Convention Completes New States' Constitution and Is now Adopting It

ADOPT NEW APPORTIONMENT

The constitutional convention has completed the work of formulating the constitution for the new state and all that remains to be done is to adopt it as it comes from the revision committee. Unless the rules are suspended it will take six days to accept the organic law section by section, there being three hundred sections in the constitution and a roll call vote is required according to the rules of the floor. The rules may be suspended on portions of the constitution, however, and less time consumed.

The apportionment of the state into eight judicial districts, 24 senatorial and 49 house districts was accepted by both Republicans and democrats and is satisfactory to the latter.

THE APPORTIONMENT

The apportionment as finally submitted to the constitutional Convention includes Lincoln County in the third judicial district with Dona Anna, Torrance and Otero counties. Quay county is eliminated from the district and Dona Ana county with Las Cruces is added in the new apportionment. Where the judges headquarters of the district will be is not stated. There are now headquarters at Alamogordo and Las Cruces, both in this new district.

The Senatorial Districts have been arranged and submitted so that the 15th district will comprise Torrance, Lincoln, Otero and Socorro, one senator together, and the eighteenth district also includes Lincoln and Otero counties, who will be entitled to one senator together. Lincoln county will get one representative in the house of representatives alone and one will represent this county together with Otero and Socorro.

THE COUNTY CORPORATION BILL

The County and Municipality Corporation Bill as proposed to the constitutional convention is given in part below. Those sections pertaining to the change of county seats and division of counties have been selected as of interest to the people of this county.

Section 1. The several counties in the Territory of New Mexico as they shall exist at the time of the admission of the said territory as a state, are hereby declared to be the counties of State of New Mexico.

Sec. 2. No county seat shall be removed unless three-fifths of the qualified electors of said county, voting on the proposition at a general election shall vote in favor of such removal, and three-fifths of all votes cast shall be required to relocate the county seat. The proposition of removal shall not be submitted in the same county more than once in eight years.

Sec. 3. No new county shall be established which shall reduce any county to a population of less than six thousand nor shall a county be formed containing a less population than three thousand, nor shall any new county be formed unless it contain within the limits thereof property of the value of one million dollars, as shown by the last preceding tax returns, and not then unless the remaining portion of the old county or counties shall each contain property of at least one million, five hundred thousand dollars of assessable valuation. The location of county seats in newly created counties shall be determined by a majority vote of the qualified electors residing within the boundaries of such newly created counties, respectively.

Sec. 4. No county shall be divided or any part stricken therefrom without first submitting the question to a vote of the people residing in that territory proposed to be stricken from the county, nor unless a majority of all the legal voters of said territory voting on the question shall vote for the same.

Sec. 5. There shall be no territory stricken from any county unless a majority of the voters living in such a territory shall petition for such division; and no territory shall be added to any county without consent of the majority of the voters of the county to which it is proposed to be added. But the portion so stricken off and added to any county or formed in whole or in part to a new county, shall be holden for, and obliged to pay its proportion of the indebtedness of the county from which it has been taken.

Sec. 6. The officers of each county shall be as follow: Three county commissioners; one Sheriff; one treasurer, who shall also be collector of taxes; one assessor; one county clerk; who shall be clerk of the probate court and also clerk of the county commissioners, ex-officio recorder; one superintendent of schools; one surveyor.

A DECISION NEXT WEEK

The County Seat Quo Warranto Argued Before Judge Wright, Wednesday

TAKEN UNDER ADVISEMENT

Judge E. R. Wright heard the arguments in the county seat Quo warranto proceedings Wednesday morning in his chambers at Alamogordo and has taken the case under advisement until next Thursday November 24th. The case was not quite completed at the hearing Wednesday and the attorneys were allowed until next Tuesday to file additional briefs. Among the additions necessary to complete the case will be a complete account to be furnished by county clerk J. G. Riggle of all moneys so far expended on the county buildings at Carrizozo.

Thos. Catron and Geo. B. Barber were present to represent Lincoln and John Y. Hewitt argued the Carrizozo side of the case. J. J. Aragon, Ira O. Wetmore and Ben Bechtel were also present at the hearing.

In his address to the attorneys, Judge Wright inferred, that should he sustain the injunction now on against the County Commissioners that he would require a good and sufficient bond to cover any and all damages that occurred by the delay in the buildings. This bond would have to be produced by the Lincoln side of the argument, be of gilt edge security and approved personally by himself.

The case now remains for decision with Judge Wright and it is expected that he will decide same within a week, as he has signified, and next week's issue of this paper, we expect, will contain the decision in full.

HOMESTEAD RULING

To all U. S. Commissioners: "You are advised that in the Decision of First Assistant Secretary Pierce, July 7, 1910, (39 L. D. 72), it was held that "Commutation proof is allowed only upon an showing of substantially continuous personal presence upon the land for a period of 14 months next preceding submission of proof; and residence prior to a period of absence under leave of absence granted the entryman cannot be added to residence subsequent to that period to make up the necessary fourteen months."

"In accordance with said decision, therefore, no final commutation proof can be allowed by this office in future except it be positively shown by such proof that residence and cultivation have been maintained upon the land embraced within the entry for the entire and unbroken period of fourteen months next preceding submission of proof."

THE SOCIAL WHIRL

Mrs. John F. Kimbell entertained the Whist Club most agreeably Wednesday afternoon. The usual order of play was followed with that of the social hour about the refreshment table. Mrs. F. Elliott and Miss Mayo Boykin were the two guests of the day. The prizes for the highest and lowest scores going to Mrs. Frank J. Sager and Miss Virginia Fenton, respectively.

—Mr. Don Peoples, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Peoples, arrived last evening from Colorado where he has been acting as civil engineer in an irrigation project.

THANKSGIVING COMING

Next Thursday Is Set Aside As a Legal Holiday. Gov. Mill's Proclamation

CARRIZOZO WILL CELEBRATE

Next Thursday has been set aside as a national holiday to give thanks for the past years products and Carrizozo is preparing to feast and celebrate the day in a fitting manner. During the day a big shooting meet will occur at the local gun club's headquarters, Duran sending down a team to meet the local shooters at the traps.

In the evening the ladies of the Rebekah Lodge and the Order of the Eastern Star have planned a big dance and midnight supper. Over two hundred invitations have been issued by the committee in charge and the affair is scheduled to be one of the events of the season. Arrangements have been made for piano music and a first class time is in store for all who take in both the supper and dance or either.

PROCLAMATION

In the year 1621, after the gathering of their harvests the Pilgrim Fathers on the bleak shores of Massachusetts Bay appointed a day of thanksgiving and prayer for the many mercies which Almighty God had vouchsafed them.

Annually since that time, in Massachusetts, a day in the fall has been set apart as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and the custom has spread until Thanksgiving Day is now observed in all the States and Territories of the Union, and the President each year issues a proclamation declaring the last Thursday of November to be a holiday and requesting the people on such day to give thanks to their Creator for the manifold blessings which they have received during the year; and

Whereas, the President has recommended by proclamation that Thursday, the 24th day of November, A. D. 1910, be observed as Thanksgiving Day:

NOW THEREFORE, I, William J. Mills, Governor of the Territory of New Mexico do hereby proclaim Thursday, November 24th, A. D. 1910, to be Thanksgiving Day and a legal holiday in the Territory of New Mexico.

The observance of this day is strictly an American custom and it should be observed by all. Schools will be closed and the people generally when they can do so should attend places of worship and give thanks to the Almighty for having safely brought our beloved country through another year: for having given us bountiful crops; preserved us from plagues and epidemics of a general character, and for having given us as a people so many comforts and luxuries. On said day let us also pray to God that like blessings may be vouchsafed our country and ourselves during the year to come.

Done at the Executive Office this 14th day of November, A. D. 1910. Witness my hand and the great seal of the Territory of New Mexico.

WILLIAM J. MILLS.
By the Governor:
NATHAN JAFFA,
Secretary of New Mexico.

HIS FRIENDS, those who have been undismayed enough to talk, declare that Roosevelt will still be a power in American politics and that the defeat of his candidate in New York is a mere trifle

The majority of the republican newspapers does not thus view his lambasting. The Kansas City Journal says:

"This year Theodore Roosevelt was the paramount issue in New York politics, and it was the knell of Rooseveltism and all that it stands for that was sounded in the returns of last week. Stimson was a mere figure head placed in nomination by Roosevelt and representative of 'my policies.' The candidate for governor on the republican ticket was overshadowed and all but obscured by the personality of Roosevelt.

Practically the last word of Colonel Roosevelt before the balloting, uttered with characteristic egotism, was the boastful assertion that he had the opposition beaten to a frazzle. The returns show that as a political leader and boss in his own state Roosevelt is an utter and complete failure. He did not succeed in making a creditable showing in his own state—a state normally republican—and even lost his own voting precinct.

