BOLD ROBBERY.

Thief Makes Rich Haul in Brownwood Friday

The following account of the robbery of the Brownwood store of the Martin O. Curry Co., Friday night is reprinted from Saturday's Brownwood Bulletin:

At 7:15 o'clock last night an unknown man smashed the plate glass window at the M. O. Curry jewelry store, grabbed a tray in which there were fourteen diamond rings, dropped four of them in the window, and made way with the remainder. The total loss is $2,165, according to a statement by Mr. Curry this morning. The robber ran east, turning the corner into Mayes street, then turning into the alley that leads by the Gaither & Buck cleaning establishment. He was not seen after entering this alley.

At the time of the robbery that portion of Center avenue was almost deserted only two or three men being on the street. Jack Ragsdale was alone in the jewelry store, and was standing near the vault in the rear when he heard a terrible crash at the time to gather these up, and they were left.

Mr. Curry, who at the time of the robbery was in Brady closing a business deal, keeps a record of all his diamonds, and lists his losses as follows, all the rings being numbered with small engraved figures on the inside of the rings:

- No. 661, plain Tiffany ring, value $245.
- No. 6620, plain Tiffany ring, value $200.
- No. 6631, plain Tiffany, value $240.
- No. 6633, flat Belcher ring, value $75.
- No. 6634, plain Tiffany ring, value $130.
- No. 6635, plain Tiffany ring, value $400.
- No. 6637, plain Tiffany ring, value $225.
- No. 6638, plain Tiffany ring, value $225.
- No. 6641, plain Tiffany ring, value $200.
- No. 6627, plain Tiffany ring, value $225.

In fleeing the robber did not drop any of the rings because they were in a case which could easily be closed and carried in the hand. Officers have searched the route probably taken by the robbers, and have found neither rings nor case.

show window in front. He saw a man step back, saw the glass falling and then the man running. Mr. Ragsdale hastened to the front, saw that a robbery had been committed, and saw the robber turn into Mayes street around the corner of the Terry grocery. Running to this corner, Ragsdale saw the robber turn to the left and enter the alley.

The stolen diamonds were all set in rings and were in a small tray with a cover. The tray was made to hold twelve rings, and Mr. Ragsdale the day before had placed two more heavy rings on top of those in the case. It is thought that in picking up the tray the heavy rings fell out and dragged with them the two rings over which they had been thrown. The value of the four rings left is $870. In addition there were several diamond lavallieres in the window, ranging in value from one hundred to three hundred and fifty dollars each. The robber had no

Last night all outgoing trains were watched and some three or four suspicious characters were searched by officers, without result. Officers who have examined the facts in the case are certain that the robbery was committed by a professional who had planned his coup well. A man who had just passed the jewelry store says he passed a man at the corner of Mayes street, who stopped and looked after him a moment before continuing toward the store. A moment later the crash of the breaking glass was heard and a few seconds later the fugitive was seen entering the alley. The whole affair required very little time and the robber had no difficulty in escaping.

The noise of the breaking glass was heard for a considerable distance, and sounded very much like the report of a pistol shot. People rushed into the street expecting to see a pistol fight, and many are inclined to the belief that the robber shot a hole in the glass. This is regarded as improbable, and the officers believe that he used some kind of an instrument which was probably wrapped with cloth to muffle the sound. At any rate, the entire window was broken, leaving a hole some eight by ten feet. After waiting for the glass to fall out of his way, the robber coolly reached into the window, grabbed the tray of rings and fled.

The window was insured, but no insurance was carried on the stolen diamonds.

Jack Ragsdale says he thought when he first heard the crash that some one had accidentally broken the glass. From the position in which he was standing when he heard the chash he could not see the robber, nor could he see all of the window. He saw a man, who, he says, was a big man step back for an instant, and then begin running. Not until he had reached the front of the store and looked into the window did he learn that it was a robbery. Having no weapon conveniently near, Ragsdale was powerless to stop the thief, and because there was no one about whom he could leave in the store during his absence he could not give chase to the fleeing robber. The few people who were on the street at the time did not realize what had happened until it was too late to give chase, and the thief had no difficulty in sprinting to safety with two thousand dollars worth of diamonds in his possession.

Constable Hard Daniel thinks he saw the robber last night, but at that time he knew nothing of the robbery. Before 8:00 o'clock Mr. Daniel was coming to the business section of town from the Frisco, and passed a man who was going along the side of the street which the robber probably followed unless he changed his course after leaving the business section. As Mr. Daniel approached, the man stopped and apparently was tying his shoe until the officer had passed. After reaching town Mr. Daniel learned of the robbery and went back to find his man, but a search of all the premises in the Frisco and oil mill sections failed to produce any robber. Other officers worked faithfully a greater part of the night trying to find the robber, and watched all trains. Two men are said to have gotten on the east-bound Santa Fe, which left here at 7:45, with tickets to Austin. The men are said to have conducted themselves queerly, and an effort was made to detain them before they reached Temple. No arrests have yet been made, however, and it is likely that none will be made until an attempt is made to dispose of the stolen property.

