Becky Cavaness Goes To Howard

The signing of Becky Cavaness, a 5'8" record-setting scorer from Sonora High School, concludes the recruiting chores relative to the Howard College Hawk Queens Basketball roster for next year.

"This girl is a shooter. Statistics seldom lie," said Hawk Queen Coach Don Stevens.

In addition to being an All-District selection three years in a row, she was the Most Valuable Player in three tournaments over her junior and senior years.

Miss Cavaness was a deadly shooter from both the floor as well as from the free throw line. As a sophomore she averaged 27.1 points per game with a 42 per cent shooting accuracy has improved in her junior year to a 27.4 point average with a great 51 per cent shooting percentage. In her senior year Becky poured in a total of 849 points for an average of 32.6 points per game and a shooting percentage of 50.2.

Statistics also show that Becky is an automatic free-throw shooter. In her junior year she ripped the nets at a 79 per cent rate of accuracy, but as a senior surpassed even that by hitting 345 out of 408 free throws for a shooting percentage of 84.5 per cent.

"To truly appreciate the stats on Becky you have to realize that she played outside on the offense. Those 408 attempted free throws came as a result of her aggressive drives toward the basket, and those high field goal shooting percentages did not come from cheap shots under the basket," Stevens concluded.

Miss Cavaness is a 1978 graduate of Sonora High School, the daughter of Milton Cavaness and Mrs. Jane Archer.

Bronco Twirlers Return

Sonora High School twirlers Debbie Kemp, Carol Brandon and ReeDine Hill returned Friday from a week of camp at Tarleton State University's twirling camp. The Sonora girls were recipients of an outstanding achievement award presented to them at the camp awards program.

Police Force To Hire 2 Patrolmen

Chief of Police Jerry Kemp said Monday that City Patrolman Frank Tabola has resigned that position effective Tuesday.

Tabola will return to Alpine where he will be on the university police force and go back to Sul Ross University seeking his master's degree.

In the last meeting of the city council Kemp was authorized to hire a patrolman to replace Tabola as well as one other patrolman.

Kemp stated that the extra man, enlarging his force to four and himself, would cut down patrolman's weekly hours from 60 plus to approximately 50.

Brent Gesch and Luther Hawley are the other two city patrolmen employed at this time.

Highway Construction Begins On Bridges, Culverts on 277 South

H.D. Riddle Construction Co., Inc. of Irving, Texas has begun construction on widening all bridges and culverts on U.S. 277 from Sonora to 20 miles South.

Work began at Sonora and will go South widening on the West side of the road according to D.R. Watson, District Engineer for the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation (DHT).

Joe W. Lane, Supervising Resident Engineer in charge of the project for the DHT stated, "the speed limit in construction areas is 45 mph and will be so posted."

"At times traffic will be interrupted because of the work" continued Lane. Barricades, warning signs and, where necessary, flagmen will be utilized to warn the public.

It will take approximately 2 years to complete the project on both sides of the highway.

Anytime men and equipment are working near the roadway there is the possibility of an accident. Those traveling this area should obey the signs and travel with caution.

Cooling Off In The Pool

Patricia Bible executes a flip from the diving board at the City swimming pool. Hot weather has, for the most part, sent Sonorans scurrying to the pool to "beat the heat".

City Works On Cleaning Up Draws

City employees were busy last week cleaning out the draw behind the Western Motel and to the end of the draw in Sinola. The draw bed was cleaned so well that Sunday afternoon youngsters were gathered playing baseball. City employees will begin cleaning of the draw behind City Concrete in the near future. Sonora residents are reminded that the draw beds are not for dumping refuse. [Photo by Kay Holdridge]

Reflections

by Rev. Jim Miles
Yesterday marked the 202nd birthday of our nation. It was celebrated in the traditional manner. There were parades, fireworks, political speeches, auto races, and yes Virginia, in Texas there were Rodeos. How much reflection, however, was done concerning the significance of the occasion? In Old Testament times on specific dates the tribes would gather and stories of heritage...of tradition...were recounted over the fires as the older generation related to the young lads the significance of the cultic history. There was a strong feeling that one should never lose sight of one's history, for who was largely determined by his heritage.

