

Sixty-eight bid farewell to SHS

Sixty-eight members of the Class Of '87 bid farewell to Sonora High School last Friday night.

The Class will hold the distinction of being the first class to graduate from the new high school though, with the cooperation of the rainy weather, the ceremony was held at Bronco Stadium as has been tradition.

The ceremony held the mixed emotions of joy, pride and sadness and the expressions on the faces of the graduates reflected these feelings.

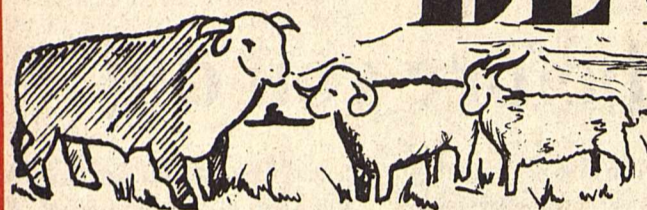

The sign on the lawn of the courthouse also gave evidence that a good time was had by all (at least some) following the exercises.

Stateline drills well in Sonora

Another bit of history was made this last week as Stateline Drilling started the first gas well to be drilled within the city limits of Sonora.

The site of the first well, is located next to the Meckel Draw in the western part of Sonora. Statex Petroleum plans four such sites throughout the community.

The Stateline rig wearing a sparkling new coat of paint also flies the American flag and the Texas flag and should be a sort of tourist attraction as it can be seen from all the major thoroughfares.

Three wells will be drilled from this location using the directional method of drilling which allows for the maximum utilization of the site.

Drilling at each of the sites will occur only during daylight hours to ensure the comfort of local citizens.

Tax savings are possible when employers hire

Dear Commissioner Nabers:
I am writing concerning the tax credit program for employers. We have hired a high school student to work at our company. Would my company be eligible for tax credits.

--M.M.
Garland, Texas

Commissioner
Mary Scott Nabers

Dear M.M.:
The high school student you were referring to is not eligible for the Targeted Jobs Tax Credit Program (TJTC) if he is already employed by your company. Future employees and candidates for TJTC should be processing before or on the day of hiring.

- You could receive tax credits for hiring any of the following:
- (1) Some handicapped persons
  - (2) Young people 18-24 who are members of economically disadvantaged families
  - (3) Some Vietnam-era veterans
  - (4) Ex-offenders (felons) who are economically disadvantaged.

The Targeted Jobs Program is a chance for you to save up to 40% of the first $6,000 paid in wages during the first year of employment. The maximum credit per employee is $2,400. Contact a local TEC office for details.

Dear Commissioner Nabers:
Can you explain for me what constitutes "good cause for quitting work"? I have always thought that a person can't draw unemployment if they quit.

--Puzzled
Seguin, Texas

Dear Puzzled:
I can answer your questions only very broadly because each work separation is judged on its own merits. First it is important to realize that an individual who quits his employment and files for unemployment benefits has the burden of providing that he has good cause connected with that work for quitting.

Some examples of good cause include: substantial changes in hiring agreement; unnecessary hazardous working conditions; proven harassment by the employer or an employer representative; repeated difficulties in getting paychecks or having paychecks bounce due to insufficient funds.

A quit because of working conditions will not be considered good cause unless the employee brought the problem to the employer's attention and gave the employer a chance to remedy the situation.

Also, by law, a claimant cannot be disqualified from receiving benefits if he has had to resign on doctor's orders due to medically verified illness.

Ms. Nabers represents 336,000 employers throughout Texas. If you have any questions you want answered please write Commissioner Nabers at 614 Texas Employment Commission Building, 15th and Congress, Austin, Texas 78778.

Call TESS before you dig

A new sophisticated computerized notification system to protect Texans from interruptions of vital utility services begins operations June 1, 1987. The state wide service is designed to link anyone doing excavation work with companies having underground facilities such as natural gas, water, electric, petroleum and petroleum products, communications or cable TV lines.

The system, dubbed "DIG TESS" for Texas Excavation Safety System, Inc. begins operations with over forty member companies participating.

"This computerized system is a one-call system for anyone doing any digging or excavation work anywhere in Texas. By making one toll free call to 1-800-DIG TESS (1-800-3448377) the notification center will alert those member companies who have lines or facilities in the TESS system which are in the excavation or dig area," says Tom G. Roberts, Executive Director of DIG TESS.

"There are numerous benefits for everyone involved," notes Roberts, "operators, excavators and the general public will all benefit from the reduction of damages, injuries and the interruption of service. DIG TESS is vital to the public's health and safety. Many companies sustain hundreds of thousands of dollars of losses yearly from underground lines hit by contractors."

The Texas system is geared to US Government maps, breaking the state's 267,338 square miles into one-half mile square blocks. Each block is assigned a special code number and placed in the computer. Each block is also identified by specific addresses in urban areas and by specific landmarks such as churches, place names or natural landmarks in rural areas.

