31 Families Identified

As of June 16 a total of 31 families had notified the Chamber of Commerce that their census forms had not been picked up. Enumerators for the bureau have been notified of the oversight, said Lou Thomas of the Chamber, and corrective action will be taken.

"All residents of Sonora and Sutton County are urged to contact the Chamber if they have not been enumerated", she continued. "It's very important that all persons be counted for several reasons, ranging from local forecasting for county, city and school system growth to federal revenue sharing by the community and representation at the congressional level of government."

She requested that census forms not be sent to the Chamber, but that citizens who have not been counted merely call 387-2880.

TABS Tests Show Strength, Weaknesses Of Sonora Students

The Texas Assessment of Basic Skills Tests given to Sonora students in the fifth and ninth grades this year can give parents, teachers and the general public an indication of the strengths and weaknesses in student performance and enable them to strengthen the instructional program where needed. Senate Bill 350 provided for testing students in the public schools for the basic skills of reading, writing and arithmetic.

In this test, students were not compared with other students as they often are when norm referenced tests are used. The TABS test was developed skills students are expected to have mastered at the fifth and ninth grades. Next year the third grade will be included in the test program.

The fifth grade, using seventy percent to measure class mastery, mastered eight out of twelve of the mathematics objectives. The four objectives not mastered were geometric terms and figures, interpreting place value, solving word problems and identifying equivalent fractions.

The fifth grade mastered eight out of eleven of the objectives in reading. The three objectives of mastered were identifying the main idea, distinguishing fact from non-fact and predicting outcomes.

Census Enumerator Tests Scheduled For Friday

Janet Faulkner with the Census Bureau in Pecos has announced

Weather Report

Date	HI	Lo	R
10	89	64
11	87	65
12	90	61
13	90	65
14	92	63
15	95	71
16	94	71

In writing, the fifth grade mastered all of the objectives measured by the multiple-choice questions and 95 percent of the students made a passing score on the writing sample.

The eighth grade students mastered eight out of eleven of the mathematics objectives. The three objectives not mastered were solving personal finance problems, using ratio, proportion, and percent; and using fractions and mixed numbers to add, subtract, multiply, and divide.

In the reading, the ninth grade mastered eight of the eleven objectives. The three objectives not mastered were distinguishing fact from non-fact, the ability to make generalizations and using parts of a book.

The writing at the ninth grade level showed the students having mastered all of the objectives except punctuation. Seventy-four per cent of the ninth graders made a passing score on the writing sample.

The administrative staff and teachers have begun preparation for improvement in the areas of weaknesses revealed by the test for the 1980-1981 school year.

A total breakdown of the test results will be run in next week's DRN.

Marene Werst will be in Sonora Friday, June 20 at 10 a.m. in the Sutton County Judge's Office fiving tests for census enumerators.

Ms. Faulkner state the bureau is looking for workers to be followed up enumerators and they will be paid $4 an hour plus mileage.

She stated the job would be excellent for teachers, college students home the summer or recent high school graduates.

Kenneth Land presents the Sutton County 4-H Mohair Judging team with their first place ribbons at last week's Sonora Wool and Mohair Show. Members of the team are Lance Love, Rex Surber, Fran Friess and David Love. Surber was the overall high individual in the meet while Sutton County tallied the most points of the competing organizations.

School Begins Search For Two New Principals

The Sonora Independent School District now faces the task of hiring two principals after their regular monthly Trustee meeting last week.

High school principal Don Jones tendered his resignation at the meeting, citing personal reasons for his leaving.

The other vacancy arose as Trustees attempted to solve the problem of building use for the old junior high. The decision was finally reached to combine the third, fourth, and fifth grade into a middle school, creating the need for another principal.

Under the plan, the third grade would be housed in the metal building farthest east on the campus, the fourth grade would occupy the top floor of the old junior high and the fifth grade would be housed in the bottom portion.

The instructional staff also got a pay boost, figuring $1,000 a year for teachers with a bachelor degree, $1,069 for a masters and varied increases for different levels of aids.

Ebie Sutton, dietician for the school district, met with the Board to discuss problems in the cafeteria.

Plans to remodel and enlarge the old cafeteria have been drawn up. The remodeling would cost approximately $450,000 as compared to $650,000 for a new cafeteria, but would eat further into the playground.

The Board delayed taking any definite action, but did decide to follow Mrs. Sutton's temporary suggestions for air conditioning the kitchen, improving the hot water supply and reworking the electrical system.

