SILVER JUBILIARIES

Sixteen of our Sisters of Charity celebrated on Wednesday of this week their twenty-fifth anniversary of religious profession. For a quarter of a century these heroic ladies have turned their back to the allurements of the world and devoted their treasures, time and talents to the cause of Christian and American education. Some of our local faculty went to the mother-house at Alamo Heights, San Antonio, to attend the solemnities and to make their annual spiritual retreat.

On Wednesday of last week, Phil Osborne of Coolan & Osborne, called at Notre Dame to inspect the interior decorations which he had superintended. With him came Charles Spear, who supplied the material for the tile finish in the kitchen, bath rooms and all lavatories.

Last week, Bruno Schott's men made some repairs in the convent, and also enlarged the facilities of the library, which grew faster than had been anticipated.

Mary Louise Ahmert and her sister, Helen, returned to Notre Dame on Tuesday of last week. Their father and brother motored here the following Saturday from Fort Worth, but left immediately for another scouting tour to San Saba.

A good sized delegation of Notre Dame rooters motored to Fredericksburg on Sunday to help the Kerrville Athletics in their battle against the Giants.

Notre Dame Campers

It seems that our encampment with offer of free lodging is just beginning to be properly understood and appreciated in Texas, for we are maintaining a maximum capacity.

Mrs. Ed. Tynan came in her car Thursday of last week with her daughter, Katherine, and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Leo Tynan. They also brought with them a daughter of Judge Davis, Katherine, and Miss Elizabeth Conroy, a recent graduate of the Ursuline Academy. Elizabeth had summured here five years ago with her brother, Edward, who has become a juvenile wonder in the radio world. Harold Tynan is rooming with Mrs. L. W. Laughman. Leo Tynan spent the week-end with his wife and family.

On Saturday, Edward Gustav Seng motored here with his son, George, and Patrick Kinney. Mr. Seng is sales manager for Maverick-Clarke Co. As a matter of genealogical curiosity he brought with him old family letter written more than a century ago. These documents helped to establish the relationship between his progenitors and Father Kemper's kinsfolk. The Seng family were guests at the Rectory until their re-

Mrs. R. D. James of the Augusta Hotel made a long distance reservation for an early vacancy.

Mrs. R. H. Campbell of Camp Travis and her daughter, Elizabeth, of St. Patrick's Academy came on Monday.

On Monday, Mrs. Wilfred F. Courtenay and her daughter, Henrietta, returned to San Antonio, highly pleased with their Kerrville sojourn.

Katherine Kremer joined her sister, Margaret, at our camp on Saturday. At the first vacancy they will welcome their friends, Misses Bessie McHugo and Grace Start.

Misses Sue Burch and Bertha Doty left the convent to lease the brand new bungalow of Mesdames Beamer & Lenox. Howard Perrodin, a cousin of Miss Doty, will remain with them during their residence in our city.

GRAND OLD TEXAS CHAMPION COUNTED OUT, BUT TAKES HIS DEFEAT SMILINGLY; THE SENATE GRIEVES CULBERSON'S LOSS

(By Bascom N. Timmons, Chronicle Staff Correspondent)

Washington, D. C., July 26.—The Democratic nestor of the Senate took his knockout today. The grand old champion of the Lone Star State was no longer a champion. For three days he listened to the slow count, ending his political career. And today he acknowledged in his own heart that it was all over. The old champion didn't know who the new champion was. He hadn't fought under Marquis of Queensbury rules with one opponent, as he liked to fight. He went into a battle royal with five opponents and an invisible force. Two men were still on their feet—one of them to be the final victor.

But the old champion was smiling. He was a Culberston—the son of "Old Dave," and the Culberstons, father and son, gave their blows and took them. They never wincing and they never asked for quarter.

Offers No Alibi

Formally, Charles A. Culberston, voted out of office after the longest service ever given to the Lone Star State by any man, has nothing to say. Informally he discussed the returns from the various counties, noting where his strength of other days had failed to show itself, but never once did he make a complaint.

He offered no alibi as to his condition. In announcing for re-election he had said that he could not make a campaign, but the condition of his health was such that he could attend to the duties of office. Generally it was understood that he wanted to finish out his life in the Senate. But the voters decided otherwise. He believes in the will of the people.

Senators Favored Culberston

But Culberston smilingly taking his defeat was a contrast to the other Senators. The Senate had been pulling for Culberston on both Democratic and Republican sides.

