SECOND INSTALLMENT BILLION DOLLAR RAIN ON SCHEDULE

TIMELY RAINS HAD IN COUNTY PAST FEW WEEKS

The second installment of McCulloch county's "Billion Dollar Rains" arrived on schedule time this week. A good shower fell Tuesday night, and a second and heavier shower was had late Wednesday evening in the Brady section. The first rain, totaled about .15 of an inch, while the rain Wednesday evening amounted to .25 inches, giving a total of .4 inches rainfall.

While the rainfall around Brady was sufficient to thoroughly wet the surface of the ground, in various sections of the county even better rains were had. Of all points in this immediate section, Mercury is the only one to report a light rain, the precipitation there not being heavy enough to muddy the roads. The rain became heavier towards Placid and between Placid and Rochelle a good rain was had. Rochelle reports a nice rain throughout that section. Richland Springs reported a big rain Wednesday night and Thursday morning. Mason reported a good rain, as did also Voca and the Calf Creek community. About one-half inch was reported at Lohn, Waldrip and the northern portion of the county. Menard reported a good shower.

The rain was most opportune, the past week, of dry weather having given opportunity for most of the farmers to get their planting done. The earth was sufficiently moist in most parts of the county to bring up seed in a surprisingly short time. The past days' rains assure rapid growth of both crops and weeds, and there will be busy times ahead of all the farmers.

DAY NO. 3 DRILLING IN SMITHWICK SHALE—UPPER PART BEND SERIES

OIL MEN MUCH INTERESTED IN LATEST SHOWING IN DAY FIELD—INDICATIONS ARE THAT HALL-DUTTON LEASE UNDERLAIN WITH BEND FORMATION.

There is much interest aroused among oil men by latest developments in the Thad O. Day field on the Hall-Dutton tract, 11 miles north of Brady. After a careful study of the operations during the past several days, the well has been declared as drilling in the Smithwick shale, which is the upper part of the Bend formation. Jeff Meers, who has been making a close study of the well, has wired Mr. Day in Chicago to this effect. The Smithwick shale was struck at a depth of 925 ft., and the drill has penetrated 65 ft. of the shale so far, being now at 990 ft. According to Mr. Meers, between 200 and 400 ft. of this shale should be had, following which the drill should enter the Bend lime, where pay sand is usually found.

The announcement of this shale is a most important one to everyone interested in McCulloch county oil operations. It indicates the fact that the Hall-Dutton tract is underlain with the Bend series, which should assure new producing sands being had at a lower depth than heretofore drilled on this tract.

Mr. Day is at present in Chicago completing arrangements for the resumption of operations on the Day well No. 2, which has been shut down at about 700 ft. the past couple months.

C. W. Purcell, superintendent of operations on the Hyde & Howell well, drilling on the southwest corner of Survey 734 (Matthew Capps tract) reports the well shut down at 300 ft., awaiting on another crew. At 290 ft. the drill entered red rock, a cavity formation which requires constant drilling in order to avoid a cave. When the new crew arrives, a double shift will be run. The drillers are ready to spud in

LOST CREEK ECHOES.

Rain Will Carry Corn Into Roasting Ears.
Voca, Texas, June 3.
Editor Brady Standard:
Everybody is through laying by corn. The corn is looking very good, but will need some more rain to make it as late. Cotton is late, too, and the people are working out their crops. Some have been chopping out cotton. The cotton is looking very well.
Cut worms are numerous and cutting down lots of little cotton.
We sure had that good rain. I started this letter on the first and on the second we had one and one-fourth inches of rain. It fell in a way that all of it was taken up by the ground. It sure did come in the right time and in the right way, and has given us a fine season in the ground—just as the corn was beginning to tassel. This should carry it into roasting ears with all ease. It looks like a corn crop to me, and will also make fine grass.
The rain in the Fredonia country must have been heavier than here. The creek come down a good sized rise.
In our last Echoes, speaking of the closing of our school, I said we were closing the best school in the school's history; while it was fine, but I had forgotten at the time of one session taught by Miss Mary Todd (Spiller) of Brady, and in justice to her I want to modify the statement, for we think she is unexcelled as a teacher.