Rebecca Chavez appeared before the Trustees, explaining she represented a group of parents who wished to see bilingual education implemented in the Sonora schools.

Mrs. Chavez acknowledged she was too late to get on the agenda but asked the Board members to take the idea under consideration to be brought up for further discussion at the next regular meeting.

In other action, the Trustees:

Heard a report on the TABS testing program of fifth and ninth grade students from Jerry Fields and W. A. McAndrew;

Renewed the school's athletic insurance with Heritage Insurance Company;

Agreed on a motion by James Hunt that the school district take bids on all its insurance policies in the future;

Met with Don Wooten and Dick Street to discuss the proposed budget for the tax appraisal district of $135,000;

Approved the budget for the athletic, band and choral programs at $107,406; and Accepted the resignations of Gina Gamez and Pam Schulze.

James Hunt Announces Resignation As Trustee

Citing pressing business interests that would not allow him to devote the proper amount of time to the post, James Hunt announced his resignation from the Sonora Independent School District Board of Trustees at the close of their regular meeting last week.

The Board acted quickly to appoint

Dr. Johnny Fields to fill the vacancy and also appointed Dorothy Pope to the spot vacated by Don Lawson.

The Place 3 slot held by Hunt has two years remaining, while Lawson's seat is in its final year.

However, both spots will be included on the election ballot next April.

Community Outlook

By Don Holdridge

Having had a week to adjust, I think I'm about to get in the routine again. The moving pains are healing, and I can get on about my business.

While much of the economy around the rest of the nation is in an uproar, Sonora seems to just keep getting stronger. Of course, like everywhere else, there are some seasonal peaks and valleys, but sales continue to climb each year.

The time I spent working in the oil field, it always seemed like summer was a slow time, but this year seems to be the exception. After talking to several people around town with different companies, I've discovered the patch is really hopping.

Our national energy problems have made Sonora one of the most important areas anywhere, and as long as man needs energy (which is always) Sonora will be important. Nearly everyone readily admits we have barely scratched the surface in this field, which will mean the activity will continue for a long time to come.

"Drill Bit" magazine, in its June edition carried a clipping from a California newspaper entitled "Pistachios are the Next Problem".

"One of the problems resulting from violence in Iran is a likely shortage of Pistachio nuts. Iran produces a significant share of the world output. Another producer is California.

"What will happen if Iran fails to deliver its Pistachios? Californians will be able to get more for their money. Stand by for obscene profits.

"Federal bureaucrats are moving quickly to deal with the pending shortage. They are debating whether to (1) ration Pistachios, (2) place a price ceiling on nuts grown in California, or (3) slap a windfall profits tax on domestic nuts.

"Another idea making the rounds in Washington is to create an agency to plant Pistachio trees; another is to extract oil from acorns, mix it with Pistachio-flavored fodder and make an artificial Pistachio.

"Why are these suggestion humorous when applied to Pistachio production but given serious consideration when applied to the oil shortage?"

The Sonora Wool and Mohair Show is finally over, and I would have to say it has to be rated as a big success, especially for the Sutton County 4-Hers.

Apparently, Preston Faris is intent on continuing the tradition of strong judging teams that Clint Langford had for so many years. Our congratulations go to all the 4-Hers who performed so well.

Langford's old rival, Billy Kidd from San Saba, held the state's respect in high in winning the National 4-H Wool Judging Contest. I was talking to Kidd's secretary, Linda Harvell, who said some of the other states had put on a push to get the contest moved from Sonora to their states, but were unable to find sponsors. This should really be a feather in the cap of the local Lions Club, Sonora Wool and Mohair and local extension service. These groups along with countless volunteers put in long hours of hard work to make the show run smoothly. It's a job nobody else wants and they deserve a lot of credit.

WTU Reaches Agreement to Connect with EROTC

Three major electric utility systems in the southwest have reached agreement on terms which will connect the intrastate Electric Reliability Council of Texas (EROTC) into the nation's interstate Eastern Interconnected Grid. The agreement was announced jointly by officials of Central and South West Corporation, Houston Lighting & Power Company, and Texas Utilities Company.

Under terms of the settlement the single-state ERCOT system will be linked with the multi-state Southwest Power Pool (SWPP) through high voltage direct current (DC) interconnections in south-east and north central Texas.