Our own nation was founded by those who came west, braving the torrents of a hostile ocean and risking health and life itself in order to escape the tyranny imposed on them by rulers of states which had a rigidly enforced national religion. So they came, first in a trickle, then in a stream, then in a raging torrent to a place where they could have freedom of religion where they could worship their God as they saw fit. They founded one nation, under God.

Unfortunately we have in modern times slipped from a belief in freedom of religion to a de facto stance of freedom from religion. God is seldom mentioned during the fourth unless the term is followed by an expletive. We must take time in our own lives to think of the reasons our forefathers and foremothers immigrated to this land and give thanks to our Lord who has been tolerant and loving to us even in our time of disinterest in him. We should resolve to regain our understanding of this land as a place in which all can be brothers, a land which is truly one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

Second Thoughts

by Tom Driskell
The ballyhoo about the decontrol of natural gas has spread like a fungus skin disorder across the local media. That will-of-the-wisp "free enterprise", the boogie man "shortage", the great hope "decontrol" are blended, and liberally sauced with "incentive" to produce a gastronomic delight—a swill only suitable for the proverbial swine.

The total validity of the whole package probably lies in its further demonstration of man's intolerance of real justice, and his preference for emotion over logic.

This gas decontrol package is somewhat like marriage. Think it over, you never really knew anything but her party manner until you got her home, and the real package was not at all like it appeared. It goes without saying that in these E.R.A. days, it is a two way street. The decontrol package shows further similarity in that regardless of which partner made a disastrous mistake corrections are difficult, if not impossible.

when vast amounts of lobby money are literally strewn around. You and I are probably going to get a decontrol package so let us not be deluded, all roses it is not. First it will indubitably lead to a higher utility bill for everyone, and if the intrastate and the interstate controls are lumped together, that increases could, in a free enterprise competition, become astronomical.

All the political haymakers, trying to harvest oil interest campaign contributions are overboard for decontrol. No mention, in all that verbiage, of taking care of their constituents who are land owners. The gas and petroleum being removed from West Texas comes off private and university land. The petroleum and associated products are a part of the value structure of the land and when they are gone, the land value is diminished.

The gas and petroleum products all have the same value, without regard for the contract held by the oil company says the landowner will be paid. If for example a thousand cubic feet of gas out of two wells has the same b.t.u. potential there is no difference in the economic value of the gas, and no difference on the depletion to the land when the gas is removed. How then is it that from one well the landowner receives 18 cents while the next landowner's gas can cost over two dollars? Does the receiving gas company differentiate? If you believe they do, get them to sell you some of that 18 cent gas for your home use. It is not easy.

Despite the oblivion of our politicians, it would seem that a part of the decontrol package should be one price at the well head for all natural gas—without regard for what the contract says will be paid for it, and the landowner's payments should be adjusted accordingly. In buying houses, there is certainly no old-new house price dividing line. Free enterprise is whispy enough to cast aspersions on anyone who uses it to describe facets of our economic activity. At least our political aspirants, tooting the decontrol horn, should allow, through law, an income tax deduction for lost assets in the variation between old ad new petroleum contracts. My car and water heater cannot tell the difference between new and old petroleum products, it is suspected that the politicians also are unable to differentiate.

The prices are restricted on the old gas and oil to help the consumer, but the detection of the price differential at the consumer level is difficult. The difficulty is so great that if you believe it is for the consumer instead of a ripoff of the landowners, the age if innocent gullibility is not past.

Drive Nets $276.20 For Mental Health

Edwina Braden raised $276.20 in the May drive benefiting the Mental Health Association in Texas.

Bellinger workers collected house-to-house during May, Mental Health Month.

Proceeds benefit the non-profit, non-governmental agency whose members are dedicated to fighting mental illness while working on behalf of the mentally ill and their families.

"The Mental Health Association exists entirely on donations, such as those raised in the May drive," said Shirley K. Camfield, state president.

Funds raised in the campaign will be used to purchase and distribute free literature to the public on mental health topics, as well as to support the other programs of the association.

