The 'breed walked away and West turned within. Alone there, he wiped the clammy sweat from his face and stood motionless a long time. He did not like the word that Frank Bluejay had brought back from town, nor had he liked the way the 'breed looked at him when his voice shook.

He turned to the cupboard and took down a fresh bottle of whisky: then, after a moment of indecision, put it back resolutely.

"Not too much of that," he growled, and began to pace the floor, calling on all his resources for clear thought and careful poise.

This Young was evidently bent on remaining in the country. But why was he running to Ezra? And what did he know about the Down er case? A persistent, arrogant devil! He was the one man West could recall who had clashed with Frank Bluejay and not shown at least some hesitation. He was the only man he knew who had put fear into the 'breed's heart. . .

At that he paused, squeezing his lower lip thoughtfully. Bluejay, afraid of Young: Blue-

He turned to the doorway, staring out into the star-hung night. Insects sang and the river murmured. Somewhere a radio blared, Upstream, he could see the lights of Downer's headquarters. "Singing for His Life By FLOYD GIBBONS

FRANKLY, boys and girls, I'm scared to death of maniacs. Aren't you? As I've said before I guess it's because we don't know what a crazy person might do. I'd rather go up against a sane murderer any day than an insane one. Reason should tell us that a sane man bent on murder would be more dangerous than a raving lunatic because he can think better and plan his attack. But I don't know.

Famous Headline Hunter.

Jay S. Talory had a thrilling encounter with a raving lunatic that almost put him in the same mental condition. Jay had to sing himself out of this jam and boy! how he did sing.

It happened while Jay was a member of the American Army of Occupation in Germany, after the World war. Jay got a leave of absence to look up the grave of a pal of his who had "gone west" in Flanders. He didn't find the grave but he very nearly found his own.

Jay wound up in the little town of Virton, Belgium, with his leave up. He had to get back to Coblenz but found that there were no trains running that day in any direction. Somebody suggested that he hike several of Philadelphia's Municipal court miles up the railroad tracks, to a junction, where he could slip on a freight about midnight that would take him to Metz.

Adventure of the Doughboy in the Belgian Freight Car.

The rain was pouring down as only it can in Belgium in the spring. Jay splashed along the lonely railroad tracks, picking his way in the pitch black darkness of the night. Soaked to the skin he finally reached the

A headlight lit up the murky night and soon a freight train rumbled slowly past him. Jay wanted to get out of that rain so he watched for an open box car. One came along and he hopped aboard and climbed into the still darker interior of an empty car. The car was none too clean, Jay says, but it was at least dry and warmer than the cold drizzle outside.

As the train picked up speed after leaving the junction, a strange feeling came over Jay. For some reason or other something told him that

He called out a few words in French but got no answer. Still the feeling persisted. He says he had a sort of premonition that danger lurked in the darkness of the box car. But, after a few minutes, Jay put his forebodings down to plain the great actor, Garrick, that her ordinary fear. After all he wasn't used to traveling in box cars alone at death "eclipsed the gayety of nanight, he told himself, and maybe he was just afraid of the dark. Better do something, he thought, to get his courage up.

So Jay began to sing. Now some of us prefer whistling in a like situation but, you see, Jay had taken singing lessons back home and he had a good voice and a darn good musical education and here was a chance to practice, but he didn't get very far with his singing.

You Can't Sing When You're Being Choked. Suddenly, in the middle of a note, and without a word of warning, a pair of strong hands clutched his throat. Jay felt himself go sick with valet of the sword and cape. It was terror. In a flash it came to him that the towns-people had been telling him about an escaped lunatic who was terrorizing the neighborhood. The man was an ex-opera star who had gone violently insane from overwork. Perhaps this was the man!

Although his eyes were starting from their sockets, Jay could see the dim outlines of a powerful figure towering over him. Jay only weighs 110 pounds wringing wet and knew he was no match for his giant assailant. His wits must get him out of this,

Jay felt one of the powerful hands leave his throat. Then he felt a maniac-if such he was-had a knife. Jay's heavy service overcoat and going, nearly always. Nothing could cura Soap and Ointment. A few pimuniform, fortunately, kept the knife thrust from being more severe.

