Broncos Advance To Next Round

by Tryon Fields

Last Wednesday, the Bronco baseball team behind the pitching and hitting of Justin Sims advanced to the Area Round of the 2A baseball playoffs. Playing Reagan County at Colt Stadium in San Angelo, the Red Hosses took control of the game in the first inning and never looked back in their 11 to 1 Bi-District victory.

Sonora's ace, Justin Sims pitched three perfect innings to start the game, while the bats of Scottie Moore, Manuel Lopez, Justin Sims, and Israel Arevalo pushed 3 runs across on 5 hits in the same first three innings. In the fourth, the Owls began to figure out the pitching style of Sims; as they sent seven batters to the plate and scored their sole run of the game. A lead off double, aided by a balk and followed by two singles scored the only Reagan County tally. The

The evening of May 3rd found the Bronco Stadium filled with survivors, walkers and fund raisers, as the 2002 American Cancer Society Relay For Life kicked off at 6:00 p.m.

After the National Anthem was sung by Laura and Brandon West and the American Flag was raised, a special "Survivor" ceremony began. As each cancer survivor was introduced they were presented with a special sun visor donated by XS Ranch and a carnation donated by Flowers by Irene. This year's introductions included some fun facts about each survivor, including their families, favorite foods and comments on what they thought about relay.

Once the introductions were made the Survivors made their way around the track for the initial lap to kick off a night of walking, fun, food and Fundraising booths were set up around the practice field by the participating teams. Face painting, kids games, water balloons, a dunking booth, volleyball and foods of all tastes were set up to raise money for the American Cancer Society.

Music was provided by Manuel Campos, Souls-A-Fire, Border Trash, all of Sonora and NDC of San Angelo.

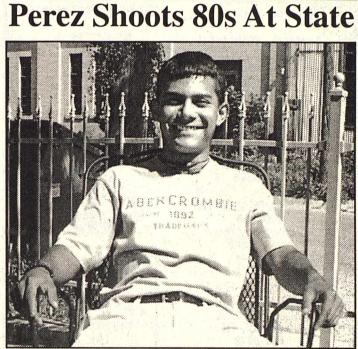

The Luminary ceremony was held at 9:30 p.m. as candles were lit in honor of or in memory of those that have fought the battle we know as cancer. There were 684 luminarias lining the track, making for a very moving ceremony.

After the bands called it a night, Armando Dominguez kept the crowd dancing until the wee hours of the morning with rocking tunes. Fun games also helped keep people awake, including the T&C Village Markets "Dizzy Izzy" Bat Race that left bruises on some of us! The high school boys showed that youth can still beat wisdom when it comes to Volleyball by the First National Bank team and the Location Builders "Wheelbarrow Races" left some on the ground, but had everyone

Sonora Student Killed In Head-On Collision

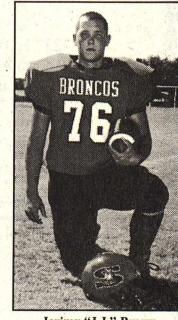

by Storie Sharp

The community of Sonora united to say good-bye to one of their own on Tuesday, May 7, 2002. Sonora High School Senior, Jerimy Joe Brown, the son of Curtis and Lisa Lipham of Sonora and Joe and Cindy Brown of Hanston, Kansas, was tragically killed in a headon collision Sunday, May 5, 2002. The accident occurred shortly before 2:30 p.m. outside of Christoval on U.S. Highway Jerimy was traveling south in a friend's Chevrolet Suburban when he is reported to have crossed over the center stripe and collided with a Ford Taurus occupied by two San Angelo residents, Jo and Jack Lightfoot.

The occupants of the Taurus were both killed instantly upon impact. Jerimy was airlifted to Shannon Medical Center, where he later died of injuries sustained in the accident. Traffic on 277 had to be detoured off the road for over an hour as the accident scene was worked and cleared.

