

Gunlock Ranch

By FRANK H. SPEARMAN

SYNOPSIS

Sleepy Cat, desert town of the Southwest, is celebrating the Fourth of July. Jane Van Tassel, beautiful daughter of Gus Van Tassel, hated owner of Gunlock ranch, has arrived from the East for the first time. She watches the Frontier Day celebration in company with Dr. Carpy, crusty, tender-hearted friend of the community. Henry Sawdy of the Circle Dot ranch, tricked in a fake horse race the day before by Dave McCrossen, foreman at Gunlock, plans revenge. He enters Bill Denison, a handsome young Texas wrangler, in the rodeo which McCrossen is favored to win, and lays heavy bets on him. Unknown to the crowd, Denison is a champion horseman. McCrossen and the young stranger tie in the various events. Denison drops a cigarette carelessly. Racing down the track full tilt, he picks up the cigarette. The verdict goes to Denison when McCrossen refuses to attempt the stunt. Entrusted by the crowd, Denison agrees to perform another trick. Jane is asked for her bracelet, and throws it on the track. Just as Denison rides to pick it up a yell from Barney Rebstock, a McCrossen henchman, scares the pony, nearly costing the rider his life. Gun play is prevented by the intervention of Dr. Carpy. Back on Gunlock before a year or two years in Chicago, because of her father's illness, Jane gets lost riding in the hills and meets Denison, now a neighbor, who guides her home. Not knowing her identity, he speaks bitterly of Van Tassel. She tells McCrossen who brought her home and she denounces Denison as a cattle thief. Later she asks Dr. Carpy why her father is unpopular and he tells her it is because of Van Tassel's ruthless and unscrupulous character. Visiting her father in the hospital, Jane is warned to be wary of McCrossen's honesty, but her father urges her to be nice to him.

CHAPTER IV—Continued

"I piled the house supplies in the back," explained McCrossen, "so you'd better ride with me."
"Brought you an extra-heavy coat over," he added. "Thought you might need it. Will you put it on now?"
His voice, never harsh, sounded solicitous. Jane thought she would put the coat on. Her foreman, sitting beside her, helped her get into it. His manner was tender. His hands, as he straightened the coat collar, lingered a moment on her shoulders, Jane shook her shoulders slightly to draw them away.
"Your father's a great man, Jane," he said. "No use talkin'."
"I'm glad to hear some one say a good word for him," returned Jane dryly.
"Oh, he's got his enemies, I know. But from the first minute I ever saw you, girl, when you got off the train that mornin' in Sleepy Cat"—McCrossen inclined in friendly fashion toward his tight-sitting little companion to emphasize his words—"from the very first minute I saw you, I said to myself, 'There's a girl with all the grit and sand of her father.'"
"Hadt'n you better drive a little faster?" suggested Miss Tight Sitter, casually.
"I'm afraid to push the old buckboard over this part of the road. So I said to myself," he continued, "There's a girl with her father's grit and her mother's beauty. Jane"—he lowered his voice, becomingly—"are you warm?"
"Quite."
"And comfortable?"
"Perfectly. But I should like to get on faster."
McCrossen brought the horses to a stop. "What's the matter?" asked his companion rather tartly.
"This is Gunlock Ford. The creek was runnin' kind of high when I drove through after supper, and it's been rainin' all evenin'. We don't want to get caught in the water. I'll get out and see how things look. Take the lines a minute."
"It's safe, I reckon," he reported, returning soon to the rig. "But you'd better put your feet in my lap till we get across. The water might come up through the floorboards."
Her response was chilly. "My feet will be all right where they are."
"O. K., Jane! But you're about the sweetest girl I ever saw in the world."
Suiting action to these words, McCrossen put his arm swiftly around the girl and pulled her toward him for a kiss.
He failed to get one. Instead, he got a smart slap from Jane's gloved hand.
"Please mind your business, Dave, and attend to your driving," said Jane collectedly.
The night was an unquiet one for Jane's pillow. The more she thought about her surprise admirer and his crude advances, the angrier she grew. In the morning she breakfasted and ordered her saddle pony. She meant to take a long ride all by herself and rid herself of her annoyance in the morning air of the high hills.

On and on, Jane rode. The pony was spirited and seemed, like his mistress, to enjoy the jaunt. The farther she rode, the wilder the country grew, with only small bunches of cattle here and there to remind her of her domain. At length the hills grew too rough for pleasure riding. With her spirits quelled and feeling invigorated, Jane reined about for the ranch house.

Covering considerably more distance, Jane, having grown weary, was rejoiced at last to see the dusty, serpentine foothills roads well below her. Having reached it, she reined into it and jogged along, confident of reaching home soon. Presently she encountered an Indian family traveling toward her in a wagon. She reined up.
"Am I heading right for Gunlock Ranch?" she asked of the man driving.
He nodded affirmatively. But a bright-eyed boy in the wagon box made a protest. He jabbered in low tones to his father and, turning to Jane, exclaimed, "Wrong way," and pointed north. The father shook his head, and the dispute grew. Jane, now confused by the uncertainty, thanked the party and rode on south.

A few miles farther she met a horseman heading north. As he drew near, Jane thought she recognized him as the man who had directed her back to the ranch a couple of weeks before, at the close of a long day of riding through the Gunlock hills. Jane reined up inquiringly.
"Good-morning," ventured Jane. "Can you tell me whether I am on the right road to Gunlock ranch?"
The man listened but made no effort to speak. Instead he looked at the girl silently. His gaze was embarrassing.
He ignored her question and instead asked one himself:
"Aren't you the girl who got lost around here a couple of weeks ago?"
"Yes," answered Jane. "And aren't you the man who directed me back?"
"Guess I was," the man replied, in an absent-minded way.
"I realize that it's stupid of me to lose my way again," she said, "but can you tell me whether I am heading right for the ranch?"
He found his tongue and spoke quietly: "Well . . . you'd reach the ranch the way you are going, though probably not today."
"Not today?" she asked in amazement.
"You want to reach the ranch house, I suppose?"
"I do."
"Then you're heading the wrong way."
"Will you please set me right?"
"You'd better take the back trail."

"Hadt'n you better drive a little faster?" suggested Miss Tight Sitter, casually.
"I'm afraid to push the old buckboard over this part of the road. So I said to myself," he continued, "There's a girl with her father's grit and her mother's beauty. Jane"—he lowered his voice, becomingly—"are you warm?"
"Quite."
"And comfortable?"
"Perfectly. But I should like to get on faster."
McCrossen brought the horses to a stop. "What's the matter?" asked his companion rather tartly.
"This is Gunlock Ford. The creek was runnin' kind of high when I drove through after supper, and it's been rainin' all evenin'. We don't want to get caught in the water. I'll get out and see how things look. Take the lines a minute."

Her response was chilly. "My feet will be all right where they are."
"O. K., Jane! But you're about the sweetest girl I ever saw in the world."
Suiting action to these words, McCrossen put his arm swiftly around the girl and pulled her toward him for a kiss.
He failed to get one. Instead, he got a smart slap from Jane's gloved hand.

The Farther She Rode, the Wilder the Country Grew.

You're going away from the ranch house now."
Jane exclaimed in surprise. "Why, how is that? Are you sure?"
"Dead sure." A suspicion of humor crept into the words.
Confused at being caught wrong, Jane flushed. The man, silent, just looked at her. She did not like it; he might be laughing at her. Facing him more sternly, she asked with helpless annoyance in her words, "What am I to do?"
"Back trail."
"What does that mean?" she asked tartly.
"Turn around."
"Where am I?"

