARGUERITE GAHAGAN

COPYRIGHT, 1941, NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Quiet Paradise Lake is the scene of two murders—handsome Herbert Cord, who flattered as new fiancée, Marjorie Dixon, in the face of his last summer's love, Jeanie Morris, and whom police suspect gangster Stush Veretti of killing; stern, straight-faced Miss Millie Morris, Jeanie's aunt, who had few friends but no enemies. It is Maudie O'Connor who finds both bodies, and both her daughters, Mary, and reporter Dennis Flynn suspect her of knowing more than she reveals. Maudie has done some sleuthing, talked with local editor Tod Palmer, who obviously loves Jeanie, and bookkeeper Chris Gordon, a contemporary of Miss Millie's. Maudie wonders if Jeanie and Liza Holmes, her maid, should stay in the big Morris house alone.

NOCTURNAL VISITORS

CHAPTER XV
We were a gloomy pair, Maudie and I, and the sunlight on the lake after the dark, gray days failed to lift my spirits. Maudie was depressed because things hadn't been progressing as she thought they should. Stush Veretti had been named the killer of Herbert Cord and was to be up for examination the next day. That, according to Maudie, was just foolishness. She still held to her original contention that the murder wasn't the work of the city numbers boy, and she hated to see the law so calmly close the case.

My gloom was for another reason. Denny was gone. There would be little doing on the Cord case until the arraignment next week and that would only take local coverage, and progress on the Morris murder seemed at an absolute standstill. The police had no clues and Denny said his office had called him in.

Of course, I knew he couldn't be around indefinitely. A lot of good it would have done me anyway, with him spending all his time away from the cottage, and our visits brief ones over the breakfast table.

When he had come in that afternoon and announced he was taking his feet off our table, Maudie's face expressed both our feelings.

"Come into town next week and we'll celebrate," he said, chucking her under her second chin. "You lost your bet, but I'm a big-hearted winner. I'm still taking you and Mary on a swing around the town."

He had kissed Maudie on the cheek and when he turned to me I managed to be clutching Finn McCool, who was raising his usual fuss whenever he sees someone leaving.

"Will I see you then next week?" he asked looking at me, and I said thanks for the invitation and that Maudie and I would try to get in. "We'll let you know in time—so you won't be tied up with another engagement," I said.

"I'd break it if I did have one," he said, but the straight look he gave me failed to make me forget the way he had sat there in the inn lobby hanging on every word uttered by that Dixon girl.

It was lonely after he left and I couldn't settle down to anything. Finally I took McCool and walked down to the inn. I thanked my stars I could always use the mail as an excuse to get out for awhile. Not that there was anything exciting at the inn. In fact, it was duller than ever I had seen it. I said so to Chris Gordon.

"People are leaving," he said dourly.

"Our guest just left, too," I said. "You mean Flynn, I suppose," he said, and I nodded. "The Dixon girl checked out," he added.

"Some folks came for her. If it got hot we might get some guests, but I guess it will have to be blistering before folks would come around here after all the stories their newspaper folks wrote."

"People soon forget," I told him. "In another week they won't be thinking of murder; they'll probably be thinking about the Trophy Race and whose boat stands the best chance."

"Folks let their imaginations go haywire though," he insisted, fiddling with the buttons on his vest in that characteristic gesture and looking petulant and aggrieved. This must really be hitting his pocketbook, I decided going home, a little tired from the walk and grateful for being tired. I had no desire to lie in bed tossing wakefully or, in those half-asleep, half-awake moments thinking of Denny, and seeing his red head bending close to Margie Dixon's curly black one.

Well, I did go to sleep that night. Maudie did too, for I could hear her rhythmic snores as I went by her door and waved to McCool, growling at having his own sleep disturbed.

It wasn't the only sleep disturbed that night. I drifted off eventually and as I feared, I dreamed of Denny. We were out on the pier and there was moonlight and the setting was perfect for such a scene just as if it had not happened in reality.

There wasn't a sign of Margie Dixon, and Denny and I were back together again as though a year hadn't passed at all. The moonlight seemed to be blinding. And I could hear McCool thumping as he does when he scratches himself at night and shakes the whole house. I was angry at him for disturbing that moment and I was troubled by that white moonlight blinding me.

Then the dog barked—a shrill, sharp bark. Automatically I rolled over and yelled at him to stop the noise. I opened my eyes but I couldn't see. A light, brighter than any moonlight, was in my eyes for a second, and then all was dark.

I know the light was there. I could feel it like something material on my face, and the racket McCool was making was real enough, too. In that confused state of mind it was a moment before I could think and then all I felt was fear. Someone was in the house.

I knew that. No one could ever make me believe differently. I was sure of that and the light on my face, and the remembrance of those murders settled down on me like a lead weight.