If all reports are to be believed, at least fifty robbers ran in as many directions last night immediately following the robbery, but a story told today by autoists returning to Brownwood from the west is interesting.

Messrs. Gus Carey, Harry Negus and Howard Wilson were returning to Brownwood in an auto when they met, about seven miles from this city on the Banks road, a man racing westward on a motorcycle. The man was hatless, and was riding without lights. The autoists say he was not wasting any time, and passed them with the engine of the motorcycle humming loudly. The man carried a bundle fastened to the rear of the machine. As he came into view by the light of the auto lamps the man was seen to be past middle age.

BRADY, TEXAS, Feb. 2, 1915.

The Germans' new regulations for food cut deep at the economic life of the country. All corn, wheat and flour were ordered seized by the government by the first of February. Business in these commodities is forbidden after today.

The Japanese are certainly ingenious, and efficient experimenters. Our consul at Yokohama reports that one of their scientists has found that by giving the eggs of silkworms a bath in hydrochloric acid they are hastened in their hatching. By using this method ten broods of eggs may be secured per year, instead of two. Moreover, the worms spin nearly twice as much silk, and of a better fiber.

The progress of a town is not guarded by the wealth of its inhabitants, but by the uniformity with which they pull together when any important undertaking is to be accomplished. A man with a thousand dollars at his command and a love for his town in his heart can do more for the upbuilding of it than the millionaire who locks up his capital and snaps his fingers at home progress.—Exchange.

The meanest man that lives has some good quality. If we would look for this quality in our neighbor more, instead of condemning him for his faults so much, he would become a better neighbor and help to make a better world. Some of us, though, never are able to see the good points in others because we weigh their sterling qualities with rough hay scales, when we should employ goldsmith's accurate balances—hence many of our criticisms are not just and do more harm than good.—Roanoke Enterprise.

A child should be made to feel that his home is indeed a home, the happiest place in the world to him, not merely an outward shelter and resting place, but a center of enjoyment, sanctified and purified by love, the thought and remembrance of which shall be the safeguard of his life as he goes forth into the world, giving strength and proportion to his character and turning his thoughts to all that may prepare him for the heavenly home when the scenes of earth shall have passed away.—Roanoke Enterprise.

It is said that a case of tomatoes, costing several dollars if bought in Baltimore, may be put up on the farm for 56 cents. The cost of canning outfit for individual use does not exceed $12 to $15. It would certainly not pay to sell at retail, that is a can at a time, but in case lots only, the solicitor making a house to house canvas for orders, and delivering later by making one trip.—Ex.

There used to be an old saying: "God help the poor; the rich can take care of themselves," but in the case of John D. Rockefeller, this has got twisted. Last week he testified before the industrial inquiry in New York when it was necessary he be escorted by a body guard of detectives and the corridors were cleared of all persons while the heir to the Rockefeller millions was passing in and out.

"This spring," says the Comanche Chief, "when a man comes into the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Comanche and asks for a loan based on the crops he is going to raise next year, he will not be asked how big a crop of cotton he is going to raise, but how small a crop of cotton, and how big a crop of feed and food he is going to plant. Mr. Cunningham says that he will not loan a man money solely on his cotton crop, he wants his customers to plant feed crops and raise live stock. He is going to require that he raise his living at home. The cotton is the smallest basis of credit. He wants his customers to raise some cotton, but let it be the surplus crop and not the main one. Mr. Cunningham is doing this for the benefit of the farmers; he wants to loan money only to those who can pay it back, and he believes that if a man will diversify he can pay his debts. Following are questions farmers applying for credit will be asked: Number in family? Number pigs, hens, cows; amount garden, pasture, other areas; acreage corn, hay, cowpeas, other stuff and last, acres cotton."

The merchant who does not advertise pays a high price for the money saved. Goods grow more unseasonable the longer they stay in a store. The proprietor is getting no profit on them to pay his fixed charges. Rent, interest, taxes, light, and heat, and clerk hire expenses are running along every day, and must be paid. The only way to pay them is to keep the goods moving.—Temple Mirror. The Mirror might also have said that this is one reason why "more goods for less money" can be had by patronizing stores that do advertise.

SAVES DAUGHTER

Advice of Mother no Doubt Prevents Daughter's Untimely End.

