BACCALAUREATE ADDRESS

T. P. Grant Delivers Address to Graduates Sunday.

Before one of the largest audiences ever assembled at the Christian tabernacle Rev. T. P. Grant, pastor of the Presbyterian church of this city, delivered the baccalaureate address to the graduating class of Brady High school Sunday morning at 11:00 o'clock. The tabernacle was filled to overflowing, many being forced to stand throughout the entire service.

The address delivered by Rev. Grant was one of the most masterly, and he held the close attention of the audience throughout. The splendid thoughts brought out should prove an inspiration, not only to the members of the class, but to the entire audience as well.

BATTLE ROYAL.

Fats and Leans Engage in Swat-fest Yesterday.

At the cottonyard yesterday afternoon a ball game was pulled off, which, in many respects, had the big league games horned entirely off the board. One distinguishing feature of the game was the disparity in weight of the opposing teams, one of which was made up of the town heavyweights and the other of the bantamweights. The huskies had a team the aggregate weight of which was slightly less than a ton, and when they laid up against the horsehide it was necessary to call time to find the ball. This handicap was overcome to some extent by the slims in their superior knowledge of the fine points of the game and their ability to outpoint their opponents in base running.

For nine long innings they struggled without either side securing a sufficient lead to claim the victory. Each time the fats scored the leans came back in their half and tied the score, the game having to be called at the end of the ninth inning on account of darkness, the final result being 12 to 12.

The feature of the game was the hitting of George Baker, the big 280-pound barber, who laced out four hits out of four trips to bat, and was never satisfied with anything less than a two bagger at least.

The fats have challenged the team of the Brady High school for a game to be played at the cottonyard grounds tomorrow afternoon, and the challenge has been accepted. The game will be called at 5:00 o'clock, and the proceeds will be used in paying off the indebtedness incurred by the high school team in their spring track meet. General admission will be 25c, ladies being admitted free.

Following will be the line-up of the fats, the high school line-up being as usual:
Bill Snider, catcher.
Wilbur Lee, pitcher.
A. R. Holman, 1st base.
A. W. Tipton, 2nd base.
G. M. Bennett, 3rd base.
V. R. Jones, short.
John Plummer, left field.
M. P. Wegner, center field.

CHANGES AT COMMERCIAL.

S. S. Graham to Succeed E. L. Ogden as Assistant Cashier.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Commercial National bank held last week S. S. Graham was chosen as first assistant cashier to succeed E. L. Ogden, who resigned that position last week to accept the cashiership of the Brady National bank.

Mr. Graham has been with the Commercial National for the past two years. He was named as second assistant cashier at the meeting of the directors held the first of the year, and his promotion to succeed Mr. Ogden is a testimonial of the appreciation of his services by the board of directors. At one time he held the position of assistant cashier with the Brady National, but resigned about four years ago to accept the cashiership of the First State Bank & Trust Co., which he organized with local capital. Upon the consolidation of the First State and Commercial National about two years ago Mr. Graham was retained as paying teller and has held the position continuously since that time.

Mr. Graham will be succeeded at the window by Howard Ogden, while W. R. Davidson is promoted to the position of head bookkeeper, succeeding Mr. Ogden. E. A. Baze, who formerly held a position with the bank as bookkeeper, but who resigned about a year ago to enter business with his brother at Blanchard, Okla., has accepted his old position, having arrived from Oklahoma yesterday morning.

E. L. Ogden will probably assume his duties at the Brady National the latter part of the week.

HILL AND EXALL.

Interesting Comparison of Views on Agriculture of These Men.

James J. Hill, multimillionaire, master financier, empire builder of the North, is giving the American people the cold facts as to their future in relation to agricultural development in the United States, and these facts so closely paralleled the teachings of Henry Exall that a statement of the two together is more than interesting. With reference to the things to be done, their views are also the same.