"The people of Texas do not realize what they have done," said a prominent Republican Senator.

Just outside the chamber the correspondent met an aged veteran, a doorkeeper for years. "And have they defeated that fine old gentleman?" the old veteran asked.

He was informed that it was virtually certain that Culberston was out of it.

"The pity of it, the pity of it," the veteran said.

Record for Attendance

The Senate believed that the people of Texas never really knew the value of Culberston. His health has made train travel impossible for years. But since January, 1916, he has never missed a session of the Senate, a record of continuous service no other man ever held. Even on the day of the great knickerbocker disaster here, a day so stormy that only five Senators reached the chamber, Culberston was one of the five.

But a big, teeming State with its own business to look after does not know all these things. It wants to see the man it is going to vote for. It hadn't seen Culberston for eight years. A new generation had grown up.

Then there were other things. Culberston lost wet votes because he voted for the Volstead act. The eighteenth amendment was a part of the Constitution. Not to enforce it meant nullification of the Constitution in his opinion, and the Culberstons ever were for the Constitution.

He lost the "dry" for the "drys" had a candidate of their own. He lost his normal vote in Tarrant County and West Texas, because a distinguished citizen of Fort Worth took the vote that ordinarily would have

Defied Ku Klux Klan

And on top of it all the Ku Klux Klan, voting with few breaks for one man, gave that man top place. Perhaps it was this one thing that hurt Culberston more than anything else. He had defied the klan. He told friends months ago that he had never shifted his sails to catch the wind and that he had rather be defeated than to surrender a single conviction.

The New York World editorially paid this tribute to Senator Culberston today, under the caption "Bigotry's Triumph in Texas":

"For 63 years the Culberstons—father and son—have served the State of Texas. The father, David Browning Culberston, in addition to serving in the State Legislature, was 11 times elected to the House of Representatives. The son, Charles A. Culberston, was twice elected Governor of Texas and four times elected United States Senator.

"At last, on an issue of religious bigotry, a Culberston has been beaten in Texas. The victor is a candidate of the Ku Klux Klan. But what a victory! Ostensibly it is a victory of the 'native' over the 'foreign' element. In fact, it is the temporary success of a mood of bigotry over the older and finer, over the truly native traditions of Texas.

"For it is the Culberstons who really represent what is native of Texas. They have proved it these 63 years. And it is the Ku Klux Klan, with its masks and imperial titles and its appeal to hatred, which is the imported, the alien and the un-American influence."

In connection with the service of the Culberstons, the record shows that the 24 years of Senator Charles A. Culberston is the longest of any Texan in the Senate. Richard Coke standing next with 18 years.

David B. Culberston's 22 years in the House is the longest of any Texan with that body.

The cabrogoy, a huge lizard attaining a length of four and one-half feet, is found in Ceylon. It is beautifully marked and its skin when tanned affords a fine leather of excellent wearing quality and waterproof. It is used for making women's shoes.

How The Master Driver Became Master Tire Builder

IN 1903, driving the "999" racing car, Barney Oldfield started his career of victories that later earned him the title of "Master Driver of The World." To overcome the tire weaknesses that made racing difficult and dangerous, he studied tires—specified materials—supervised construction.

American tires that have ever taken first place in the French Grand Prix. They have won for three consecutive years in the 500-mile Indianapolis Sweepstakes. So far in 1922, Oldfields have lowered four World's Records and seven track records.

Today, Barney Oldfield is known as the "Master Tire Builder." Starting with the crude tires which carried the "999" one mile in sixty seconds, Oldfield gradually developed his famous Cords—a set of which covered 500 miles at eighty-eight miles an hour without a change.

The Wichita Test Run gave evidence of Oldfield superiority in touring—when a set of four Cords covered 34,525 miles over rutted, frozen, winter roads—a performance attested by the Mayor of Wichita.

In three years Oldfield tires have won every important race on American speedways. They are the only

EPISCOPAL LADIES' GUILD ENTERTAINED BY MRS. KNOX

The Episcopal Ladies' Guild met on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Robt. Knox. Mrs. J. L. Pampell, the chairman, was present and led a very interesting program, after which a delicious repast was served to about twenty guests.