Jerimy will be remembered fondly by his family and many friends. He was a member of the Sonora Bronco Football team, where he was an Offensive and Defensive

Cards of Thanks

We would like to take this opportunity to thank all of the following wonderful citizens of this community who came out and volunteered their time and talents to share our Western Heritage with our elementary school students and teachers.

Our Wild West Day participants included Mary Humphrey, Texas Parks and Wildlife Game Biologist who brought in some native wildlife, and reptiles as well as Southern Plains Bison historical display. Tim Roberts gave a horseshoeing demonstration. Cliff Brister thrilled the kids with a trapping demonstration; Barbara Savell, Fay Price, and Terry Bamert gave a sewing and quilting demonstration. Dean Dermody offered the kids a chance to swing a rope at some bales of hay. Johnny Solis and Carlos Gallegos gave some knot tying demonstrations. Curry Campbell, Terry Brooks, and Carl Lang brought in a chuckwagon, complete with hot coals and hot coffee and made Campbread for the students and teachers to sample. Sherry Ingham oversaw the animal petting area, which housed a baby calf, two young meat goat kids, and an angora kid as well as two very sweet miniature donkeys, from Jimmy and Diana Condra, for the children to pet and love. Larry Jennings contributed two of his stock show kid goats, of both the Angora and Boer breeds. Stacey Pennington provided an authentic, hayride, complete with our very own Chasey Duncan, Music teacher, as hayride entertainment director. A water station to keep the kids replenished with plenty of liquids was organized by Carol Pope, Kathleen Freeman, and Sheila Velarde. Adam Fay came from The Bank and Trust with his boot shining equipment and shinned up a few boots (maybe a tennis shoe or sandal too). The Old Tyme Country Band members included Milton Cavaness, Patty Strauch, and JC Surber who thrilled the kids with some old time favorites as well as a few new tunes. Ron Perry from San Angelo educated the kids about the Texas Rangers, one in particular, Capt. Perry who was a relative. Preston Love and Chapman Traylor enlightened the children with tales of the Texas Army. And for an added treat, the Devil's River Cloggers comprised of Carolyn McMeans, Liz Hemphill, Victoria Richardson, and Roy Jean Johnson performed their routines several times throughout the morning.

A special thank you to Eddie Favila, Fran Pennington and Storie Sharp for loaning us some shade (tents).

We appreciate all these participants and the experience they have all shared with our children. God bless each of you.

Approximately $1500 additional in food, medicine and clothing were sent to the battered city from the people of Several survivors told the following stories: Joe Cordova's house in the Mexican section had a floor. When the storm

Ask the Historical Society

struck he herded his two younger brothers, two sisters and his wife into a home without a floor. He flung a rope hurriedly about them and around a prop rooted in the dirt. Tied thus, they watched the shelter sail away and leave them safely anchored

C. A. Herrington propped his weight against the door of his house when the wind bore down. He looked around and the rest of the house and his wife and five children had disappeared. Frantically he pounded against the wind and piled up ruins, searching. Finally he stumbled upon the porch of the home of Miss Pricilla Day, which because of its sturdy lowness had escaped. He fell unconscious inside the front door - in the midst of his family. With the exception of Amos, 12, they had escaped serious injury. He was taken to Santa Rosa Infirmary with his skull fractured.

W. L. Owens stated that the twister came from the northeast. A few minutes before it struck the village, I started to leave the house for the courthouse. I noticed the skies were overcast by black clouds but there was no wind. I thought it was just another storm. It was.