Crazed Opera Singer Warbles "Othello." Then something happened that made Jay certain that he was in the stitutions for the aid of the poor power of the crazed opera singer. The man suddenly broke into an opera of Shanghai. To them alone he selection. Jay recognized the aria. It was a bit from "Othello." To a contributes $200,000 a year, besides person of Jay's musical education the trend of the maniac's mind was simgiving staunch financial support to ple. He was fiving the part of "Othello," the dusky character who wields

> The man's hand left Jay's throat for a second. Jay expected a thrust of the knife but he had a way to parry it-the only way he could-with his voice. He knew parts of "Othello" by heart. His throat was dry from terror and his voice, he says, shook, but he did the best he could with the tools he had, and sang.

The effect, Jay says, was magical. The man seemed to calm down and a second later he burst into song where Jay left off and Jay had a breathing space for a few minutes, but the maniac was acting his part

With all the drama of a stage performance he suddenly clutched the smaller Jay in his muscular arms and waved the knife madly about. Jay felt the wind as the hand holding the knife swept across his face. But be kept on singing.

Jay Saves His Life by Joining in Improvised Opera.

Meanwhile the train sped through the night. Hours went by while Jay sang and cringed before the sweeping knife. Any minute he thought might be his last. His voice was weakening from the cold damp air and the strain of singing. But his insane stage partner sang on and swung his threatening knife whenever Jay's voice faltered. Jay thought of blindly jumping from the train but gave up the idea. The train was going too fast. He could not even see the roadbed.

On went the improvised opera in the box car. The train slowed down for a curve and Jay-in the middle of a high note-dove straight through the open door!

Maniac Plays Role to Tragic End. As he crashed to the ground his nerves, too, crashed, and he jumped to his feet and ran screaming into the night. A light drew him toward a peasant's cottage and the kindly peasants took him in and nursed him

The next day Jay heard the fate of his operatic train mate. The unfortunate singer's body had been found, in the box car. He had played his part of Othello to the tragic end and had committed suicide—as Othello does—with his own knife! Whew! That's drama for you!

CURFEW

Is Hagerman in need of a curfew, or is it in need of homes? It seems such a pity that youth has to wander all over town for need of excitement and at all hours of the night. They even fail to hold in proper reverence the hour of worship at churches, and seem to want to have their tete a tetes just outside, and not always in a quiet manner. We are not inclined to place all the blame on those youngsters either, we still hold to the theory that parents should set the proper example before those who are given in their charge to rear. You have probably heard the story of the young lad, who proudly boasted that he could step in each of his dad's footprints, just a wee mite of a lad at that. Something in Nature creates that desire in them. So after all, does Hagerman need some homes, or is it up to Society to look after our youth?

Catfish Classed As A Game Fish

That there is some confusion among sportsmen about the regulations governing the taking of catfish is indicated by information reaching the Game Department, says a report from that office.

For the information of the public the department wishes to announce that catfish are classed as game fish by a regulation of the State Game Commission and as such are subject to the rules and regulations governing game fish. A license is required for taking them in any part of the state, and for all persons except children under fourteen years of age. The general open season for catfish has been set by the State Game Commission as April 1 to April 15 and June 1 to November 30. This season applies to all waters in the state unless special provision is otherwise made. Such special provision has been made in the following instances:

1. Elephant Butte lake and Lake McMillan, April 1 to November 30. 2. The Pecos river from Santa Rosa to the Dayton bridge, except the Ft. Sumner diversion dam reservoir, open all year.

3. Ft. Sumner diversion dam reservoir, June 1 to April 15.

4. All waters in Chaves and Eddy counties except the part of the Pecos river mentioned above, and Lake McMillan, June 1 to April 15. The Rio Grande from the Taos-Taos Junction bridge to San

Effective Control Cut Worms Given

The best recommendation that we can make for the control of cut worms and army worms is the use of poison bran mash. Where worms are present this mash should be put out at about the time the seed is planted so as to destroy the worms before the young plants come up.