In the dining room they were greeted by an exquisitely appointed table, on which a most clever idea was represented. The whole table was a wide, green lawn of real grass and flowers; in the center was a large white house, this being a marvelous white cake, with gable roof of green icing, and doors and windows of red, with raisins for the door knobs. The porches, steps and walks were blocks of small, dainty sandwiches, and the garage was made of a large square pile of sandwiches. The flower beds, arranged prettily about the house, were outlined in colored candies.

The tempted guests ate up the garage, drank up the cooling fountains of iced tea and demolished most of the fairy house, all the while paying high tribute to this most charming and artistic feature of Mrs. Knox's entertaining.

Mrs. Scott Schreiner presided at the tea table and Mrs. J. C. Folger served. Mrs. H. C. Geddie, as a visitor, also assisted Mrs. Knox.

"Tickets, please."
Dorothy Martin roused herself from her book sufficiently to put her hand into her coat pocket. But—her purse wasn't there! She reached into the pocket on the other side. Then she looked up at the conductor in dismay, a grim, sour-looking old man who looked as if he would make allowances for no one.

"But I'm sure my purse was in my pocket when I boarded the train. It must be here."

While he waited she searched frantically on the seat, under the seat, in her traveling bag, in her hat box. Then, flushed and breathless, she looked up. "I'm sorry—I can give you a check. And here's my personal card."

"Sorry. We don't take no checks, miss."

"What can I do?"
"You'll have to get off at the next stop—St. Michael—a hundred miles further on. And I'll have to ask you to go into the coach."

It was a flushed and indignant young woman who gathered up her baggage and followed the conductor into the hot, stuffy coach.

About midday she found herself on the station platform, her patent leather luggage beside her.

"Porter, miss?"
But she had no money with which to pay for such a luxury, so, much to his disgust, she struggled into the ticket office, up to the window, and asked for a telegraph blank.

"Lost purse. Telegraph one hundred to me at St. Michael, Dorothy."
"Yes, it can go collect. Wait a minute."

To the astonishment of the waiting clerk, she tore the telegram into small pieces. "I've changed my mind." And she strode across the room to the lunch counter.

"Is that job filled?" pointing eagerly to a sign, "Waitress Wanted," before the cashier's window.

The woman looked up, took in at a single glance every detail in the appearance of the slim, aristocratic-looking girl standing before her. "No'm, it ain't."

"I want it."
"Joe, Joe," called the woman in a high, nasal voice. "This gal wants yer job. She don't look like much, but mebbe she'll be better'n nothing."

Before Dorothy was aware of what had happened, she was behind the counter, serving the hungry hordes who had ridden with her to St. Michael and who were clamoring deafeningly for eggs, sandwiches, custard pie and coffee as if they hadn't consumed basketfuls of food in the preceding three hours.

St. Michael was an ugly, sprawling settlement of about twenty frame houses—dirty, weather-beaten, desolate.

One week rolled by, two. In two more weeks Dorothy would have saved enough to get home.

She had just lifted a huge, steaming kettle of soup to the table in her corner of the counter when the Burlington train roared in. Hardly had its brakes brought it to a standstill when a throng of men burst through the doors. The women and children always struggled in and tried to push through the men three-deep at the counter. As she reached for a cup, a familiar voice rang out, "Dorothy." A tall young man was pushing toward the counter.

"I think you are mistaken, sir."
"Dorothy!"
"Move on there, young fellow. You can't be annoying my girls. Move on."

"But—"
"Move on, didn't I tell you?" It was Joe, and he was advancing threateningly upon the young man.

"Oh, Dick"—then her voice broke. "No, no, Joe; he knows me; it's all right. I'm to blame."

Before she knew how it all happened Dorothy was in Dick's arms, sobbing fitfully.

"But why did you do it, dear? Haven't you seen the papers? We've been nearly frantic."

"I almost telegraphed dad. I was prepared for even his 'I told you so.' And then I saw the sign, 'Waitress Wanted,' and I thought it would be a lark to earn my own way home. It's been hard, Dickie, but—"

The limited carried an extra passenger when it left St. Michael. The Pullman folk were rather curious and amused at the solitude with which an aristocratic-looking young man peeled eggs and unwrapped sandwiches for an equally aristocratic-looking but ravenously hungry young woman.

Purely Educational.

"Do you find much relaxation in golf?"

"Not a bit," said Mr. Dubwelts.

"Then why do you play?"

"I've got to acquire a golf vocabulary to be able to hold up my end of a conversation."—Birmingham Age-Herald.