Utility companies of the Dallas-based Central and South West Corporation include Central Power and Light Company, Corpus Christi, and West Texas Utilities Company, Abilene, both members of the intrastate EROTC; and Public Service Company of Oklahoma, Tulsa, and Southwestern Electric Power Company, Shreveport, both members of the interstate SWPP.

Texas Utilities Company includes Dallas Power and Light Company, Texas

Electric Service Company, Fort Worth, and Texas Power and Light Company, Dallas.

Darwood Chalker, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Central and South West

South West Corporation, said "The settlement will be beneficial to all parties involved with substantial dollar savings to our customers."

This savings will result from economics in providing electricity to over 1.3 million customers in the four-state service area of the Central and South West Corporation, said Chalker. Construction is expected to require about four years following approval of the settlement agreement by various Federal and state regulatory agencies.

Plans call for interconnecting lines to be constructed near Vernon in north central Texas between Public Service Company of Oklahoma and West Texas Utilities Company, and between Southwestern Electric Power Company and Central Power and Light Company as well as Houston Lighting & Power Company at the South Texas Project located east of Victoria in southeast Texas.

FOREIGN AID: IT'S TIME TO BE HARD-NOSED AND TIGHT-FISTED

For too many years, America has tried to buy good relations with countries around the world.

For too many years, we've been shortchanged. Economic and military aid to those countries whose interests coincide with ours, and who have proven their friendship, is one thing. American aid to countries such as Nicaragua, in the grip of a military junta, which has made no bones about its affection for Marxist doctrine, is an entirely different matter.

American tax dollars are too limited to be squandered. They would be if Congress gives final approval to an aid package totalling some $75 million to Nicaragua.

Debate on the controversial assistance package has been raging in Congress for months. It still continues.

The reasons to oppose lending American support to the Sandinista-controlled government are compelling. The successful revolt against the Somoza regime last year, after months of fighting, had the support of businessmen, members of the clergy, and democratically inclined leaders in the country.

But the overthrow was staged by the Sandinista National Liberation Front, leftist in its leaning, and thus posing a serious question mark as a future American ally. While moderates do sit on the five-member ruling junta, it is clear where the power rests.

Congress very narrowly in February passed a $75 million authorization bill for economic aid to Nicaragua. Those of us who ardently opposed that bill — both then and now — doubt that money would achieve its expressed objectives. Too many questions were unanswered then. Too many remain unanswered now.

There were promises from the Sandinistas for democratic elections. But no dates were firmly set. They still have not been set. Evidence that Cuban influences are present in the educational system and in the labor unions is widespread. The Sandinistas have restricted press freedoms. They have also nationalized certain industries, including the banks, which would be responsible for disbursing American aid money intended to build up a crippled economy.

While the authorization bill has mustered enough support for passage, final action will not be determined on the aid package until its appropriations have been voted upon, later this summer.

Since the authorization bill passed, however, those of us who opposed it, on May 28, were successful in deleting $5.5 million in military aid to Nicaragua requested by the President in his foreign aid authorization bill for the next fiscal year.

I believe this represents a significant shift in attitude among House members that aiding a country such as Nicaragua is an unwarranted gamble with American tax dollars.

There are no assurances the government will not end up as an outright Communist dictatorship. And I reject the argument that withholding American assistance will be handing over the country to the Communists on a silver platter.

Providing American dollars now would only be rewarding a Marxist-dominated government, which came to power through violent revolution. There is plenty of time to assess the value of American assistance, once elections have been held, and the government demonstrates its conviction to democratic reforms.

I believe it's time for Congress to be hard-nosed and tight-fisted with its foreign aid.

Wishing for democracy in countries throughout the world certainly will not make it happen. Nor will money alone.

Effective foreign policy rests on the strength of our leadership and military superiority, not on taxpayer supported hand-outs which buy us nothing but contempt.

The sooner Congress realizes this, the better.

McKinney added 'What happens at the grassroots is what will make the key difference in the future environment and appearance of our state. In the past year alone, approximately $9.2 million in tax money was spent to clean up litter and trash along Texas' highways. Perhaps the most important contribution of our Council and awards program can make is to the growing awareness and importance of the appearance and economic benefits of a cleaner, more attractive state'. Effie Harle, tri-chairman, SHINE SONORA committee will be attending this year's Thirtieth Annual Meeting in Kerrville.

Little League Results

The Rangers ran their record to 3-0 last week to remain atop the Major League standings.