The attention of the entire country was absorbed in the New York campaign. The result is fraught with far deeper significance than mere victory for state candidates. Upon this campaign hung the destiny of Colonel Roosevelt. Had he won he would have been powerfully stimulated in his campaign for the presidency. As it is he is repudiated and dispossessed of political prestige and his fallibility exhibited to the world. He can no longer point to his following at home. As a popular idol he has been badly damaged. Thus at the very day of its birth the 'New Nationalism,' infant of insurgency, spite and disorganization, has met defeat complete and overwhelming."

THE ABSENCE of the Initiative from the Constitution is causing considerable comment in the county among those prominent in both the Republican and Democratic parties, and several citizens have risen to inquire if Lincoln County's Delegation have kept their pre-election platform pledges. The Fusion Nominees, all of whom were elected without opposition, were pledged to the following platform: (1) Initiative and Referendum. (2) Direct Primary. (3) Corporation Commission. (4) Election of All Officers, including the Corporation Commission and Board of Equalization. Party politics were thrown aside in the election of these men to represent the county, two Republicans and one Democrat. Now the question arises, did they throw party politics aside after their arrival at the convention?

THE EL PASO TIMES still insists that the New Mexico constitution will go to a Democratic House for review and that the Democratic House will reject it because it contains no clause for separate schools. The constitution will go to a Republican House and a joint resolution of Congress will be signed by the President before March 4, 1911, to admit the two states. The new Democratic House does not convene and organize until nine months later.

SEEMS A LITTLE STRANGE, doesn't it? that, while the cost of living has doubled the world over in the last fifteen years, the savings bank deposits in the United States have doubled in the same time. These facts must be a little puzzling to the calamity howler.

THE OUTLOOK may not appear until Saturday next week on account of Thanksgiving.

The Referendum about as it will appear in the constitution is as follows:

The people reserve the power to disapprove, suspend and annul any law at any session of the legislature, except laws providing for the preservation of the public peace, health or safety, for payment of interest or principal of the public debt, for the current expenses of the government or of the maintenance of the public schools or state institutions, or local, or special laws, such power to be exercised in the manner following:

The legislature shall enact laws necessary for the effective exercise of the power hereby reserved.

Who Give Thanks?

By Anna Steese Richardson

THANKSGIVING DAY.
Humph! It's easy enough for the President to give thanks on $50,000 a year, but what about the rest of us?"

Can't you see her fling down the morning paper with the Thanksgiving proclamation in big type on the front page?

In imagination, can't you hear the scornful, embittered accent of her care-rasped tones?

And don't you know her sort?—drab-colored frock, drab-colored hair, drab-colored complexion and drab-colored views of life? Just one of "the rest of us," to whom the presidential salary of $50,000 a year represents a sum on which she thinks she could live comfortably to the end of her days.

She is one of the thousands, too, who think that every man, woman or child save themselves has cause for giving thanks.

Yet why is she so pessimistic? She has a position which pays a fair salary. She likes her work, or rather takes pride in the results of her labors.

She has reasonably good health and would have better if she would only learn to walk on the sunny side of life's broad street.

She is able to lay aside a small sum each week toward the inevitable rainy day and she could wear much more becoming clothes if she knew how and took pleasure in choosing them. No one insists upon her wearing dull colors, which make her look old and faded.

Every night she goes home to a tidy little apartment, presided over by a tidy little mother and supported in part by a cheerful younger sister. Here she finds the order she loves and the cooking which she enjoys.

For pleasure she has her church and its societies, a free library just around the corner, a weekly visit to the theatre, where she manages to see all the better productions, an occasional concert, as many invitations to evening card parties as she cares to accept; and yet she has no reason for giving thanks!

Why? Because she must earn all these things. She must pay part of the rent of the tidy little apartment. She must pay her own dressmaking and millinery bills from her wages. Often she must pay for her own theatre tickets and concert admissions.

She thinks the girls who have cause for thanksgiving are those whose fathers, mothers, brothers and sweethearts strew the pathway at home and abroad with roses and theatre tickets. She belongs to the large class of working girls who believe that only the girl of leisure has any real pleasures in life.

She does not know that the roses cast at the feet of the girl who is dependent upon parents and relatives are thick with thorns.

She has never heard a mother upbraid her daughter for extravagance one minute and then load the girl with new frocks, hats and gloves of her own choosing the next.

She never dreams that the girl who must look to mother and father for every penny is often afraid to ask for the one thing she most wants, because her parents prefer to think and plan for her.

This girl never knows the joy of doing just what she wants just when she likes—which the dun-colored lady does seven days in the week.

There are stout girls who weep because their mothers insist upon buying plaid silk frocks or blouses for them, and thin girls whose misguided mothers dress them in severely plain, unsoftened tailored suits.

The dun-colored lady may wear what she will. It is her own fault if her life as well as her clothing is drab.

She has made of duty a fetish, on whose altar she is sacrificing her youth and her pleasure.

She thinks that because she must work for her living, she cannot enjoy the pleasures allotted to the girl of leisure.

What that dun-colored little lady needs more than anything else is contact, physical and spiritual, with normal, healthy, happy, wage-earning girls of whom there are millions all over the United States.

Above all, she ought to know a beautiful character who recently came into my own business life.

Here was a woman close to 50, whose husband deserted her for a younger but certainly not more attractive woman. She had lived the absolutely sheltered life, never worrying as to where the next month's rent and the next week's meat bill must come from, always assured of her weekly allowance and content in her daily routine of home-making.

Then suddenly all was swept from her—husband, funds, sense of security, protection and privacy.

Some one told her she was wonderfully well preserved for her years. The compliment gave her an idea. She said:

"I've kept down wrinkles, manicured my hands, and exercised my figure into good condition, all for myself. I wonder if I could show other women how?"

She took a few lessons from expert manicurists and facial masseurs, had some cards printed, rented a tiny flat, moved in what was left of her old home-fittings, established her mother and picked up her new life with a smile.

I asked her today why she was thankful. She smiled her radiant, honest smile and answered: "Oh, for so much! First, to think that a way was opened for me to earn my living and thus be independent.

"Second, for my health. I feel so strong and capable again.

"Third, for my mother. She makes home for me now.

"Fourth, for the fact that I do not owe a dollar. Debt is such a terrible thing to face on Thanksgiving morning."

How the dun-colored little lady would have stared at our new-found friend.

"What's the use of being healthy and good-looking," she would ask. "If the man you had loved for years is not around to admire you?"

"And what is the use of being thankful for just a mother. Every one has a mother—and then this woman must support her mother from her slender earnings. That looks more like a cause for worry than for thanks.

"Then one deserves no credit for being out of debt when you have so small an income that you do not dare have anything charged."

Dun-colored little ladies always have their own arguments with which to fight any unruly feelings of thanksgiving and happiness.

But of a truth the wage earning woman today has much for which to be thankful. I recently met a white-haired woman, who ranked among the pioneer business women of New York.

She said that when she first opened her shop, the curious-minded, boys, men and women, used to hang round the door for a peek at her and often followed her on the street.

The American girl in business is particularly fortunate, according to the light of an Englishman, who has been studying sociological conditions in America.

He found himself one noon at a great white and gold restaurant in the financial district of New York City. All around him at other tables were well-groomed, well-dressed, well-behaved young women. He said to his host:

"And who are these young women? Do they buy and sell stocks?"

His host smiled.

"Not at all. They are our stenographers, clerks and private secretaries."

"Ah—" said the bewildered Englishman, "but—er—they look so like ladies."

Yes, we have reached the point where we may work for our living and still be regarded as ladies in the broadest sense of the word.

Breadwinning is today a badge of honor, and the woman who earns her own living is not a social outcast. So much snobbery has America lost through the womanliness and intelligence of its business girls.

So much have the little dun-colored ladies to be grateful for—independence, and honor and happiness in independence, if only they will follow the girls who have learned to walk on the sunny side of life's broad street.

All happiness is comparative. All causes for Thanksgiving are comparative. Do not look towards those who are better off than yourself when you are counting your beads of gratitude. Look rather on the state of those who may well envy you—and then give thanks.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

PROPER OCCASION FOR JOY

We Don't Need the Big Dinner and a Few Other Things, but Idea Is All Right.

Already the air is brisk with holiday excitement. Santa Claus has begun his annual "at homes" in the big department stores. The bargain counters resemble the scrimmage of a football contest. Our resolutions of good will toward fellow-men are as crisp and new as are the dollar bills on the contribution plate.

Christmas is coming, and Thanksgiving will soon be here—Thanksgiving, when we call a halt in our forward march of affairs, ostensibly to review the reasons why we're glad to be alive, but actually to gorge like anacondas, and spend the remainder of the week in torpor, or in the pious mood produced by indigestion.

