Students Learn Valuable Knowledge In Industrial Arts Class

Oliver Wuest checks on three students ripping on a circle saw. Wuest has been with the Sonora Schools for 25 years. Left to right are David Snodgrass, Wuest, Edward Flores and John Lopez.

Several students in Shop II class stand beside their projects for this year. David Snodgrass, kneeling, is building a night stand. Rene Samaniego, Pete Ramirez and Paul Valencia proudly show their projects nearing completion.

By Jerry Hamilton
One of the most interesting departments at Sonora High school is the Industrial Arts Department which consists of three hand wood working classes, one leather craft class, and one machine woodworking class. Oliver Wuest, who has been at Sonora High School for 25 years, is head of the Industrial Arts Department.

Industrial arts aim is to give the pupil a background that will help him fit into the world of work, which is the basis for our society. He has the opportunity to learn how to handle tools and machinery and how to make things that fill a need or a creative desire.

In hand wood working class, which is for first year students, teaches the basic beginning of building. Students learn the names and uses of tools as well as the simple and basic methods of construction. Forty-three students are enrolled in the hand wood working class. Shop I develops the use of basic hand tools, stresses general shop safety, and teaches the application of design. The students are able to build end tables, magazine racks, book cases, telephone stands, bow and arrow cabinets, gun chests, as well as many other useable items.

Thirteen students are enrolled in the leathercraft class. The students learn the tooling and carving of leather, the matter of fastening leather, pattern making and coloring leather. They start off with a rough pattern and it is strictly workmanship until they get their final product.

Items being made are a notebook cover by Gary Wuest; a pistol case by Tom Valliant; over-shoulder quiver by Thomas Gray; billfold by Clayton Wadley; shaving bag by Dale Upton; check book cover by Rene Samaniego; sun visor by Mark Holt; holster by Ricky Cearley; purse by Nelson Brown; notebook cover by Zaragosa Beserra; pistol case by Bobby Bartz; and a litter bag by Carlos Arredondo.

In the machine woodworking class, the students become more accustomed to machines as well as learning the basic construction of building. Each student studies all facets of cabinet making and draws up his blueprints for the project. He determines the amount of materials as well as cost and construction methods he will use. Nine students are enrolled in this class. Louis Cumpian is building a bookcase while Jaime Favela is using the knowledge he has gained through the class to build a pedestal desk. Edward Flores is building a snack bar, John Lopez, a double door night stand, Pete Ramirez a gun cabinet, and David Snodgrass, a night cabinet stand with the use of machines in the class. Paul Valencia's two door gun cabinet and Rene Samaniego's night cabinet are two other useful pieces of furniture under construction. They use many types of machines in building these projects, such as a joiner, overhead saw, tail saw, drill presses, band saw, jig saw, lathes, shaper, routers, planers and several portable machines.

The final six weeks of the course, students learn refinishing furniture and welding.

Learning by doing is an important factor in formal education. The knowledge that these students pick up through Mr. Wuest and his Industrial Art classes will be of great value today, tomorrow and for the remainder of their lives.

Students in Shop I learn the use of a joiner machine in building their project. Safety glasses are used for the boy's protection. Left

finishing a notebook cover, while Bobby Bartz is doing the final stages of work on a pistol case.

Girl Scout News

The Junior Girl Scouts will be selling key chains next week to help pay for a trip to San Antonio. The trip will cost approximately $1,000 and to this date the Scouts have less than $400. The trip is designed for badge work.

The Scouts still have some cookies left. Your assistance in purchasing these cookies will keep the scout troop from having to pay for them. Your help will be appreciated.

The Scouts will be going to San Angelo March 7 to represent Sonora in the rodeo parade.

How Research Helps

Revolutionary changes resulting from agricultural research in livestock feeding, breeding, and marketing have made it possible to put two-fifths more beef on American dinner tables than was available 20 years ago.

Dirt-less Farming

About 100 acres of crops in the West and Southwest are now being grown with hydroponic or soilless culture techniques.

Pests Well-Fed

Pests destroy about one-third of the world's food production each year. That's enough food to feed one billion people.

George Flanagin Awarded University Scholarship Award

George Kelly Flanagin, a senior at Jacksonville High School, has been awarded a Chancellor's Award from Texas Christian University in Fort Worth. This award, one of twelve full tuition scholarships given each year to incoming freshmen, continues for four years if the recipient maintains an academic standing in the top ten percent of his class. Flanagin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Flanagin, and grandson of Mrs. G. B. Rankhorn, all former Sonorans, plans to major in mathematics.