The first-half champ Astros are in second at 2-1, followed by the Cards at 2-1 and the Indians at 0-3.

Next week's season finale matching the Astros and Rangers should prove to be a strong climax to the season.

A four-way tie in the Minor League standings exists with the Astros, Indians, Cards, and Rangers all knotted at 1-1 through last week.

Bill Harle urged everyone to be sure to buy a pen from a Little Leaguer. The pens cost $1 and are well worth the price. He also stated that any donations would be welcome and could be made by contacting any of the coaches.

Harle also said the league was short of volunteers to umpire, keep score and work in the concession stand.

"The few who are working are tired of carrying the load for the rest of the parents," he said. "It is much easier on everyone if all share the load."

"If you have a son or daughter playing ball anywhere in the Little League this year, how about helping out with the program? I know your help would be appreciated."

were united in marriage June 12, 1955 at the Primera Inglesia Bautista in Sonora. Rings were exchanged as Mr. Sam Galindo, brother of Mrs. Hernandez, played the guitar and sang "The Wedding Song", accompanied by Mr. Pedro Galindo, Jr. and Mr. Frank Gallegos, Sr. Robert Galindo and Jimmy Galindo, both nephews of Mrs. Hernandez, served as ring bearers. While the couple exchanged rings, the couple's children lit two silver candles.

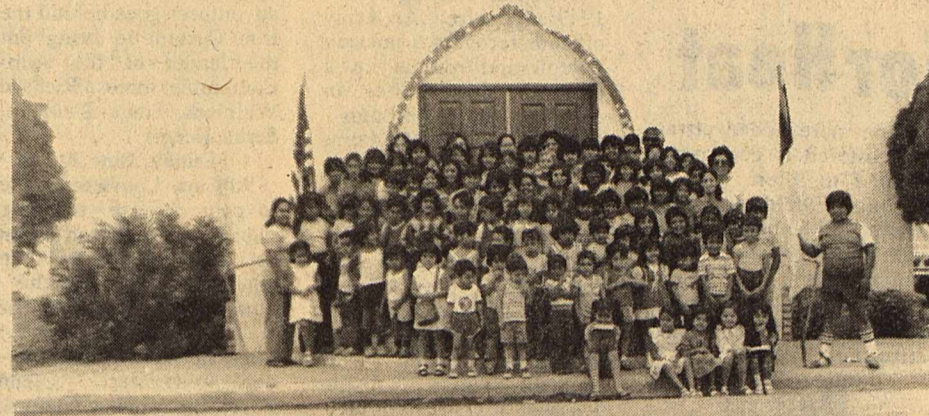

Mrs. Hernandez sang a song which she composed for the occasion. Both words and music were composed especially for her husband and children, accompanying on the guitars were Sam and Pedro Galindo and Frank Gallegos, Sr.

There was a seven tier wedding cake decorated with pink flowers and a groom's german chocolate cake was decorated with a big truck and a bull dozer. Serving in the house party were: Esperanza Arredondo, Yolanda Fuentes, Olga Galindo, Lydia Galindo, Irma Favila, Vita Galindo, Gina Gamez, Odilia Gonzales, Doris Samaniego Beatrice Arredondo, Josie Gonzales, and Irene Gonzales.

Serving champagne were Mr. Tommy Hernandez from Houston, Texas, nephew of Mr. Hernandez, Mr. Victor Fuentes, Mr. Richard Samaniego, and Mr. Omero Gonzales of Sonora.

Cecil Westerman Would Like To Be Your Pharmacist.

These children participated in the La Primera Baptist Church Bible School held June 6.

Church Hosts Bible School

Eighty children of Sonora graduated June 6, after a one-week participation in La Primera Baptist Church Bible School.

The children enjoyed themselves by learning Bible verses and making different arts and crafts.

Upon completion each child received a diploma.

Reverend Basileo Esquivel was pleased with the turnout and the cooperation of the teachers and children.

The theme of this year's school was "It's a Small World."

Receiving "Outstanding Teacher" awards were, Prissy Guitierrez, Belinda Badillio and Cynthia Gomez.

The entire faculty consisted of director, Nelda Yorba, teachers: Elida Estrada, Pauline Esquivel, Estella Gomez, Rosie De La Garza, and Rita Aguilera.