When a contractor is planning an excavation he notifies DIG TESS at least 48 hours in advance of the location of the work, the day and time of the work, and the type of excavation. The computer will notify each member company with lines in the area and the member company can mark their lines at the work site.

The notification center will be operated by Academy Computing Corp. of Oklahoma City. They are currently operating similar systems in other states, including Oklahoma and Mississippi.

First year operating costs are estimated at $1.2 million with the costs allocated to member companies. The program is free to contractors and excavators. Member companies expect to save many times the amount the service will cost.

All known excavators working in Texas are being contacted by mail with details of the program.

In addition, all member companies will maintain periodic contacts with excavators.

Any company with underground facilities in Texas that could be damaged by excavation is urged to join DIG TESS. Information is available by calling the toll free number 1-800-DIG TESS (1-800-344-8377).

Operators are on duty to enter excavator information into computer terminal at the Texas Excavation Safety System's notification center. Before excavating in your work area, call 1-800-DIG-TESS.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

by T. Driskell

Ranchmen, not the drugstore cowboys, have learned that, at its absolute best, nature is neutral. It is inclined, however, more frequently to be adamantly adverse. The only certainty seems to be that it will alter its course. Man's major problems seem to be involved with being caught with his trousers at half-mast during these course alterations.

Looking at my own family, there are no evident precipitation graphs to indicate when changes in ranch operations course are indicated. Instead there is a great reliance on "hope it will rain" rather than hedging the bets against the possibility it will not. The only positive action is one operation of 14,000 acres widely spread over four counties to take advantage of scattered thunderstorms. The spread seems to help in all cases except a general drought.

Nature's effect is not confined to agricultural endeavors and it is well to remember some of the characteristics. A prolonged deviation from the average tends to be compensated for in a sudden burst, be it drought, cold spells or hot spells. Ignoring this characteristic creates difficulty.

We had been in peculiarly unusually semi-drought for 3.7 years and we decided to stabilize and repave the airport. The drought broke and profound difficulties were encountered in draining and drying out the sub courses. A lot of engineering sin was revealed on our city street - drainage that should have been designed in simply is not there. It is a problem going back years and a McCarver oversight may ultimately place the city water supply in jeopardy.

Tongue in cheek one must watch the location of some local rigs. The sight 14 years ago was under several feet of fast moving water so we must wonder what the cycle is. Would it be a worthwhile investment to buy a video camera? A tape of rough necks working from dinghies should be very interesting.

One notes that the cloud seeders are taking credit for San Angelo's precipitation excess. That, however, is another really space consuming opinion.

On the Lighter Side...

by Elwood P. Suggins

Have you ever noticed that when the fish start biting so do the mosquitos? I have been fishing many a time and all I got to bite was the mosquitos. And another thing, all the sandwiches go stale and the beer gets hot just like the weather. If you want the weather to act up then all you have to do is go fishing.

When I go fishing I dig into my tackle box and think that I will only take a few things with me so I won't be weighted down while I wade through the river. Of course, I have to take some extra baits and a dip net and then there is a fish stringer and I always know that I'm going to get thirsty so I have to take at least a six pack of beer. The beer starts out pretty cold but by the third or fourth one they are rodeo cool. I don't like to litter so I have to keep all of the empties. I usually carry an extra rod in case one breaks and I need insect spray, sun tan oil and some crackers in case I get hungry. I try to wear some good tennis shoes so I won't fall down in the slick parts. I carry one of those inner tubes you can sit down in when the water gets too deep to wade and of course I have to have a paddle to maneuver the tube with and it gets so hot I take a towel along to put over my head so I can wet it and keep cool. I look like a gypsy when I get ready. I have to take a tape measure to make sure I don't keep any illegal fish and then I have to take a scale to see how much each fish weighs. I wear a cap and a coat because I usually start out when its cool in the mornings and need a coat. I carry some of that fish smell stuff so I can keep the fish from smelling me. I carry one of those things to get your lure unhung and if lures aren't working I carry a bucket of worms and if the worms don't work I carry a minnow seine so I can catch some minnows. I take along a flashlight in case I get caught after dark and some matches so I can build a fire if it does get dark. I try to take some steak or hamburger meat to fix in case I need it. I carry one of those big knives so I can protect myself. Most of the time I carry along some of that stink bait to catch catfish with and some treble hooks to put it on.

After I get everything loaded onto my body I take out for the river and the first thing I do is test the water to see how cold it is. I carry an extra pair of socks, underwear, pants in case I get wet. I tie an extra pair of shoes around my neck because I can't wade without getting my feet wet. I take the first step into the water and if it's not too cold I embark on my fishing trip. Usually after the first five steps I am used to the water and if I'm lucky everything is still dry. It's usually that sixth step that gets me. I find the slickest place in the whole river to take that sixth step. Boom! I fall and everything gets wet. The worms start floating down the river and the water starting churning around them with fish getting a free meal. My crackers are soggy and the meat is ruined. My extra clothes are wet and the bubbles from my open can of beer rise to the top of the water. The tube starts floating down the river and following it are my paddle, seine, minnow bucket, small tackle box and all of the corks I brought along. All of my extra clothes are wet and my coat is soaked and so heavy I can't stand up. I spend the rest of the morning retrieving all of my lost goods and at lunch after I have thawed out I begin readying myself for the afternoon wade down the river.

