Krueger Opposes Proposed Closings For Post offices

Congressman Bob Krueger of the 21st District recently announced his opposition to any attempt by Congress or the U.S. Postal Service to close 3rd and 4th class post offices.

"Post offices in these towns are often the focal point of social contact. I will fight to see that the present law which prohibits the closing of small post offices for purely economic reasons is not changed. I think that there are other ways to help the economy of the postal service without closing small town post

Krueger's comments came in response to a recent proposal made to Congress by the General Accounting Office which would see 12,000 3rd and 4th class post offices closed across the nation. When contacted about the proposal a Postal Service spokesman said that the Postal Service would make no move until Congress took some definite action to change the existing law which forbids the closing of such post offices for economic reasons.

The Cowgirls, coached by Mrs. Wanda Halford, is one of four teams that make up the girl's softball league. These girls and their teammates play on the new softball field near the airport entrance, across from the Dairy Mart.

News Letter

There has been considerable concern in recent weeks about the CIA and this country's intelligence-gathering activities. Several observations should be made: (1) This nation needs centralized intelligence regarding the activities of foreign nations. Therefore we need some such agency as the CIA. (2) The CIA or any federal agency must adhere to the law. Our law gives the FBI responsibility for domestic intelligence, and restricts the CIA to foreign intelligence. For the CIA to be used domestically violates the law and infringes on the rights to privacy of American citizens. (3) The CIA should not engage in assassinations. If the leaders in our country are to make decisions that take the lives of others, those decisions must be made in open forum through public declarations of war. They should not be made in secret by people who have Such actions violate our deepest sense of the need for public responsibility and public accountability upon which confidence in democracy depends. If our democracy requires assassination as a tool of foreign policy, it has fallen on very perilous times. Such actions imply that our democratic institutions are weak, and require subversive means to be sustained. I do not believe that the American people have so little confidence in their own institutions.

By Bob Krueger

the positions they hold.

Recent misuse of the CIA for domestic activities has weakened its effectiveness abroad. By concentrating on dissidents at home, the CIA gave less attention than before to activities in Portugal and Italy. Now, Portugal has a government that is increasingly friendly to the Communists. In Italy, the Communist Party won 33% support in last week's elections, just two percent less than the ruling party. Both countries are NATO members, and thus NATO, and our Atlantic alliance, are weakened.

We need to get the CIA back full time to its task of gathering intelligence on foreign nations, not domestic troublemakers. I hope that may come from the two Congressional committee investigations of CIA activities.

This past week, Congressman Nedzi was sustained by an overwhelming vote as Chairman of the House Committee investigating the CIA. I voted to sustain him as Chairman because he has a long tradition of service to his country and of integrity as a legislator. I personally felt that the House did not need to establish its own special committee. The House already has more than enough committees, and more than enough duties to occupy its members. Further, the Senate had already established its committee. If the House committee continues, it must exercise oversight of the CIA and assure that our foreign intelligence is sound and our own rights to privacy secure. If these goals are furthered, the special committee will have served us well.

So now the problem, they say, is inflation which, as one of them said, "everybody knows is caused by too much money chasing too few goods." The 64th Legislature is now unincorporated areas, of just history, and I am pleased and proud to have been a part of it. Looking back on its achievements, I think it proved to be a successful session. It was beyond a doubt the busiest ever. A record number (3.000) bills were introduced; and of those, 1,000 actually passed.

As a freshman member, I was pleasantly surprised to find that I was able to be a more-effective legislator than I had anticipated. This was due in part to being on the prestigious Calendar Committee, which has tremendous power over the flow of legislation, and in part to Speaker Bill Clayton's enthusiastic inclusion of freshmen in the decisions of leadership of the House. School finance was, of course, the number one responsibility of the Legislature; and I think it was dealt with as effectively as was possible. The final bill was a compromise--of a compromise-of a compromise; and, as a result, it had something in it for everyone. The TSTA supported it strongly even though it did not contain the $10,000 starting salary its members had advocated earlier. As a whole, the 17 school districts in District 70 are treated favorably under the bill and even better than they would have fared under some of the other proposed plans. In general, the resulting legislation attempts to be equitable to--and meet the needs of--students, educators, and and reasonable treatment by the utilities. I don't think it is a panacea or do I think it will necessarily mean lower rates, but I do believe that it is a much needed improvement over the current situation.

The state's record $14 billion budget is distressing to us fiscal conservatives. I supported every realistic attempt to cut appropriations where possible, but without much success.

Malpractice became a big ssue in the last months of the session. Everyone recognizes the magnitude of the problem, and every effort was made to reach some solution. Two of the malpractice bills supported by the Texas Medical Associaion passed easily. The third one, S.B. 635, was defeated, however. I strongly supported t until opponents amended it to the point where it was merely a skeleton of its original form. Hopefully, the two bills that did survive will offer some immediate relief until a ong-term solution can be

The child-care licensing egislation was finally passed, out not until some amendments were added to exempt church-connected facilities.

The equal rights amendment ssue never came to the floor of the House for action; although, the bill calling for a referendum on the ERA did make it out of committee and was on the House Calendar at the end of the session.

Screwworm Alert Sounded

Warm weather and rains over a big part of Texas have combined to provide ideal conditions for the most serious livestock pest in the state--the ever-menacing screwworm.

"Stockmen should be particularly alert for this flesheating pest at this time because infestations can build up rapidly in late spring and early summer unless all cases are reported as soon as possible," points out Clint Langford, county agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension

"Regular herd checks and the treatment of all wounds is essential to keep screwworm cases at a minimum," emphasizes Langford.

Any worms found in livestock wounds should be sent to the Mission Lab, Box 969, Mission, Texas 78572. Kits for mailing the worm samples are available from the county Extension office and local livestock inspectors and veteri-

Lumber Company Compiles History Of 75 Years

Just released is a booklet that tells you, among other things, what Mr. Galbraith telegraphed about Mr. Foxworth in 1901.

The booklet is entitled "The 75th Year" and is a condensed history of the Foxworth-Galbraith Lumber Company. Reproductions of interesting old photographs make up about half of the 20 pages of easy-reading text. Copies are available at the local Foxworth-Galbraith Building Materials Center.

Ted McClung, manager of the local Foxworth-Galbraith Building Materials Center, comments, "very few American businesses reach 75 years of age and the whole story of Foxworth-Galbraith strikes me sort of like a good lesson in the free enterprise system". McClung points out, "a part of this success story has happened right here in Sonora because our local center is now forty years old.

Last of the three original founders died in 1960 and the Company is now managed by second and third generation Foxworths and Galbraiths. 'One of the things the booklet points out" says McClung, "is the importance of the local manager and employees to the successful operation of the Company. From the very start, we have built our business by trying to better serve customers".

Foxworth-Galbraith now operates 51 Building Materials Centers in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, and California. Company headquarters are in Dallas with division offices in Phoenix, Arizona, and district offices in Sherman and San Angelo, Texas. Approximately 450 people are employed in the total operation.

"The 75th Year" booklet points out that the Company has always kept abreast of the changing times, and is today modernizing facilities and increasing merchandise selection in each community served. Special values will be featured during the balance of the year to call attention to the upcoming 75th anniversary. The booklet makes one thing abundantly clear. The folks at Foxworth-Galbraith here and at 50 other places think of since 1901", and they have the history to back it up.