A puff of wind and I saw a building at the end of Main Street lifted from its foundationsand hurled across the street through a story and a half brick school building. I darted back into the house but before I could get my family to the safety of the cellar, my home collapsed. Luckily I was able to extricate myself and members of my family who were only slightly injured. I looked about. There wasn't a house standing. Main Street, where a few moments before there were about one hundred persons, was a mass of twisted girders and splintered

Using candles and oil soaked rags to work by, the debris was attacked with axes, crow bars, anything we could get our hands on. The first bodies recovered were those of 4 and 6 year old girls, their arms around each other. Then the bodies of their mother and father were recovered. The rescue work was slow as the debris was piled high and the tornado had cut a swath more than a mile

We have printed this story in three parts so that our readers could see the devastation that can be wrought by a West Texas twister. Over the years many people have become complacent about tornado warnings, and many have forgotten about the Rocksprings tornado of 1927. We have heard young people say 'that only happens in San Angelo, we are too far south." Well it doesn't only happen in San Angelo, it could happen right here in Sonora and children must be taught what to do when tornado warnings are posted. The people of Rocksprings didn't have any warning, our local televisions stations do a great job of warning us when there is a possibility of a tornado. Please take these warnings seriously and take shelter, the life you save might be your own.

Golfers, Take Notice!!

Have you ever had the opportunity to take a swing at one mil-'lion dollars?! The University of Texas at San Antonio golf team will have a fundraiser at the beautiful Dominion Country Club on Monday, May 13. Three local college students are involved with UTSA's Division I golf team. ### Death, Loss, and Grief: Understanding and Moving Through Grief

The death of a loved one is one of the most severe traumas we encounter, and the sense of loss and grief which follows is a natural and important part of life. It is not a sign of weakness, but rather a healthy and fitting response-a tribute to one loved and lost to death. Running away from grief postpones sorrow; clinging to grief prolongs pain. Neither leads to healing.

No two people react exactly alike to a loss and there are very significant cultural differences. For many, however, the most immediate response to the death of a loved one is shock, numbness, and a sense of disbelief. Physical reactions such as heart palpitations, tightness in the throat, shortness of breath, sweating and dizziness are common. At other times in the grieving process you may experience such physical symptoms as stomach upset, sleep and appetite disturbance and/or a lack of energy. Also, you may be more susceptible to illness, nightmares and dreams about the deceased person.
Emotional reactions may include a preoccupation with the image of the deceased, feelings of guilt, hostility, fearfulness, apathy, self-doubt, and emptiness. Loss of sexual drive, depressed mood, anger at the deceased for dying, a lack of concentration, and extreme sadness may occur.

Bereavement may cause some short- or long-term changes in your family and other relationships and may cause you to be at least temporarily more closed off from others. A tendency toward increased risk-taking behavior Letters to the Editor

Factors that May Interfere with Resolving Your Grief

* Avoiding your emotions * Over-activity to the point of exhaustion

* Using alcohol or other drugs to mask the grief * Unrealistic promises made to the deceased

* Unresolved grief from a previous loss

* Judgmental relationships * Acting resentful to those who try to help

Factors which May Help You in Resolving Your Grief

Seldom does a person go into one side of grief and come out the other side the same as before the loss. Think of going through your grief, rather than getting over the loss. By seeing the process through, you can develop personal strengths to cope with other types of loss and difficulties that may come up later in life. Acceptance of the loss means gaining a perspective-a change of self-a new sense of self and what you can do with you life. You may find the following helpful:

* Give yourself some quiet time alone to think about moving toward a new equilibrium-a transition from who you were before the loss to who you will be after the grieving process.

* Be as open as you can be in expressing your feelings; cry if you need to; and express any anger or sense of unfairness if you feel it.

* Play out in your mind the unfinished business in the relationship and try to come to a resolution; say good-bye.

* Tell someone you trust

the story of your loss.

* Try to focus on what you were able to do for the deceased, instead of what you "should have done" or could have done.