Fiesta del Concho 1987 brings together all the flavor of a country fair with the unique activities you can find only along the banks of the Concho River and at Old Fort Concho in San Angelo, Texas.

For the public's convenience there will be "park and ride" bus service from the Convention Center. Friday, June 19: 3 p.m.-11 p.m.; Saturday, June 20: 7 a.m.-12MID.; Sunday, June 21: 11-7 p.m.

Chargeback rule protects consumers

A little-known safeguard built into the federal Fair Credit Billing Act can protect consumers from losing money on credit card purchases, says family finance expert Nancy Granovsky.

"A consumer can eliminate a disputed payment from a credit card bill by requesting a chargeback," says the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economist. "A chargeback simply means the disputed payment has been charged against the merchant or creditor rather than the consumer."

If your problem is a billing error, such as being overcharged, you must notify the card issuer of the problem within 60 days of the date of the last statement.

"Withhold payment or ask for a credit when you notify the company," she advises. "The card issuer must answer within two billing cycles or 90 days, whichever comes first."

"When the problem involves defective or shoddy goods, poor service, no refund or exchange, first approach the merchant with your problem," says the specialist. "If you're still not satisfied call or write the card issuer, just as you would if it's a billing problem."

Granovsky says the chargeback feature lets you withhold payment on that portion of the account that is in dispute while the problem is being resolved.

"Whenever you have a problem with a bill, don't send your letter to the same address as your credit card payment. Send the letter to the address for inquires or complaints that's listed separately on your bill," emphasizes the home economist.

She says the letter should include your name, address, credit-card number, the facts of the dispute, an indication that you have talked with the merchant if the dispute is over the merchandise, the amount of payment you are withholding and your signature.

"Any letter should also state explicitly that you are requesting a chargeback under the special rules of the Fair Credit Billing Act," Granovsky advises.

Social Security News

Contacting a Social Security office

A person or family cannot receive Social Security payments unless an application for them is filed, Franklin H. Upp, Social Security manager in San Angelo, said recently.

There are certain special times when a person should get in touch with the Social Security Office. For example, people should contact Social Security if they are unable to work because of an injury or illness that is expected to last, or has lasted, for at least 1 year; if someone in the family dies; or, if the worker, spouse or a dependent child has permanent kidney failure.

In addition, a person should contact a Social Security office if he or she is at least 62 and plans to retire or is within 3 months of 65 even if there are no plans to retire, to arrange Medicare health insurance protection.

Persons needing to contact Social Security should remember that their business can be conducted by telephone. A contact by telephone can save time and money.

More information about Social Security benefits can be obtained at the San Angelo Social Security Office located at 2214 Sherwood Way. The telephone number is 949-4608.

"Any local group, organization or person is encouraged to come out and cut spots regarding any event or activity they are involved in.

Immigration reform effective June 1

Sanctions under the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 against employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens take effect on June 1, 1987.

Agricultural producers, and anyone else who may hire illegal aliens, need to understand the basic provisions of the law so that they do not subject themselves to fines and other penalties, according to Joe Pena, agricultural economist-management with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Uvalde.

Objectives of the Law

The primary political objective of the act, which was passed on November 6, 1986, was to "regain control of U.S. borders," Pena said.

"As a result, a concentrated effort to enforce this law is to be expected," he added.

Employer Sanctions and Penalties

The employer sanctions are what give this new law its teeth, he said.

"If an employer knowingly hires an illegal alien, he could be subject to a maximum of $2,000 for the first offense and up to $10,000 for each offense after the second," Pena said.

If an employer repeatedly breaks the law, the violation will be declared a "pattern or practice" and the penalty climbs to a maximum of six months in jail and a $3,000 fine for each unauthorized alien hired, he added.

Phases of Implementation

The Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) granted both a public and information and a warning period, he explained.

The public information period expires on May 31, 1987.

"This period allowed both workers and employers time to learn about the law's provision," Pena said.

The warning period begins June 1.

The law will be enforced, but only warning citations will be given to first-time offenders.

"The full force of the law will be enforced on second time offenders during this warning period," Pena emphasized.

The law will be fully implemented with three-tier sanctions which will go into effect May 31, 1988.

Worker Verification

Employers must verify a job applicant's identity and right to work in the United States, he said.

This verification can be done in several different ways, he explained. One document will be needed to prove identification, such as a driver's license, passport, naturalization certificate, birth certificate (with photo identification), or state-approved identity card, the economist said.

A person's legal right to work in the United States can be established with documentation such as a social security card or birth certificate (with photo ID).