"Pretty well out on the Gunlock Indian Reservation."
"I've never felt so stupid in my life," declared Jane, trying to act at ease as she reined about. "I thought I knew this country well enough by this time not to get lost. I'm certainly not a tenderfoot."
The man smiled, but to himself. "There's been men here several years who get lost riding in the hills. It's no disgrace for a two-monthser."
Jane did not relish being termed a "two-monthser." "Oh, I've been here before," she said airily.
He offered no comment. Tired, waiting for him to say something, Jane was nettled by his continued silence.

"I see you're wearing your bracelet," he remarked of a sudden. The words came, so to speak, out of a clear sky.
She looked at him just as suddenly as he had spoken; and in alarm.
He was looking straight ahead—just as if she were not within miles—and with the impassive expression of a man riding quite alone. Could he be, she asked herself in a flash of fear, a bad man? Could he mean to rob her of her bracelet and watch?
For a moment she was too upset to speak. But her silence seemed not to move her companion.
Looking placidly ahead, and after waiting for her to comment, he spoke again:
"I might be wrong. But I thought I saw that bracelet about two years ago, Fourth of July—"
"Oh," exclaimed Jane for want of something better to say.
"Anyway," continued her even-speaking guide, "I know I couldn't be mistaken about the young lady that wore it. Weren't you visiting here around that time?"
"Yes," ventured Jane, stealing a glance at the questioner. His gaze was fixed steadfastly ahead.

"Were you at the Frontier Day celebration in Sleepy Cat that Fourth of July?" he continued.
"Yes," repeated Jane. "W-were you?"
"If I hadn't been," he answered dryly, "I shouldn't have seen the bracelet."
They were jogging along pleasantly enough, and as the man didn't actually demand her bracelet or watch, her panic subsided.
"Stopping over at the ranch for a while, are you?"
"For a while, yes."
"Some of the boys over at your ranch were telling in town they had a young lady over at Gunlock that used to ride in a circus. I suppose it was you."
"I'm the only woman, young or old, over there."
"What circus did you work with?"
"Oh, several circuses," said Jane recklessly.
"What were some of them?"
Jane, growing flighty, named one of the big ones whose shows she had attended in Chicago.
"What year were you with that show?"
She was growing desperate. With affected embarrassment she turned full on him. "You mustn't ask me that. Women are sensitive about their age, don't you know?"
For the first time he turned his eyes directly toward hers.
"I've heard some women are that way," he went on, "but I shouldn't call you a woman."
"Oh, my! Why not?"
"Well, I'd call you a girl. The reason I asked was, because I was with that show one season myself."
This was growing terrifying. Jane made an effort to change the line of talk; but her stranger was interested. "Did you ever happen to ride in Madison Square Garden?"
"No! Did you?"
"I rode there one winter when we showed there."
"Did you like circus work?" she asked offhand.
"Can't say I did. I never worked in a circus except that one season. It was only because I needed money then, and it was big money to me. But the lawyers got it all. Here's the fork for Gunlock ranch."

He pointed. They were at the parting of their ways. A saucy impulse seized Jane. She was going to impudently and to do whatever thing flashed into her head. She checked her horse, lifted her forearm, and unclasped the bracelet. "Since you've been so kind—" The man had halted his horse. "Nothing at all!" he protested.
"—I'd like you," she went on, paying no attention to his disclaimer, "to have a souvenir—this bracelet." She held it out to him. He looked flabbergasted. "For what?" he stammered.
His embarrassment seemed to communicate itself to Jane—she could not have told why. "I'm grateful for your putting me on my way today, and that other night when I got lost, if you remember," she went on.
He swallowed. She was secretly delighted with his confusion. "Well, that certainly is mighty kind," he said haltingly. "But I couldn't accept such a beautiful thing for doing nothing at all."
"I've got lots of bracelets."
"But something I've got to find something I can really do for you."
She laid the bracelet in his outstretched hand.
"I certainly thank you a thousand times." His slow response left no doubt of what he felt. Her aim now was to escape his protestations. He put on his hat. She started to go.

"Please!" he exclaimed, raising his hand. She stopped. Her guide's brow ruffled a little in perplexity.
"What is it?" she asked, superciliously impatient.
He took his hat off again. "Would it be polite," he ventured, "to ask your name?"
"Tell me yours again," she said.
"Bill Denison."
She allowed her horse to turn into the ranch trail. Denison sat motionless, hat in hand, but looking directly at her. "You haven't told me your name yet," he remonstrated quietly.
"Oh! It's Marie. Good-bye!"
Not till after she had parted from Denison and was riding alone with her thoughts did Jane begin to feel really frightened. This was the man of whom she had heard lurid tales of rustling, an enemy of her father's, near-outlaw generally—Bill Denison.

"Who Was the Man That Brought You Home?" Asked McCrossen.
She drew a long breath, thinking over her encounter with the redoubtable Bill; what she had said to him and how she had said it; what he had said to her and how he had said it; recalling his general appearance, his easy manner in the saddle, his peaceable features, and at last his brown eyes. As she drew near the ranch house, she resolutely dismissed him from her mind, or thought she did.
"Who was the man that brought you home?" asked McCrossen.
"Why, nobody."
"Ben Page said you rode back with a man."
So she had been discovered. No matter. "Oh, that man!" she exclaimed, tossing her head. "He was just somebody from the Reservation, going to Sleepy Cat."
In the meantime her rebuffs had not shaken the constancy of her foreman admirer, McCrossen.
Whenever McCrossen was going to ride over the ranch, Jane was not so riding. When he was riding to town, Jane was riding over the ranch. In fact, chiefly to be rid of him, Jane spent much time in the saddle. And she developed a particular liking for the hill trail to town; she usually rode that way, either coming or going. What impressed itself on her was that riding the hill road alone was not quite so exciting as the first time she had ridden it with a guide. But what had become of her guide?

She controlled her impatience until she could do so no longer. Starting one day to town with Bull Page, Jane asked discreetly about their neighbor, this man Bill Denison.
"Why, Miss Jane," answered Bull, "'cordin' to what I hear, Bill's been down to Medicine Bend on his lawsuit."
"But why need a man go down to Medicine Bend for a lawsuit, when there are courts in Sleepy Cat?"
"Well, this is before the U. S. Land Office; that's different." Suddenly Bull, peering down the trail, straightened up. "Why, there's Bill, right now, on his way to town. The critter's back."
"Where is he? Oh, I see. The man that just rode around the bend?" Jane did some fast and bold thinking. She looked in her purse. "Bull!" she exclaimed in fancied alarm, "I've forgotten to bring Quong's grocery list for the kitchen. I'm afraid you'll have to ride back after it."
She was soon within speaking distance of the horseman ahead.
"Good-morning," she said stiffly.
Denison looked around, checked his horse, touched his hat, and returned the greeting. But he was plainly confused, and Jane was correspondingly pleased. "We meet again," she said with a superior air. "And this time I'm not lost."
"I'm afraid I am, this time," he said slowly.
"How so?"