Mr. and Mrs. Boswell and son, of Llano, who at one time lived here, were here last Sunday visiting old friends.
Mrs. H. W. Ogle has been quite ill for several days, but is up now.
Joe Henderson and John Holloway have both been sick a few days this week, but up now.

COW GAP GOSSIP.

Farmers Ready for Another Million Dollar Rain.
Brady, Texas, June 1.
Editor Brady Standard:
We are about ready for another million dollar rain now and the Cow Gap prophet says it's coming soon. Maize and corn are in the stage where they need a good rain.
Judging from the number of people who went to Brady Saturday everybody is pretty well up with their work, or else the show was the attraction.
Most all of the Cow Gap people attended the play at Lohn Wednesday night and the graduating exercises Friday night. Both were fine.
The Nine people will have a play at Lohn Saturday night, June 12.
The young people enjoyed singing at W. S. Harris' Sunday night.
Misses Cora and Pearl Johnson, Lorene and Cecil Cottrell of North Brady and Miss Olive Dillard were visitors, at Newt McShan's from Saturday afternoon until Sunday afternoon.
Chas. Hilliard and family, Mrs. J. Newton and Miss Helen, spent the day at Mr. Ferris' Sunday.
The airplane at Lohn Friday was quite an attraction. Several went up.
Messrs. Victor Lohn and Hulin Hule went to Brownwood Saturday night for a short visit, returning Monday.
Homer Purdy and sister, Miss Lucy, called at the Ferris home Sunday afternoon and carried a bunch of young folks riding.
Newt McShan and family and Miss Olive Dillard visited at Chas. Steelhammer's Sunday afternoon.
Ernest Bissett from Doole visited homefolks Saturday night and Sunday.

LETTERS OF AN "ARKANSAW TRAVELER"—J. B. COTTRELL WRITES OF HIS TRAVELS

Here are a couple of interesting letters written by Friend J. B. Cottrell, who has been traveling and visiting in the good old state of Arkansas. J. B. has completed an enjoyable visit there, and is temporarily sojourning in Oklahoma with relatives, before returning back to Texas and McCulloch county. His friends will read with interest his letters:

"Editor Brady Standard,
"Dear Friend and Home Folks:— We have spent 19 days here with our kinfolks. They all seem to be doing well. We have plenty to eat, good springs, good timber—lots of saw mills. Corn and alfalfa are the crops they mostly raise here. We will leave today for Wardville, Okla. Have killed some squirrels and some ground hogs. Our old uncle and aunt are very old and feeble. They were so glad we visited them. One of our nephews owns a saw mill here, and lumber is selling for $27.50 per 1000 ft.—as good lumber as we have in Texas. All the wild fruit is simply fine; no orchards. In this part, Benton and Washington counties the fruit is fine—big orchards. Wishing Brady and McCulloch county citizens best of luck, am as ever,

"Dear Standard and Home Folks:— We were offered a tract of land and a fine spring of water as a gift if we would come here and live. To show you we are stuck on Brady country, we wouldn't accept. We visited several mines and saw mills, one mine, called the North Pole Mine. I have some of the mineral to show you when I get home. We spent one day at McAllister. The first penitentiary I ever saw is here. Also visited the coal mines. There I never saw the like of coal in my life. I saw coal enough to burn up the state of Texas. We have had several "close calls" on our trip. As we passed through Dallas, lightning struck a big tree, threw timber through the windows and blocked some of the passengers. It has been raining most all the time. They had a slide in Missouri one day ahead of us of some dumps. We have also passed under four tunnels—first 1100 ft and next three, one mile each. AUSTRIAN DESPOT IN ITALY

Excellent Reasons Why Commandant in Town of Buje Was Feared and Detested.

During the war, Austria, fearing and hating the Italians of Istria, placed every town under drastic military control.

It was the chief task of Colonel Vogelhuber, commander of Buje, to make the Italians feel his presence. They had felt it one day. Incensed by his latest decrees, they had come in crowds below his windows, discussing, gesticulating, angrily demanding an audience, until his troops had rammed them in the stomach with the butts of rifles and driven them off—off to their homes where they would find that during their absence a few more objects had mysteriously disappeared, woolen clothing, perhaps, or some pieces of furniture or a cherished picture. Not stolen, of course, but "requisitioned." It was neat.