For instance, James J. Hill recently wrote to the editor of a national farm periodical:

"You ask me to name the essential things that must be done to conserve the soil, and at the same time to give its cultivator a large and increasing return. I have stated them many times. It is an old story. The essentials are:

"Rotation of crops.

"Thorough cultivation.

"Chemical soil analysis to discover in what elements of fertility, if any, it is deficient, and supplying them.

"The keeping of live stock and the liberal use of barnyard manure.

"The selection of only the best products for use as seed, and a careful test of germination before planting.

"Always more and better cultivation."

Paralleling these, are the teachings of Henry Exall:

"A well planned rotation of crops, including cowpeas.

"Deep fall plowing, and maintaining the soil mulch during the growing season—in other words, rapid, thorough cultivation.

"Careful observation of the manner of growth and fruitage of the crops to discover in what elements of fertility, if any, the soil is deficient, and supplying them.

"The keeping of live stock and the greatest possible use of barnyard manure and of commercial fertilizers where barnyard manures are not available.

"The plowing under of cover crops to provide humus where livestock cannot be kept.

"The selection of seed from the best plants and use of the germination test.

"Continued cultivation until the crops have fruited."

James J. Hill has been very active in promoting agriculture along the Great Northern railway lines in the Northwest. His plan of popularizing scientific agriculture has been to have the farmers set aside 5-acre tracts in their farms and to pay them $8 per acre for farming them as directed, in addition to what they receive from the increased yields. The result has been that the scientifically farmed tracts have about doubled the yields of the remainder of the farms.

Henry Exall, through the Texas Industrial Congress, held statewide competitions in production and net profits and in co-operation with the business men of Texas. He did not require the farmers to follow directions, but made suggestions to them and urged them to make use, also, of the work of county demonstration agents, and of the A. & M. College and Experiment Station service. The contestants for the prizes have maintained averages of production about three times the state average.

Both men have exerted a powerful influence for better farming, their work causing farmers in great numbers to lay hold of the better methods worked out in the experiment stations and agricultural colleges of the states and by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

A Correction.

The attention of the editor of The Standard has been called to the fact that we were in error when, in mentioning the capture of Newton Worrell in last Friday's issue, it was stated that the indictment against Worrell was returned in 1907. Investigation of the records show that the indictment was filed in District Clerk Campbell's office March 4, 1911, while the offense with which he was charged was alleged to have been committed in 1908.

It is pointed out that the statement made might reflect upon the past record of some of the county officials, and as the policy of The Standard is to deal perfectly fair and impartially with all, the correction is gladly made.

SECURING GOOD STAND.

Most Important Feature In Profitable Farming.

Most farmers recognize the fact that it is necessary in order to make a good yield to have a good stand of plants upon the land. But the securing of a perfect stand is such a difficult thing with our usual methods that we are apt to consider what is really a poor stand as rather a fair one. In other words we are so used to poor stands that we do not know a good one when we see it. It is rare indeed to find a crop, especially of corn, that has not missing stalks amounting to ten per cent of the total number that should be present and when the average man recognizes that he has a poor stand the percentage of missing stalks will run as high as fifteen to twenty-five per cent. Of course under these circumstances our yield is predestined from the start to be just that much short. Many console themselves with the idea that a few missing stalks do not matter as the surplus feed will make the adjoining stalks yield that much better. If we have spaced our crops correctly at the beginning however this is a mistake and this land is that much wasted. On the other hand it takes eternal vigilance to prevent the growth of grass and weeds in these missing places and these not only take substance that we counted upon going to the plants but also serve to seed the ground with weeds that will give us trouble and expense to control the next year.