In the branches of a tall chestnut tree at Seaux, near Paris, a restaurant-cave has been opened. Resting on the branches are the separate dining places, access to which is gained by means of a winding staircase built around the trunk of the tree. ## Handknit Effect in Machine Knits

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

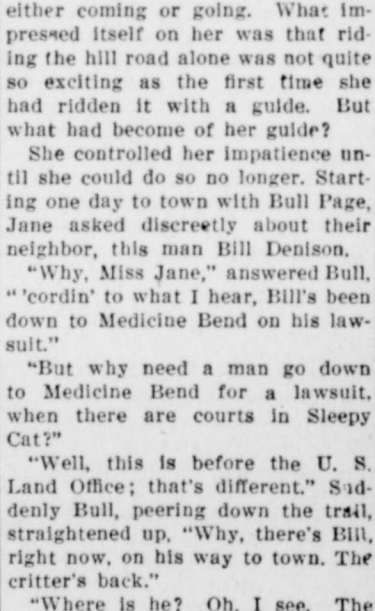

Whether you knit or whether knitting is not one of your accomplishments the fact remains that, to be "in style," you simply must have a goodly collection of smart knitted clothes in your autumn and winter wardrobe.
No wonder the love of knitted outfits grows upon us, for, put to the test, there's nothing more practical for general wear, for travel, for sports, for week-end visits, no type of apparel that so retains a well-groomed, unwrinkled appearance under every circumstance as do the handsome high-styled knitted costumes that grow handsomer and smarter down to the last detail with every passing moment.
This season's knitted collections bear an especially encouraging message to non-knitters in that the machine knits now showing have taken on a patrician hand-knit look that might baffle even an expert at first glance. One of the outstanding numbers on the fall program is the tweed-knit suit that looks so convincingly hand-knit that unless you tell your friends they will never dream that it is machine done. Just to get an idea of one of these stunning tweed knit suits we are calling your attention to the model to the left in the group illustrated. Here a multicolored tweed knit wool in handknit effect is trimly fashioned in a three-piece costume. The jacket has two set-in pockets edged in green to match the monotone self-striped blouse, and the leather belt and buttons are also in green. Can you imagine anything more fitting for a colorful autumn day?

The two frocks shown also typify the trend toward hand-knit effects as achieved in loom-knit fashions. The lady of fashion seated is wearing a two-piece frock in the new blue-spruce color, simulating in stitch and styling a classic hand-knit. The tuck-in scarf is velveteen in deep wine color, which goes to show how striking and out-of-the-ordinary are the new color combinations that are being played up so dramatically this season.
To the right in the picture, a high-necked sweater blouse in deep brown has an accompanying brown and white tweed-knit skirt done in a cross-ribbed stitch.
One among many of the fascinating things in regard to knitted fashions is that they have taken on clever dressmaker details that measure up perfectly to topnotch styling. For instance there are knit costume suits that have the latest in tunic or swagger coats that are so good looking that out comes your checkbook with orders to deliver without delay. On some of the dresses and suits there are bindings and accents of velvet, of suede, of grosgrain ribbon with unique fastenings, that include zippered novelties, huge metal clips and buttons galore.
Pleated skirt effects in knits are very attractive. In some instances the skirt is widened with godets. And have you heard about the new black sweater coat? As a college fashion the black sweater worn with a bright plaid skirt is scoring a big success although every fashion alert woman yielding to the urge of these sweats . . .
The new knit fabrics . . . are introducing such interesting themes as jacquard patternings that are knitted right into the fabric. These are perfectly stunning for the separate blouse or the swanky waistcoats that fashion is so conspicuously spotlighting this season.

KNITTED CULOTTE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

It doesn't cost one bit more to select hosiery that matches one's shoes, or harmonizes with them, than it does to pick up shades haphazardly. When buying a hat, keep in mind the color of the coat and do the same with gloves, scarves and purses.
Dress accessories form the ensemble, and it is that which makes a woman chic or dowdy. Nowadays, one must keep in mind the complete picture. Make-up should also be considered. Rouge and lipstick that glorify one outfit will kill another. Half a dozen shades of lipstick are not too many for the girl with the average wardrobe, especially now that gay colors are fashionable.
Pressed Grape Tones Now in Use for Accessories
The "pressed grape" shades in gloves, shoes and purses are featured all along Fifth Avenue—burgundy, raisin, claret, muscatel . . . One window is full of aubergine, the new eggplant shade, an ideal accent for black . . . aubergine, claret and muscatel shoes are being made . . . or you can choose malaga purple accessories, and wear them with black, fog blue, spruce green or brown . . .
The smartest outfit on the avenue was an oxford gray tailored suit with a tiny black stripe, worn with a dull crepe man-tailored blouse of black, an antique silver and mother of pearl brooch at the collar, smart because the suit was perfectly tailored.
Fur-Trimmed Hats Seen in Late Paris Collections
Fur is used lavishly in the new collections in Paris. Many hats are either trimmed or made entirely of fur, and a black velvet suit trimmed with a luxurious silver fox collar is matched by a peaked velvet hat trimmed with the head of a silver fox. Bright shoe-button eyes and pinked ears give the hat a very pointed look.

POOR LIGHT THE SOURCE OF EARLY SIGHT FAILURES

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

If men could do all their reading—women all their fine sewing—children all their close studying in the light of day, poor eyesight would not present the terrible condition we now have.
We are, in effect, a nation of poor seers. Not even childhood is exempt, for records show that more than one child in every five has damaged eyesight. By the time we reach our majority, two out of every five have strained their eyes. At forty, when life is said to begin, three out of every five have failing sight. Add another score of years and in our sixties—only five in every hundred persons have normal eyes.
Chief among the causes of weakened eyes, is eyestrain: a condition largely the result of straining the eyes under poor lighting conditions. Today's family life is largely centered in the family living-room, where, after the day's work, we turn to reading, sewing, studying and numerous other eye-straining tasks. Here Nature becomes stubborn. She does not tell us right away that we need more light or better light. She waits until the damage is done—frequently damage that cannot be repaired, before she sounds her warning.
Just because a family is beyond the reach of electric power is no reason why they should resort to old-fashioned wick-burning lamps. Such lamps, like the fire-brand, the torch and the pine knot, went out of date with the birth of pressure mantle lamps.
It is interesting to learn that modern pressure mantle lamps provide a pure white, radiant light, of up to 300-candlepower brilliance—as much as eight ordinary electric light bulbs produce. With such perfect lighting appliances available to every farm home, it would seem that early failure of eyesight was unnecessary. A little more thought to the importance of good light should go far in preserving and protecting Nature's most magnificent gift to man—his eyes.

Washington Digest National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—Some time ago I reported in these columns that Mr. Roosevelt had sent a commission to Europe to study consumer co-operatives. I said at that time that the commission was likely to find itself unable to reach an agreement concerning a report to the President on the consumer co-operatives and that in the event they were able to reach an agreement, the publication of their findings would be delayed until after the election.

There is still another phase of this general proposition of consumer co-operatives that ought to be of interest to every producer in this country. Let us assume, for example, that they were perfect in organization and management; that they prospered and expanded in numbers and that they were rendering genuine service to the people. If that condition were to obtain, does it not occur as a natural question that with so much strength, the consumer co-operatives would eventually establish a class alignment between producer and consumer?

I know there has been some argument that the consumer co-operatives are the answer to the effort to destroy chain stores. That is not so. Chain stores in foreign countries have licked the co-operatives. They have virtually destroyed them where the co-operatives attempted to drive the chain stores out of business. It becomes important then to recognize that while the United States has many chain stores, it has not now and never will have as many chain stores as it has in independent business men, particularly to the small shop owner, whether he be in a large city or in the thousands of small towns and villages where the owners of such stores are important to their communities and pillars of strength in our national society.

It may seem a far cry from the farm field to the price of beer as it works, but there is a direct connection and recent developments again demonstrate the fact that our whole economic structure is quite closely related. There is an increase coming in the price of beer. Either the working man and others who like beer are going to pay more for it, or else they will get a smaller glass. The answer is that ingredients entering into the production of beer have increased in price to such an extent that, according to official figures, the brewers are now paying about $1.50 more for the things that enter into the production of one barrel of beer than they did when legalized.

This circumstance is significant for the reason that it shows conclusively how tampering with the currency upsets the general balance within our economic structure and results sometimes in displacement of markets and sometimes in diminution of sales. In the case of beer it probably will result in a displacement of markets, rather than any decline in the amount of beer consumed, despite the fact that the ultimate consumer will be paying more.