He had had a good day but he would have a better evening. They had wanted an audience. Very well. That evening he would grant an audience to their leading citizens. More than that—he would dine them!

The leading citizens of Buje will not soon forget that dinner. The meal itself was excellent—infinitely better than any that they had had for months. It consisted of meats "requisitioned" from their own herds and flocks, grains from their own fields, wine from their own cellars. The host, Colonel Vogelhuber, sat at the head of the table, all smiles and benignity. He was solicitous that every one should have plenty. When the repast was finished, he rose.

He called the attention of the Italians of Buje to the fact that he had sent very few of them to Austrian internment camps. He emphasized his tolerance and liberality in this matter. His action, however, had been guided by a definite purpose. It might please them to be informed as to the purpose which he had had in mind.

"I do not care to intern you," he said, in a smiling climax, "because I prefer to execute you!"

"The troops of Italy are at present making some advance. I wish simply to announce to you now that before they ever reach Buje I shall have the pleasure of seeing every man of you shot. Good night, gentlemen. The pleasure has been mine."

Then, showing the yellow streak always present in such natures, he hastily summoned his soldiers, and every guest was escorted to the street at the point of a bayonet.

A gay, dashing wag was Vogelhuber. Dashing he was certainly, a few weeks later, when the Italian Bersagliere swept into Buje so suddenly that he did not have time to make good his promise, but found it prudent to run to save his own skin, even leaving a precious carload of stolen treasures behind him.—Willard Price, in World Outlook.

Thermometers Vary.

The readings of old mercury thermometers are often too high, while spirit thermometers with age are liable to give indications lower than the actual temperature. Shrinkage of the bulb, forcing the mercury up the tube, has been suggested as the cause of the high readings. For the opposite effect, several theories have been offered—such as taking up some of the spirit in an invisible film wetting the bore of the tube, or chemical combination of the spirit with the glass or evaporation through invisible cracks—but it is now believed that an explanation simpler than the early ones is available. Mercury thermometers sealed off when almost filled, contain practically no air, the tubes thus being given the reduced internal pressure favoring shrinkage. But spirit thermometers are sealed with the bulbs in a freezing mixture, so that they may contain as much air as possible, and such bulbs are constantly subjected to an internal pressure greater than outside. This gives the tendency to expand, allowing the spirit to fall too low in the tube.

The Helicopter.

A new flying machine, called a helicopter, has been invented, quite different from anything that mankind has yet stared up at, in that its propellers have a diameter of 51 feet, revolve so much more slowly than the more-and-more familiar airplane propeller that they are practically noiseless, are located above the car, and also take the place of the wings of the customary airplane. The propellers, in fact, are practically moving wings; and the machine, as described by Robert G. Skerrett in the New York Sun, presents quite a list of advantages over anything that has preceded it for air navigation. It can, it is declared, descend slowly, rise and come down without difficulty anywhere, carry a considerable load and is inherently stable. Aviation, after all, is still quite young, and it may possibly turn out that the helicopter is the next forward step.—Christian Science Monitor.

Clever Work.

The pupils of the second grade had been given a test in writing, and after it was over, the teacher requested them to take their copy home to show to their mothers.

The verse which Dwight had written was: "Little drops of water, little grains of sand," etc.

His mother examined his work and praised his effort. "But what is this little word dog doing up here in the corner?" she asked.

"Oh," explained Dwight, "I forgot how to make a 'd' and had to write dog to find out."

GOT THINGS DONE

Quality That Was Characteristic of Colonel Roosevelt.

Matter of the Removal of Old Railroad Station in Washington Recalled as a Proof of His Energy.

Since the death of Colonel Roosevelt, old-timers in Washington have been recalling many incidents illustrative of the tremendous vitality of the man, his determination to get things accomplished, and his unwillingness to let red tape interfere with the accomplishment of that which seemed necessary to be done. One of these incidents was recounted the other day by Col. William Boyce Thompson, chairman of the Roosevelt Memorial association. It was narrated with much appreciation by a congressman who didn't appreciate it so much when it occurred. It ran as follows:

The government was co-operating with the Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio railroads in the project for a new union station—the present fine edifice. The site of the Pennsylvania's old station—now the mall near the White House—had been purchased by the government, and it was proposed to raze the buildings. But congress had been held late in a special session, and the members were anxious to get home, so it was decided to postpone the letting of bids for tearing down the buildings until congress reassembled the next fall. This duty naturally devolved on the committee on the District of Columbia, which has charge of government property in the district. Meantime a major of engineers was placed in charge, as custodian.