Ready, Ky.—"I was not able to do anything for nearly six months," writes Mrs. Laura Bratcher, of this place, "and was down in bed for three months.

I cannot tell you how I suffered with my head, and with nervousness and womanly troubles. Our family doctor told my husband he could not do me any good, and he had to give it up. We tried another doctor, but he did not help me.

At last, my mother advised me to take Cardui, the woman's tonic. I thought it was no use for I was nearly dead and nothing seemed to do me any good. But I took eleven bottles, and now I am able to do all of my work and my own washing.

I think Cardui is the best medicine in the world. My weight has increased, and I look the picture of health.

If you suffer from any of the ailments peculiar to women, get a bottle of Cardui today. Delay is dangerous. We know it will help you, for it has helped so many thousands of other weak women in the past 50 years.

poor Belgians here and give to them the blessings of American liberty, but it came from the sources that want to bring these poor people here to work for us. That is the truth about it, and every man on this floor knows it. They want to bring them here so that they can beat down the American farmer, and go out and buy up cheap land and sell it for far more money than they could otherwise get for it.

"Shall we forget that the greatest heritage one generation can leave to another is the ability to procure a cheap home? In our greed and mad haste we bid for the population of every corner of the earth to come here and take our lands from the sons and the daughters of the poor people who hope to see the day when their boys and girls can live in a home of their own."

How to Advertise for Results

Mr. J. B. Sheffield, advertising director of one of New York's leading department stores, says, in the Fourth Estate:

"Probably more money is wasted in advertising by running consistently in a publication for a time and then suddenly dropping it, than in any other way. It amounts to deliberately throwing away the good will which the readers of that publication have built up for the advertiser's name and products.

"It is better to advertise moderately, but regularly, than to use larger copy spasmodically."

This is most excellent advice, for the secret of advertising success is to choose the medium that gives you the greatest number of probable customers and then get all of their business.

The Standard offers to advertisers a quantity of quality not to be excelled by any other newspaper. Ask any regular Standard advertiser.

ONE CHOP SYSTEM EVILS.

Like "Putting All the Eggs in One Basket."

All intelligent agricultural editors and other teachers of agriculture, have warned the public for generations against the danger of the one crop system of farming. Wherever land is particularly suited to any one crop, especially where there is a large section of it thus suited, and more particularly where it is held by landlords, the one crop system will creep in and will not be driven out unless a disaster should happen to the crop for two or more years in succession. One drouth, one invasion of grasshoppers or chinch bugs, or any other pest, will not cure it. A succession of judgments, so to speak, must come upon those who practice the one crop system before they will take up seriously the matter of reform, says Wallace's Farmer.

Just now a calamity has fallen upon the South, where cotton has for two or three generations been the main crop, and here it falls with the greatest severity because a very large proportion of the cotton lands of the south are owned in large bodies and rented to tenants who know how to grow cotton, but, as a rule, do not know how to grow any other crop. Inasmuch as we produce most of the cotton of the world the great demand for it has encouraged this one crop system of farming in the south.

A calamity came upon the south some years ago, in the shape of the cotton boll weevil; but by using improved methods, planters have been able to avoid that evil. The great disaster that comes upon them now comes through this lamentable war in Europe. We manufacture but little over one-third of the cotton we produce. England takes the largest portion of the rest, Germany the second largest, while France, Belgium and other European countries take the balance. Nearly all our cotton consumers are now engaged in war, and cotton has fallen to a point that leaves no profit in its production.

What to do with it is a problem. If the war were to close right away, the loss would still be very great, but no one knows when the war will close, nor when the cotton consuming factories of Europe can commence operations. Europe will need cotton goods, but the drafting of about every able-bodied man in the countries now at war, the breaking up of the system of transportation, the destruction of credit, and the disorganization of business, is bound to prevent our having a paying market for our cotton for at least one, and perhaps four or five years to come.

This calamity that has come upon the cotton growers of the south is a national calamity; for we have been depending on cotton to furnish exchange to the amount of $500,000,000, and the failure to sell this cotton changes what is known as the "balances of trade" between the United States and other countries. There is no immediate help for this. The bankers in the south have all these years been accepting cotton as security for loans, it being the one crop that has heretofore always found a market, and can be kept any length of time if properly cared for. It has been regarded as being "as good as old wheat in the mill" or, to use a more common phrase, "as good as gold."