Securing a stand is comparatively easy when we observe certain rules but almost an impossibility when these rules are violated. First, of course, see that the seed are sound. Then, if we prepare the soil properly and place the seed in the ground properly when the temperature is right there should be no difficulty. But after the seed are up, whether there is a stand or not we are often tempted to save the little plants either allowing the vacant places to go unoccupied or attempting to make up for them by replanting. Of the two the former is generally preferable. As a rule the replant seldom does anything as it is shaded out by its more vigorous neighbors and the cultivations which have to be controlled to meet the older crop are generally not suitable to the replant. It is generally best, if the stand is lacking more than ten to fifteen per cent of being perfect, to plow the whole crop up and replant. The seeming loss of time by this process is not as great as would at first seem. In the first place the new planting comes up promptly and grows off vigorously partly due to the better condition of the soil and partly due to the fact that the first planting was probably too early. When this is done later cultivations can be made to suit the age of the plant and almost invariably this is preferable to trying to make a full crop with a poor stand.—Bulletin No. 6, Texas Industrial Congress.

CLAUDE CALLAN'S COLUMN
"CRACKS AT THE CROWD"

From Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Patriotism is a great thing, and without it governments could not stand. It reaches its height when a man announces for office, but there is scarcely a trace of it left when he sees his scalp dangling from the belt of his opponent. During the campaign he thinks only of the people, and if he is elected he still has a good word for them, but if the result of the campaign is a foreclosure of the mortgage against his air castle, he is willing for the people to go headlong to the heated realm. At first he wants to leave the state, county or precinct in which he resides, but gradually his mad spell is worn off. To keep patriotism always at a white heat it would be necessary to have an office for every man, but this is a little difficult under our system of government. If you want to notice the difference in candidates before and after the election, gather together two jokes—a good one and a poor one. The poor one will be easy to gather. Just select the first joke told by a man who stops you when you are in a hurry to tell "a good joke"—this will be just the kind for the dull, stale flat, boresome and pointless joke. Tell this to the candidate on the eve of the election, and watch the patriot laugh. You will have to dash cold water in his face to bring him to life. Then hunt up the same man the morning after his countrymen have slammed him with terrible force against the firm pavement. Tell him the good joke, and observe the look of contempt in his face. If you escape without violence it will be another evidence that "fortune favors fools."

We would almost be willing to go to the war if we could get to be a corporal—just for the pleasure of obtaining the title of colonel to hand down to our children. It looks as if we shall not be able to hand them down anything else.

Says the Abilene Reporter: "Human skill has constructed no engine that may do without an engineer, and, since the foundation of the world, God never has created a man who may perform his highest duty without woman." So our wives are the engineers. Well, we don't mind that much. If this old train goes off the track we shall blame it on the engineer for running us at a speed higher than our income justifies.

Says the Corsicana Sun: "Those who didn't hear Miss Rutherford missed hearing a lecture that would have wielded a pleasant influence over them during the remainder of their lives." We certainly regret missing it. We have heard lectures from the female of the species, but there was nothing about them that "wielded a pleasant influence."

The Merkel Mail wants to know if they can make a newspaper man fight. By no means. They can lead one to the front, but there the power ends. They can't make him fight or keep him from running.

"Don't be a fool," is the advice of the Tuscola Vidette, and the world would be a great place if people would only follow it. Not only do other people make a fool of a fellow, but he is always on the job himself.

Most paragraphs are urging people to "go" to church. By using the verb "go" they unintentionally admit that they themselves have not formed the habit. Now it comes perfectly natural for us to urge you to "come" to church.

About Scotchmen.
David R. Forgan, president of the National City Bank, always relishes a good Scotch story. A Scotch astronomer in one of the Canadian universities, he says, was describing to his class a certain star which was so remote that it "looked like a three-penny piece 100 miles away." One of his friends, struck by the comparison, met him on the street later. "Professor," he said, "anyone would know that you are Scotch." Then to the astronomer's inquiry he added: "Nobody but a Scotchman would know what a three-penny piece looked like 100 miles away."

"A Scotchman, and Irishman and an Englishman," says Mr. Forgan, "were on a train. It had been a long journey, but they reached their station at last. All three got out. The first thing the Englishman did was to look for some place to eat. The Irishman cast about in search of a place to get a drink. The Scotchman went back through the train to see if anybody had forgotten anything."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Conductor Habitually Obliging.