When the committee held its first meeting at the next session of congress, the matter of letting contracts for the razing of the old station was brought up.

"Why, gentlemen," declared an astonished representative, "there is nothing to tear down. I walked past there this morning, and there's nothing but the bare earth where the old station stood."

The committee sent post-haste for the custodian, and the chairman asked him sharply what had become of the building he had charge of.

"It has been razed and the material stored, sir," replied the major.

"By whose order?" queried the chairman, red in the face.

"By order of President Roosevelt, sir."

"Where in — did he get any authority to butt into our business?" exploded the chairman.

"Well, sir," said the major, "it is not for me to question the authority or the orders of my commander in chief, but to obey them. And I did, sir."

And congress decided to consider it a fact accomplished, and let it go at that.

A Bachelor's Complaint.

I cannot say that the quarrels of men and their wives ever made any great impression upon me, or had much tendency to strengthen me in those anti-social resolutions which I took up long ago upon more substantial considerations. What oftentimes offends me at the house of married persons where I visit, is an error of quite a different description—it is that they are too loving. Not too loving neither; that does not explain my meaning. Besides, why should that offend me? The very act of separating themselves from the rest of the world, to have the fuller enjoyment of each other's society, implies that they prefer one another to all the world. But what I complain of is, that they carry this preference so undisguisedly, they perk it up in the faces of us single people so shamelessly, you cannot be in their company a moment without being made to feel, by some indirect hint or open avowal that you are not the object of his preference.—Charles Lamb.

Da Vinci Thought of Tank.

Italy has just celebrated the fourth centenary of Leonardo da Vinci's death. His name has been often mentioned during the war and his prophetic genius recalled. It is known that he intended to build airplanes for war purposes, but it is now claimed also that he was the first to think of the tank. In his letters to Il Moro he speaks of armored cars which could shelter the occupants and drive right amongst the enemy's masses, slaying and shattering all opposition. It is unfortunate that more is not known of Leonardo's intentions, and of the way in which he proposed to propel his craft. Horses might possibly have been intended, for if a horse could carry less weight than the armored motor, protection in those days was more easily got than now. But it is certainly very singular to read that his cars were to charge ahead while the infantry would follow behind—for this is exactly what happened four hundred years after his death.

Wrong Diagnosis.

"That picturesque old gentleman sitting there under the tree must be at least an octogenarian," commented the motorist who had stopped for a drink of water.

"Say, look yur!" truculently returned Gabe Yaw of the Sandy Mush region. "You're talking about my Uncle Rip! He's eighty-two years old and can't take up for himself, but I want you to understand by thunder, that he hain't no post nigger!"—Judge.

FLOWERS MINGLE

WITH TEARS OVER AMERICA'S DEAD

Paris, May 30.—With the break of dawn today pilgrimages of thousands of black-clad Frenchmen, women and children started from 61 towns and villages for the American cemeteries in France. By nightfall there is not to be a single American grave in France that does not bear some memento of the love and gratitude which the French peasantry feel toward their deliverers.

The towns adjacent to the larger cemeteries held special ceremonies. Some of the most famous orators of France made speeches. France has proven in a solemn and impressive fashion that she has not forgotten the 80,000 olive drab fighters who broke the enemy lines at St. Mihiel and in the Argonne forest.

Eulogies by Great Men.

While President Deschanel was not present because of his doctor's orders, practically every famous man in France, headed by Premier Millerand and Marshals Foch and Pétain, will visit Suresnes, the American cemetery nearest to Paris, where United States Ambassador Wallace will be the principal speaker.

The Mayors of Verdun, Bar le Duc, Scully, Breulle and other towns in the same area joined hands in a huge demonstration at the largest American cemetery, that of Romagne, alongside the heights of Montfaucon, which the 4th Division stormed in a frontal attack, suffering the bloodiest losses of the war. Eighty thousand graves were decorated there, each with a miniature Old Glory and tri-color, wreaths and flowers.