The formula for this mash is: 100 pounds wheat bran; 5 pounds white arsenic; 2 gallons molasses; 12 lemons or oranges; 10 to 20 gallons of water. To make this mash you should mix the white arsenic and wheat bran together thoroughly while dry. (Do not use lead or calcium arsenic, as they are not as effective as white arsenic and are more expensive). The molasses is mixed with an equal amount of water, and to this sweetened mixture the oranges or lemons, which have been finely ground, are added. Pour the sweetened fruit and water mixture over the arsenic and bran mixture and stir thoroughly to insure a uniform distribution of the poison. This bait should be scattered in the late afternoon at about the rate of ten pounds to the acre.

All necessary precaution should pe exercised in handling arsenical baits. Always mix the baits and scatter with wooden paddle. Do not inhale arsenical dust. Remember that this is not only poison to worms, but to birds and livestock. Be sure to clean all utensils used in mixing and scattering this poison, and do not leave them set around where livestock might be poisoned by them.

they had come together, and she had known exactly what it meant. Timidly she had stolen forward to a thicket where, safely hidden, she could watch that terrible fight. She knew that they were fighting for ber. Of course. She knew it just as she had known how both had been hunting for her. What she didn't know for some time was which one she wanted to win that fight.

Both Lightfoot and the big stranger were handsome. Yes, indeed! They were very handsome! Lightfoot was just a little bit the bigger bit the handsomer. She almost wanted him to win. Then, when she saw how bravely the big stranger was fighting, and how well he was holding his own even though he was a little smaller than Lightfoot, she almost hoped he would win.

That great fight lasted a long Now he would be thrown to his knees when Lightfoot wasn't. As Lightfoot saw this he seemed to gain new strength.

At last he caught the stranger in such a way that he threw him over.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC-What Money Cannot Buy YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC-How Can We Make Our So

The topic as given by the lesson committee is hardly a fair statement. The supreme message is the presentation of contrasted lives and destinies as expressed through the accidents of wealth and poverty. Lazarus was not entitled to heaven because he was poor, neither did the rich man reach the place of torment because he was rich. In this lesson two worlds are unveiled before us, disclosing extremes of character and conditions of persons. In this world we see a rich man reveling in luxury and a poor man in sore affliction begging at the rich man's gate. In the other world we see the same men in reremote past, but of men who live before us every day,

I. The Contrasted Lives (vv. 19-

1. The rich man (v. 19). He seems to have lived in a mansion secluded from the common people. He was clothed in costly raiment. He was served the richest food that could be provided. His sin was selfishly to indulge his appetites without consideration for others. 2. The beggar (vv. 20, 21). He was laid at the rich man's gate with the hope of getting at least the crumbs from his table. The rich man gave him no consideration. The dogs of the street were more kind to him than the rich man. Though destitute and helpless, the man's name is most suggestive. "Lazarus" means "God is a help," indicating that a godly life shone through his poverty. Worldly condition is not a sure test of a man's position in the sight of God. All rich men are not wicked and selfish, neither are all poor men godly.

II. Their Contrasted Deaths and

Burials (v. 22). 1. The beggar. He was found dead and his body was hurried off to a pauper's grave. No notice was taken of his death by the world. Doubtless the only loss to the world was that he was no longer to be ch man's gate 2. The rich man. He also died. His gold could not bribe the messenger of death. Doubtless a cost. ly funeral was held, attended by those who moved in his social class, the officiating priest pronouncing great eulogies over him. III. Their Contrasted Destinies

1. The beggar. He was at once carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom. The souls of believers are especially cared for at the hour of death (Phil, 1:23). They go immediately to be with the

2. The rich man. Though he had an elaborate burial, he lifted up his eyes in hell, being in torment. When the veil of futurity is lifted, we see the positions of these men are reversed. The poor man is in the company of just men made perfect because of his life of godliness on earth, and the rich man is stripped of his purple and fine linen and cast into hell with all wicked men, because while on earth he lived only for selfish ends.