They were speaking of force of habit in the lobby of a hotel the other night when Charles W. Bryan, brother of Secretary William J. Bryan, told of an incident along that line.

One day two pretty girls rambled up to the platform of a country railroad station. Evidently from their dress and manner, one of the fairies was going to take the train and the other had come to see her off.

Eventually the train steamed into the little station, but the traveler seemed in no great hurry to get aboard. With watch in hand the conductor waited. Finally he looked toward the fair passenger impatiently.

"Madam," said he with another glance at his watch, "if you are going on this train you must get aboard."

"Just a minute," returned the passenger, with a flustered expression. "I must give my sister a kiss."

"Get aboard, miss," obligingly

That night we came home—we do this every night, some nights—and went up to Bellicose Bill's room. His other shirt was there, as was his campaign toothbrush, but Bill wasn't.

"He must expect the landlady," we mused, but just then we noted that Bill's hairbrush was not present. So Bill had gone.

We asked an adjacent cop if he had seen Bill. Yes, he had seen him, but Bill had gone around the corner so fast he had skidded and thrown a shoe.

We wired to Detroit and here is our friend's answer: "Just saw Bill's coattails going over the Canadian border."

And now we suspect Bill's breast no longer harbors that fierce desire to avenge. In fact, we feel that we will not see Bill again for several years.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Bellicose Bill Is Gone.

Last Christmas when Huerta was giving his dearest friends his best wishes and a bullet in the back a piece, Bellicose Bill was reading the papers between gasps of dreadful indignation. We had to call in a cop many times to prevent him from dashing right down to Mexico and avenging everybody in sight.

"Let me at 'em; hold me back," was Bellicose Bill's attitude.

The other morning we went out to the front porch, and after excavating the morning paper from under our daily bills brought it in to Bellicose Bill and showed him the headlines: "War With Mexico Certain." Bill didn't seem so all-fired bellicose. True, he was just as sore at Huerta and his gentlemanly gang of cutthroats, but his avenger seemed to be missing on a couple of cylinders.

"Of course you're going to enlist if the call goes out for volunteers," we said to Bill.

"Of course," said Bill, but his enthusiasm was not visible to the unclad vision.

FARMERS RAISE FLAG OF TRUCE

City Prohibitionists Warned Against Strife.

Agricultural Legislation Demanded.

Fort Worth, Texas.—The following statement defining the position of the Farmers' Union on prohibition has been issued:

We recognize that the liquor question is a problem that is entitled to the consideration of the public, but we submit that the issue has but recently been passed upon by the voters of the state and that the past three or four sessions of the legislature have done little else than wrangle over the liquor question obstructing other important legislation for almost a quarter of a century.

Hurles Defy at Obstructionists.

We are as much opposed to legislation favorable to the Antis as we are to legislation favorable to the Pros. The introduction of a liquor bill has invariably swept the calendar of all other measures, however meritorious, and has thrown the legislature into a seething mass of dissension. It is between these combatants that the Farmers' Union, with a membership of a quarter of a million, marshals its forces, raises a flag of truce and hurles a defy at either Pro or Anti, great or small, who refuses to salute the flag and warns all obstructionists of whatever character to cease their activities until constructive legislation can be secured for the agricultural interests of Texas. Legislation that will help the farmer must be made the paramount issue in this campaign.

Eliminate the Politician.

We recognize that the elimination of this question from the present campaign will paralyze the ambition of many party leaders, strike dead some of our foremost political orators and send many of our leading politicians to useful occupations for a livelihood, but the prosperity of all the farmers is more important than the preservation of a few contentious leaders.

It may be said that liquor legislation need not necessarily conflict with business legislation, but past experience completely blasts that hope. Then, too, it requires a different type of men to transact business from what it does to play politics. The next administrative and legislative branches of government should be a student body, addressing themselves exclusively to the solution of economic problems and they should not be disturbed with troublesome questions from the cities.