For some of us Thanksgiving is like a Chinese festival, where ancestor-worship holds precedence in religious thought. The Pilgrim fathers take the foremost place among our household gods. And every good American among us who has Puritanic blue blood in his veins gives thanks, in secret, if not publicly, because he's different from other men of less impressive lineage.

The rest of us, for the most part, join in the general feast, for no other reason on earth except the day of the year and the dinner. And those of us who are alone think the occasion a harder one to face than a rainy autumn Sunday.

The poor of foreign birth question why a holiday for the giving of thanks should have been instituted at this ungracious season, when there is coal to be paid for, and food and clothing to be bought, when the privations of winter are haunting waking thoughts like baneful visions of the night.

Why should one give thanks just now, when everything is disheartening, they ask, ignorant of the traditions of the founding of this particular Thursday as a national holiday.

Oh, well, Thanksgiving is certainly well worth our while, aside from its historic origin. The rich need it to keep their hearts humble, and the poor need it to keep their hearts proud.

We don't need the sumptuous dinner. It's a nuisance and mistake, anyway, except in so far as it means cheer and fellowship.

We don't need the football game. But we do need to lift our faces to the sunshine of God's mercy and His love.

We do need a warm heart within our breast and that glow of spirit that comes only from an attitude of prayer and praise.

Besides, it's a splendid preparation for Christmas. It opens our hearts, and it unties our purse-strings. Often, likewise, it brings the first snowstorm, and gives us thereby a delight as keen as that we shall feel later, in March, when we catch sight of a flock of wild geese, and realize that spring also is on the wing, approaching.

And are we not privileged to have our sturdy, honorable past brought thus to our reflections yearly? Americans should be proud of their Puritan ancestors, not because of any social dignity which relationship with them confers, but because they stood for the principles which formed our mighty nation.

"The past is worth nothing," says Old Lim Jucklin, "except as it serves as a light for the future."

By WILBUR D. NESBIT

The first dead leaf came dancing down—
And all at once the skies were gray,
While over countryside and town
There sighed a breeze that seemed to say,
The knell of summer had been rung,
The long, long days of peace were gone,
That as an army's van outflung
The front of winter hastened on.
The bees went humming to and fro,
The flowers nodded in the breeze,
The grasses laughed and whispered low,
Their mystic, rustling melodies,
The hollyhocks in stately row
Stood as do sentinels that frown—
But none of all of them might know
The first dead leaf was dancing down.

The first dead leaf—it fluttered by
In madcap leaps as though 'twere glad—
But from somewhere there came a sigh,
That drifted tremulous and sad,
And for a moment all was still
Above the countryside and town,
And suddenly the air grew chill—
The first dead leaf came dancing down.

It blazed with gold and brown and red—
I knew whence came the golden hue:
The heart of summertime had bled
Upon the dying leaf, I knew!
It danced a measure blithe and gay,
Aflame with red and gold and brown,
A murmur sighed from far away—
The first dead leaf came dancing down.
Then came the first autumnal lull;
A shudder shook the trees and grass—
A cricket piped in accents dull
A dance until the leaf should pass.
But summer—surely summer wept
And brooded o'er her fading gown,
While onward autumn slowly crept
The first leaf came dancing down.

Shoveling Snow

The time of the year is approaching when the average man begins telling how he used to shovel paths through eight feet of snow at four o'clock on mornings when the thermometer registered so far below zero that the mercury rattled around in the bulb like a mustard seed.

That is the sort of man who will go out the first heavy snow and show his family how to clean the walks. He will have a nice new dollar snow shovel sent up from the store, and will begin operations by slipping and falling down the front steps. During his slide several bushels of snow will surreptitiously become inserted between his shirt and his undershirt. How in the name of time it gets there is a mystery as deep as the cause of the aurora borealis or the production of radium, but the fact remains that it gets there. The man will overlook it for the moment, however, and begin tossing great shovelfuls of snow to right and left, and he will be working like a steam plow when the old man who lives up street and who has a bad temper and rheumatism will happen along and get forty pounds of snow in his face. After the ensuing argument the average man will resume operations. By and by his back will begin to ache, his neck to be stiff and sore and his arms to feel numb as though they had been paralyzed since he was ten years of age. But he will stick to it, for his wife and children will be watching papa from the window, and the baby will be pounding the window pane with its sticky fingers and goggling gleefully.

At last, after years and years of lifting and shoveling, the walks will be cleaned, and the man will straighten up painfully and start to the back door when his wife will open the front door and cry: "You left a little bit of snow behind the horseblock, dear!"

Put Him to Work.

"I wonder," said the Spanish inquisitor, at the masked ball, "where Mephistopheles can be? He and I came together, and—"

"I saw him about an hour ago," interrupted the courtier. "The janitor of the hall got him to go down to the furnace room to see what was the matter with the drafts."

BETSY'S THANKSGIVING GUEST

By BLANCHE TANNER DILLIN

SHOULD think people would know enough to stay at home on Thanksgiving! Any one of sense would know families like to be alone one day in the year." Elizabeth threw down the letter she had been reading.

"Why, Elizabeth, what's this all about?" asked her husband.

"I suppose you won't think it is anything, but it just spoils our day together. We weren't going to have any one here tomorrow except the family, and now Gertrude Allison has written that she will be out in the afternoon."

"Elizabeth, you ain't going back on your old school friends that way, are you? She won't be here for dinner, so I don't see why you should object to her coming for a little while, even if it is Thanksgiving."

"O, Tom, I didn't think you would lose all your sentiment so soon. You seem to have forgotten altogether that this is our first Thanksgiving in our new home." And Elizabeth pettishly wiped away a few tears.

"Here comes Don. Perhaps he can suggest a way out of your troubles," said her husband with evident relief.

"Hello, sis, what's the matter? You look as black as a thunder cloud. I see, had a quarrel with Tom, and the first year, too. You ought to be ashamed of yourself, Mr. Leonard."

"Don't be silly, Don," his sister pouted. "I suppose you will disagree with me just as Tom did. Here's a letter from Gertrude saying she will be here on Thanksgiving."

"Well, sister mine, may I ask the cause of your displeasure?"

"The cause! That's just like a man. Can't you see, either, that we want to be alone on that day?"

"Poor Betsy! Shall I telegraph, 'Only the family wanted. Others will please stay at home and—?'"

"Do stop your nonsense, Don. I suppose I am foolish, but I thought we'd have such a good time together." Elizabeth sighed.

About an hour before dinner time the telephone rang and was answered by Elizabeth.

"Hello! Who is it? O, Gertrude! Well, well, old girl, are you actually there? Glad? I guess I am. Just wait until I get you at arms' length. Coming out to dinner? Oh, that's lovely. And stay all night, can't you? Good! You needn't think I'll let you go tomorrow. You've got to give me a week at least. Won't we have a good time talking over old times? But you must stay. Don't be a minute late. Goodby."

"Oh, for heaven's sake, what'll I do?" asked Elizabeth, as she hung up the receiver with a nervous bang and faced her husband.

"Where am I going to put her, I'd like to know. There's nothing to do but make Don give up his room and go to the hotel. And, oh—I'll have to clean that room at once! It's the worst looking place I ever saw."

Half an hour later as Don mounted the stairs he was surprised to find his special sanctum undergoing an unusual process.

"Impossible!" he exclaimed. "Don't you dare to come in here!" his sister commanded.

"Certainly not if you don't wish."

"Go down and tell Nora to put on an extra plate. Gertrude is coming to dinner," Elizabeth added in a tone that left no room for comments. And Don obeyed, speechless for once.

Dinner was ready, but there was no sign of Gertrude.

"Let's sit down and eat," suggested Don.

"Yes, very likely!" his sister retorted, appealing to the little family gathering.

The bell rang. "There she is now, sis," said Don. "Go and give her a sister's welcome."

"I can't understand it," said Elizabeth, as she returned in a few minutes with an open letter in her hand.

"Can't understand what?" she was asked.

"Why, here's a special delivery from Gertrude saying she will not be in the city until tomorrow. What does it mean? She just telephoned me an hour ago that she would be here to dinner."

Don threw up both hands and laughed.

"Ha! Ha! Betsy, Betsy! I'll bet on Betsy every time!" He threw himself on the lounge and smothered his face in the pillows.

"Stop rolling round that way and tell me what the matter is!" Elizabeth commanded.

"You're a great girl! But then women are all alike."

"Tell me this instant what you mean."

Don rose from the couch, and dropping upon one knee before the offended mistress of the house he said:

"Sister, mine, forgive me if you can, but I couldn't resist the temptation."

"Get up! Get up, I say! Do you mean to tell me that you played that trick on me?"