This condition is of interest to agriculture generally because it has always been contended by the proponents of open sale of beer and whiskey that a substantial new outlet for farm crops was made available by the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. Rather, it was a restoration of an outlet that existed before the Eighteenth amendment was adopted. But there has been a combination of circumstances, largely the result of governmental meddling, that has mitigated against the farmers obtaining full benefit from repeal. These may be enumerated as follows: Devaluation of the dollar, crop restriction under the Agricultural Adjustment act, higher taxes, and a tendency on the part of the Roosevelt administration to increase imports from abroad.

In the case of the devaluation of the currency, the main purpose, as announced by the Roosevelt administration, was to increase prices. It has had that effect and has made the brewers pay more for the hops they must import from abroad and they must import hops because our own production is insufficient.

The word "dun" is supposed by some to be derived from the French "donnez." The British Apollo of 1780 says, however, that the word owes its origin to a Joe Dun, a famous bailiff of Lincoln in the time of Henry VII. He is said to have been so successful in the collection of debts that his name became proverbial. Whenever it seemed almost impossible to make a man pay, people would say, "Why don't you Dun him?"

The Man Who O-O Tales and Traditions from American Political History by FRANK E. HAGEN and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

FARMERS' CHAMPION OF ALL the leaders of third party movements, probably no one has caused the two major parties more concern than did Gen. James B. Weaver of Iowa. For he was the nominee of two new parties which, at two different periods in our history, capitalized on the unrest of the farm vote and in one case he definitely contributed to the defeat of the party in power.

Weaver was first the standard-bearer for the Greenbackers, a party which came into existence in 1868 because of the dissatisfaction of the farmers with the financial policies of Grant's administration. They were inflationists who demanded that a large amount of paper money be issued without regard to specie payment. They received their name from the fact that legal-tender notes were printed in green and called greenbacks.

In the campaign of 1876 they nominated Peter Cooper, the New York philanthropist, but he polled only 80,000 popular votes and did not receive a single electoral vote. In the congressional elections of 1878 the Greenbackers cast a million votes and the Republicans in power looked apprehensively to the presidential campaign of 1880, especially when the Greenbackers nominated a man from the agricultural West. But their fears were groundless, for the Greenbackers could muster only a little more than 300,000 votes and, although Garfield won over Hancock by less than 10,000 popular votes, he got 214 electoral votes to his opponent's 155.

Twelve years later the Republicans had much more to worry over when Weaver bobbed up again, this time as the nominee of the Populist or People's party which declared for free silver, public ownership of monopolies, postal savings banks and an income tax. In the state and congressional elections of 1890 they carried the legislatures of Kansas and Nebraska, elected nine members of congress and forced 34 others, Democrats and Republicans, to pledge themselves to carry out Populist ideas. In the presidential campaign of 1892 Weaver polled more than 1,000,000 votes in the West and South and corralled 22 electoral votes. The Populists also carried several state legislatures and sent five senators to Washington.

"SMITH FOR PRESIDENT" more people bearing the name of Smith than any other family name, it is only natural perhaps that there should have been more presidential candidates by that name than any other. The first was Joseph E. Smith, founder of the Church of Latter Day Saints and prophet of the Mormon religion, who in 1844 condemned the policies of both the Whig and the Democratic parties and announced his candidacy for the presidency. However, his martyrdom at the hands of an Illinois mob in June of that year cut short his political career.

Four years later another Smith was in the field as a candidate—Gerrit Smith, the New York philanthropist, who was one of the founders of the Liberty party in 1840 and its candidate for President in 1848. In that year he was also endorsed for the presidency by the Industrial Congress at its convention in Philadelphia. Again in 1852 Smith was the candidate of the Liberty party and again he was endorsed by another group, this time by the Land Reformers. In neither case did Smith or his party figure very prominently in the election.

In 1876 there was another one of the name in the presidential race. He was Green Clay Smith, a native of Kentucky, a veteran of the Mexican and Civil wars, rising to the rank of brigadier-general in the Union army before resigning to take his seat in congress to which he had been elected while in the field. Re-elected to congress, he resigned to become the second territorial governor of Montana. After three years of service in the West he resigned to enter the ministry of the Baptist church in Washington, D. C. It was soon after his serving as a minister that he was chosen as the first presidential nominee of the modern Prohibition party.

Just as this "dry" Smith failed to win in 1876, so did a "wet" Smith fail to win half a century later. For Alfred E. Smith, the Democratic candidate in 1928, suffered defeat, as did his predecessors.

DO WE AGREE ON AMERICAN ESSENTIALS?

Here are a few thoughts for election day: In very few countries can the people express their opinions of the government, either informally or in their capacity as voters. To denounce Hitler in Germany means death or long imprisonment. To speak a word against Mussolini in Italy makes you the worst possible insurance risk. To mildly criticize Stalin in U. S. S. R., gives employment to a firing squad. Thus it goes in Poland, Rumania, Austria, Spain, and elsewhere.

CHEMISTS SEEK SAFE AND ECONOMICAL WEED KILLER

The weed problem is of interest to chemists. Investigations now under way at the Arlington farm of the Department of Agriculture seek economical and safe chemicals for weed eradication. An ideal weed killer, says P. H. Groggins, in charge of studies of weed eradication, Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, is an inexpensive and widely available compound that kills weeds quickly without poisoning the soil so that it must be kept out of cultivation for long periods.

The ideal weed-killing chemical must be safe to manufacture, transport, and use. It should react chemically with the weeds to provide a balanced fertilizer of the manure type that enriches the soil and improves it physically. If such a compound could be obtained, says Mr. Groggins, then weed eradication would be incidental to soil improvement and the cost would be negligible.

Bindweed eradication is an example of the problems that the chemists face. Sodium chlorate, commonly used to kill bindweed, has the drawback of being highly inflammable when dry. In contact with any dry organic matter it burns fiercely. Every summer brings reports of persons badly burned because they allowed the sodium chlorate spray solution to dry on their clothing. Research in the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils seeks, among other things, to learn whether sodium chlorate can be made available to the farmer at lower costs, and to compound it with other chemicals to retard its inflammability when in contact with clothing or other dry organic matter.

Use Simple Ways Enjoy Hallowe'en

Hallowe'en is the very best time of the whole year to have fun. There should be a party in every neighborhood for the children, especially. But grown-ups love them too, says Miss De Maier of the New Mexico State College. The farm home, a large barn, or some community building make fitting settings—any one of them may be decorated beautifully without cost.

In planning the decorations for a Hallowe'en party, always remember that this is the time that Nature decks herself in the brightest and loveliest of colors. You can't go astray here. Select cornstalks, branches of gayly colored leaves, pumpkins and other vegetables from the garden, apples and pears. These can be arranged about any room to give just the right background for Hallowe'en fun.

Tables may be made most inviting by decorating them with centerpiece of fruit arranged around a small pumpkin, and surrounding these with branches of autumn leaves. Of course, if one has a number of pumpkins, jack-o-lanterns with their comical faces add a final touch to both the room and table decorations.

Refreshments may be very simple. There are always the old stand-bys of cider and pumpkin pie or doughnuts. The pie may be made with cooked pumpkin, squash, or sweet potatoes. All three of these make a delicious product. Children like popcorn balls with the cider, or just ginger-bread when made by this recipe:

½ cup butter
½ cup granulated sugar
½ cup sorghum syrup
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ cup sour milk
1 1/2 cups flour
2 teaspoons ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 eggs

Cream butter and sugar, add soda to syrup. Beat egg yolks and whites separately, add whites last. Bake in layer cake pans. While hot, place marshmallows cut in

For the Cook

Frankfurters or weiners (use the left-over cooked ones) make a toothsome stuffing for green peppers, when they're mixed with cooked rice, a bit of onion and a dab of tomato. Bake them slowly and serve as main course.