THE sound of Maudie's voice yelling at McCool brought me courage and I snapped on my bed-lamp. My hands shook so that I couldn't get into my robe and I settled by throwing it over my shoulders.

Maudie was all right, but McCool was in a vicious mood. He was looking out towards the back door, and after switching on lights, I went there.

The door was unlocked. I'd gotten in that habit while Denny was staying with us because he was always coming in at all hours. But the door was open and the milk bottle I had put on the steps was knocked over.

Someone had been in the house and I didn't have to tell Maudie. She knew it as she stood there beside me and saw the terror in my face.

sist in determining the source of infection in communities where cases of typhoid fever are found.

"This is important in a typhoid outbreak," Dr. George W. Cox, state health officer, said, "because it enables us to determine if the cases come from a single source or from multiple sources."

"A case or carrier will produce only cases of the same type. To date, types A, B1, B2, C, D1, E1, E2, F1 and F2 have been isolated in Texas. In several counties multiple types have been found. In one county, five were recorded."

A case map prepared by the health department shows the distribution is general over the state. The Panhandle is free as is the extreme part of West Texas, and all but a small portion of the Rio Grande border.

Determination of the types of bacilli is done by use of bacteriophage technique in observation of freshly isolated cultures.

Aggies Form Own Fellowship System

COLLEGE STATION, Texas—The only fellowship in the United States where students working for it furnished the honorarium has been established at Texas A. and M. College, the largest school of its kind in the world.

The F. W. Hensel Fellowship honors the founder and the present head of Texas A. and M. Landscape Art Department. It will provide $500 annually to a graduate student selected by his fellows in the Landscape Art Club of the school and by a faculty committee. The only requirement will be that he pursue advanced studies in the landscape art.

Money for the fellowship will come from sale of flowers in corsages and bouquets to the 7,000 Aggie cadets during the school year.

Hensel, in his 27th year at the college, has been head of the landscape art department since its establishment in 1926.

At least that's one possibility being studied by Dr. C. W. Freed, head of the department of speech at West Texas State Teachers College here. Tests have shown that 85 per cent of the students at the college have a pronounced nasal twang. Most of them come from homes in the Texas Panhandle, or from the Oklahoma-New Mexico Texas plains. Freed has discovered that many students have the habit of breathing softly and of keeping their mouths tightly closed. It is possible he believes that this is a trait handed down from generations of plainsmen who have fought dust storms of the west. He said that laziness and indifference are responsible for "far too many speech defects." Some students speak too softly, others too loudly, he found. But what worried him most was a disposition of students to listen and not talk—even on controversial issues. "Speaking is an evidence of an alert mind," Freed said. "Silence is a bad sign, an indication that the participation must be stressed more in public schools."

Bulldogs Take On Strong Buckaroos Friday

BRECKENRIDGE IS RATED AS GAME FAVORITE

Game To Be Played In Breckenridge Friday Night, Beginning at 8 o'Clock.

The Ranger Bulldogs, after having won one conference game and lost one for a percentage of 500, Friday night go up against the strong, but somewhat erratic Breckenridge Buckaroos at Breckenridge. This will be the third conference game for the Bulldogs, and the second for the Buckaroos.

The only direct comparison that can be made between the two teams is that the Bulldogs downed Stephenville by a score of 31 to 0, while the Buckaroos ran rough shod over the Stephenville team by a score of 60 to 0. All indications are that the Buckaroos are several touchdowns better than the Bulldogs, unless they run true to this season's form and lose every other game.

The Buckaroos started off the season with a win in their first game, lost their second, won the third, lost the fourth and then came back to win the fifth. But in losing the Buckaroos have been faced by such teams as Wichita Falls and Lubbock, while two of the teams they defeated were no am 12 to 6 and from Abilene, 15 to 0 before downing Stephenville.

Chief ground gaining threat of the Buckaroos is a power play over the tackle position, or between tackle and guard, with a big, busing type of back doing most of the ball carrying. In previous games this season that has been one of the Bulldogs' main defense weaknesses, power plays over the center portions of the line, and on which the Buckaroos will likely aim most of their offense.

The Bulldogs have worked out all this week against Breckenridge plays in an effort to bolster their defense against the type of ball they play, but even so the Buckaroos, who are rated the strongest team in the district this year, are highly favored to win over their ancient rivals.

A big crowd of Ranger fans, who saw the Bulldogs lose a heart-breaker from Brownwood the weekend before, will go to Breckenridge Friday night, hoping to see the Bulldogs come back to command and play their best game of

against Mineral Wells, the next Bulldog foe; and Cisco playing Stephenville. Cisco has lost its only conference start to Mineral Wells by a score of 26 to 7, but has had two full weeks of rest since its last game. Both these

A woman's first line of defense is her complexion, according to Helena Rubinstein, world-famous beauty authority, and in these busy times, she needs a quick, effective program of skin care which will give her a maximum of beauty with a minimum of expenditure.