"These two documentation requirements could be embedded into one single document, such as a passport, certificate of U.S. citizenship, certificate of naturalization, unexpired passport with a valid employment certificate, or a 'green card' " the economist noted.

These documents must be requested from every employee, including close relatives, Pena emphasized.

"Failure to do so could open the employer to discrimination charges or fines for not verifying a worker's status," Pena stated.

Anti-Discrimination Provision

An anti-discrimination provision was written into the law to prevent discrimination against citizens who look as though they could be illegal aliens, Pena pointed out.

Failure to hire a person authorized to work because of their citizenship status or national origin could result in fines up to $1,000 for the first offense and up

(Con't on pg. 7.)

Prayer, piety, and sin

Kent Kepler
United Methodist Church

In his little book of satirical prayers "for the natural man," He Sent Leasness, David Head includes this "slightly altered" version of the prayer of general confession from the Book of Common Prayer:

Benevolent and easy-going Father, we have occasionally ben guilty of errors of judgement. We have lived under the deprivations of heredity and the disadvantages of environment. We have sometimes failed to act in accordance with common sense. We have done the best we could in the circumstances; And we have been careful not to ignore the common standards of decency. And we are glad to think that we are fairly normal. Do thou, O Lord, deal lightly with our infrequent lapses Be they own sweet Self with those who admit they are not perfect; According to the unlimited tolerance which we have a right to expect from thee. And grant as an indulgent Parent that we may hereafter continue to live a harmless and happy life and keep our self-respect.

The only problem with this prayer is that it is too close to the prayer experience of so many of us. We have been so socialized in our faith, so psychoanalyzed in our behavior, and so protected from the consequences of our misdeeds that we fail to recognize that what we have committed is not infrequent lapses but SIN.

The most satisfying definition of sin I have run across is that sin is anything that separates us from God, from our fellow human beings, or from our best selves that were made in the image of God. Such a definition means that there is no single list of action or words that are sins at all times and in all places. My kidding behavior may be the thing that breaks down barriers between myself and another person, or the same behavior may be a sin that cuts me off from another person. Some of our "socially-approved" behavior may cause us to alienate others from our company (SIN) while some of our socially unacceptable behavior might be a means of grace to another person. The way we speak to others before and after worship may more than negate our attendance at worship. We need to be God's people in all that we do and say.

We need to always ask ourselves, "How is this going to affect my relationship with God and with this other person? Does it bring us together? Does it throw us apart? Does it raise barriers or tear them down? Does my word cause separation between other persons while I remain an "innocent" bystander?"

We have become so used to hearing and saying that "God is Love" that we often forget that God is God. We lose sight of the scripture that says "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." We make God over into a loveable Care Bear, when God is also "The Avenger," a god of power and might and justice. God is not an indulgent parent but a Being who demands our respect and expects obedience to his ways. When we approach him in prayer, it should be in the same general confession from the Book of Common Prayer in its original form.

Almighty and most merciful Father; we have erred, and strayed from thy ways like lost sheep. We have followed too much the devices and desires of our own hearts. We have offended against thy holy laws. We have left undone those things which we ought to have done; And we have done those things which we ought to have done; And there is no health in us. But thou, O Lord, have mercy upon us, miserable offenders. Spare thou those, O God, who confess their faults. Restore thou those who are penitent; According to thy promises declared unto mankind in Christ Jesus our Lord. And grant, O most merciful Father, for his sake; That we may hereafter live a godly, righteous, and sober life, to the glory of thy holy Name. Amen.

Oldest living adoptee sought

A search for the oldest living adoptee is planned for the 100th anniversary celebration of the Edna Gladney Center, which will culminate in a Gala weekend November 20 and 21.

The maternity home and adoption agency has placed more than 20,000 children in adoptive homes in its first century.

"We are asking all our volunteers and friends to help us in our search for the oldest adoptee. We want to honor all birthparents, adoptees and adoptive parents this year, and we thought it would be appropriate to specifically honor the oldest living Gladney adoptee at our Centennial Celebration in November," Eleanor Tuck, Gladney's Executive Director said.

People who wish to share information to help with the search for the oldest Gladney adoptee may contact The Edna Gladney Center's Department of Development, 2300 Hemphill, Fort Worth, Texas 76110. All information must be submitted in writing by November 1, 1987.

Gladney's Adult Adoptee Association of America will be sponsoring, in conjunction with the celebration, Fun Run to raise money to establish a college scholarship fund for birthmothers who are Gladney residents. The oldest adoptee would represent the Adult Adoptee Association and present a check to the Center in November.

The Edna Gladney Center, the nation's largest maternity home and infant placement agency, traces its beginnings to 1887, when the Reverend I.Z.T. Morris of Fort Worth began placing orphans in adoptive homes throughout Texas. His organization became the Texas Children's Home and Aid Society. In 1910 Mrs. Edna Gladney became involved in the Society's work, and was named superintendent in 1927. She was directly involved in legislation which removed the word illegitimate from birth certificates, and secured inheritance rights for adopted children. The agency was renamed in 1950 to honor her.

