Some Fatherly Advice

Eric Johnston, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, gave the country's labor leaders a sound and timely piece of fatherly advice in his speech at Baston University. He wasn't smug or patronizing. He didn't give a one-sided, papa-knows-best lecture. Rather it was a heart-to-heart talk in which the fatherly advisor admit-ted that papa had flown a bit high at one time, that he had been smacked down hard and was still picking himself up, and that it might be well if labor leaders would profit by papa's example.

Johnston went down that list of management's sins during the 1920s, when management was undisputed boss. He found parallel sins committed by increasingly powerful labor in the decade following President Roosevelt's first inauguration.

You forget the very thing we forgot," he told labor "In the architecture of American society, it's just three limit abor. jumps from master bedroom to the doghouse." jumps from master bedroom to the doghouse.'

All that Johnston said was familiar enough and true enough. It is just that nobody has put it in quite the same way before. Usually management hurls charges at labor and labor replies with a catalog of management's villainies, while each gives the impression that all its own geese are spotless swans. And that, obviously, is no way to set-tle their real and disturbing differences.

It must be clear to everyone, inside of unions and out, that labor's popularity with the public has waned because of wartime strikes. During a recent work interruption at the Ford Motor Co., the United Automobile Workers' president, R. J. Thomas, called the unauthorized stoppage a "serious mistake from any point of view," and something can duck it by yelling 'anti-labor' and 'reactionary' and 'Fascist.' We didn't escape any blows coming our way by yelling 'anti-business' and 'bureaucrat' and 'Communist'

It seems unlikely that responsible labor leaders should feel anything but gratitude to Johnston for his advice. And it seems equally unlikely that either management or labor could find a better recipe for amiable and progres-sive association than the one Johnson offered.

His ingredients include: less monopoly and racketeering by both parties: equal access to the "financial facts of life" of the other; a giving up by each of unfair and crippling laws aimed at the other; fewer strikes by labor and less witholding of inventions and products by manu-

Up To The People

The secretary of the Navy, in defending the govern- in the October-December period of ment's entry into the oil business through the Persian Gulf project, denies that the government has any desire to go into the oil business. He said this nation must "look about for oil sources outside the United States in order to preserve its postwar security.'

Just why our nationals are suddenly considered unable to hold their own where they have long held the lead in development of oil supplies, is not made clear.

If, instead of injecting itself into the oil business, our government would encourage and protect our citizens in their foreign operations, they could undoubtedly meet foreign competition and maintain the leadership of this nation in oil production.

American citizens will have to make up their minds whether they want to perpetuate our country as a nation of individual opportunity and free enterprise, or let it sink into the morass of state socialism such as engulfed Germany.

Joseph B. Eastman, though seldom publicized, was one of the real civilian heroes of this war. As director of defense transportation, he was little given to press conferences and pronouncements. He was addicted to hard work—a fact which probably hastened his death.

Eastman earned the respect and co-operation of the rail, motor and inland water transportation companies whose wartime operations he controlled. And with them he deserved credit for the vitally important job of keeping domestic freight and passenger traffic going, and for speeding the flow of military supplies to ocean ports in the face of unprecedented burdens and difficulties.

'New Love' Covers Lot Of Disloyalty

By RUTH MILLETT There really is no defense for the woman who writes her husband overseas that she is in love with another man-if she was in love with her husband and he was in love with her when they were parted by the war. To begin with, she didn't have any business seeing another man often enough to fall in love with

And even if she thinks she is in love with another man, the only honorable thing for her to do is to quit seeing him, keep quiet about her emotions and wait for her husband's return.

Naturally a man at home who can court a woman in person has an edge on her husband, who has to do his courting by V-mail. So his wife, in fairness to him, ought to wait for him to come home, and see whether the love she felt for him once doesn't come to life again when they are together once more. Unhappiness Ahead

Of cours?, if she doesn't love him, after all—then she can decide on whether or not to get a divorce, just as a woman would decide in normal times.