Laws That Will Build Needed.

The Farmers' Union, as an organization, will endorse no candidate for office, but its members will in the main support candidates who are in accord with its principles of peace and harmony. Perhaps seventy-five per cent of our members voted for state-wide prohibition when the question was last submitted, but they cannot live on water alone; they must have bread. There are things the farmers of Texas want for themselves far more than things they want to keep others from having. We need necessities for ourselves far more than to keep others from buying things that are unnecessary. We want the next legislature to develop the positive side of life, rather than the negative; we would like to hear the legislature say "thou shalt" to the strong and the capable as well as "thou shalt not" to the weak and vulgar. We want laws that build, as well as those that bind. We want strong men in the legislature who are able to deal with the tremendous forces of civilization rather than those who can gossip on the frailties of human nature.

The farmers of Texas will no longer be satisfied with platitudes or be further entertained with horrible stories of the wickedness of cities. Since the beginning of time, the cities have been seething in sin and they always will be. They have been blocking agricultural legislation in Texas for the past quarter of a century, asking for laws that will wash them whiter than snow. Will they please open up the gangway and let the farmer in?

State-Wide Prosperity the Issue.

We want to counsel the conservative and warn the radical that the paramount issue in this campaign is state-wide prosperity for the farmer and the more rapid development of the resources of Texas. We ask the farmers of Texas and the city business men to co-operate with the Union in its efforts to secure political peace and constructive legislation.

"No, I didn't hear about Samu-uels," the lady answered. "When you have anything to tell, why don't you tell it?"

"Yes, dear. Well Samuels was going home the other night, when a burglar shot at him and the ball hit a latchkey in Samu-el's vest pocket, and his life was saved. So you see what

"Indeed! If Samuels had

INEXPENSIVE FARM HOME.

Department of Agriculture Furnishes Free Plans.

The farm house is the most important building on the farm, and money judiciously expended in its planning and construction is well invested. The United States Department of Agriculture, through its Bureau of Farm Management, has been investigating conditions in the rural districts and in many instances found that the living apartments were inconsistent in cost with the value of the farm, and very often in striking contrast with out-buildings and farm machinery.

The Department of Agriculture is not only striving to make the business of farming more remunerative, but is also endeavoring to make farm life more attractive. A series of plans for the construction of farm homes has been prepared. In designing these homes, service, economy and attractiveness have been combined in a frame structure which can be built for $800 in a community where average prices for material and labor prevail.

The specifications call for a simple four-cornered structure. There is but one chimney and one outside entrance. Another door may be provided by sacrifice of wall and floor space or by increasing the size and cost of the house.

The government experts in planning these homes realized that the comfort and convenience of the farm woman was paramount. They drew their plans accordingly. The kitchen is the most pleasantly located room in the structure. It opens on a screened porch where a large part of the work may be done in the summer.

The water problem has also been carefully considered. Cistern water may be drawn from a bucket pump on the back porch or from a pitcher pump in the sink. Hot water is provided by a reservoir connected with the kitchen stove. The sink with only a drain pipe to be provided, has been found too inexpensive to be omitted.

The living and dining room is combined and affords sufficient space for the longest table the harvest days will ever require. It has two routes to the kitchen which are convenient for serving a large number of workmen. The Bureau of Farm Management is trying to help the farmer and will gladly furnish free plans to farmers contemplating building homes.

RAILROADS WILL HELP THE FARMER

Common Carriers Will Co-operate in Marketing Farm Products—Middlemen Charge Higher Rates for Handling Farm Than Factory Products.

By Peter Radford.

The leading railroad systems of the nation will establish market bureaus to assist the farmers along their lines in marketing their products. The following lines have acceded to the request of the Farmers' Union and announced their willingness to enter into active co-operation with the farmers in marketing their products: Missouri, Kansas & Texas, Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, St. Louis, Southwestern and other "system" lines.