Shredded beets make a brilliant garnish. And don't discard beet tops; cook them slowly with two or three tablespoons of mazola and a little water; serve with vinegar and slice of hard cooked egg.

Spiced currants rival mint jelly to accompany roast lamb or cold cuts.

Almost any cream pie filling is enhanced by the addition of a few sliced pasteurized dates; try them in your next lemon meringue pie filling.

Hollowed-out melon shells (cantaloupe, honey-dew or watermelon) make perfect "dishes" for serving fruit cups; pineapple shells are pretty too.

Try thin strips of sliced cold ham or bologna atop the vegetable salad, as a garnish.

If you plan to eat the skins of baked potatoes, brush the potatoes with mazola when you put them in the oven, to keep the skins tender.

Grated cheese sprinkled over the spinach tempts the family.

A tablespoon of karo in a glass of milk doubles the energy value and improves the taste.

Hairs from rabbit fur worn 1,500 years ago by Indians, have been found in Arizona in a good state of preservation.

halves between layers, then serve with whipped cream over top.

When planning a Hallowe'en party, don't forget the last requirement—plenty of good games, ghost stories and stunts.

DEMOCRATS bring PROSPERITY

Under Governor Clyde Tingley, New Mexico has had a business administration.

The State has worked in harmony with President Roosevelt, with the result that every line of endeavor, every person in New Mexico has profited.

Prosperity has been restored.

If you are a merchant, a business man, you profited from increased building activities in New Mexico. From the increased payrolls. From the State's National advertising campaign which has brought additional thousands of tourists to the State. You profited directly or indirectly from the $127,000,000 which the Roosevelt program made available to the State in gifts or grants.

If you are the father or the mother of children, you have profited or will profit from the 250 new rural schools, the vast improvements in our educational system, the building program at our Institutions of Higher Learning . . . a program financed largely by outright Federal grants.

If you are a taxpayer you have profited from the State's economy program which has resulted in a one-half mill decrease in the State tax rate. This decrease means a saving of $125,000.

The Republican candidate for Governor has laughed at this decrease, calling it "infinitesimal."

Business interests of the State are dependent for their prosperity on the purchasing power of the people as a whole.

Under the New Deal administration in New Mexico, the people have been so prosperous that the following results have been achieved:

During the last two years 22,000 new automobiles have been registered. The increase in new car registration in 1935 over 1932 is 293%.

Gasoline sales increased more than 30 per cent.
Retail sales increased more than 30 per cent.
Sale of life insurance is up 22%.
Not a bank in the State has failed.

Republican candidates have bitterly opposed the Roosevelt Works Program, and are pledged to scrap the New Deal—the very instrument which has brought prosperity.

For this reason, if there ever was a time when business-men, farmers and ranchers should unite for their common good and work to elect the Democratic Ticket, it is now.

If there ever was a time when labor, which has profited greatly under the New Deal, should be solidly united for the Democratic Party, it is now.

If there ever was a time when educators of the State should fight for their own interests, it is now. (Jaffa Miller, Republican candidate for Governor, has publicly opposed improvements at our institutions of higher learning, and all Republican candidates have branded the WPA, under which 250 new schools are being built, as boondoggling and waste.)

The Democratic record in the State is so good that Republican criticisms are based on misrepresentations and untruths. For instance, they've declared the State owns 1,000 motor vehicles. They say they can operate the State with 800 motor vehicles.

The State owned on October 10, only 479 motor vehicles and of this number 358 were trucks, and five were school buses. By their own admission the Republicans will need 321 more motor vehicles to operate the State than the State owns at the present time.

(NOTE: The figures quoted here are taken from an audit report of Horton & Bixler, dated October 17, 1936.)

They've said the 1935 Legislature appropriated more money than any other Legislature in the history of the State.

This is not true.

The 1935 Legislature appropriated $9,587,122. The 1929 Legislature, under a Republican administration, appropriated $12,110,623, an all time high. In both cases we have taken our data for the total appropriations, including Highway Debentures, from bulletins issued by the New Mexico Taxpayers Association.

Other charges by the Republican candidates are equally as untrue. When a party resorts to falsehoods in an effort to win an election, it no longer deserves the confidence of the people.

Senator Carl A. Hatch, Senator Dennis Chavez, Congressman John J. Dempsey, Governor Clyde Tingley, and the entire Democratic Ticket are pledged to work with Roosevelt to advance the prosperity of New Mexico.

CONTINUE PROSPERITY By Re-electing The Democratic Ticket

men who have had tuberculosis. What are we coming to? Undoubtedly active cases of tuberculosis are a menace to their neighbors and the sooner they die the smaller the chances of spreading infection. A tendency to succumb to tuberculosis infection is probably inherited and the survival of the tuberculosis to the age of reproduction thus tends to perpetuate a susceptible race. Are we really engaged in promoting the survival of the unfittest?

The logical alternative is found in Erewhon where a person convicted of having tuberculosis is condemned to life imprisonment or to death. Why do we shrink from this alternative?

The truth about competition and cooperation is that each encourages the survival of certain desirable traits. Qualities that bear such labels as "mercy" and "loving kindness" may not be carried in the genes but they are certainly inherited through social tradition. And the failure of such qualities to survive may easily be more fatal to the human race than a failure to stamp out susceptibility to tuberculosis. Look, for example, at Spain!

Rabies

The American Medical Association has recently rebuked A. P. Terhune for writing, the Reader's Digest for publishing, an article which belittles the danger of rabies following dog bites. The rebuke is justified. Rabies is certainly not common, dogs often bite without being mad, yet people do get rabies from dog bites and when they do they suffer a peculiarly horrible death.

Mr. Terhune failed to mention the Pasteur treatment. Without this treatment 35 per cent of those who are bitten by rabid animals take the disease and die. At the same time the treatment should not be given heedlessly for it carries its own risk relatively small though it be. Among 211,774 persons treated at various institutes up to and including the year 1911 there were reported 100 cases of transient paralysis and 19 deaths. From 1906 to 1921 the New York City health department treated 6,738 persons; they had 7 cases of paralysis and 2 deaths.

To avoid risk, anxiety and needless expense it is important to know whether the biting dog is rabid or not. To do so the dog must be tied up and watched. If after three weeks the dog has shown no sign of the disease it may safely be released.

If the dog has escaped and cannot be identified, or if someone has made the mistake of shooting it, the doctor and patient will have to consider carefully whether or not the Pasteur treatment should be given (the doctor will, of course, cauterize the wound). Another difficult decision arises when the patient has been licked but not bitten by a rabid animal. Infection will not occur through the unbroken skin, but there may be scratches in the skin too small to be seen by the naked eye. The rule in such cases is to give treatment.

In all suspicious cases the health department should be consulted. They can tell you whether any cases of rabies have occurred recently in the neighborhood and the health officer will be glad to help your doctor to assess the element of risk.

Bread making is so old a household art that its beginning is unknown, but as a really modern industry it is scarcely twenty years old.

Seventy thousand persons die of tuberculosis in the United States each year. Nearly two hundred deaths from tuberculosis were reported in New Mexico last year.

"We Have the Criminals on the Run"
(Out of the Penitentiary)

BY HON. CLYDE TINGLEY
GOVERNOR OF NEW MEXICO

(With apologies to "The Master Detective"—May, 1936)

GOVERNOR Tingley, as a contributor to detective fiction, had an article in the May, 1936, issue of "The Master Detective," on pages 5 and 62. In it he told the Department of Justice and the G-men how to abolish crime. He said he had proved his system in New Mexico. He indicated that things in the criminal line were awful when he took over the job, but that he set right out to abolish crime in our fair state and did it "in a period of six months."