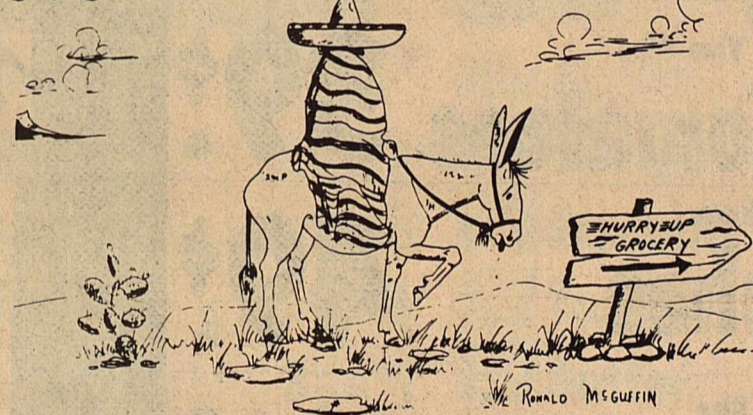

Camfield thanked Ms. Braden and the Bellinger workers in Sonora, calling them an important team in the movement to promote mental health in the state.

Sutton County Ranch News

Dr. Jesse Cocks [left], Texas Agriculture Extension Service entomologist, checks the records on a steer that's wearing an insecticide-impregnated ear tag. The Rabon Cattle Ear Tag--a product of Shell Animal Health--is used to protect cattle against the Gulf Coast tick and attendant problems of the screwworm larvae. Government tests show the tag provides 95-100 percent effective control of the tick for a three-month period and equally effective against horn flies, a nagging problem for Texas cattle. This photo was taken at the Lon Cartwright ranch, Dinero, Texas. Cartwright is shown at right wearing a hat.

Highest Since 1976..... Screwworm Outbreak

A rash of infestation along with favorable moisture conditions across Texas, New Mexico and Arizona has prompted predictions of one of the highest screwworm outbreaks since 1976. The results could cost Texas cattlemen millions of dollars in damage and destroyed livestock.

The Gulf Coast tick, and particularly the screwworm fly, have become a serious threat to the Texas beef industry in the past few years. Adult ticks attack the ears of the cattle causing open wounds in which the screwworm fly lays its eggs. According to entomologists who have been monitoring the problem, screwworm larvae feed in these wounds and in extreme cases can kill the animal.

A Texas Agricultural

Extension Service survey, conducted by area extension entomologists, showed that a screwworm infestation can cost a cattleman as much as $81.50 per head. This includes all categories of loss--death loss, loss of weight, medication expenses and the extra expenses associated with transportation and labor.

In the same survey, screwworms produced an estimated $283 to $375 million loss to the Texas general economy during 1976.

"We've already had more cases of screwworm infestation this year than at the same time last season," says E.H. (Elmer) Ahrens, research entomologist with the USDA Screwworm Eradication Laboratory, Mission, Texas. "At the same time, we are seeing a sharp increase in the number of screwworm reports from Arizona and New Mexico. This all points to the possibility of real screwworm problems this summer.

Jesse Cocks, area entomologist for the Texas Agriculture Extension Service, is working closely with the screwworm eradication program and agrees with Ahrens who points to favorable high-moisture conditions as yet another indication of increased tick and screwworm problems this summer.

"According to weather predictions, many parts of Texas are still anticipating rainfall," Cocks says. "If the rains do come this summer, conditions could become favorable for screwworm and tick infestation."

Ahrens, who has been working with area entomologists, says that cattle from Arizona and New Mexico are particularly to blame for the higher number of screwworm cases in Texas.

Cocks, who works with the "Screwworm Watch" monitoring program from his headquarters in Weslaco, says one of the few methods of protection cattlemen have in the war on screwworms are newly-developed insecticide-impregnated ear tags.

"Really, these tags are the surest safeguard for cattle," he says. "They are economical and labor efficient."

Two manufacturers--Shell Animal Health and Y-Tex Corporation--have developed such tags. Both tags are effective against the Gulf Coast ear tick. In comparative tests, government researchers found the Shell Rabon Tag provided 95-100 percent control of the Gulf Coast ear tick for a three-month period. Additionally, the Rabon tag provided equally strong protection against horn flies, a nagging problem for Texas cattle.

"The situation is so volatile, due to the weather and other factors, that we just can't pin down how severe the Gulf Coast ear tick and the screwworm problem will be this summer," Ahrens cautions. "The important thing is for cattlemen to provide sufficient protection for their animals and participate in the 'Screwworm Watch' program so we'll know where the screwworm problems are."