If every cotton grower in the south owned his own farm and if he would bend his energies to growing other crops, such as corn, cane, oats and grasses of the various kinds, and could go into the livestock business, he would render a service not merely to himself but to the entire country. For the country is short of meat, and the livestock which must furnish meat. It is short on corn to feed them. The unfortunate thing is that the average cotton grower of the south does not own his land. He is dependent on his landlord; the landlord is dependent on the cotton broker; and now the cotton broker cannot market his products. The tenant is dependent on the landlord in order to live through the year. Therefore, the southern people, who have nothing to do with this war, like poor little Belgium, are the hardest hit by it; and in their sufferings the whole country suffers.

In another year, however, farmers in the south can do this much: They can grow their own vegetables; can grow their own pumpkins and lima beans. They can furnish at least part of their own pork, if they can raise enough money to buy a brood sow. They can grow green cover crops, which in the end will arrest the tremendous waste of fertility which goes on through cotton growing and continuous cultivation.

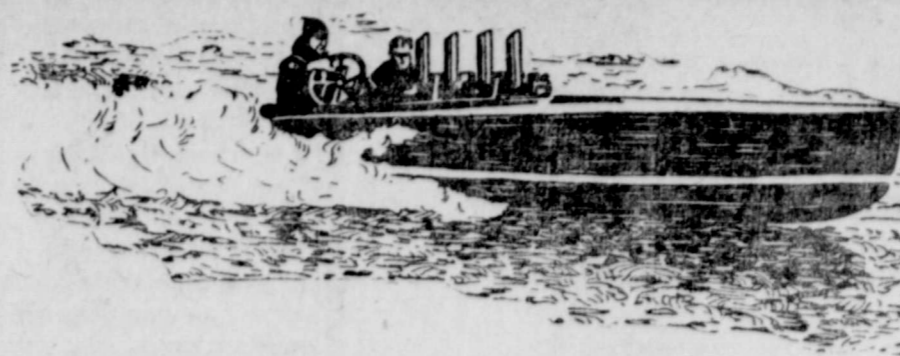

The southern farmers are entitled to the sympathy of farmers everywhere; but the prime lesson which should be borne in upon the southern people, and all other people as well, is the danger of depending on any one crop, of "putting all the eggs in one basket," that may be tipped over and the eggs all smashed.

Another thing which should be borne in upon the American people is the necessity of developing as far as it is possible, independence of the rest of the world. This is not altogether possible nor would it be altogether desirable. But we ought to so diversify our interests that they will give us insurance against eruptions occurring in other parts of the world.

Cari McCollum has been here several days from Brady the past week visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. McCollum.

Last Thursday the fire alarm was sounded, and it was found seven bales of cotton in the yard of W. M. Martin had caught fire from burning trash near by. The fire was soon extinguished though the cotton was considerably damaged.

The fire alarm called a crowd together last Saturday evening to witness a flue in the jail on fire. It soon burned out and no damage was done.

Sick headache is nearly always caused by disorders of the stomach. Correct them and the periodic attacks of sick headache will disappear. Mrs. John Bishop of Knoxville, Ohio, writes: "About a year ago I was troubled with indigestion and had sick headache that lasted for two or three days at a time. I doctored and tried a number of remedies but nothing helped me until during one of those sick spells a friend advised me to take Chamberlain's Tablets. This medicine relieved me in a short time." Miss Lucy Rector, one of the popular teachers of the Lampasas public school, spent Saturday and Sunday here with home folks.

The past week was one that will long be remembered by the lovers of snow and real wintry weather. As reported in last week's issue of the Star we had a light snow Monday morning. Then Saturday another snow fell and on Sunday morning fell the best of all. It is out of the ordinary for us to even have one snow that makes the ground white, but three in one week is great. Big, little, old and young availed themselves of the opportunity of having some real winter sport and the streets were lined with people out for a bit of pleasure. The sun came out all too soon, causing the snow to vanish.

MOTHER! IS CHILD'S

STOMACH SOUR, SICK?

If Cross, Feverish, Constipated, Give "California Syrup of Figs."

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomachache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

Why Farmers Need Long Credit

"The difference between the credit a farmer needs and the credit another business man needs was recently illustrated to me," says Judson C. Welliver, in Farm and Fireside. "A young stockman in a western state, owning a good farm, purchased a bunch of cows and a registered bull. He borrowed most of the money to make the deal, for three months, with a general assurance that his note would be renewed.

"At the end of three months the bank called the note. His summer pasture had gone into the stock. The cows had been bred. They were in no condition to be sold. Forced sale would have left him worse off than when he bought them. The bank needed and insisted on its money. Given till next May, that man would have been able to settle at a fine profit. Forced to close his deal in ninety days, he stood to lose heavily.

"That is no way to finance farm business. The merchant who turns over his stock of goods in a few weeks or months can do business on the ninety-day basis. The farmer, who requires a round year from the time he puts winter wheat into the ground until he can sell it, needs credit for corresponding long periods.