"Betsy, you made such a fuss about Gertrude's coming that I thought I'd like to see how you would act if the lady herself should happen to announce such a mad possibility, so I went to the corner telephone—and found out!"

"Donald Warner, you are a mean thing—the meanest thing on earth!" His sister dropped into a chair and covered her face with her hands.

"Poor dear, it was a shame—a base trick!" Don admitted contritely as he patted her head and deferred to the faces of the smiling group. "But just think, sister, my room is cleaned," he whispered for her ear alone.

Gallant?

"Now, Mr. Blunt," says one of the ladies of uncertain age but positive looks, "I know just what you are thinking of as you sit here between us. You are thinking 'How happy could I be with either were 't'other dear charmer away.' Truly, now, aren't you?"

"Honestly, I am not," declares the brutal man.

Lost Its Charms.

"Hello," we say to our friend. "Aren't you living in Blinkville any more?"

"No. I led the reform movement there and put the lid on."

"Ah, made you unpopular?"

"No. Made the town to slow to appeal to me."

Just So.

"Every man has his price," remarked the moralizer.

"Perhaps he has," rejoined the demoralizer, "but it isn't every man who has his market."

Written Statement.

His Sister—And did she say she loved you in so many words?

Her Brother—That's what. Her words filled twenty-seven pages.

Games for Thanksgiving

Here are two Thanksgiving games that have come down to us from the old days, but they are just as full of fun as ever, and may be played by both young and old.

The first is "hot cockles." Any number of persons may take part in it—the more the merrier. Let one of the party put a pillow on a sofa or chair and kneel in front of it, with his face buried in the pillow so that he cannot see.

While thus kneeling he puts one of his hands on his back, palm upward, and each member of the party comes up in turn, and slaps his hand, not too hard, but just hard enough to make it interesting. Then the kneler has to guess who it is that is slapping, and when he guesses correctly the slapper takes his place, and so the game goes on.

The other game, says the People's Home Journal, is called "the passport." Seat the company in the form of a hollow square, leaving one person out. The party may occupy chairs in the middle of the room, or around a table, but they must be arranged in the form of a square.

Then give them a sheet and direct them to hold it up in such a way that it will be close under their chins and be stretched out as a level between them. In the middle of the sheet put a fluffy white feather, to represent the "passport"—a snowflake—and the players around the sheet, who represent the winds, begin to blow it about in every direction.

One player stands outside the square and tries to catch the feather, either on one of the players or in front of one of them. He takes advantage of the laughter of the player, who cannot blow the feather away, and having thus caught it, it becomes his "passport" to the player's place, who then, in his turn, tries his hand at feather catching.

If the feather is blown off the sheet it must be placed back in the middle.

His Favorite.

"I hear the champion prize fighter is a great lover of dogs. What is his favorite?"

"Naturally, it is a pug."

FOR SUNDAY SUPPER

HINTS ON PREPARING THIS INFORMAL MEAL.

One Hot Dish and the Rest Cold So It May Be Served at Any Time and Guests Help Themselves.

Informal suppers on Sunday evenings are the entertainments provided by one country hostess for her friends, and so successful have these affairs become that never is she without several visitors, and, as the meal is of a kind that can be served at any hour, guests have no feeling of being too late.

The hostess has but one servant, and allows her to go out every Sunday. It is easier to do without any service than to have that which is bad, the employer sensibly maintains, and declares that it would be demoralizing to work at other times. She allows too much latitude to the maid in the dining room on Sundays. So, after the formal midday dinner is over and the dishes washed, the maid lays the supper table and then departs.

Supper is either cold or there is but one hot dish, this being made in the chafing dish, and chosen with a view to not spoiling by standing in the hot water jacket. Curried eggs, creamed chicken or salmon, or something similar, is usually prepared, and incidentally, should any be left over, it is excellent for luncheon next day.

Besides this hot food there is always a vegetable salad and mayonnaise, selecting either cucumber or tomato. There is bread and butter and iced tea or coffee. The dessert is either berries, other fruit, or a kind that will keep for many hours without looking left over.

All these are on the table at once. There is no tablecloth, but a centerpiece, a dish of flowers, and candles. Plates are not placed at regular intervals, but left in a pile, one at either end of the table. Knives are also together, and so are forks, two sets being at either side of the table to save unnecessary reaching. The jug of iced tea and glasses for it are on a side table, and the dessert may be kept there also.

The usual time for going into the dining room is 7 o'clock, but as the supper cannot be harmed by standing, and there is no maid to be delayed, the hostess goes when she feels like it, and from then on to 8:30 friends drop in. Each person helps himself as at any buffet supper, and there is never an evening when all is not gayety and fun. Such entertaining is no tax on the hostess, and she sees her friends far more often than she would under other circumstances. Since automobiling has become more general, her home is more or less of a meeting place and Sunday night suppers have become an institution in the household.

Green Tomato Pie Mixture.

Four quarts green tomatoes chopped fine, drain, cover with cold water, simmer 30 minutes and drain again. Add two pounds brown sugar, one pound raisins, half pound citron chopped fine, one tablespoon salt, half cup vinegar, half cup butter. Cook this mixture until it thickens. When cold add one tablespoon cloves, cinnamon and nutmeg. Put in jars cold and seal. This is a good substitute for mince meat and it will keep all winter.

Oyster Cocktail.

Eight small raw oysters, one tablespoon tomato catsup, half tablespoon vinegar or lemon juice, two drops table sauce, one teaspoon celery, finely chopped, half teaspoon table sauce. Mix ingredients, chill thoroughly and serve in cocktail glasses, or cases made from green peppers placed on bed of crushed ice.

Devil's Food.

Boil one cup bitter chocolate, one cup sour milk, one cup brown sugar, set aside until cool. Beat to a cream one cup granulated sugar, one scant cup butter, add three eggs, well beaten, one cup sour milk. After this has been beaten add your cold chocolate, one teaspoonful vanilla, two and one-half cups of flour, sifted with teaspoonful baking soda. Be sure and use baking soda and not baking powder. Then beat all together. Bake in layers in a hot oven.

Best Ever Salad.

Take slices of pineapple (the canned preferred, as being more tender) lay each on a lettuce leaf, and in the hole in the center of each slice put a ball of Neufchatel cheese, and over this some mayonnaise.

Panned Oysters.

To pan oysters deliciously, plump a pint of them first in a couple of tablespoonfuls of butter and then turn in half a cupful of rich cream and a tablespoonful of sherry with salt and paprika.

Little Henry on Thanksgiving

by Wilbur D. Nesbit

THANKSGIVING is the time when turkeys go up to thirty cents a pound and everybody begins to think that before long they will hafta go broke buyin Christmas presents.

There are lots of people in the world that is too poor to be able to let the market-man skin them out of thirty cents a pound for turkeys, & so they otto be vary thankful.

Thanksgivin started away long ago when there wasent but a few people in this country and they lived away down 'east and there wasent any rale-odes so thay couldn't go home for Thanksgivin dinner, so thay concluded to have thare own Thanksgivin.

Thanksgiving.

Let us be thankful—not only because Since last our universal thanks were told We have grown greater in the world's applause And fortune's newer smiles surpass the old—

But thankful for all things that come as aims From out the open hand of Providence: The winter clouds and storms—the summer calms— The sleepless dread—the drowse of indolence.

Let us be thankful for the loyal hand That love held out in welcome to our own When love and only love could understand The need of touches we had never known.

Let us be thankful for the longing eyes That gave their secret to us as they wept, Yet in return found, with a sweet surprise, Love's touch upon their lids, and, smiling slept.

And let us, too, be thankful that the tears Of sorrow have not all been drained away. That through them still, for all the coming years, We may look on the dead face of today. —James Whitcomb Riley.

They was colonists and they colonisted on Pilmuth Rock, wich is on the edge of the ocean and costs you twenty five cents to see unless your ancestors come over on the Mayflower. The Mayflower was a boat that come from England once with a lot of people in it and a lot of clocks and spinnin wheels and things. Unkel Bill sez thare must have been a whole fleet of Mayflowers, becous he has seen enough clocks alone to fill 2 ships hisself. If your ancestors come over in the Mayflower your ma has got the right to sniff at somebody else that only got into this country by waitin till thay could come over in seven days and play poker all the way.

Unkel Bill sez they was so poor for a while that evry family had from ten to forty dogs.

We should all be vary thankful that we dont live in the Philipeen lands or hunt the north pole. In the Philipeen lands is the revolution of the natives & in the north pole is the revolution of the ertn on its axes, but thay dont have dotters of the revolution anywhere but rite here.

Mental Influence.

"How far is it to Glumpville?" we ask of the native who is leaning over the gate.

"Ten mile straight ahead," he answers.