Space forbids reproduction of the entire article, which is too bad, as it is a gem of crime running fiction. There are certain paragraphs, however, which the voters are entitled to read. Here they are:

"I have made it my policy to give our state police my undivided support, and I shall do this as long as I am in the Governor's chair. To back them up I have let it be known further THAT CRIMINALS WILL BE PROMPTLY AND STERNLY PUNISHED, AND THAT THERE WILL BE NO HOPE FOR THEM OF CLEMENCY IN THE SHAPE OF PARDONS OR COMMUTATIONS FROM THE GOVERNOR'S OFFICE.

The Governor's article continued:

"I FEEL THAT IT IS MY SWORN DUTY TO MAKE SURE THAT A LAW BREAKER SENTENCED TO PRISON SERVES HIS FULL SENTENCE. Although I would not hesitate to rectify an obvious miscarriage of justice which resulted in the incarceration of an innocent man, on the other hand THOSE INDIVIDUALS CONVICTED IN OUR COURTS WHO WILL RECEIVE CLEMENCY FROM THE GOVERNOR WILL BE FEW AND THEY WILL HAVE TO DESERVE IT."

ANOTHER ONE—And Why?

On Monday, October 12, Hyman Roy, of Albuquerque, who had been sentenced to be electrocuted on October 16th, for murder, was given a reprieve of two months, or until December 16th . . . OR UNTIL AFTER THE ELECTION.

Announcement of the reprieve was made Monday at the office of the Governor.

Roy shot to death two persons, one a woman, at a filling station in Albuquerque. The crime was a particularly brutal one. Roy's defense was insanity due to intoxication.

He was originally sentenced to death October 23, 1934. The case was carried to the supreme court where conviction was confirmed and the execution date set for October 16th.

For some weeks past it has been currently reported that certain Albuquerque negroes had interceded for Roy with Tingley and that they had promised to "deliver the city's negro vote" in exchange for a commutation. It has been known for some days past that Tingley would issue the reprieve on October 12th.

It is not asserted that Governor Tingley made such a "trade"! It is merely asserted that current report has it that such a "trade" was tendered him. No doubt the Governor felt this to be one of those cases where "an obvious miscarriage of justice" needed to be rectified; although the state supreme court seemed to feel otherwise.

THE FACTS ARE AS STATED. DRAW YOUR OWN CONCLUSION

BILLY MINK MAKES HIMSELF AT HOME

THE big woodpile between the barn and the henhouse in the farmyard Billy Mink had discovered, was a regular castle for Billy. That is what it was, a regular castle. Billy is so slim that he could slip through the openings between the sticks in much the same way that Striped Chipmunk pops in and out between the stones of the old stone wall. Billy doesn't need much room, and he soon found that down underneath that wood were little chambers plenty big enough for him to curl up in.

The first thing he did was to make himself thoroughly acquainted with that woodpile. He found every opening that led into or under it. He learned every little passage it contained. He picked out one of the best of the little chambers down underneath in which to curl up to sleep when he was tired. No one could get at him under that woodpile. He felt as safe there as ever he had felt anywhere in all his life. It made him chuckle to think how safe he was there, and all the time living right close to those two-legged creatures called men, who delight in killing such little people, as Billy.

As soon as he had become thoroughly familiar with that woodpile, Billy set out to explore the surroundings. His new home suited him, but a home without food would be as bad as no home at all, so Billy started out to see what chances there were of making a good living.

First he visited the henhouse. It didn't take him long to find a way under the henhouse, and that there was a hole in the henhouse floor in a dark corner through which he could slip with ease. But Billy didn't go inside that night. Billy possesses a shrewd little head. He had had experience enough with men to know that it was best that they should not know that he was anywhere about. He knew that those hens belonged to men, and that the instant they found one killed or missing they would begin to hunt for him. So, though the smell of those hens made Billy's mouth water, he decided that he would see what other food was to be found.

From the henhouse, Billy went over to the big barn. This was another place just to his liking. Underneath it was dark, the very kind

THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

By Leicester K. Davis

© Public Ledger, Inc.

SQUARE TYPE

STUDY of hands by type, remember, is the important first stage through which you must progress to the more complicated meanings of lines and other elements within the palm. The outstanding characteristics of the seven types are treated individually in these lessons. Memorize them carefully in order that you may have an accurate gauge of hands you analyze.

Second. The Square Type of Hand.

The outstanding characteristic of this type is the squareness of palm from edge to edge and from the base of the fingers to the line of the wrist. The fingers are of medium length, well placed and symmetrical, with pronounced squareness of shape and very little taper. The nails are broad, well shaped. The joints are seldom prominent.

The thumb of the Square Type is much longer than that of the Primal Type, is set much higher on the hand and stands well out from the palm. The thumb of this type is always well shaped, the inner side of the nail joint sloping back to the nail edge in a firm but graceful arc.

The palm and underside portions of the fingers are moderately fleshed, but are firm and have none of the pillowed appearance of the coarser Primal Type.

Possessors of Square Type hands are nearly always practical, serious thinking, dependable folk who get things done. They may always be relied upon to finish the task which

Lesson for October 25

CHRISTIANITY AS LOVE

LESSON TEXT—Acts 18:1-4; I Cor. 13:1-3.

GOLDEN TEXT—And now abideth faith, hope, charity (love), these three; but the greatest of these is charity (love). I Cor. 13:13.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Why Paul Was Not Afraid.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Courage in the Night.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Christian Love Is and Does.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Love, the Law of Life.

By way of Athens the apostle Paul and his co-workers came to Corinth, one of the great commercial and social centers of Greece. It was a city known for its magnificent architecture and its patronage of the fine arts, but even more widely known for its abandonment to vice and wickedness. Here Paul, the apostle of faith, demonstrated that his faith was rooted in love, and it was to the Christians who were dwelling in this infamous spot of corruption that he addressed his supremely pure and beautiful discourse on love.

The first portion of our lesson finds Paul at Corinth, and provides an introduction to the study of the love chapter from I Corinthians by showing from his experience that

I. Love Is a Fact, Not a Theory (Acts 18:1-4).

The man whom we now recognize as perhaps the greatest preacher and teacher of Christian truth who ever followed the Lord Jesus Christ "came to Corinth." That great and busy city in all probability knew nothing of his arrival and cared nothing for his message. No one met the distinguished messenger of God and received him into a home of comfort and honor.

But God had not forgotten him. For we read that Paul "found a certain Jew"—a convert to Christ, and his noble wife, and "abode with them." Persecution had sent Aquila to Corinth, and he was there for Paul to find.

And the humility of loving service expresses itself further in the fact that the one who was to bring Corinth the glorious message of the gospel did so at his own cost. He labored with his hands at the trade which he, as every Jewish boy, had been taught by his father. Christianity does not ask, "What will ye give me?" but "How can I give?"

In his first letter to the church which grew up at Corinth we find the exhaustively rich chapter in which Paul so fittingly describes true Christian love. It is impossible in any short discussion of this passage to make a complete study of it, but we note

II. Four Truths About Love (I Cor. 13:1-13).

1. Love is superior to the other graces (vv. 1-3).

Life has many excellent gifts and men seek after them. How do they compare with love? Glowing eloquence, the far-seeing eye of the prophet, mountain-moving faith, self-sacrifice—without love they all lose their worth; in fact they are nothing. All the attainments of men apart from Christ are vain and empty.

2. Love is necessary to the other graces (vv. 4-7).

There is a sense in which love is not so much a grace in itself as the underlying and motivating power, which shows in every fine and noble expression of Christian character. Study these verses to see how patiently and unselfishly love works.

