Why use interfacing in home sewing?

First, interfacing is a separate supporting layer of fabric-- it's placed on the inside of a garment's fabric, explains Nancy Brown, a clothing specialist.

Use interfacing when you want a professional-looking garment, because it adds support, shape and body. It also gives clothing longer wearability, she says.

Brown is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the Texas A&M University System.

Halford Represents Pool At Celebration

J.B. "Squirt" Halford, Crew Chief of Rig 364 in the Sonora District, was selected to represent Pool Well Servicing Company at the 500 Rig celebration in Houston, December 2, 1981.

Halford has been with Pool Company for more than 24 years, longer than any other crew chief in the company. He has a reputation for being one of the most conscientious crew chiefs in the company, with outstanding safety and maintenance records and very low turnover in his crew. "He has more customer recall for jobs than any other crew chief we have," says Sonora District Manager Todd Churchill. "He is very particular about his work."

Halford worked out of what used to be the Perryton, Texas office for 12 years, the Winters office for a year, and also San Angelo, before being transferred to Sonora in 1973. He currently operates Rig 364, a workover rig, and manages a crew of three men.

Some "good, old" sayings about marriage just aren't true, says Diane Welch, a family life education specialist.

Welch, on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the Texas A&M University System, says researchers term the following sayings "modern misconceptions":

"There are two types of marriage—good and bad."
 "Love is what makes or breaks a marriage."
 "Marriages are satisfying as long as two persons are compatible."
 "Relationships are well established by the time a marriage occurs."

We would like to thank the local city police, sheriff's dept., and D.P.S. for their prompt service and efficiency in the robbery attempt Saturday night.

People Have Choice Of SS Representative

Although most people rely on the advice of local office personnel for help with their Social Security-related problems, a person has the right to be represented in his or her dealings with the Social Security Administration by someone of his or her choice. The representative may be an attorney or other qualified individual. On request, the local Social Security office will even help a claimant locate an attorney, using community resources such as the Local Bar Association, Legal Aid Society, or other organization. However, there are some restrictions on the appointment of a representative. A person cannot be represented by a corporation or an organization, or by an individual who has been barred from representing Social Security claimants because of prior involvement in fraudulent activities, charging unauthorized fees, or violating other provisions of the Social Security law. Moreover, special rules apply where the prospective representative is a present or former employee of the United States Government.

her written permission; to submit evidence to support a claim; to be present at any interview with Social Security Administration personnel; to request a reconsideration hearing, or appeals council review; to be notified of all decisions made on a claim, with the claimant's written permission; and to submit a request to the Social Security Administration for the claimant to pay an appropriate fee.

The representative does not have authority to sign an application for benefits for the claimant, or to charge or collect a fee without written permission from the Social Security Administration. A representative who does charge or collect an unauthorized fee for services may be subject to prosecution. Any fee due the representative is the claimant's responsibility. Request for permission to charge a fee may be made even if the claim is denied. Should a claim be approved, payment of the fee generally is made from any retroactive benefits due the claimant. In such cases, the representative must file a "fee petition" within 60 days from the date of the notice that the claim was approved. The petition must show the amount of the fee, and describe the services rendered and the dates they began and ended.

For additional information about the right to representative and the extent of the representative's authority, contact your local Social Security Office.

CAPITOL UPDATE

John Tower
U.S. SENATOR for TEXAS
 142 RUSSELL OFFICE BUILDING
 WASHINGTON, D.C. 20510

The American system of free enterprise is based both upon the belief in maximum free choice for all individuals -- and upon the fact that it is undeniably the most effective way for an economy to function.

When government disrupts the market system, the results generally have tended to be disastrous. Natural gas regulation is perhaps a classic example.

We all remember the period in the 1970s in which much of the nation suffered severe natural gas shortages, even though our nation possesses vast resources of that fuel. The problem was that the interstate regulated price was so low that producers could not afford to pump and send the gas. Texas, which had unregulated intrastate prices, had negligible problems that same year.

In 1978 Congress passed the Natural Gas Policy Act, providing for phased-in deregulation of natural gas, with many price controls to be lifted 1985. The object was to let the cost of natural gas rise to a level comparable with that of oil. This limited and phased decontrol caused both a sharp increase in the level of natural gas supplies, and spurred conservation.

Now, however, further action is needed. The price of oil has risen at a much faster rate than was envisioned when the deregulatory legislation was conceived. Thus, natural gas still is selling at an artificially low level. That means there is less incentive to produce and conserve, gas is being used for purposes for which other fuels would be more efficient, and the stage is being set for a drastic price when controls expire in 1985.

Our recent experience with decontrol of crude oil prices shows that fears for precipitous price increases are unfounded. Doomsayers predicted sharp rises in gasoline prices when oil controls were lifted, but the increase was minimal -- and most of that was the result of a simultaneous rise in OPEC prices.

It is my belief that we would see the same pattern with more immediate natural gas deregulation. With the incentive of a free market, production would increase to a point that competition would control prices.

Too, energy users could make decisions based upon realistic prices, and use the most appropriate fuel for a specific purpose.

I believe that the Administration will propose a workable deregulation bill in 1982. Its success in Congress will depend in part, of course, upon the specific proposal. However, in my view there is growing realization in Congress that some sort of action is necessary.

Unfortunately I also must report that I believe there will be inexorable pressure for some sort of windfall profits tax. I oppose such taxes in principle. Experience with the so-called windfall profits tax on crude oil has demonstrated that such a tax inhibits our progress toward energy self-sufficiency.

What the legislative outcome of the debate over windfall profits taxes will be is unclear. Certainly, I will do everything that I can to minimize punitive taxes on the natural gas producers whose product is so vital to the economy of the United States as a whole, and to Texas.

Lone Star Gas Files For Rate Increase

Lone Star Gas Co. Representative, J.T. Morgan, today filed an application for a rate increase which would raise the average residential customer's monthly bill in Sonora about $.92 in the winter and $.93 in the summer.

Based on Lone Star's rate application, a residential customer who uses an average of eight thousand cubic feet of gas a month paid $28.86 for gas service in the winter. Under the requested rate, that same customer would pay $29.78.

Commercial gas customers' rates would also increase under the requested rate schedule.

"Our customers are accustomed to dependable natural gas service," says Morgan. "This rate increase is necessary to continue a high performance level and for other necessary expenses, such as maintaining and improving the local pipeline distribution system, which are vital to dependable service."

Lone Star's last rate increase in Sonora became effective June, 1979.

"Since that time, every business, including Lone Star, has experienced increased operating expenses," says Morgan.

"And, of course, unlike other businesses that can raise their prices as expenses go up, we must apply to the City Council for a rate increase. No one likes rising prices, but any business must earn enough money to meet operating expenses and still achieve a reasonable profit. Even though our expenses have gone up, Lone Star still has one of the lowest average operating costs per customer when compared to any of the other major gas utilities in Texas."