"But we met a man a little way back and he said it was only two miles."

"Short, fat man, drivin' a flea-biten sorrel hoss?"

"That's the man."

"Did ye meet him or pass him?"

"We passed him."

"Thought so. He's drivin' a balker I traded him, an' he didn't want his hoss to know how much furdur it had to go."

In 1999.

"There seems to be quite a row in congress," says the first citizen, as he glides to business in his 1999 model flyer.

"Yes," answers the second citizen, tooting his horn vigorously to induce an ice airship to give him the way. "The Deep Breathing association is raising the usual howl about the conservation of the atmosphere."

AN INTOLERABLE ITCHING

"Just about two years ago, some form of humor appeared on my scalp. The beginning was a slight itching but it grew steadily worse until, when I combed my hair, the scalp became raw and the ends of the comb-teeth would be wet with blood. Most of the time there was an intolerable itching, in a painful, burning way, very much as a bad, raw burn, if deep, will itch and smart when first beginning to heal. Combing my hair was positive torture. My hair was long and tangled terribly because of the blood and scabs. This continued growing worse and over half my hair fell out. I was in despair, really afraid of becoming totally bald.

"Sometimes the pain was so great that, when partially awake, I would scratch the worst places so that my finger-tips would be bloody. I could not sleep well and, after being asleep a short time, that awful stinging pain would commence and then I would wake up nearly wild with the torture. A neighbor said it must be salt rheum. Having used Cuticura Soap merely as a toilet soap before, I now decided to order a set of the Cuticura Remedies—Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills. I used them according to directions for perhaps six weeks, then left off, as the disease seemed to be eradicated, but toward spring, eighteen months ago, there was a slight return of the scalp humor. I commenced the Cuticura treatment at once, so had very little trouble. On my scalp I used about one half a cake of Cuticura Soap and half a box of Cuticura Ointment in all. The first time I took six or seven bottles of Cuticura Pills and the last time three bottles—neither an expensive or tedious treatment. Since then I have had no scalp trouble of any kind. Standing up, with my hair unbound, it comes to my knees and had it not been for Cuticura I should doubtless be wholly bald.

"This is a voluntary, unsolicited testimonial and I take pleasure in writing it, hoping my experience may help someone else. Miss Lillian Brown, R. F. D. 1, Liberty, Me., Oct. 29, 1909."

An Awful Moment.

The company always included many delightful women, and I remember the consternation caused among them one day by Burnham, the scout. He explained that he attributed his success as a scout to the acuteness of his sense of smell; it was like a bloodhound's.

"There's no one here today," he affirmed, "who at any time anywhere in the future I could not recognize in the dark. Yes, I could tell you, and you, and you," nodding at an alluring group in modish apparel, "by the way you smell."

For an awful moment the conversation flagged.—McClure's.

The Test of Time.

Benjamin Hapgood Burt and U. S. Epperson of Kansas City were motoring in Long Island the other day and stopped at Evan's hotel in Douglaston. They ordered large quantities of raw oysters, some of which were thrown aside by the oyster opener.

"How do you determine when an oyster is bad?" asked Mr. Epperson.

"You wait a short time and if you have ptomaine poisoning the oysters were bad," said Mr. Burt. "If you are not ill they were good. That's the only safe way to tell good oysters from bad ones."

"Can you offer any security?"

STOPPED SHORT

Taking Tonics, and Built Up on Right Food.

The mistake is frequently made of trying to build up a worn-out nervous system on so-called tonics—drugs.

New material from which to rebuild wasted nerve cells is what should be supplied, and this can be obtained only from proper food.

"Two years ago I found myself on the verge of a complete nervous collapse, due to overwork and study, and to illness in the family," writes a Wisconsin young mother.

"My friends became alarmed because I grew pale and thin and could not sleep nights. I took various tonics prescribed by physicians, but their effects wore off shortly after I stopped taking them. My food did not seem to nourish me and I gained no flesh nor blood.

"Reading of Grape-Nuts, I determined to stop the tonics and see what a change of diet would do. I ate Grape-Nuts four times a day, with cream and drank milk also, went to bed early after eating a dish of Grape-Nuts.

"In about two weeks I was sleeping soundly. In a short time gained 20 pounds in weight and felt like a different woman. My little daughter whom I was obliged to keep out of school last spring on account of chronic catarrh has changed from a thin, pale, nervous child to a rosy, healthy girl and has gone back to school this fall.

"Grape-Nuts and fresh air were the only agents used to accomplish the happy results."

Colorado.

Reports show that during the last fiscal year the Camp Bird Ouray district paid twenty per cent dividends, amounting to £178,000.

The Hoosier City Mining Company, controlling properties in San Juan and Quay counties, is preparing for extensive work during the winter.

Shipments of ore from Colorado Springs for October, 1910, were 171 cars, against ninety-seven cars in the corresponding month of 1909, a gain of 77.3 per cent over last year.

The Topeka mine, of Central City, is outputting daily about fifty tons of ore which is believed to be the highest grade for the quantity that is being produced by any mine in the state.

The American Nettie mill Quary district, is practically ready to start and in a few days will be working full time. The Wanakah people have shipped two cars of crude ore to the smelter.

Holders of stock in Cripple Creek mines will be glad to learn that at last the Roosevelt deep drainage tunnel is actually completed, and that there should be a new lease of life for the big mines of the district.

Armstrong and Williams are getting out a quantity of very fine ore from the Harrison lode in the Lamarine tunnel, Idaho Springs. The material is a heavy galena carrying 60 per cent lead and good values in silver and gold.

During the years 1909 and 1910, the production of the principal precious stones in Colorado was as follows: Aquamarine, all grades, 50,000 carats; phenacite, 2,000 carats; amazonite, first-class, two tons; almandine garnets, twenty pounds; agates, 100 pounds; amethyst 300 pounds; rose quartz, two tons; epidote, 100 pounds; precious topaz, three pounds; smoky topaz, 275 pounds; rock crystal, 100 pounds.

One of the greatest strikes of the year has just been made in the Central tunnel by the Big Five Company, Idaho Springs. The Belman lode, owned by the Big Five Company, has been cut and shows seven feet of solid ore. A thorough test has been made of the ore clear across the streak, which shows values of $25 per ton. The Belman lode is the extension of the Freighter's Friend, the Gem and the Crown Point and Virginia, old producing mines which have produced in the past millions of dollars.

New Mexico.

The mines at Brilliant, Colfax county, now employ 125 men.

The Diamond coal mine at Gallup is now producing one hundred tons of coal a day.

At the present time the activity in the Mogollons has increased over 100 per cent compared to what it was a year ago.

The Rosedale Mining & Milling Company at Rosedal, Socorro county, contemplates the construction of a new plant.

The Ginnity lease on the Black Butte ground, Goldfield district, is in fine grade milling ore, and extensive shipments will soon be in progress.

The magnetic plant of the Tri-Bullion Company, Cooney district, has been shut down owing to the stripping of some of the gears on the roaster.

On the Stray Dog claim, Manhattan, Percy Nash and B. Francisco are operating the old Hudson lease. They are hoisting $30 ore out of the 75-foot shaft.

The Socorro Mines was the first company in the Cooney district to use modern equipment throughout its plant, and also to install electric power for the operation of its mine and mill.

Assays from the Twin Peaks property, Lordsburg district, taken across a vein four feet wide, yielded $48 per ton, part of the value being an ounce and a half in gold. From another place, where the vein is only three feet wide the assay was $267, most of the value being gold.

The Rincon Valley (New Mex.) Record says: "Prospectors and capitalists have been coming quietly to Engle and going out to the Black range section. Rumors have been recently verified by reports of rich strikes in some of the well known properties. In the United States Treasury, they have struck a four foot vein at the bottom of a 260 foot shaft which runs over $1,000 to the ton in gold and silver. They have over $600,000 worth of ore blocked out in the mine, and an approximate estimate of $200,000 in gold and silver on the dump."

CARRIZOZO OUTLOOK

CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO

GIRLS IN CITIES.

The young girl who tried dramatically to take her life in New York recently through disappointment and disillusion placed the blame upon the wrong shoulders. It in no degree rests upon either the business or public social side of American life, says Washington Post. The responsibility for such an outcome must be borne by those who are in duty bound to give their children right views of life. The sight of a young girl, however precocious, going to a city like New York without friends or advisers to whom she would listen, and very evidently head-strong and impulsive, there to spend two years writing a book and precious manuscripts which she romantically wishes to be buried with her, calls forth nothing but pity. But this sentiment does not obscure the fact that the girl was permitted to gain a false view of herself and her relations with the world. Acts such as hers in no degree justify the wholesale condemnation of the business life of our cities or warrant the sweeping statement of a young girl facing at once both womanhood and eternity in saying that "a girl cannot get along honorably in New York."

