BIGTHINGSFOR

The Year 1914, our first year under the firm name of the McCulloch County Real Estate Exchange, was marked by a very fair degree of success. So much so, in fact, that we are encouraged to try for BIG THINGS during the New Year 1915.

> We have ready for distribution a list of a large number of splendid propositions for the homeseeker and the investor and will be pleased to send one, upon application, to anyone who may be interested.

We are confident that our past efforts have established our reputation as Live Wires, and by our future activities we expect to acquire note as the Livest Real Estate Firm in West Texas.

> If you wish to buy, let us know the kind of proposition you desire, and we are almost sure to be able to match you a trade. If you want to sell, list with us-we'll get action on your property.

Keep a watch for the new propositions we have to offer from time to time. We are going to have some Red Hot Bargains-you'll have to be quick to handle them -- and if hustling wins, then Watch Our Smoke! We stand for Greater Prosperity in West Texas.

OUR SERIAL STORY

If you enjoy a gripping story, one replete with pathos and laughter, excitement and powerful climaxes from beginning to end, you will enjoy every installment of "The Call of the Cumberlands", the first of which appears on Page 6 of this issue of The Standard.

This stirring romance of the Kentucky mountains is written by Charles Neville Buck, one of the youngest authors of "best sellers" in America. Although only thirty years of age, he has traveled far and done much. A lawyer by profession, it was newspaper work that brought him in touch with the lawless feudists of the Kentucky mountains, and that association is to a certain extent responsible for the plot of his story. The story has been dramatized, and the play has met with unusual success throughout the country.

If you like a good story don't fail to read this installment of "The Call of the Cumberlands." If you read the first, you will need no further urging.

Negro Arrested.

Sheriff J. C. Wall arrested Vian West, a Houston negro, here Wednesday on a charge of theft from the person and lodged him in the county jail.

The crime with which the negro is charged is alleged to have been committed in Coleman county, where he had been employed as a cotton picker. According to the information received here by Mr. Wall, West snatched a purse containing between $50 and $60 from a man on the streets of Gouldbusk and "hot-footed it".

When arrested, the negro was attempting to make his getaway on an outgoing freight

Cutting Affray

While in the city yesterday Sheriff John R. Bannister of Coleman county received a telephone message from Mrs. Bannister in which he was informed of a serious cutting affray which occurred Wednesday afternoon at Shield, a small town in Coleman county near the Mc-Culloch county northern boundry line.

According to the message received here an old man named Dillingham was attacked with knives by Jim and John Malone and his clothing literally cut to shreds. Numerous wounds on the face, head and body were inflicted, but the injuries sustained are not considered of a serious nature.

The two men are said to have left immediately after the difficulty for the Onion Gap community, ten miles north of this city, and local officers have gone in search of them.

CHAPTER I.

Close to the serried backbone of the Cumberland ridge through a sky of mountain clarity, the sun seemed hesitating before its descent to the horizon. The sugar-loaf cone that towered above a creek called Misery was pointed and edged with emerald tracery where the loftiest timber thrust up its crest plumes into the sun. On the hillsides it would be light for more than an hour 'yet, but below. where the waters tossed themselves along in a chorus of tiny cascades, the light was already thickening into a cathedral gloom. Down there the "furriner" would have seen only the rough course of the creek between mossvelveted and shaded bowlders of titanic proportions. The native would have recognized the country road in bowlder upon which she had been sit these tortuous twistings. A great block of sandstone, to whose summit a man standing in his saddle could scarcely narrow alley littered with ragged reach his fingertips, towered above stones, lay the crampled body of a the stream, with a gnarled scrub oak man. It lay with the left arm doubled clinging tenaciously to its apox. Loftily on both sides climbed the mountains cloaked in lauret and timber.

Suddenly the leafage was thrust aside from above by a cautious hand, and a shy, half-wild girl appeared in the opening. For an instant she halted, with her brown fingers holding back the brushwood, and raised her face as though listening. As she stood with the toes of one bare foot twisting in the gratefully cool moss she laughed with the sheer exhilaration of life and youth, and started out on the table top of the huge rock. But there she halted suddenly with a startled exclamation and drew instinctively back. What she saw might well have astonished her, for it was a thing she had never seen before and of which she had never heard. Finally, reassured by the silence, she slipped across the broad face of the flat rock for a distance of twenty-five feet and paused again to listen.