Estrus Synchronization Urged by Vet Association

Estrus Synchronization--a term becoming increasingly more important to cattle producers who, for economic and management reason, prefer to control their breeding seasons in their herds. But, according to Dr. Ed Murray, Chairman of the Bovine and Ranch Committee for the Texas Veterinary Medical Association, improper management of the synchronization procedures by the stockmen can be profit-robbing rather than profit-making for the producer.

"Estrus synchronization can work for the producer," stresses Murray. "The advantages are tremendous. Definite profit advantages and the production of more and better beef to feed the nation exist, but the reality of dealing with a complex reproductive system to induce estrus (heat cycle) at an optimum time requires management programs based on real expertise."

Dr. Murray states that the factor that leads to most ineffective performances of the estrus synchronization plan, is the producer's inability to recognize the proper time to administer the drug to induce estrus. One such cattleman administered the drug to 25 cattle, only to have none of the exposed cattle conceive. Another producer administered the drug to 300 cattle only to have about 10 percent settle. The loss to the producer amounted to the cost of the original shot, the insemination costs, the cost of the second injection to induce the estrus cycle, plus production efficiency lost to the time lapse for breeding.

Cases of other producers involve administering the drug to pregnant cows, only to have the cows abort 24 hours after the injection, resulting in tremendous economic losses to the stockman.

"The cattlemen can definitely cash in on the merits of the estrus synchronization," stresses Dr. Murray. "But, the timing of the administering of the drug requires a full understanding surrounding the total breeding management program. Advanced planning between the cattleman and the veterinarian is a must before the cattleman can capitalize on the value of estrus management."

"Evaluation of the corpus luteum function of the cattle by palpating the animal determines the timing for the injections of the drug," states Murray. "The average rancher is just not prepared to make that evaluation. The cost of the veterinarian to palpate and formulate an estrus synchronization management plan can deter devastating economic losses. Simply, the expense of the injection almost demands the proper utilization of the drug. Herd health and nutrition also play a very important role in the success of a breeding program."

While the drug has great potential in advancing the livestock industry, the Texas Veterinary Medical Association points out that the manufacturer of the synchronization drug, the Upjohn Company, in its veterinary report warns that women of child-bearing age, asthmatics, and persons with bronchial and other respiratory problems should exercise extreme caution when handling this product.

Regulating breeding times to livestock simplifies ranch management, calving management and can reduce calf losses. Consult your veterinarian about all your questions on breeding and reproduction before you make those all important management decisions, reminds the Texas Veterinary Medical Association.

Equine Encephalomyelitis Vaccination Urged

Professor Crawford and Dr. H.D. Anthony, Director of the Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory, Kansas State University, encourage owners to vaccinate their horses against Equine Encephalomyelitis. They recommend routine vaccination prior to the "mosquito season". When Equine Encephalomyelitis is reported, all unvaccinated horses in the area should be vaccinated immediately as the disease spreads very rapidly.

Birds are the initial carrier of the disease. They introduce Equine Encephalomyelitis to an area via mosquitoes parasitic to birds. Then, other mosquitoes, especially Culex tarsalis, transmit the Sleeping Sickness from birds to horses, or humans. The buildup and concentration of infected birds, combined with large numbers of the vector (mosquitoes), intensifies into explosive Encephalomyelitis incidence.

Once infected with Equine Encephalomyelitis, the horse exhibits various symptoms including fever, extreme nervousness, loss of appetite, blindness and paralysis. Of the three principal strains of Sleeping Sickness--Eastern, Western, and Venezuelan--the Eastern is the most severe variety for it usually results in death within two to four days following the onset. The Western form often leaves horses brain-damaged after a prolonged course of illness, treatment and "apparent" recovery.

Sleeping Sickness is a disease that affects the horse's brain and spinal cord. No antiviral treatment is available and permanent damage may result if the horse survives. The only means of preventing Equine Encephalomyelitis is by vaccination. After the initial immunization, only a annual booster is needed. For more information on the prevention of Equine Encephalomyelitis, horse owners should consult with their veterinarians.

ASU Center Offers Windmill Short Course

A short course on windmills will be offered July 14-18 at ASU's Management, Instruction and Research Center.

Sponsored by the Division of Adult and Continuing Education, the week-long session is open to ranchers and farmers who use the windmill as a source of energy.

Enrollment is limited, and interested persons are requested to sign up by June 20. The ACE office is located in the Houston Harte University Center, and the mailing address is ACE, P.O. Box 11022, ASU Station, San Angelo, Texas 76909.