Still another use for automobiles. The town of Jamaica, L. I., had an unpleasant time when a main burst and the water supply was shut off completely. To say nothing of the annoyance, inconvenience and danger in private dwellings, the orphan asylum and other institutions were subjected to especially distressing experiences. To meet at least partially the demand an automobile service was organized, the machines going with tanks, barrels and other receptacles to points where water could be obtained and bringing it to those in need. This was at best but a poor substitute for the regular system, yet it proved that in time of stress the auto is a valuable auxiliary.

Still they come, those Chinese students who are to be trained at American educational institutions. A party of sixty-eight has arrived at Honolulu. These students are some of the number sent by the Chinese government, the expenses to be paid from the Boxer indemnity money returned by the United States, says Troy Times. That kindly act has brought a rich reward in the form of the esteem, gratitude and confidence of China and the influence that will be exerted through the absorption of American ideas by the bright young men who are the beneficiaries of the arrangement.

Engineers at work on the Panama canal propose to leave as little as possible to chance. They are now engaged in experiments to determine the effect of sea water on concrete, an enormous quantity of which is employed in the construction of the canal. Concrete in different stages of preparation and with various forms of protection will be subjected to the action of the salt water and the results will be carefully noted. Probably there never was a great undertaking of this kind in which so many precautions were taken to guard against future risk.

Germans usually do things thoroughly, and the announcement that there is no cholera in Berlin, although the disease has broken out in the vicinity, no doubt testifies to the effectiveness of the safeguards employed. Modern medical science is usually victorious over the ailments once regarded as scourges, against which it was almost useless to contend. Yellow fever, cholera and the like are no longer the terror they were formerly.

General information concerning infantile paralysis is meager, but since a woman of sixty-six has died of the malady, the fact is plain that the scientists who gave it a name were not overcrowded with information either.

A Chicago professor says that the law is a hindrance to some people. If by some people he means burglars, pickpockets and grafters, we might add that that is exactly what the law is intended to be.

THE LEMUR A CHARMING PET

Eha in His "Naturalist on the Prowl" Describes Little Animal—Servants Afraid of Him.

Pets are of all sorts. One of the most amusing and attractive is described by Eha in his "Naturalist on the Prowl." This little animal was a lemur, and besides many gentle and caressing ways, it seemed as if it possessed a certain sense of humor. Says Eha:

"I used to take its soft hand and examine its pretty nails. Each hand had one long, sharp claw. Such a curious arrangement puzzled me, until one day a flea showed me the use of that claw. It bit the lemur under the ribs. I expect the little beast had reason to be thankful that nature had spared one toe when it promoted it to the order of four-handed animals.

There never was a more charming pet. He took life so gayly, and the antics were so original. When my man let him out of his cage in the morning, he would scamper straight to my bedroom, look round with large eyes brimming over with mild curiosity, and, lightly as a rubber ball, spring to my dressing table, where he would examine everything. Then he would bound across the bed and land on my shoulders, handle my ears gently, wondering what was in the hole, and thrusting in his long tongue to find out.

That was beyond human endurance, and I would roll the little fellow into a ball, wind his long, fully taut about him, and fling him into the bed. He would be unwound in a moment, and would skip away to explore some more.

His hind legs being longer than his fore, he walked slowly, with his head down; but when in a hurry he would stand up and bound along like a kangaroo, tail in the air, arms extended, fingers spread, looking like nothing one ever saw.

The servants regarded him as uncanny, and fled at his approach. He would give chase, and there never was finer sport than to see the fat butler in full flight up the long stairway, with the gleeful little demon after him, three steps at a bound.—Youth's Companion.

Here is a harmless preparation which surely will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach within five minutes.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your Pharmacist a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store here in town.

These large 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Gastritis or any other stomach disorder.

FINE IVORY NOW THE VOGUE

Toilet Table Accessories at the Present Moment Are Costly but Decidedly Smart.

All the toilet and dressing table requisites are now found in fine ivory. The only care needed is to rub off with a fresh, soft cloth, occasionally using a rag moistened in alcohol if spots occur. These, too, are more costly than silver, but are considered very smart.

The backs are monogrammed in black, brown, and occasionally in raised gold. Sometimes the sets are shown with floral decorations, but this is not so good style as is seen in many of the imitations.

White celluloid sets with a monogram in black, dark green, blue, or brown are now to be found in good designs with simple lines. The latest preparations are no longer combustible, and a full celluloid toilet set is a good investment for a guest room, for a girl at college, or for the chronic traveler; for use in a bag they are much lighter than any other ware.

The searcher after novelty can have her dressing table appointments in antique gilt, old Japanese lacquer, or Dresden china.

Such a selection is not for the average buyer, as, unless rare workmanship and corresponding cost are had, the results are likely to be poor.

Indians Arrested.

Santa Fe.—Six more Laguna Indians have been arrested near Magdalena for slaughtering game on the Magdalena and Datil forests. R. G. Parsons, another Pueblo Indian, was fined $500 for violating the game laws.

Otero County to Have New State Bank

Santa Fe.—The Citizen's bank of Tularosa, Otero county, has filed incorporation papers, the capital being $15,000 and the incorporators and directors G. C. Otis, Isaac Otis and Ella B. Otis of Tularosa, and Melva E. Staner of Clearwater, Neb.

Pathfinding Auto Leaves Path.

Albuquerque.—The postoffice car crossing the continent under the auspices of the Touring Club of America, from New York to San Francisco, had a little taste of the woolly West near Raton, Wednesday evening, when it skidded and plunged into a deep rock gully with perpendicular walls. It took seven hours' hard labor and several charges of dynamite to blast the rocks so the car could be taken out. The car was not seriously injured, as it alighted right-side up in the gorge, and it is expected to arrive here in a day or two.

Safe Burglars at Texico.

Albuquerque.—The postoffice at Texico, N. M., was burglarized by robbers, who blew open the safe with dynamite or nitroglycerine and made their escape with $200 in coin.

The door of the office was forced with heavy instruments and the thieves evidently worked quickly and skilfully. Nothing but money was taken.

Many registered letters were found this morning near the Santa Fe freight depot, where they had been thrown after they had been rifled.

The robbery occurred about 3 a. m., but the first known of it was when the postoffice employes went to work in the morning, found the place wrecked by the explosion and the valuables gone.

The Constitutional Convention.

Santa Fe.—At a session devoid of sensational features, the constitutional convention adopted the report of the committee on judiciary which provides a complete judicial system for the new state.

The efforts of the Democratic minority were mainly directed to reducing the length of term of the supreme court judges from eight to six years, their salaries from $6,000 to $5,000 a year, and of the district judges from $4,500 to $4,000, the creation of county courts in place of the probate courts and to have judges elected at a separate election on non-partisan tickets, the nominations to be made by petition. Each of these propositions was voted down.

The judicial system of the state will consist of three supreme court judges to serve eight years, only one to be elected at each general election, to receive $6,000 a year; eight district judges, to serve six years and to receive $4,500 a year; a probate judge for each of the twenty-six counties to serve four years, and whose jurisdiction may be extended to include minor criminal and civil cases; a justice of the peace for each precinct; probate clerk in each county, who is also to serve as county and as district clerk. The legislature is empowered to create juvenile, municipal and county courts; to increase the number of district judges after each census; to redistrict the territory and to increase the number of judges in each district.

The convention rejected by an overwhelming vote the proposition to empower future legislatures to provide a direct primary system.

Santa Fe.—The convention is working at fever heat.

It adopted five of the articles of the constitution: those on irrigation and water rights, on mines, on constitutional amendments, on public buildings and on counties and municipalities.

It again rejected, and this time by a vote of sixty-five to twenty-four, the initiative, the proposition coming up on an amendment to permit of the amendment of the constitution upon initiative petitions.

Disregarding the advice of former President Roosevelt, to make the constitution easily amendable, the convention adopted an article which will make it extremely difficult to amend the document. It will take two-thirds vote of each house of the legislature in a regular session to propose an amendment and a majority vote of the people, amounting to at least forty per cent of the entire electorate to ratify such proposal.

The position of mine inspector was created to be appointive and the age limit for employment in mines was placed at 14.

Santa Fe engine No. 2043, better known to old-timers as the "Uncle Dick" was brought up from Las Vegas last evening for repair work in the local shops. COLDS BREED CATARRH

Her Terrible Experience Shows How Peruna Should Be in Every Home to Prevent Colds.

Mrs. C. S. Sagerser, 1311 Woodland Ave., Kansas City, Mo., writes:

"I feel it a duty to you and to others that may be afflicted like myself, to speak for Peruna."