At the far edge lay a pair of saddlebags, such as form the only practical equipment for mountain travelers. Near them lay a tin box, littered with small and unfamiliar-looking tubes of soft metal, all grotesquely twisted and stained, and beside the box was a strangely shaped plaque of wood smeared with a dozen hues. That this plaque was a painter's sketching palette was a thing which she could not know, since the ways of artists had to do with a world as remote from her own as the life of the moon or teries that made up the wonderful life of "down below." Why had these things been left here in such confusion? If there was a man about who owned them he would doubtless return and ears alert, and slipped around to the front of the queer tripod, with all her muscles poised in readiness for

A half-rapturous and utterly astonished cry broke from her lips. She stared a moment, then dropped to the moss-covered rock, leaning back on her brown hands and gazing intently. "Hit's purty!" she approved, in a low, musical murmur. "Hit's plumb, dead beautiful!" Of course it was not a finished picture-merely a study of what lay before her-but the hand that had placed these brush strokes on the academy board was the sure, deft hand of a master of landscape, who had caught the splendid spirit of the thing and fixed it immutably in true and glowing appreciation. Who he was; where he had gone; why his work stood there unfinished and abandoned, were details which for the moment this half-savage child-woman forgot to question. She was conscious only of a sense of revelation and awe. Then she saw other boards, like the one upon the easel, piled near the paint box. These were dry, and rep resented the work of other days; but mountains, and in each of them, as sity for contempt. in this one, was something that made her heart leap. To her own people these steep hillsides and "coves" and valleys were a matter of course. In their stony soil they labored by day, and in their shadows slept when work was done. Yet someone had discovered that they held a picturesque and rugged beauty; that they were not merely steep fields where the plow was useless and the hoe must be used. She must tell Samson-Samson, whom she held in an artless exaltation of hero worship; Samson, who was so "smart" that he thought about things beyond her un derstanding; Samson, who could not only read and write, but speculate on problematical matters.

Suadenly she came to her feet with a swiit-darting impulse of alarm. Her ear had caught a sound. She cast searching glances about her, but the tangle was empty of humanity. The water still murmured over the rocks undisturbed. There was no sign of human presence, other than herself, that her eyes could discover-and yet to her ears came the sound again, and this time more distinctly. It was the sound of a man's voice, and it was !

moaning as if in pain. She rose and searched vainly through the bushes of the biliside where the rock ran out from the woods. She lifted her skirts and splashed her feet in the shallow creek water, wading persistently up and down. Her shyness was forgotten The grean was a grean of a human creature in distress, and she must find and succor the person from whom it

Although from the man came a low you?" groan mingled with his breathing, it was not such a sound as comes from fully conscious lips, but rather that of a brain dulled into coma. Freed from her fettering excess of shyness by his condition, the girl stepped surely from foothold to foothold until she reached his sale. She stood for a moment with one hand on the dripping walls of rock, looking down while her hair fell about her Then, dropping to her knees, she shifted the doubled body into a leaning posture, straightened the limbs, and began exploring with efficient fingers for broken bones.

She had found the left arm limp above the wrist, and her fingers had diagnosed a broken bone. But unconsciousness must have come from the blow on the head, where a bruise was aiready blackening, and a gash still trickled blood.

She lifted her skirt and tore a long strip of cotton from her single petticoat. Then she picked her bare-footed way swiftly to the creek bed, where she drenched the cloth for bathing and bandaging the wound. When she had done what she could by way of first aid she sat supporting the man's shoulders and shook her head dubi-

He attempted to prop himself on his hurt hand and relaxed with a twinge of exgun to creep back into his cheeks, left tnem again, and his lips compressed themselves tightly to bite off an exclamation of suffering.

Ten minutes later his bare feet swung against the ribs of a gray mule and his rifle lay balanced across the unsaddled withers. Sally sat mountain fashion behind him, facing straight to the side.

So they came along the creek bed and into the sight of the man who still sat propped against the mossy rock. As Lescott looked up he closed the case of his watch and put it back into his pocket with a smile.

"Snappy work, that!" he called out. 'Just thirty-three minutes. I didn't believe it could be done."

Samson's face was mesklike, but as he surveyed the foreigner, only the ingrained dictates of the country's hospitable code kept out of his eyes a gleam of scorn for this frail member of a sex which should be stalwart. "Howdy?" he said. Then he added suspiciously: "What mout yer busi-

Some day, when a railroad should burrow through his section, bringing the development of coal and timber at the head of the rails, a sleeping fortune would yawn and awake to enrich him. There were black outcroppings along the cliffs, which he knew ran deep in veins of bituminous wealth. But to that time he looked with foreboding, for he had been raised to the standards of his forefathers and saw in the coming of a new regime a curtailment of personal liberty. For new-fangled ideas he held only the aversion of deep-rooted prejudice. He hoped that he might I've out his days and pass before the foreigner held his land and the law became a power stronger than the individual or the clan. The law was his enemy, because it said to him, "Thou shalt not," when he sought to take the yellow corn which bruising labor had coaxed from scattered rockstrewn fields to his own mash vat and still. It meant, also, a tyrannous power usually seized and administered by enemies, which undertook to forbid the personal settlement of personal

How Vaccination Saves Hogs

D. S. Burch, associate editor of Farm and Fireside shows why vaccination is of prime importance in hog cholera. In part he says:

"One man had 108 hogs, did not vaccinate them, and lost 98 from cholera.

"Another had 165 hogs, did not vaccinate them, and lost 150 from cholera.

"Another had 37 hogs, did not vaccinate them, and lost 31 from cholera.

"Here is a companion piece to the foregoing list. Note how these lists compare:

"One man had 186 hogs, had them vaccinated and lost 2 from

"Another had 111 hogs, had them vaccinated, and lost 0 from

"Another had 92 hogs, had them vaccinated and lost 2 from cholera."