Where Can You Turn for

Help? Parents, friends, and family can often be helpful. If you feel comfortable and trusting of someone close, there is a good chance it would help to talk with them. Members of the clergy may also be helpful. Volunteer organizations like the Listening Ear Intervention Center can provide immediate telephone consultation. Mental health and counseling agencies such as the MSU Counseling Center, as well as private professional therapists and counselors, are important

If you find it too difficult to move through the grief on your own or with the help of family and friends, you may want to consult a professional who can help you resolve some issues of grief in a confidential atmos-

Social support for the bereaved is most important. Others can provide a patient presence to allow the bereaved an opportunity to tell the story of the loss and to share how he/she is feeling. L to R: Mr. Dan Gattis, General Manager- Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo, Curry Campbell- Manager/Partner, Campbell-Mayer Liveoak Ranch, Dr. Chester Fehlis, Associate Vice Chancellor and Deputy Director, Dr. Ed Hiler, Vice Chancellor and Dean for Agriculture and Life Sciences Director, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and Texas Cooperative Extension.

The Texas Agricultural Lifetime Leadership (TALL) program wrapped up its eighth and final seminar April 16-19 in Houston, Texas, highlighted by their graduation ceremony with renown guest speaker, Dr. Rick Rigsby, Aggies Life Skills Development Coordinator- TAMU/Football; and Senior Lecturer-Department of Speech Communications-TAMU.

This leadership program was established in 1987 by the Texas Cooperative Extension to create a cadre of leaders in Texas agriculture", said Dr. Jim Mazurkiewiez, TALL coordinator. This program is the equivalent of about 10 years of total experience.

TALL is a competitive leadership development program, and participants must be 25 to 45 years of age, nominated by their peers, and go through an application and interview process. Applicants must be actively involved in farming, ranching or agribusiness. Men and women are equally encouraged to participate. This twoyear program includes seminars with experts and on-site tours in the United States and in other countries.

Agriculture is the state's second largest industry and the TALL program enables students to increase their knowledge of and exposure to the foundation of what our state is built on. Informed leaders and people who can take an active part in governmental and policy-making processes are the backbone of this industry.

Among the outstanding participants of this year's TALL program was Curry Campbell of Sonora, Texas.

The Texas Two-Step Method of Fire Ant Control

by: Jennifer Regar

DALLAS -- Spring is officially here, and that means that fire ants are out in full force.

While fire ant eradication is out of the question, control and management is within reach.

To help in the effort to control fire ants, the most widely requested Extension publication, The Texas Two-Step Method: Do-it-yourself Fire Ant Control, has been updated.

The revision includes updated lists of fire ant products, including the new fipronil bait," said Dr. Mike Merchant, urban entomologist with Texas Cooperative Extension. "Diazinon and Dursban products are no longer listed, as a result of their withdrawal from the marketplace in 2001 and 2002."

"Fipronil provides consumers with another fast-acting bait similar to Amdro," he said. "Currently there are not many options for fast-acting baits."

The new product lists basically reflects safer and well-tested products," said Merchant. "Everything on this fact sheet will work. We also know the two-step process has been successful. It's probably the most effective and cheapest treatment for fire ants around residential areas."

The two-step method is a simplified approach to make sense of all the products that are available to treat fire ants. The core of the two-step method is using fire ant bait as a broadcast treatment to treat the entire

"By treating the whole yard with a fire ant bait you get much better control," said Merchant. "In the second-step you treat individual mounds.

Treating individual mounds will work, but it's not nearly as effective for treating whole

"The leaflet encourages neighborhoods to come together and treat at the same time. This system really works. It's very fast. In five minutes you can treat your yard for fire ants and reduce the population by 90 (percent) to 95 percent."

Single copies of the fact sheet can be obtained, at no cost, by calling a county Extension office or (979) 845-6571. Electronic copies are available in pdf format on the

New Modeling System Will Help Monitor Moisture, Help Predict Drought

by: Blair Fannin

COLLEGE STATION -- A Texas Agricultural Experiment Station researcher is near completion of a computer modeling system that could help farmers, ranchers and forest land managers minimize the effect of drought and guard against forest and range fires.

With Texas having endured multi-billion dollar losses from drought and wildfires throughout the 1990s, Dr. Raghavan Srinivasan has led efforts to develop a drought warning and monitoring system. The system indexes soil moisture data recorded from 200 weather stations throughout Texas.