"My trouble first came after a gripe eight or nine years ago, a gathering in my head and neuralgia. I suffered most all the time. My nose, ears and eyes were badly affected for the last two years. I think from your description of internal catarrh that I must have had that also. I suffered very severely. "Nothing ever relieved me like Peruna. It keeps me from taking cold. "With the exception of some deafness I am feeling perfectly cured. I am forty-six years old. "I feel that words are inadequate to express my praise for Peruna."

Catarrh in Bad Form.

Mrs. Jennie Darling, R. F. D. 1, Smyrna Mills, Maine, writes: "I was unable to do my work for four years, as I had catarrh in a bad form. I coughed incessantly, and got so weak and was confined to my bed. "Peruna came to my relief and by faithfully using it, I am able to do my work. Peruna is the best medicine that I ever took."

Hence the Name. In the service of a Baltimore family is an old negro cook known as Aunt Sally, and not the least of her achievements is the preparation of sea food.

In the kitchen one day Aunt Sally's nephew, a nine-year-old lad from a point where crabs are seldom seen, was watching in breathless interest the old lady's deviling of a dish of such crustaceans.

"Aunt," said he, after much reflection upon this mysterious point, "does debbil crabs come from de debbill?" "No, chile," promptly responded Aunt Sally, "but dey is de debbill to make."

Pride. "Chicago has a lot of local pride, hasn't it?" "Well," replied Mr. Lakemish; "it depends on whether you are talking about baseball or the grain business."

He Was a Boston Boy.

“Your little boy must be very intelligent,” said a visitor to a Boston school teacher whose five-year-old son was forming Greek words with building blocks.

“Intelligent!” exclaimed the proud parent. “He is phenomenally gifted. As an example of his early erudition, what do you suppose was the first words he ever spoke?”

“‘Papa’ and ‘mamma’?”

“Stuff and nonsense!” ejaculated the father in a tone of disgust. “Why, the day he was 12 months old he suddenly laid down his algebra and said to me: ‘Father, the longer I live the more indubitable proofs I perceive that there is in Boston as much culture to the square inch as there ever was in the ambient area of ancient Athens!’”

Strong Preaching.

The minister's eight-year-old daughter was returning with her parents from church, where the district superintendent had that morning occupied the pulpit.

“Oh, father,” asked the little girl, her face alive with enthusiasm. “Don't you think Brother C. is a very strong preacher? I do.”

Gratified by this evidence of unusual intelligence on the part of his offspring, the minister eagerly inquired into her reasons for her statement.

“Oh,” replied the little miss, artlessly, “didn't you see how the dust rose when he stamped his feet?”—Judge.

THE WORLD IN PARAGRAPHS

A BRIEF RECORD OF PASSING EVENTS IN THIS AND FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

IN LATE DISPATCHES

DOINGS AND HAPPENINGS THAT MARK THE PROGRESS OF THE AGE.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

Washington.—The progress of the country as reflected by the records of population and harvests and the general conditions of international peace are things for which thanksgiving is especially due for the year 1910, according to the annual Thanksgiving proclamation issued by President Taft.

The proclamation is as follows: This year of 1910 is drawing to a close. The records of population and harvests, which are the index of progress, show vigorous national growth and the health and prosperous well-being of our communities throughout this land and in our possessions beyond the seas. These blessings have not descended upon us in restricted measure, but overflow and abound. They are the blessings and bounty of God.

We continue to be at peace with the rest of the world. In all essential matters our relations with other peoples are harmonious with an ever growing reality of friendliness and depth of recognition of mutual dependence. It is especially to be noted that during the last year great progress has been achieved in the cause of arbitration and the peaceful settlement of international disputes.

Now, therefore, I, William Howard Taft, President of the United States of America, in accordance with the wise custom of the civil magistrate since the first settlement in this land and with the rule established from the foundation of this government, do appoint Thursday, November 24, 1910, as a day of national thanksgiving and prayer, enjoining the people to meet in their churches for the praise of Almighty God and to return heartfelt thanks to Him for all His goodness and loving kindness.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at Washington, this, the fifth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ten, and of the independence of the United States, the one hundred and thirty-fifth. (Signed) WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT, By the President, Alvee A. Adee, acting secretary of state.

POLITICAL.

Judge Stimson E. Baldwin, just elected governor of Connecticut, in replying to congratulations of his class of the Yale law school, today reiterated his intention of bringing action against former President Roosevelt because of certain statements reported to have been made by the latter concerning Judge Baldwin. In a brief reply to the students Judge Baldwin said: “In my campaign I was assisted by a controversy I had with a certain ex-President, and I have come to the conclusion that this ex-President knows less law than you and I, and I am going to teach him some.”

President Taft is on his 4-day voyage to the Isthmus of Panama to get in personal touch with conditions along the big canal. He visited the isthmus just before his inauguration in 1909, but since then various executive and engineering problems have arisen and Congress soon must frame legislation as to rates of toll, form of government, the regulation of the sale of coal, disposition of the Panama railroad and many other things. The president expects to make various recommendations regarding the canal at the coming short session of Congress. Mr. Taft sailed on the armored cruiser Tennessee, with the cruiser Montanas as convoy. While officially known as cruisers, these vessels have the general proportions of the battleships of a few years ago, although they could not stand up very long against the modern Dreadnoughts.

ARCHIBALD'S AGATHA

By EDITH HUNTINGTON MASON
AUTHOR OF "THE REAL AGATHA"

COPYRIGHT 1910 BY W. G. CHAPMAN. COPYRIGHT IN GREAT BRITAIN

SYNOPSIS.

Archibald Terhune, a popular and insolent young bachelor of London, receives news that he has been made heir to the estate of his Aunt Georgiana, with an income of $20,000 a year, on condition that he becomes engaged to be married within ten days. Failing to do so the legacy will go to a third cousin in America. The story opens at Castle Wyckhoff, where Lord Vincent and his wife, friends of Terhune, are discussing plans to find him a wife within the prescribed time. It seems that Lady Vincent is one of seven persons named Agatha, all close girlhood chums. She decides to invite two of them to the castle and have Archie there as one of the guests. Agatha Sixth strikes Archie as a hand-painted beauty. Agatha First is a breezy American girl. Lady Vincent tells her husband that Archie Sixth already cares for Archie. He goes from Agatha Sixth the admission that she cares for him, but will require a month's time fully to make up her mind. Agatha First, neglected by Terhune, receives attentions from Leslie Freer. Four days of the precious time have passed when Terhune is called to London on business. Agatha First, on the plea of sickness, excuses herself from a motor trip planned by the Vincents. Later they see Agatha First picking flowers with a strange man. The Vincents discuss Agatha's seeming duplicity. The following day the party visits the ruins of an old convent. Terhune continues his attentions to Agatha Sixth. Then suddenly he transfers his attentions to Agatha First. Vincent scores him for his apparent fickleness.

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued.

He glanced at me in a half embarrassed, half triumphant way, much as he used to do in the first Castle Wyckhoff house party days, when he was about to tell me of his latest clue in regard to the identity of the real Agatha.

"Well, to be quite frank with you," he said, "the truth of the matter is that Agatha First won't let me alone!"

"Meaning," I said, "that she's in love with you?"

"Well, of course," he replied, removing his eye-glass and polishing it desperately as is his custom when he pretends to be embarrassed. "I wouldn't like to say that exactly. I couldn't say positively, that is, but to a man of my experience in such matters and knowledge of the fair sex, the indications are—"

"O rot!" I interrupted, rudely, I fear, but really the old boy is quite too insufferably conceited to encourage. It's an old falling of his.

"What makes you think so?" I asked after a moment's consideration. Although I couldn't quite believe that Agatha First was actually in love with him, still I wanted to hear his reasons for the conclusion. I didn't want to believe it, that was certain. I thought we had trouble enough on our hands as it was, without having to reckon with a broken heart on the part of Miss Endicott. And as this contingency assumed an air of probability to my mind, I inwardly vowed again never to undertake another match-making project. Gad, no! Let people marry themselves hereafter without any interference from me. I had had all I wanted of the thing this time.

"What makes you think so?" I repeated.

Arch shrugged his shoulders. "Can't help it. She's after me the whole time! I suppose she can't help fancying a man of my—er—if I may so—my attractions. I daresay I'm a revelation to her in comparison with the American college youths she has probably been used to. Experience and intellect does count, you know, Wilfred. Besides, the results show—" But I cut him short again.

"The results show," I said sternly, "that you're just enough of a chump to heed her mania for amusing herself with you—for I can't think she is in earnest." I had to tell him that for his own good, though I could have wished I felt surer this was the fact. "Her fondness for flirting with you flatters you so much that you'd run the risk of losing the girl you care for, just for the sake of having that egregious vanity of yours pleasantly tickled, as her apparent fancy for your society undoubtedly tickles it! Your old falling again! 'Pon my word, old chap, I thought better of you! Better of your prudence and foresight! Why, I couldn't have had less of an eye out for my own interests myself in the days when you and I were contending suitors for the hand of one of the Agathas, and you insisted that it should be the heiress and no other, and bullied me so because I didn't take the same view! And the Lord knows you made enough fuss about that!"