But this deciding by a woman that she is through with a man who is away from her is a lowdown business. And the woman who decides on that course of action hasn't any right to hope for a happy second marriage.

It is a wonder that another man would want to marry such a wom-an. For she proves she is not only fickle but without honor when she is willing to ditch a husband who loves her as soon as he gets out of her sight.

It is useless for women to tell thems lves that "they can't help this new love they feel." That is just so much sentimental nonsense. Yet it covers a lot of disloyalty with a pretty phrase—whei. there shouldn't be a pretty name for it.

Summer Perfection

One of Nature's ancient wonders of the world and one of man's newest are caught in spectacular contrast in the photograph above, where a B-24 Liberator bomber, the "Blue Streak," flashes past the lazily smoking crater-cone of Mount Vesuvius. Having downed, without loss to her crew, 23 enemy fighters in 1058 hours of combat flying, the "Blue Streak" will return to U. S. for tour of war plants.

"Too Much Money, Too Little Home Fun Cause Delinquency In Children," Says Judge T. M. Foley

By THOMAS M. FOLEY War has glamor. If adults feel it, how much more children react the heightened excitement of war activities. The glamor of war uniform. The world is in high gear -and that means parents must exert more careful control over their children.

Paradoxically, it was said that poverty was an underlying cause of juvenile delinquency. Now, too much money is having the same effect. Children are making big mony and are indulging in entertainment usually reserved for adults. The money they have to spend is a more potent factor in their delinquency than poverty ever was. ### Young War-Working Hens Take Over Egg Production

By ANN STEVICK NEA Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON—The farmers' in-tention to decrease poultry flock replacements 17 per cent below last year probably won't mean an egg shortage later in the year, according to Harlan L. Shrader, poultry expert of the Department of Agriculture.

For one reason, larger numbers of young chickens will keep up egg production. Shrader says: "For instance, in January we had 17 per cent more eggs from only four per cent more hens breause instead of old hens sitting around trying to make up their minds, we had young chickens in there shelling them out

Do you shrink at the very mention of coffee and children? Believe all the old rumors, legends, misunderstandings and back-fence gossip? Then examine the question frankly and realistically. That's what doctors did long ago-and promptly buried it.

Of course give the little moppets coffee to drink! Not the way you drink it. No. Nor as a substitute for nutritional or essential foods. But a cup of delicious Admiration Coffee, diluted with milk or cream, is perfectly all right. Children tire of the taste of milk. Many mothers therefore use Admiration in the milk as an encouragement to drink quantities of milk.

Admiration, a blend of the choicest "mild" coffees, is frequently added in the proportion of half coffee and half milk. This is tempting to youngsters both in flavor and psychologically. Coffee is an "adult" drink to children. Admiration can also be used advantageously as a new and exciting flavor for custards, junkets and the like. No matter how you serve it, Admiration's thrilling flavor and richness are present-and enjoyed.

Experience Not Essential To Help With Harvesting

By ANN STEVICK NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON-You don't have to have hay in your hair to be of use in the U.S. Crop Corps. In many localities there are specialized non-skilled jobs that amateur farm-ers can take on readily with no previous training. Split shifts and long noon hours have been tried for softies who must break into farm work gently. A Work Leader program is under way through the State Extension Services to counsel workers and farmers on such matters as introducing the unskill-ed worker to an apple tree.

There is an estimated over-all need for 4,000,000 supplementary workers to handle this year's crops, 500,000 more than last year. How-ever, the recruiting problem is em-phatically local. In March there are critical shortage areas only in Southern California, Louisiana and Florida. By May, shortages will appear through the deep south, the mid-west and the middle eastern seaboard. By August, labor will be needed to harvest the Montana and Dakota wheat crops, and help will be critically needed with peanut crops in Georgia, Alabama and Florida. Vegetable growers in Cali-fornia and on the east coast will be short of help. Through Septembor and October critical shortage areas will appear throughout the country You can sign up for your vaca-tion, or for any odd days you are free to work, by getting in touch with your local Farm Labor Re-cruitment Officer of the Extension Service