IV. The Reality and Fixedness of Life Beyond the Grave (vv. 24-31). 1. The cry for mercy (v. 24). Dives, which is the Latin name for "rich man," was now willing to claim relationship to Abraham. He was keenly conscious and the appetites which controlled him while on earth were still with him. Part of the torment of hell will be the cravings of appetite and lust with no means of their gratification. 2. Abraham's reply (v. 25). This reply cast the matter back upon the man's memory. He said, "Son, remember." The lashings of a guilty conscience will be most real in hell. Then will the lost rememher the cause which led to their awful destiny. 3. Their fixedness. Human destinies are fixed during this life. When one passes out of this life he enters into a state and condition unchangeable.

4. God's Word is the all-sufficient light (vv. 27-31). Dives now requested that Lazarus go on an errand of mercy to his brethren. He regarded the testimony of a spirit of more value than the Word of God. Many today are more willing to trust the rappings of a ghost nan the sure Word of God. Abraam declared that God's Word is ufficient, that those who rejected toses and the prophets would not epent though visited by one who ad risen from the dead,

In behalf of the AAA officials, it must be said that there will be as. indeed there has been already, considerable unfair Criticism criticism. The criticism to which I refer is of this type: that they should have discovered in advance of the payments that funds were going to these cor porations. Assuming that they could have discovered that fact in advance, there was no alternative for them except to pay the checks authorized by law. Congress made the law, or rather, congress passed it under the lash of the administration, but it was on the statute books and administrative officials are not supposed to disregard such provisions. If there is to be criticism it should be directed at the initial framing of the statute that brought about the condition. The results that have attracted so much attention since Senator Vandenberg's exposure constitute one of the curious coincidences and queer quirks of planned

And a further .word about the criticism. A great many people are likely to forget that while their check was in three figures and some corporation received one in six figures, the condition results properly say this should have been making a correct statement. But cials cannot be blamed for sending out the checks when the law said they should do it regardless of the The fault lies solely and completely with those who, from their professional desks, conceived the whole scheme and gained President Roosevelt's approval of it.

The development of the vulnerable spots in the AAA crop curtailment program Vulnerable probably will prove beneficial to the country as a whole eventually. For one thing, these disclosures have forever choked off proposals of that kind. They may result as well in strengthening the new proposition for crop control through the medium of soil conservation. In other gress thinks through legislation only in the terms of administration arguments, they will likely be less prope to enact legislation without knowing what results will be obtained.

It seems to me that the new farm-aid plan likely will be stronger and probably more workable and certainly less extravagant than was the AAA because the AAA weaknesses have been exposed. These exposures ought to have an effect also among thinking farmers who hereafter are unlikely to accept dogmatic statements and rainbow pictures painted for them by political demagogues and professional farm leaders without examining the practicability of the scheme.

While we are talking about mistakes and about the results ob tained by brilliant Fletcher's theorists, I hear Brain Trust more and more discussion of the latest move by Chairman Henry P. Fletcher and his Republican national committee. Mr. Fletcher has hired ten university professors to head up what he calls the committee's research staff and in announcing their appointment he stressed a declaration that "the division is not a brain trust." But "brain trust" it is going to be called notwithstanding Mr. Fletcher's assertion that they were practical men and women of experience They are going to be a brain trus in exactly the same sense that Mr. Roosevelt's "brain trust" has been denominated. And how else could it be? There actually seems to be little choice between the type of men Mr. Fletcher has chosen and the Tugwells, Hopkinses and other doctors and professors who have constantly had the ear of the President. These men will have Mr. Fletcher's ear and undoubtedly will pour into it their own theories of government and their own ideas of approach to the problem that confronts the Republican national com mitte, namely, the defeat of Mr.

Roosevelt. I have observed political battles for a good many years and I have observed the management of governmental responsibilities through a parallel period. The conclusion is inescapable, as far as I am concerned, that practical men always have done a better job, always have been better administrators and better planners, than the men and women who have spent their lives lecturing from a university class-