But when I reported the result of my remonstrance to Dearest, she said I hadn't been half severe enough with him, and it was with difficulty that I persuaded her that speaking to him herself would only make matters worse and Terhune more obstinate.

CHAPTER IX.

It was the very last evening of the time that had been allotted Terhune in which to select a wife. The following day was to see Solicitor Barnes at luncheon with us at one o'clock precisely, Dearest having invited him in accordance with Mrs. James' request that he should be the referee present at the house when the last minute of Terhune's ten days of grace should expire, and his expected presence at the meal brought it home to us what a decisive one it must of necessity be. Decisive was indeed the right word to use in connection with that meal! For if old Arch was still free and unaffiliated when he sat down to it, he might as well never have been nephew of his aunt as far as inheriting that aunt's property was concerned.

Dearest was inclined, being optimistic enough to hope for a consummation of his engagement to Agatha Sixth before that time—to make of the luncheon a sort of marriage-feast in honor of that event, and was already planning famous ices and cakes of a hymeneal nature. But Arch seemed not to view the approach of the cruto consider, a favorable answer, from Agatha Sixth on the morrow.

We had all gone to bed, and the night was well advanced, when I was awakened from the rippling kind of a sleep by the loudest kind of a bang you ever heard in your life. It came from the big drawing-room, which we did not often use, directly below my room, and woke me at once. It sounded for all the world as if some one or something had knocked over one of the endless number of statuettes, heavy vases or little tables that make a regular auction shop of the place, and I struggled into my bath robe in a minute to go and see what it was.

Dearest's room adjoined mine and I listened at the door to find out if she had been awakened, and hearing nothing from her, went on my way downstairs.

I didn't much believe it could be a burglar; I had a hazy notion that it might be one of the dogs who had gotten in there somehow. There are no end of the big brutes about the place and sometimes one gets into the house for the night in spite of Dearest. So I wasn't in the least alarmed or apprehensive, and was just about to lay my hand on the drawing-room folding doors, which were at the foot of the stairs, when I heard the lightest possible tread on the stairs behind me and a soft hand clutched my arm.

It was Dearest, of course. "O Freddy!" she gasped, "what is it?"

"One of the dogs, I expect," I told her. "What made you come?"

"Why," she said in an indignant little whisper, "I came after you, of course! Do you think I'd let you go all alone?"

"Why not?" I whispered. "I'm a crack until a space of some two or three inches wide was obtained, the doors rolling back softly on each side without any noise at all. Then we looked in, my wife making it possible for us to do this at one and the same time by kneeling on the floor at my side, and thus obtaining a chink to look through all to herself.

It was lucky she was so near the floor, I thought afterward, or she would certainly have fallen upon it with surprise when she beheld the thing our eyes asked of us to believe.

For there at the far end of the drawing room dimly distinguishable by the light of a lamp on the table, turned low, was Agatha First. We recognized her even in that light without fall, dressed as she had been that evening for dinner, and standing with his back toward us and his arm around her was a man in an attitude unmistakably lover-like and possessive. And through the hush of that late hour the low murmur of their absorbed voices penetrated the inmost recess of our staggered consciousness. Agatha First and a man meeting in secret at that hour!

What could it mean? Who could it be? The surprise of my discovery in the woods the day of our trip to Northbury was as nothing to this! But alas! We knew only too well this time who the man was, and without requiring any further proof such as we had had on the other occasion when we had waited until the discovery of the checked coat before we felt sure. In this instance we neither of us doubted for a moment the identity of Miss Endicott's companion in her equivocal position.

Freer had said good night and gone on down to the village at ten o'clock when the party had broken up. It could not be he. Then it must of necessity be Terhune. Indeed, what other man would have the opportunity for such a meeting? Who else was staying at the castle?

GREYHOUND JOINS COYOTES

Pet of an Oregon Farmer Responds to the Call of the Wild.

A once tame greyhound, owned by Martin Smith of Sandy, has become wild and now lives with the coyotes it formerly chased in the surrounding hills.

It has been three years since this greyhound heard and responded to the call of the wild, and it has never ventured back to his old home in Candy except to come to the outskirts to steal chickens from hen roosts.

The companion of this greyhound is a coyote and they have frequently been seen together running through the outskirts of Sandy. Several persons have tried to get photographs of the strange couple, but have failed.

The greyhound has lost all desire to return to his former home and has become even more wild than his companion. The animal has quite a history, having been raised from a puppy in the neighborhood. One day he disappeared from his home and several weeks afterward was seen with the coyote which has been his constant companion ever since.—Portland Oregonian.

Art Leads Language and Science.

The fact is that art is working far ahead of language as well as of science, realizing for us, by all manner of suggestions and exaggerations, effects for which as yet we have no name; nay, for which we may never perhaps have a direct name, for the reason that these effects do not enter very largely into the necessities of life. Hence alone is that suspicion of vagueness that often hangs about the purpose of a romance; it is clear enough to us in thought; but we are not used to consider anything clear until we are able to formulate it in words, and analytical language has not been sufficiently shaped to that end. . . . It is not that there is anything blurred or indefinite in the impression left with us, it is just because the impression is so very definite after its own kind, that we find it hard to fit it exactly with the expressions of our philosophical speculators.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

A Sparkling Novelist.

A New York editor, at the Century club, told a story about Robert W. Chambers, the well-known young novelist.

"Chambers went one summer," he said, "to Sunapee with his brother. At the Ben Mere Inn the aristocratic old ladies in rocking chairs, seated on the cool piazza that overlooks the lake, were very much stirred up by Mr. Chambers' arrival. Whenever he appeared they gathered about him and talked books.

"Chambers was always ready for them. He had always on his lips some witty saying to double them up.

"Oh, Mr. Chambers," cried an old lady one day, "I admire 'Lorraine' so much! I've read it eight times!"

"Madam," answered Chambers, with a bow, "I would rather hear you say you'd bought eight copies."

We Turned to the Folding Doors Again.

cial day with such a light heart. His thoughts at dinner that night were so absent, in fact, as to force one to conclude that the spectre of his aunt's third cousin seated upon the veranda of the house in Australia with possessive feet on the railing had become his familiar spirit.

It was this apparent anxiety of his and his feverish devotion to Agatha Sixth that utterly unprepared me for the unfortunate denouement later.

The evening had ended at last and Dearest and I had succeeded in starting a general move toward retiring for the night. We had been playing bridge—that is, the two Agathas had—with Terhune and the inevitable Freer, while my wife and I stood by and cut in now and then. We had observed with pleasure that the party of four had divided itself exactly as we would have arranged it ourselves; Terhune and Agatha Sixth were partners, as were Agatha First and Freer. Better still, Agatha Sixth seemed quite to have forgotten the unhappy episode of the waterfall, when Arch had so obviously missed his cue, and was openly basking in the return of her admirer's devotion. And Agatha First, too, seemed quite contented, not a whit disturbed by this attitude on my friend's part and mildly amused by the attempted gallantries of the rector's son from Wye. It was, in fact, a thoroughly happy little foursome, and as a spectator of its content I felt particularly pleased when I thought of what Arch had confided to me just before dinner. That he intended to obtain a definite, and what he seemed man. Besides, there's nothing to be afraid of!"

"O, but there is!" she assured me, "it's burglars—I know it is! They've come to steal the Wyckhoff emeralds, I know they have!"

"Burglars nothing!" I answered. "It's one of the dogs, I say. Besides, if it were a burglar that's all the more reason why you should go back!"

"And leave you to be killed all alone? Never!"

Sometimes, I admit it with a sort of fond regret, my wife is unreasonable.

"It wouldn't help any if you were killed, too!" I told her. "Besides, you'll catch cold. It's chilly down here, and I want you to go back."

She caught the tone of authority in my voice, a tone I seldom use toward her, and fell to pleading with me.

"O Freddy, can't I stay?" she begged. "It's so exciting! See! I've brought you a pistol and here's an umbrella for me!" She came close up to me as she spoke and the gleam of starlight from the hall windows fell upon her supplicating face and the old blunderbuss she had taken down from some wall and carried in her right hand, and the other weapon of defense she had mentioned in the other.

I laughed, if one may be said to laugh in a whisper, and hugged her for her spirit, armament and all. Then we turned to the folding doors again. Beneath them and through the crack between a faint light showed.

"Making himself pretty much at home for a burglar to light the lamp," I remember thinking. And I slowly and cautiously widened the aforesaid