Registration fee is $125 per person and that figure includes lunch, breaks, materials and supplies.

Course instructor is Stan Anderson of Scottsdale, Ariz., a windmill specialist for the Wind Baron Corp. Other windmill manufacturers and distributors have been invited to attend the sessions.

Class participants will erect a tower, install a mill and have ample opportunity to learn how to repair many components of the windmill, according to Don Hale, ACE director.

The course will consist of one-half day classroom and one-half day field work. Also, windmill history, storage and distribution is included in the class outline.

RRC Told Yates Field Production Boost Could Add $28 Million To State's Annual Revenue

Expert witnesses for Marathon Oil Co., have told the Railroad Commission that a 25,000 barrels-per-day increase in the legal rate of production of the Yates Field could lead to the ultimate recovery of an additional 5.7 million barrels of oil and boost State of Texas revenues as much as $28 million a year.

The additional oil recovery, however, is contingent on the elimination of reservoir pressure declines in the major portion of the field, according to Marathon testimony.

Marathon is the operator of the unitized 26,000-acre field in Crockett and Pecos Counties where, the company reported, 784 million barrels of oil have been produced so far in the 54-year life of one of Texas' 12 largest oil provinces.

Estimates of the additional oil recovery and Texas' extra tax and royalty income potential were offered during Tuesday-Thursday sessions of a hearing on the application of Marathon and other working interest owners for an increase in the Yates Field most efficient rate of production—or allowable—to 100,000 barrels per day.

Michael R. McKown, manager of crude oil acquisition for Marathon, told a three-member RRC Oil and Gas Division panel of examiners that, with the scheduled end of federal controls on oil prices in the fall of 1981, state severance tax and royalties could pump from the Yates Field as much as $168 million a year into the Texas treasury.

McKown was one of five witnesses whose testimony was directed by Marathon Attorney Warren B. Leach of Houston. The others were W.K. Stenzel, Marathon geologist who is coordinating manager for exploration and production in the U.S. and Canada; Robert A. Pfile (cq), Yates Field Unit engineering manager; Clifford A. Miller, the company's district engineer at Midland; and R.B. Bath, Marathon petroleum engineer at Midland.

The RRC hearing panelists are Senior Staff Engineer Willis C. Steed, Senior Staff Engineer Eugene W. Day Jr., and Legal Examiner Brian Sullivan.

McKown testified that Marathon's pipeline affiliate is gathering the present production allowable of 125,000 barrels daily for five purchasers and delivering the volume to four trunk-line systems in the area. He reported that a recent market demand survey indicated that five purchasers Shell, Chevron, Exxon, Conoco and Marathon wanted in excess of 60,000 additional barrels per day and that other purchasers expressed firm interest in another 15,000 barrels daily.

The oil acquisition official also was the witness who estimated a $28 million annual increase in State of Texas revenues by reason of a 25,000 b/d increase in the MER and decontrol of oil prices.

Stenzel, an earth scientist by training and trade, presented his interpretation of the geological development and reservoir characteristics of the Yates Field, and identified the principal producing zones as the San Andres, Queen and Grayburg formations.

Cavernous voids in formation rocks—similar to those forming the Carlsbad Cavern occur throughout the east side of the Yates reservoir, the geologist said. Vertical void is as much as 26 feet, he reported.

Stenzel also related that an extensive drilling program over the past two and one-half years has provided an abundance of well cores and modern logs that enhance Marathon's definition of the Yates reservoir and characteristics.

Pfile, who has been associated with the Yates Field for more than 20 years, testified that 92-plus percent of the 784 million barrels of produced oil came for the east side of the field where "shelf rocks" and the "cavernous porosity" improve production capacity.

Reservoir pressure declines have been virtually eliminated by Marathon's water and raw/inhered gas injection programs, he related in citing the operator's goal of attaining zero pressure decline.

Pfile further testified: Eighty-six percent of the producing wells on the east side of the field are flowing, while 95 percent of those on the west side are on pump.

Increasingly efficient production operations have resulted in a lessening of water intrusion into the Yates reservoir despite "dramatic" increases in production.

With a 150,000 barrels per day MER, the Yates Unit would produce 4.45 percent of its reserves in a year's time, a rate that is significantly lower than the annual allowable/reserves ratio of Texas' other 11 major fields.