3. Love is permanent; other graces fail (vv. 8-12).

Some gifts will cease, for there will no longer be any need for them. They are temporary in their value but simply a means to an end. But love—it began with God in eternity and will go on with him through eternity. Why then do we labor and seek after these other graces so diligently and neglect the one grace which is above them all, for

4. Love is supreme (v. 13).

Even over those other graces which with love will abide, namely, faith and hope, love stands supreme. It is the fundamental of all fundamentals. Without it all else is empty and futile. And let us remember, this is not pious theory; it is fact and to be translated into daily life.

The Meaning of Love

Love means charity, humility, forgiveness, self-forgetfulness, kindness. To think kind thoughts of others and never to think unkind thoughts is, for me, the summit of righteousness, the secret of happiness and the only gateway to any success worth calling success. The oftener I read the Sermon on the Mount the more deeply am I convinced that here is the final practical wisdom. I disagree with the view that Christ's moral teaching will not stand the test of modern conditions. I think it will.—Arnold Bennett, in "Things that Interested Me."

HOW LONG?

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

HOW long has land and sea contended!

And has the contest ever ended?

The sea rolls out and bears the sand,

The sea rolls in and builds the land,

And yet, it seems to me, the strand

Grows every year a bit more splendid.

How long has right with wrong contended,

But little wrought, yet little rested,

Applause not always for the knight

Who fights forever for the right,

And yet, it seems to me, more bright

His honor every time it's tested.

How long must good the good endeavor,

With hate so stubborn, sin so clever?

Hate seems so hard, and sin so strong,

Yet does it matter much how long?

Because, it seems to me, the wrong

Must change, for right is right forever.

requires analysis, a high degree of concentration and perseverance. Which accounts, no doubt, for the predominance of this type among surgeons, lawyers and scientists.

Puttering Around the House—

Time-Wasting Work of Putting Away Things Others Have Used

WHEN a family is orderly, no one has to do much puttering about. When the members are not particular where they put their things, it becomes the undesirable duty of some person to spend much time in just this very thing, puttering. Hours are wasted daily in such trivialities as gathering up newspapers spread about, picking up and putting away gloves, hats, scissors, thimbles, pencils, etc. Whatever it may be that has been in use, and not put away by the user, or has been put in the wrong place, must be placed where it belongs or the house would reflect poor housekeeping.

Others. Putting things away part of the job connected with using the things, just as much as getting the things out, is part of it. The work is regular, legitimate and only becomes annoyance when left for wrong person to do.

Left-Over Jobs. No person wants her time wasted away doing the left-over jobs of others. Nobody enjoys having a person puttering around either. It is distracting to nerves. From both the angle of the person who putters about and those who have to endure annoyance of such activity, there should be some remedy found.

Remedies Suggested. Mothers can teach their children to put their playthings away when through with them. This is the first step to take. Then she can instruct the little to put their outside things away when they come in from outdoors. Children can get into the habit of orderliness by being made to realize that what they don't do, has to be done by mother who is very busy and often too tired to do the extra tasks. Affection will gain the day.

Breaking the Habit. Adults should consider how break themselves of the reprehensible habit of leaving what they should do, to be completed by others. If they really determine to stop this bothersome fault, they will decrease the necessity of puttering about the person who heartily dislikes the work, but who, for the sake of order prefers to do it rather than have disorder around.

Adventurers' Club

Hello Everybody!

"Animal Man"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

WELL, sir, I am pleased to note that Old Lady Adventure is still busy initiating new members in this club of ours. The newest is Distinguished Adventurer Edwin da Costa of New Haven, Conn. And Ed writes: "Many times while reading the stories in your column I have wished I might have some weird experience. Well, by Jove, Floyd, read this one."

You see, Ed is back from South America with the tale of just the sort of experience he'd always wished he could have. And now it's his turn in the story-tellers' circle, and he's going to dish it out to us.

Ed went to South America last November. Cold weather doesn't agree with him and he'd heard it sometimes got a little warmish down near the Equator. He landed in Brazil, hung around the coast for a while, and then took a six-week trip up the Amazon with some English explorers. Did Ed get into an adventure with those explorers? He did not. Explorers like quiet, peaceful lives compared with us folk who live in civilized parts of the world. Ed got into that adventure AT A HOTEL.

Hotel Whose Guests Lived in Stucco Huts.

After he left his explorer friends, Ed landed in Pernambuco and put up at the Derby hotel. "The hotel," Ed says, "was located about five miles outside the city limits, in an isolated section. Why they ever built it there, I don't know. Like all the other hotel buildings in mountain sections of Brazil, this one contained only an office, dining room and dance hall. The guests lived in individual stucco huts, called chalets, located away from the main building near the jungle's edge. The space between the main building and the chalets was filled with hibiscus shrubs, swaying palms, and other tropical plants of rare beauty, but at night one felt very lonely, all alone in one's stucco hut, and I was pleased to make acquaintance of another American who was also stopping at the hotel."

The other fellow was a man named Kellmer—a South American representative of a Texas oil concern. He and Ed struck up quite a friendship, and together they spent the long evenings strolling through the gardens, smoking and talking.

One evening at dinner, Kellmer told Ed about the Becho—an animal man. He was a strange creature whom the natives were all talking about—a lone robber who used an animal pelt for a disguise. HE HID IN DARK PLACES TO POUNCE OUT ON HIS VICTIMS. HE CARRIED A BIG REVOLVER AND HE WASN'T AT ALL SLOW ABOUT SHOOTING PEOPLE WHO DIDN'T DO WHAT HE TOLD THEM.

Decided They'd Better Have Revolvers.

It all sounded like a native's tall story of Ed and Kellmer. At first they laughed about it. But as the days went by and each one brought a new tale of some atrocity by the Becho, they began to wonder. And one day when the rumor was going around that the Becho had killed another man, Kellmer bought two revolvers and presented one to Ed.

A few more days rolled by. Then, one night while Ed was sitting in his chalet, he heard a knock on the door—heard Kellmer outside calling. "For Pete's sake, Ed, let me in!" Kellmer stood there, clad in a black-and-white zebra-striped bathrobe, his revolver in his hand. "THE BECHO'S ON THE GROUNDS," HE GASPED. "I HEARD VOICES AND FOOTSTEPS. LET'S TRY TO NAB HIM!"

It Looked Like Taps for Kellmer.

Ed got his own gun. He and Kellmer started a search of the hotel grounds. Says Ed: "The palms swished spookily in the breeze. The night was pitch dark, and before long both of us began to shake like hula dancers. Presently the sound of hoofbeats came to my ears. Then they faded. We secreted ourselves near the great iron gate by the roadside and waited. Suddenly, a shot rang out, shattering the stillness of the night. All at once we found that we were in no mood to be shot at by bandits. Separating we ran like deer, Kellmer for his chalet and I for mine."

Safe inside his hut, Ed nervously lit a cigar and awaited developments. They weren't long in coming. Somewhere outside he heard a loud jabbering in the native Spanish and Portuguese dialect. He looked out of the window and saw a crowd of people and half a dozen horsemen of the Guardia Civil grouped around Kellmer's chalet. He dashed over to see what was wrong and arrived just in time to see the native policeman dragging Kellmer forcibly from his chalet. Kellmer saw Ed. "ED," HE HOWLED, "TELL THESE NITWITS WHO I AM. THEY WANT TO STRING ME UP!"

Ed accosted the captain of the guard. "What do you want with this man?" he asked.

"Senior," replied the captain, "we have caught the Becho." Ed's eyes opened wider. "Why that's not the Becho," he protested. "That man is a guest at the hotel!"

"Becho in a Black and White Skin."