A 24 hour hotline is available for young women seeking help with an unplanned pregnancy. 429-1461 in the Dallas/Fort Worth metroplex, 1-800-772-2740 in Texas, and 1-800-433-2922 National toll-free.

Hudspeth hospital a vital part of the community

by Charlotte Gilmore

Originally opened for operation on July 1, 1951 with 21 beds, it has been remodeled, revised, and added onto over the years to keep up with the times. Today the hospital has 16 beds ready for occupancy having given over space through the years in order that the Lab, X-Ray, Emergency Room and Offices could be enlarged. During most of these 35 years of operation, the hospital has had two doctors on staff. By the time the 36th anniversary rolls around the hospital will be staffed by Drs. Greg Lind and Charles Pajestka.

Over 50% of the business at Hudspeth Hospital comes through Out-Patient Services: Lab, E.K.G., and X-Ray. These services are presided over by two full time lab technicians who have been with the facility a total of 11 years. The equipment in these departments is not only what one would expect in a facility this size, but in many cases is better than expected. A hospital official states that recently one of the large hospitals in a major metropolitan city offered to take care of any lab tests which couldn't be run here. When this was checked out, it was found that the few tests which had to be sent off to a professional lab by Hudspeth, would also have to be sent off by the larger hospital.

Emergency Room is the hospital's forte. Being in the "country", Hudspeth must be able to handle whatever comes through the doors, from gunshot wounds to burns and traffic accidents, from heart attacks and strokes to snake bites and fractures. It handles them all. In critical cases, Hudspeth has a finely-tuned relationship with the local ambulance service and the large hospitals with I.C.U. facilities in San Angelo. All critical cases are first stabilized locally then sent by ambulance to the fuller services of the larger hospital.

Through the years, the hospital and the auxiliary which supports it have worked hand in hand to see that any equipment needed to keep the facility services top-notch would be purchased. The most recent major addition of equipment came just in recent months with the purchase of a ph/Blood Gas Analyzer.

Why would a ph/Blood Gas Analyzer be important to Hudspeth Memorial Hospital? Two reasons. First, it performs important functions: it tells the doctor the levels of various gases in the blood: oxygen, carbon monoxide, etc. In cases where the patient has stopped breathing, it can mean the difference between life and death, telling the team how well the patient is being oxygenated. Second, in the case of pneumonia, emphysema, or any "chronic lung" disease, the hospital cannot justify keeping the patient unless there is some method to monitor how well he's doing internally. So the ph/Blood Gas Analyzer not only helps us treat the patient, but to keep more of them here at home.

What it comes down to is SERVICE. The question in the back of any person's mind when it comes to health care is, "If I am injured, or my child or wife or parent is injured or in physical distress, is Hudspeth Hospital going to be able to take care of us?" The answer is an emphatic, YES! Lillian M. Hudspeth Memorial Hospital is fully approved for participation in the Medicare program, and is triple-checked by the Texas Department of Health for compliance on a regular basis. With licensed RN's and LVN's around the clock, and doctor's on call within minutes of the facility, one cannot find better health care in a rural setting. Lillian M. Hudspeth Memorial Hospital, originally designed to meet the growing and changing needs of the community, is destined to remain an integral part in the lives of residents and visitors alike.

Dr. Greg Lind and Debbie Reed show new equipment the hospital recently purchased, a ph/Blood Gas Analyzer. It will help the doctor know the levels of gases in the blood and will help in detecting disease.

Beneficiaries should contact Social Security office for identification

From time to time, it becomes necessary for Social Security to contact a person getting benefits or an applicant. Such contacts may be made by mail, by phone, or in person.

People who have been on the Social Security rolls for awhile have become accustomed to receiving mail with the return address of their Social Security office. A mailing may be used to advise people of a change in the amount of their monthly check, to request information, or for some similar purpose. Applicants for benefits of course, receive notices through the mail of the allowance or denial of their claim.

At times, a Social Security representative will contact a person by phone. This may be done to get information, such as a Social Security number, to facilitate the processing of a claim.

And, occasionally, a Social Security representative may make a home visit. If a Social Security representative does visit your home, he or she will furnish proper identification; anyone claiming to be a Social Security representative who does not have proper identification should not be permitted to enter your home.

Moreover, if you have any questions about the identity of the person claiming to be a Social Security representative, or if you would simply want to verify that the person is who he or she claims to be, phone Social Security office. A bona fide Social Security representative will not mind these precautions.

Also remember that no Social Security representative will ever ask for money in return for a service. If someone claiming to be a Social Security representative does request payment, this, too, should be reported to the Social Security office.

For more information, contact the San Angelo Social Security Office located at 2214 Sherwood Way. The telephone number is 949-4608.

HEALTH CARE

by Scott Gilmore
Hospital Administrator

"Your problem is: (pick one) You're overweight! You're not as young as you used to be! You've got high blood pressure! What used to be your size is now only made for thin people!"