The drought monitoring system utilizes remote sensing data derived from Next Generation Weather Radar (NEXRAD), a satellite called the Advanced Very High Resolution Radiometer (AVHRR), NOAA weather feeds, and other satellites. The satellites can track weather patterns, as well as moisture and vegetation readings on various Texas rangeland.

Perhaps the biggest advantage is the information is accessible 24 hours a day via the World Wide Web, providing real-time information to county officials, agricultural producers and others.

This system will primarily allow farmers, ranchers and forest managers to identify within a 4-kilometer grid (approximately 6.2 square miles) whether there is sufficient moisture to plant. Using maps generated by the program, users can determine the degree of drought stress on grazing lands and forests and the risk of forest and grass fires. Or [land managers] can compare recent rainfall with historical conditions to help plan for the upcoming growing season," Srinivasan said. "For irrigated agriculture, producers can use the new system to decide how much irrigation water is needed by thirsty crops. More importantly, [this system] can help prevent huge costs incurred by farmers, whether due to irrigation costs, fertilizer costs, etc. 1998, the Texas

When all the pennies were finally counted, what appeared to have been a smaller year than those past proved to be the best yet. The annual event is the largest fund raiser for the ACS. This year's Gold Sponsors, donating $1000 or more included Creek Swabbing and Roustabout, Dominion/BB Chemical. and Carolyn Earwood's School of Dance. There were also numerous large monetary donations, of which will remain anonymous upon request. To our beloved father five years ago you left us; You never said I'm leaving,

You never said goodbye

You were gone before we knew it,

And only God knew why,

A million times we've needed you,

A million times we've cried If love could have saved you,

You would have never died.

In life we loved dearly,

In death we love you still

In our hearts you hold a place, That no one could ever fill. It broke our hearts to lose you, But you didn't go alone,

For part of us went with you,

The day God took you home...

Legislature designated funds for increased research and projects to help better manage water and monitor drought as part of the Texas Water Initiative. The drought monitoring project is a partnership made up of several state agencies, which include Agricultural Texas Experiment Station, Spatial Sciences Laboratory at Texas A&M, the Blacklands Research & Extension Center in Temple, part of the Texas A&M University System, the Texas Forest Service, and the Texas Water Resources Institute.

Currently, the monitoring system can only be used at the county level.

"Every five counties is using just one weather station," Srinivasan said.

For now, county officials are relying on the Keetch-Byram Drought Index (KBDI) monitored by the Texas Forest Service in deciding to implement burn ban declarations. However, the installation of new weather stations at various points across the state will allow more precise monitoring data in specific locations.

"Land use and weather information can help us to betmonitor drought," Srinivasan said. And monitoring soil moisture with a soil moisture index is just one part of the research, he said.

"We want to gather soil moisture indices just like we use in the Palmer Drought Index," he said. "We want to develop weekly drought indices. We are using real-time land use data, which indicates if a certain piece of land is being used for agricultural purposes, for forestry, or it's simply nonfarmed rural land, etc. We now want to propose compiling a soil moisture index to more accurately monitor drought conditions.'

Dr. Travis Miller, Extension program leader for soil and crop sciences at Texas A&M, said the monitoring system will be a more efficient and accurate tool to monitor drought. He said most states in the U.S. report weather conditions and drought conditions using weather conditions derived from 8 to 10 weather reporting districts.

'We currently accumulate and summarize weather information in 10 districts, which average more than 26,000 square miles in size," Miller said. "In some of these districts, only two effective weather stations are used to extrapolate data. This gives us a very ineffective means of assessing moisture conditions and issuing drought declarations necessary for water conservation plans.

What Dr. Srinivasan is working on is real-time data on a very detailed scale so that we can watch drought conditions develop and develop strategies with respect to agricultural science and government policy to assist people of the state affected by drought conditions."