The captain shook his head. "Senior," he said, "the hotel watchman positively saw the Becho at the gate in a black and white skin. He fired a shot in the air, and the Becho ran into this chalet. He is the only man in the place, and if he is not the Becho, where did the Becho disappear to?"

For a moment, Ed was puzzled. Then he remembered Kellmer's black-and-white striped bathrobe and started to laugh. "I'LL SHOW YOU THE ANIMAL SKIN THAT WATCHMAN SAW," he told the captain. And he went in and got the robe. "Senior Kellmer was with me," he explained. We were hunting the Becho too, when the watchman saw him and took the bathrobe for an animal skin."

Kellmer was released then, and the police rode away with as much pomp and dignity as they could muster. "And the next day," says Ed, "I saw Kellmer coaxing a bonfire near his chalet and asked him what he was doing. He said, 'I'm burning that bathrobe—that's all.'"

Strange Sea Fish

One of the strangest fishes ever taken out of the sea was a hundred-pound bass-shaped animal caught by rod and line off Tahiti in 1928. With the exception of the teeth, every part of it—scales, eyes, flesh, bones and even its blood—was as green as grass.—Collier's Weekly.

Used Fans, Fancy Kerchiefs

Everybody carried a fan or an embroidered handkerchief in the left hand during the first French republic. The women, however, would no longer use either point or powder, due to the revolution. Powder they considered unnecessary and paint ridiculous.

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

Old Men Still Useful Fists and Razor Blades Youngest Grandfather Science Works Two Ways

Even in this day of flaming youth, mature age still has its usefulness.

The average age of our Supreme Court justices is seventy-one years. Twenty-six years ago Chief Justice Hughes took his seat on the Supreme Court bench. President Taft rendered public service by appointing him to succeed Justice Brewer.

Arthur Brisbane He left the bench to run for President against Woodrow Wilson, and would doubtless have been elected had he not gone to California. Had he been elected he would have remained in the United States and probably would have saved the country ten thousand million dollars that Woodrow Wilson shoveled out in his ecstasy of self-approval.

Rioting in London's "Mile End Road," in which the faces of men and women were slashed with razor blades and one man was thrown through a shop window, etc., seems rather "un-English," to put it mildly. Fist fighting has been encouraged by distinguished Englishmen, including judges, on the ground that it is "better than using knives."

It is better, doubtless, but what about the razor blades?

Germany honors its youngest grandfather, Herman Jahne, farm laborer, thirty-six years old. Married at seventeen, his eldest daughter became a mother at seventeen.

If all you want is children, that record is satisfactory, although any mouse family could beat it by 25,000 per cent, and almost any microbe by a billion per cent.

If good children were desired, it would have been better for Mr. Jahne to have his first child at 60, and his first grandchild at 70; at least that was Plato's opinion.

Justice uses science—the electric chair, the lethal chamber—to punish criminals. The criminal uses science to carry on his trade. An SOS signal, purporting to come from a yacht in distress, drew the coast guard away from the coast of Hawaii, making it convenient for smugglers of narcotics to bring in their cargo. Tear gas, comparatively modern, was used to empty a New York theater where there was labor trouble.

Japan, until recently convinced, mistakenly, that this country is her enemy, and for excellent reasons keeping close watch on Russia and her anti-Japanese Vladivostok airplane and submarine base, now turns suspicious attention to dear old John Bull.

Britain is supposed to have asked nine nations to protest against Japan's demands on China. That should not worry Japan too much. The same old John Bull got fifty-one nations to protest Mussolini's attack on Ethiopia; but, paying no attention, the able Italian went ahead swallowing Ethiopia; sending the little Haile Selassie to live in Switzerland.

In his villa at San Remo, the Duke of Borea D'Olmo celebrates his one hundred and sixth birthday in excellent health. He has been active in Italian court circles since 1841, before the beginning of the United States-Mexican war.

Mussolini tells 200 farmers and industrialists to prepare for a "decisive conflict" that will be necessary "to preserve order against anarchy."

Those that favor the "present civilization," he said, will have to preserve it. "We are at the dawn of a decisive conflict between the representatives of order and anarchy."

Dr. Irving Langmuir, brilliant Nobel prize winner, announced a "counterpart of life," produced chemically; interesting, probably not important. Until some professor can produce "some counterpart of life" able to think, manufacture telescopes, explore the universe and run for office, man's domination will not be threatened. A cigar store Indian is a "counterpart," but not an Indian.

European nations are preparing to recognize the Spanish rebels when they take Madrid and set up a national government.

The idea is to take prompt action and forestall the victorious insurgents' giving Spanish territory to Italy or Germany; the Balearic islands to Italy for instance, to use as naval and air bases, with Ceuta for Germany. This would upset the balance of power in the western Mediterranean and disturb old England, with Egypt and the Suez Canal or her mind.

Uncle Phil Says:

Wisdom Is Personal

Most of the wisdom one acquires one can't communicate to anyone else. Each man's life is his own. Dreams no more come true than most suspicions.

The "hand" who watches the clock will never be the man of the hour.

A monkey never seems to have any repose. Its life is all excitement as it is for some men.

Check-Rein Needed

One should be glad he has emotions; but keep a rein on them.

Most people love books—on the shelves.

No greater treasure is given to a man than a close-mouthed friend. It is the only kind that is fit to be.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

Salad dressings made from fruit juices and mixed with chopped dried or preserved fruits make delicious fillings for sweet sandwiches.

When whisk brooms have become worn, cut them down for sink brushes.

Cover small delphinium plants with excelsior or pine boughs before putting on dried leaves. They do not pack or stay damp as leaves do.

Never allow cold water to run into an aluminum pan while it is hot. If done repeatedly the rapid contraction of metal will cause pan to warp.

It is better to water evergreens and shrubs well a few days before transplanting. They will be transplanted more successfully if full of moisture.

To polish a table that has become spoiled by hot dishes, apply a few drops of essence of peppermint with a clean cloth and rub briskly.

A teaspoonful vinegar beaten into boiled frosting when flavoring is added will keep it from being brittle or breaking when cut.

When ironing ecru linens always iron on the wrong side. Ironing them on the right side makes them look faded.

For Russian dressing, mix two tablespoons of chopped dill pickles, two tablespoons chopped ripe olives, two tablespoons chili sauce and one tablespoon of catchup to one-half cup of mayonnaise. Serve on lettuce or vegetable salads.

(By Boys of Department)

On Monday night, November 2, at 7:30 p. m., there will be an important farmer's meeting held at the high school auditorium. The meeting will be relative to the problems of cotton production, and the principal speaker of the evening will be Dr. Faust, who is an authority on cotton production under irrigation.

After Dr. Faust's discussion Mr. Eminger will bring up the matter for discussion of an evening school for adults at Hagerman high school.

1. Contouring; 2. water developments, such as cleaning out springs, building of reservoirs, digging of wells, etc.; 3. water spreading to prevent soil washing; 4. range fences; 5. rodent control; 6. fire guards.

Before any development or improvement of this nature is started provided the owner or leasor wishes to secure payment from the government for this work, a county committee of the nature of soil building committee for crops must approve the intended project.

Payments for projects will be based on the carrying capacity of the range; in other words, owners of land having more edible forage, watering possibilities, etc., will be paid more than those who make improvements on poorer grazing land.

NOW You Can Read In Comfort AGAIN!

Most of us can recall days when it was easier, and more pleasant to read in the evenings. As we grow older the pupils of the eyes become smaller. Applied science tells us that as we grow older we need better light.

The best light known is glareless or well shaded. It is well diffused or spread evenly over the area used by the eyes, and there should be enough of it for the work or recreation at hand.

The new I. E. S. Lamps are designed to give plenty of well diffused, glareless light, on an extremely efficient basis.

You will be more comfortable after you try one, because you will be able to read so much easier and faster.