Whatever your problem is, chances are you've been told to exercise. Eat right, rest, drink fluids, and moderate exercise. Your doctor has told you, your mother-in-law has told you and your spouse has told you. Exercise.

Many of us have been through the exercise circuit just as often as others have been through the "diet" circuit. The problem is not just getting started. The problem is once you've gotten started, how do you keep going?

In evaluating the success of exercise programs, hospital wellness centers are discovering the same thing YMCA's and Commercial Health Clubs have been learning for some time: "The major issue is their failure to still be with the program six months later," says Dr. James Rippe, M.D., Director of the Exercise Physiology Laboratory at the University of Massachusetts Medical School.

In fact, some Commercial Health Club operators have created lucrative businesses by predicting (accurately) that most of the people who join health clubs will pay their membership fees, work out a few times, then disappear into the yawning maw reserved for the hordes of well-intentioned former exercisers.

Studies have shown that 50 percent of the smokers who have a heart attack will stop smoking. That's the most successful intervention anyone has come up with for smoking, but when you think about it, that means that 50 percent of the smokers who have a heart attack Don't stop smoking. So, although some people may be scared into exercising, fear is a poor motivator.

Willpower has something to do with motivation, but willpower alone is not sufficient to explain why some people make it and others don't. What surveys indicate is that people who feel they have control on their lives tend to be much happier--in fact, high-control people are twice as likely to say they are happy as low-control people. Feeling healthy, physically fit and attractive helps make people feel that they have control, so exercise is really the first step for many people in attempting to take control of their lives. Someone once said, "Vanity has driven more people to good behavior than fear!"

In attempting to make it over the "Long Haul," one must take into account the "Three E's"--the exerciser, the environment, and the exercise.

The motivation of the exerciser is the key element in the equation. Researchers focus their work on issues like the individual's self motivation index as well as on the individual's health beliefs and health habits.

In terms of health beliefs, it may not be reasonable to accept a direct link between beliefs and behavior, but it may be possible to predict yourself, "Do I believe that my day-to-day activities have an impact on my health?"

The primary issues related to the exercise environment are the convenience factors (how easy is it for me to integrate the exercise program into my daily life?), the presence of support mechanisms (friends, family, someone you exercise with or who urges you on) and the "user friendliness" of the equipment.

The form of exercise chosen will affect adherence in that the more enjoyable the activity, the more likely one will be to maintain the routine.

Injury factors also play a role; studies have shown that if one is injured and forced to stop exercising for a time, motivation tends to fall off, and one is less likely to continue the program

U.S. Savings Bonds semi-annual rate set

The semiannual market-based interest rate for United States Savings Bonds, in effect from May through October 1987, has been set at 5.84 percent, the Treasury Department announced. The rate is 85 percent of the average market yield on five-year Treasury marketable securities during the preceding six months.

Although Bonds may be redeemed after six months, they must be held five years or longer to receive market-based rates. Bonds held less than five years earn interest on a fixed, graduated scale. Yields at redemption are the average of semiannual market-based rates during the time held, rounded to the nearest quarter percent and compounded semiannually, or a minimum rate, whichever is more. The current minimum rate is six percent.

Katherine D. Ortega, Treasurer of the United States and National Director of the Savings Bonds program, said that "the market-based rate program, now nearing the end of its first five years, has had a tremendous positive impact on Bond sales. When it was first introduced in 1982, Savings Bond sales totalled $3 billion. In the first half of Fiscal Year 1987 alone, we have sold more than $7 billion worth of Series EE Bonds."

Savings Bonds semiannual rates are changed each May 1 and November 1 to reflect market activity during the preceding six months. The last semiannual rate, in effect from November 1, 1986, through April 30, 1987, was 6.06 percent.

As of March 31, 1987, the total value of Savings Bonds held by the public was $94.76 billion, the highest level ever.

Conservation volunteers needed to help reduce erosion in Texas

Hundred of volunteers are needed to help reduce erosion in Texas. Virgil Poloczek, district conservationist for the USDA Soil Conservation Service at Sonora, said his agency is looking for conservation volunteers to join the Earth Team now.

Virgil said anyone may apply—retirees, professionals and nonprofessionals, and students—anyone interested in conservation.

"Earth Team members can work part time or full time, outdoors or in a local Soil Conservation Service office," he said. "Volunteers must be at least 16 years of age, and there is no maximum age limit."

In volunteering to help SCS protect the nation's natural resources, you will be personally involved in soil and water conservation activities. SCS helps landowners and operators reduce wind and water erosion, keep streams clear, conserve water, and reduce upstream flooding.

This work is done through locally run soil and water conservation districts, a unit of state government.

For information, contact the local SCS office at Sonora, telephone number 387-2730, or call a toll free number 1-800-THE-SOIL.

Snacks - a perfect way to give your child a little extra nutrition

Children always seem hungry and ready for a snack. When their hunger strikes, don't panic. Snacks are a perfect way to give them a little extra nutrition.