At Belleau a special committee headed by the Mayor of Chateau Thierry, decorated the cemetery that is the resting place of the heroes of St. Quentin, Le Cateau and Fismes.

The Mayor of Rheims personally conducted ceremonies on the spot where American troops helped to smash the Germans on the Chemin des Dames.

Another demonstration of France's gratitude was held near Soissons where a cemetery is situated on the spot that saw some of the worst fighting of the war.

Roosevelt's Grave Decorated.

Near Fere-en-Tardenois, Quentin Roosevelt's grave was decorated impartially with those of other American heroes. At Thiaucourt, where the majority of doughboys who fell in the St. Mihiel drive, are buried, special ceremonies were held, as well as at Toul, which was in American hands from 1917 till the armistice.

Gen. John O'Ryan, who commanded the 27th Division, made the principal speech at the ceremonies at Bonny cemetery, where members of New York's "own" are buried.

The day was signalized on the Rhine by impressive ceremonies among the American troops in and around Coblenz.

The Archbishop of Rheims ordered special services in all churches so that hundreds of thousands of prayers rose today from French folk high and humble, for the souls of Americans who "went West."

Every flag in France flew at half mast in honor of the American dead.

Allies Join in Tribute.

Paris, May 30.—America's war dead in Europe were eulogized and their graves in France were decorated today, the second Memorial Day since the close of the great struggle. American flags floated in the breeze over the resting places of more than 70,000 soldiers, and allied organizations joined the Americans in France in services in their memory.

The army and navy patriotic services co-operated with the newly formed Memorial Day committee headed by Ambassador Wallace to decorate the mounds in 497 burying places scattered along the battlefield from the channel of Switzerland and from the Rhine to the Atlantic.

The French and representatives of other allies took part in the ceremonies virtually everywhere, while Marshal Pétain, French commander in chief, and other prominent men from the French army and navy and civil life delivered addresses.

Marshal Pétain spoke in the little cemetery of France of the sacrifices made by the sons of America in the cause of France during the war.

"Brothers in arms, sharers of one common glory, one common sacrifice, I salute you as heroes whose young days found here the end of their work. In acclaiming you I voice the sentiment of my whole country, victorious and forever grateful," he said in part.

TO HOLD SHEEP AND GOAT SHOW AT SAN ANGELO TEN DAYS

San Angelo, Tex., May 31.—A place for conducting the annual sheep and goat show of the Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association of Texas, in connection with the 1920 convention in San Angelo June 22, 23 and 24, will be selected Wednesday afternoon, when the show and sales committee meets. Last year the show and sales was held in a newly completed garage, but this building is not available, and the committee consider it imperative that a building in the business district be secured.

Final data for the catalogue, to be printed within the next ten days, will be compiled at Wednesday's session. More than one hundred registered sheep and goats were entered last week and it is certain that 1,500 animals will be shown during the convention, making the show and sales the greatest ever held in Texas.

THE PAY OF POSTAL EMPLOYEES

Says the Brownwood Bulletin: With the title, "The Worst Employer in the Country" the Fort Worth Star-Telegram publishes an editorial urging all its readers to write immediately to their congressmen demanding the passage of legislation which will authorize general pay increases for postal employees. Similar editorials have appeared in many newspapers as a result for a campaign for better pay for postal employees, which was launched last week by the Literary Digest. The Digest, in its appeal, demanded: "Are Postoffice Employees Human Beings?" and among many others related the following incident:

"An American boy went to work one day in the United States postoffice. He was wideawake and ambitious and so he chose the biggest business and the biggest employer in the country. Step by step, he rose to be supervisor, and then superintendent of an important department. He made a record of 'supreme industry, faithfulness and loyalty.' Age came on, but his zeal did not diminish. Postal officials pointed to him with pride and said he upheld 'the very highest traditions of the service.'

When a man walks into a store and "snaps" at the clerk, he is usually not greatly surprised if the clerk's reply is a little "snappish"; too; human nature is built that way.

The young women who operate the telephone switchboards are taught that they must be courteous to patrons if they wish to retain their places. Yet telephone operators are human—just like other folks.