The field had 90 more years of life and can produce 150,000 barrels daily for three to five years before production declines set in. The present 125,000 barrels per day rate can be maintained for seven to ten years before a decline begins.

The field can produce at an efficient rate in excess of 150,000 barrels daily. He reported a recent high-rate test indicated the field can produce 171,500 barrels daily for short periods.

An MER set at 150,000 barrels daily would increase ultimate production by 5.7 million barrels of oil.

Approximately 3.15 billion barrels of the four billion-plus barrels of original oil-in-place remain in the reservoir.

Additional drilling of 800 to 1,000 wells may be necessary to attain zero pressure decline in the reservoir.

Miller, the Marathon district engineer in whose sector the Yates Field lies, reported slightly more than 98 percent of the working interest owners authorized Marathon to seek the proposed MER increase.

There was one negative vote, representing slightly more than one percent working interest, and that interest holder did not oppose the operating plan or disagree on the 150,000-barrel MER, he states.

Since 1977, reported Miller Marathon has accelerated efforts to expand and upgrade production and gathering facilities, development drilling and remedial wellwork. Field density is now 37 acres per well.

Of the 128 development wells drilled since November 1977, 112 have been completed as oil producers, he related in advising that this year's program calls for 30 more development wells.

Petroleum Engineer Bath told the RRC examiners that the west side of the Yates Field needs additional development to improve primary production performance and secondary recovery operations. He estimated ultimate oil recovery from that sector will range between 75 million and 90 million barrels of the 500 million to 700 million barrels of original oil-in-place.

Bath said oil recovery from similar, gas solution drive reservoirs elsewhere in West Texas is somewhat higher. Unless secondary and other techniques are employed, a substantial volume of recoverable oil will be left behind, he testified.

Bath described several pilot waterflood projects, representing an $11 million investment by Marathon on the west side of the field.

The hearing was still in progress late Thursday afternoon.

RRC's Poerner Says Multi-Energy Lands Pose Priority Problem

Railroad Commission Chairman John Poerner said the push for U.S. fuels independence is beginning to raise legal and priority concerns over the development of Texas lands with multiple energy resources.

The question of priority already has reached the Commission, which has jurisdiction over oil and gas, lignite, coal and uranium exploration and production, Poerner reported in a speech before the Natural Resources Section at the State Bar of Texas convention here.

"One particularly interesting and very real question is raising its head in Texas as the energy needs of this state and nation expand, and our resolve to again be energy self-sufficient strengthens," Poerner said.

He described the issue thusly:

"Where there are two competing, or at least differing energy resources to be developed from a particular tract of land, and the immediate development of one precludes immediate development of the other, which should take precedence?"

Poerner noted that the owner of oil and gas minerals has always had the right to extract them, subject only to reasonable state regulations aimed at the protection of petroleum reserves and the prevention of waste and confiscation.

But, the regulatory official cited, "there are no oil or gas regulations which address the priority of development of competing resources." Neither are there any surface mining and reclamation rules that address or confer on the Railroad Commission any authority to decide whether oil and gas or lignite and uranium shall be developed first.

"This type of question, which clearly involves property rights, has been left to the courts," he pointed out.

Presently, Poerner said, legal precedent extends to the oil or gas owner the right to a reasonable use of the surgace estate to drill for and produce underlying mines.

"Could this be extended to insure some first right to use the surgace where there is also an outstanding surgace coal mining lease?" he pondered.

"If so, wouldn't some reasonable time limit have to be imposed on this right?"

Poerner explained one "Novel" approach to resolving such legal and priority questions:

"...the Railroad Commission, or some agency (might) be given the responsibility to weigh the state's energy needs and the economics of either developing or delaying the development of a particular resource on a particular tract, during the permitting process."

The RRC chairman said he neither advocated or opposed such an approach, which would require legislative action.

However, he commented, "I do think the questions raised are relevant and will become more important to many of your clients as the energy crunch squeezes even tighter and we seek ways to maximize the recovery and use of our available resources, and achieve energy independence."

Poerner reported "a dramatic growth" has occurred in the Texas coal mining industry. Production has jumped from two million-plus tons in 1971 to nearly 27 million tons in 1979 and projections indicate Texas will be producing more than 70 million tons, he cited.

"The Commission has committed itself to establishing a regulatory program which will protect our state lands from the effects of unregulated coal mining activities but which will at the same time protect the development of our energy resources," he declared and observed:

"All too often the lack of direction on the part of an administrative agency prevents the private sector from being able to make a decision and establish its direction."