"Fresh fruits, celery, carrots sticks, and cheese are just a few ideas for some good nutritious snacks," says Marilyn Haggard, a nutritionist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service. "They don't take much more time to prepare than other types of snacks and they're much better for children."

Other good ideas for nutritious snacks are popcorn, dairy products, small sandwiches, and any of the variety of crackers, muffins and breads.

Since as much as one-fourth of their day's calories come from snacks, it's important to watch what children eat.

"Children will eat whatever food is around. The best way to keep them from eating junk foods is to keep more nutritious snacks in the house," the specialist says.

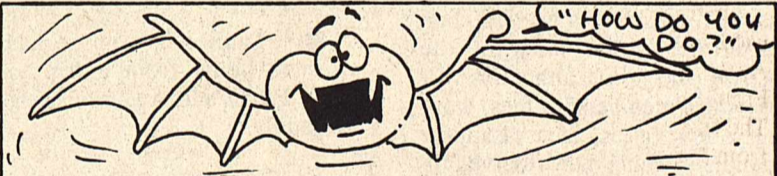

"A bit of dip on vegetables and fruits may make them more attractive, just be careful not to give the child too much because dips often are high in fat and salt content," says Haggard.

When feeding small children, be careful about the size of the portion served. The specialist says they need snacks made to a size they can handle, and shouldn't be given round, hard or slippery pieces of food that they can choke on. Peanut butter may also be a little too difficult for small children to eat.

"Snack times may be hard to enforce, especially if a parent isn't around, but they can be a good idea. Appointing a certain time as snack time may keep children from eating too close to meal time," she says.

Haggard adds, "It's important to set good eating habits early on. If children are encouraged to eat nutritious snacks they will learn to like those tastes and are more likely to continue to enjoy those foods throughout their lives."

The smallest mammal is the Kitti's hog-nosed bat of Thailand. It is about the size of a bumblebee and weighs no more than a penny.

Raw fish is a food safety hazard

It's hard to go wrong with high-protein, low-calorie fish—unless you eat it raw.

"The growing popularity of undercooked fish or raw fish dishes such as sushi, sashimi, ceviche and others has resulted in an increase in cases of disease attributable to fish parasites," says food safety expert Marilyn Haggard.

"Properly canned or frozen fish pose no danger of infection," notes the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service specialist.

Cooking fresh fish until all parts of the fish have reached a temperature of 145 degrees Fahrenheit will also kill parasites, she adds.

"Frying, baking or broiling fish until it flakes with a fork is still good advice," Haggard says. "Fish that is so lightly broiled or sauteed that it's still translucent in the middle may be called a gourmet dish, but it could also be dangerous."

According to the specialist, brining and hot smoking are other methods that kill parasites, while cold smoking which uses no heat, will not.

"Commercially prepared lox, or smoked salmon, is both brined and smoked," she notes. "But ceviche can be hazardous because the lime juice used in the marinade may not kill all parasites."

Haggard says that freezing fish at minus 4 degrees Fahrenheit for 3-5 days will also prevent illness. Given the health risks involved, consumers would be wise to avoid raw or uncooked seafood, stresses the specialist.

LOWER COLORADO RIVER AUTHORITY NOTICE OF RATE CHANGE REQUEST

The Lower Colorado River Authority has filed an Application for Authority to Change Rates with the Public Utility Commission of Texas and the City of Austin. The effective date of the proposed changes, which involve the LCRA's 44 wholesale customers and 70 retail customers, is June 24, 1987.

The base rate revenues would be increased by $29.2 million or 33.3%, while the fuel revenues would be decreased by $3.8 million or 3.5%.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. ## New trooper in Sonora Trooper David K. McIntyre, 26, has recently graduated from the Department of Public Safety Training Academy and assigned to the Highway Patrol Service in Sonora.

Trooper McIntyre was one of 80 cadets recently commissioned as state troopers in graduation ceremonies in Austin. Trooper McIntyre is a native of Eden and assumes his new duties immediately.

Colonel Jim Adams, DPS director, said he is especially pleased at the quality of people who are entering the law enforcement profession.

"These men and women were carefully selected from a large group of applicants to undergo an intensive 18-week course," Adams said. "They have been trained to uphold the laws of this state in routine as well as difficult law enforcement situations."

"Today's Texas trooper is required to handle many varied tasks in addition to traffic enforcement. The trooper may assist in narcotics arrests, recovery of stolen vehicles and investigation of theft cases. A broad range of law enforcement responsibilities will face the trooper who has chosen to serve his fellow Texans," Adams said.

The DPS training course included instruction in traffic law, criminal law, arrest procedures, accident investigation, and numerous other law enforcement related topics.

Caravan to come through Sonora

In the first expedition of its kind ever launched in the United States the AMERICAN CAMELS CARAVAN will start in July and will travel from the East to the West coast, covering a spectacular route of over 3,000 miles of backroads and walking trails. The CARAVAN plans to come through Sonora in their travels.