The express companies have surveyed the field and the Federal Government, through the parcel post, has demonstrated the possibilities of the common carrier as a useful agency in marketing farm commodities. I consider the action of these giant business concerns in determining to co-operate with the farmers in marketing their crops, to be the greatest product of human thought on the Western hemisphere during the past year, and it demonstrates that the educational work of the Farmers' Union has brought the nation to a clearer understanding of the real problems of the farmer.

To give information on marketing is far more valuable than to give advice on production. There is a mutual interest between the railroads and the farmer which cannot exist between any other lines of industry. The railroads are the teamsters of agriculture and they are employed only when there is something to haul. Good prices will do more to increase tonnage than any other factor, and railroads want tonnage.

Agriculture has many inherent disadvantages which require combined effort to overcome in marketing. There are millions of producing units working independently and selling without knowledge of market conditions. The harvest is once a year, while consumption is pretty evenly distributed throughout the entire year, and most of the farmers, through custom and necessity, dump their entire crop on the market as soon as it is gathered. The problem of organizing and systematizing the markets is one in which the farmer invites assistance of all lines of industry friendly to their interests.

Farmers Bear the Burden.

The business of the manufacturer lends itself more readily to organization and the facilities for studying the markets are more easily available. The result is that the merchants are compelled to handle most staple manufactured articles at very little profit, and as a consequence the merchant must look to products which he buys direct from the farm for his profits.

The reports of the Federal Department of Agriculture show some very interesting information and enable a comparison between the cost of marketing products of the farm and those of the factory. A few items will serve to illustrate the general run. The cost of getting sugar from the refinery to the consumer is 9 cents on the dollar; the cost of getting tobacco from the factory to the consumer is 14 cents on the dollar. In selling a dollar's worth of eggs the middleman gets a profit of 50 cents on the dollar. In selling a dollar's worth of potatoes, the middleman makes 70 cents on the dollar; in selling a dollar's worth of fruit, the middleman gets 84 cents on the dollar, and on cantaloupes 82 cents.

Farmers' Bulletin No. 570, published by the United States Department of Agriculture, in discussing this subject, said: "The high price paid by consumers, ranging from 5 to 500 per cent, in some cases, more than the farmer receives, indicates that there is plenty of room for lowering the cost of farm products to consumers and at the same time largely increasing the cash income per farm, without increasing farm production. This condition is undoubtedly a marketing problem which will have to be solved by better organization of farmers and improved methods of marketing."

Large Shippers Influence Rates. In railroad rates the inequalities are equally as glaring. Rate making in its primitive stages was largely influenced by demands and arguments of large shippers, but the farmers were unorganized and seldom appeared before rate-making bodies, and the burden of expense in transportation lies largely against the raw products of the farm.

In banking, our securities are discounted against, as compared with the products of the factories and mines. The farmer is entitled to a square deal. The farmer is more interested in good prices and efficient service than he is in rates.

HELPLESS AS BABY

Wm. in Mind Unable to Work and What Helped Her.

Summit Point, W. Va.—Mrs. A. Belle Emey, of this place, says: "I suffered for 15 years with an awful pain in my right side, caused from woman trouble, and doctored lots for it, but without success. I suffered so very much that I became down in mind, and as helpless as a baby. I was in the worst shape. Was unable to do any work. I began taking Cardui, the woman's tonic, and got relief from the very first dose. By the time I had taken 12 bottles, my health was completely restored. I am now 48 years years old, but feel good as I did when only 16. Cardui certainly saved me from losing my mind, and I feel it my duty to speak in its favor. I wish I had some poor, suffering women, and could make them know the good it would do them."

If you suffer from any of the ailments peculiar to women, it will certainly worth your while to give Cardui a try. It has been helping weak women more than 50 years, and will help you, too.

Try Cardui. Your druggist sells it.