Glen Fisher's Wool & Mohair Report

by Glen Fisher

The spring wool season is about complete and the fall mohair market is fairly quiet, but strong. Many people have asked about factors involved in determining the value of wool and mohair; so I thought I would briefly discuss these in the next few articles while there is limited market activity.

The value of wool depends upon the following factors: shrinkage and yield, fineness or grade, length of staple, strength of fiber, character, color.

This week, I will discuss shrinkage and yield and pick up the other factors in coming weeks.

The shrinkage and yield of wool is probably the most important factor determining the value of a given lot of wool.

All the factors are highly interrelated; but because wool is bought on a clean basis, it is very important to know approximately how much clean wool is obtained from raw wool.

Generally, the longer the staple the higher yielding the wool will be. The shrink or yield is estimated by handling individual fleeces and compressing the wool. As stated, this method is an estimate but with practice most people are very close to the actual yield. The most exact method is coring [taking a sample] the wool and letting a laboratory analyze it for clean wool.

Grease, dirt, and vegetable matter are the impurities that must be scoured out of the wool and each clip may contain varying amounts of each. Typically, our Sonora wools contain only small amounts of dirt and/or vegetable matter. Pasture conditions and methods of winter feeding can cause these two factors to vary more than anything.

As an example: If the price for clean wool is $1.85/pound and the wool is estimated to yield 50%; then the grease price would be 92 1/2 cents/pound. Most of our Sonora wools [ungraded] would yield around 50% as an average.

We offer a full range of insurance coverage for ranchers.. and everybody else..

TS&GRA Tips Hat To USDA

The Texas Sheep & Goat Raisers' Association says hat's off to the USDA standards and labeling people for their "mechanically processed meat product" labeling decision.

Shakespeare once wrote "a rose by any other name..." but in those days they didn't have people sitting around dreaming up grossly unappetizing names to foist off on things they didn't understand and consequently didn't like. To digress...

The processing arm of the meat industry has long realized that a vast amount of edible meat is lost to the eventual consumer because it either lies too close to the bone or actually adheres to the bone. Even very sophisticated assembly-line techniques are inadequate to remove this tissue without danger of also removing sharp slivers of bone. (German Shepherds are quite efficient at removing it and work cheap, but what they gnaw off, they keep.)

Eventually someone developed a process whereby the meat, along with minute amounts of bone, is mechanically shaved, reduced to a fine paste and extruded through tiny filter screens. Most of the powdered bone is consequently removed and the remainder is too fine to raise objections from anything larger than a sugar ant.

Reasonable objections, that is. The process, when revealed, immediately raised howls of protest from self-appointed "consumer protectors." The basis for their objections is not completely clear-it may hark back to the notion that if dogs are associated with bones, humans shouldn't be. It may be an honest reaction to today's prevailing fear that someone is getting away with something, or it could simply have presented yet another soap box upon which a frustrated public speaker could stand and speak.

Whatever the reason, USDA was forced to suspend the descriptive term "mechanically deboned meat", substituting instead, "Tissue from ground bone." The latter term doubtless represents many long hours of study by a dedicated and quite negative wordsman, and was obviously calculated to turn the consuming public away in droves.

Ag Expert Urges Hay Growing

Fields laying idle this summer can be put to good use by growing annual grasses for hay or grazing, says Don Dorsett, forage specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Annual grasses include hybrid sudan, sudan-sorghums of forage sorghums. Millet could be used in sandier soils.

"These annual grasses make rapid growth for high quality grazing or hay," points out Dorsett. Because they are annuals, they die after the growing season and the field can be prepared for spring planting. They do not regrow from roots the following year.

Annual grasses take advantage of warm temperatures and adequate moisture to produce forage high in protein and digestibility until seedhead formation. After seedhead formation, protein and digestibility decline rapidly unless the grasses are used for grazing or hay, notes the forage specialist.

"As with any grass, fertility is a key factor in producing the desired amount of pasture or hay," says Dorsett.

"Many fields and pastures have a history of cropping that has left soil fertility extremely low. Without fertility, these fields would not produce the desired volume of hay or grazing. Fertilizer should be applied according to a soil test to assure that the grass is getting the required plant nutrients."