The AMERICAN CAMELS CARAVAN is the idea of 31 year old Christian Paris, a native of Paris, France, who is "making a dream come true" with this journey. Mr. Paris was inspired by Robyn Davidson's camel trek across Australia, which was documented in 1978 by National Geographic Magazine. "Camels are rugged survivalists and symbolize the pioneering spirit of mankind," said Mr. Paris. "What better creature could one use to explore new frontiers?"

In this country, camels were used in the 19th Century by the American Military during the Franklin Pierce administration. The camels, which were imported from North Africa, proved most useful in the Southwest on surveying expeditions and wagon-road construction. Jefferson Davis, secretary of War, was instrumental in the founding of the United States Military Camel Corps in 1857, which remained in use until 1861.

The AMERICAN CAMELS CARAVAN will retrace parts of the original route from Texas to California used by the U.S. Camel Corps over 100 years ago. Starting in July from Savannah, Georgia, the caravan is scheduled to arrive in Indio, California in February, 1988, in time for the opening of the Riverside County National Date Festival. The Festival, which celebrates Coachella Valley's annual date harvest, has a Middle Eastern theme and features camel races.

The caravan will traverse several states including Georgia, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada, and California. By showcasing these areas, the caravan will highlight many off-the-beaten track adventure spots, at the same time as reviving a forgotten page of the nation's frontier history and opening up a new trail for use by walkers, cyclist, horse-back riders and other non-vehicular travellers.

Four dromedary camels will be used for the expedition. They will be supplied by Joe Hedrick of Nickerson, Kansas, who has raised camels for years and is an expert on exotic species of wildlife. Hedrick is also providing spare camels, trained camel leaders and veterinarian to accompany the expedition.

Although an unloaded camel can travel some 70 miles a day, the AMERICAN CAMELS CARAVAN plans to cover an average of about 20 miles a day, camping each night. Camels are adaptable to both hot summer and freezing winter weather conditions.

Mr. Paris has been planning this project for the past seven years, during which time he has amassed the support of individuals, state agencies and organizations such as the Indio Chamber of Commerce. A massive fundraising campaign is currently underway to help cover the costs of the expedition.

Christian Paris has been involved in promotion and communication for over ten years and was Hilton International's Public Relations Manager for Western Europe and West African for six years. Most recently, he was Public Relations Manager for the French Challenge (KIS) during the 1986 America's Cup in Fremantle, Australia. Mr. Paris has resigned from his previous employment in order to undertake this expedition.

If you or your organization would like to help sponsor this group, you may do so by direct cash contributions, contributions in goods and/or services, underwrite advertising in your local media, sponsor friends or business associates to walk alongside the caravan, buy customized T-shirts, bumper stickers, or buttons, or arrange to have the camels for special events for particular groups. Every effort will be given to advertise sponsor's names.

to $2,000 for the second offense.

Grandfather Clause for Current Employees

Employer sanctions do not apply to the employment of an individual who was hired, recruited or referred before the enactment of this law.

This means that verification requirements must be met for all employees hired since November 7, 1986, Pena said.

Eligibility Verification

Once an employer is satisfied with the worker's eligibility, the employer and the employee must fill out an I-9 eligibility verification form, the economist pointed out.

This form is available from most INS offices.

The form requires the employer to attest that he has reviewed the documentation establishing the worker's identification and legal right to work in the U.S., Pena explained.

"The employee must attest, under penalty of perjury, that his documentation is legitimate," he said.

This form must be kept on file the entire time the worker is employed, Pena emphasized.

"When the employee leaves, the form must be kept on file for either a 3-year period after the hiring date or one year after departure, whichever is longer," he explained.

Not complying with any of the verification procedures carries its own set of fines and penalties, ranging between $100 and $1,000 for each individual violation, the economist pointed out.

"These fines are in addition to those associated with employer sanctions for hiring illegals," he said.

Authenticity of Documents Not Required by Employer

Although employers are required to ask every applicant for the necessary documentation and jointly fill out the eligibility verification form, the employer will not be responsible for proving the authenticity of the documents presented by the job applicant, Pena stated.

"However, if the documents are obviously defective, the employer would be held responsible," he added.

Labor Contractors

Labor contractors must follow the same verification procedures required of other employers, the economist pointed out.

"What appears unclear at this time however, is if the use of labor contractors will relieve agricultural producers of verification responsibility," he added.

INS representatives were unable to clarify this technicality, he said.

Implementing regulations will be needed to establish responsibility, Pena stated.

In the meantime, growers should obtain copies of eligibility verification form from contractors," he emphasized.

Search Warrants

The new law requires that all INS officials obtain a search warrant, using the same procedures as law enforcement officials, before they can legally enter a field to check employee's residence status or work authorization, the economist said.

Search warrants will not be needed if the proprietor grants permission, the INS official is in "hot pursuit" of a suspect, and/or the property is within 25 miles of the U.S./Mexico border.