Poerner pointed out that the Commission, earlier this year, became the first state agency in the country to become the "regulatory authority" under the federal mining regulatory program.

Also, he added in describing the Commission's watchdog role in dealing with federal rules and regulations, "we have the distinction of having been the first state to bring a lawsuit against the Department of Interior for its improper interpretation of the federal surgace mining act and will continue to make efforts to achieve reasonable adjustments to the federal act and the regulations promulgated pursuant to it."

Poerner described the Commission's efforts to respond to numerous federal energy-related laws, including the Natural Gas Policy Act, underground injection control statutes and regulations and others. He reported the RRC has achieved nearly 24,000 applications alone for well category determination under the NGPA.

"Despite the flood of paperwork from across the Potomac, we have done our utmost to work with Washington to ensure that federal regulations will be as reasonable as possible," he said.

Poerner said Texas has set an example for the rest of the nation through production of its oil, gas, coal, lignite and uranium.

"We have shown the world how to properly conserve and produce natural resources to provide the energy to make our country strong," he maintained.

Amoco Expects To Increase Production

The Railroad Commission has authorized Amoco Production Co. to conduct an in-fill drilling program that is expected to increase ultimate oil production of a West Texas field by more than two million barrels.

Chairman John Poerner and Commissioners James E. (Jim) Nugent and Mack Wallace acted affirmatively on the application of Amoco to initiate the program within the Levelland Unit of the Levelland Field, Cochran County, during their weekly conference on Oil and Gas Division matters. Approval was recommended by Senior Staff Engineer Willis C. Steed, who conducted a hearing on the application on May 9.

Today's order of approval provides that well density will not exceed one producing well for each 21.25 acres for allowable purposes.

Secondary recovery of oil by water injection was started on the Amoco Levelland Unit in 1964. A carbon dioxide miscible gas injection was initiated in 1972.

The Levelland Unit currently has slightly more than 400 producing wells. As of January 1, 1980, the unit had produced more than 128.3 million barrels of oil.

Fifty-five in-fill development wells are scheduled in 1980. They are expected to boost ultimate recovery by 2.17 million barrels of oil.

Sonora Sales Tax Remain High

State Comptroller Bob Bullock Wednesday said a small decrease in the June city sales tax rebates may indicate consumer caution about the economy and spending patterns.

Bullock said 936 Texas cities would share $65.3 million this month, compared to payments of $67.7 million during the same period last year.

While sales in the last quarter of 1979 and the first quarter of 1980 were generally strong, sales tax returns now are picking up the period where national credit restraint was being urged, he said.

"We can't be sure a peak has been reached until the 1980 second quarter returns are filed and analyzed sometime after July 31," Bullock said.

He said 1980 payments through June amount to $266.9 million compared to 1979 payments for the same period of $218 million.

Although most of the surrounding area showed a slight downturn in the sales tax rebates, Sonora still reflected an increase, receiving $23,204.53 as compared to $31,043.21 a year ago.

The June rebate brings the City's total for the year to $115,072.59, up 39 percent from the 1979 figure of $82,734.72.

Totals for surrounding cities and their percent of increase over last year's total include Del Rio, $114,942.37, up 32 percent; El Dorado, $8,346.55, up 10 percent; Junction, $8,120.77, up 17 percent; Menard, $5,121.05, up 12 percent; Rocksprings, $3,376.15, up 26 percent; and San Angelo, $353,118.80, up 22 percent.

June rebates to major Texas cities include:

Houston, $13.5 million, compared to $14.3 million in June of last year. Dallas, $8 million this month, compared to $7.9 million during the same period last year.

Fort Worth, $2.3 million, compared to $2.6 million during June in 1979.

San Antonio, $3,547 million, compared to $3,556 million during the same period last year.

Fort Worth, $2.3 million, compared to $2.6 million during June in 1979.

San Antonio, $3,547 million compared to $3,556 million during the same period last year.

Bullock also announced Metropolitan Transit Authority payments for June of $1.7 million to San Antonio and $14.4 million to Houston. Houston has received $104 million in MTA payments this fiscal year and San Antonio has received $13.6 million.

The optional city sales tax is collected by merchants and businesses along with the state's sales tax and is rebated monthly to the cities in which it is collected by the Comptroller's office.