Things do not always go exactly right around the telephone exchange—just as in the office, the store, or even in the home. No telephone apparatus has yet been manufactured that works absolutely perfectly, all the time and under all conditions.

Some delays, inconveniences, and some poor service must be expected. Even trains are sometimes late; store deliveries sometimes go astray, and letters sometimes reach the wrong address.

And, somehow, when things go wrong around the telephone office, "calling down" the operator never seems to remedy them.

"At Your Service"

and was 'ever ready to sacrifice his personal interests for the public good.' Seventy years without a break he served his big employer, the American people, a shining example for all who would hear that crowning tribute, 'well done, good and faithful servant!' Last winter, at his post of duty, he was stricken with a chill. Pneumonia followed. Even then he begged that he might dress and return to his duties. And his big employer—the American people—what generous provision and tender care did it give to this oldest employee who had always 'sacrificed his personal interest for the public?' The man had not yet taken his annual vacation of fifteen days. His absence now from his post of duty was charged against his vacation. In fifteen days all his 'vacation' was gone and his salary stopped. For three days, as he lay on his death-bed, his pay was deducted. Then death came and he went to receive the 'well done' from One whose words are backed with eternal reward. But on earth, where he had toiled so long, the praise given him was empty. No allowance for sickness; no allowance for burial; nothing for his family; his meager salary docked after seventy years of faithful service. What an employer!"

Certainly no other employer would treat a faithful employee so inhumanly. Scores of similar instances of the ingratitude of the government could be contrasted with equally interesting stories, also by the score, in which government clerks in various departments at Washington are receiving princely salaries and annual bonuses for performing much less work than that required of postal employees. The government is parsimonious to a remarkable extent on the one hand, and generous to the point of wastefulness on the other. Postal employees, and all other employees of the government, should be paid salaries commensurate with the work they do, and commensurate with the loyalty and faithfulness which they show toward their employer. Government clerks in Washington should not receive $3,000 to $5,000 per year, plus bonuses, for performing six or seven hours of more or less unnecessary work each day, while postal clerks throughout the nation work eight hours daily at tasks requiring not only much physical exertion but a great deal of training and ability for $800 to $1,500 per year, without bonuses. Even the postmaster, in the average city receives a smaller salary than an industrious paper hanger can earn by steady work. Postal employees receive salaries, which in 1914 were barely sufficient to meet living costs, and which now are far too small. Hundreds of rural mail carriers have resigned because they were unable to make actual expenses.

These conditions should be remedied by Congress at the earliest opportunity. Postoffice employees should be paid all that their service is worth to the government. Clerks in the various departments in Washington should be fired by the wholesale, and those who are retained should be paid no more than they actually earn. Uncle Sam is one of the biggest employers in the world; but if he didn't have a hundred million people to keep his business going, he would be a bankrupt within thirty minutes, and would lose most of his employees even before that time had elapsed.

TWO IN A BOAT
By LULU M. PAULEY.

(©, 1919, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"It's just three months ago today," reflected Lydia. "In another week the hotel will be closed, the guests gone, and we'll be gone, too."

"Yes," nodded Bob; "it seems such a short time since—and what a heap of nice girls—" He broke off abruptly and headed the boat towards the willows.

Lydia looked sweetly sympathetic. "Tell me about them," she urged. "The heap of nice girls."

"I'd rather you'd tell your story first," returned Bob, half wistfully. She glanced at him demurely. "All right," she replied, good-naturedly, and began:

"I came down here the first week in June and met you for the second time since our schooldays. We became engaged, but the engagement was conditional. That is, if either of us met some one else whom we liked better, we were at liberty to do as we pleased, in case we let each other know." She paused impressively and struck at the water with her long, white fingers. "It was your idea, and contained not the slightest opening for one of those interesting breach-of-promise suits."

Bob flushed, but said nothing. "The next one to propose," she continued, "was Mr. Hillary, who owns that splendid yacht down at the harbor. Then came Mr. Meridan, Charlie Dibble, Victor and that dear, fat college boy, Percy Downey. I refused Percy, of course. He was dead in earnest, and I was afraid when he should find I was only a summer girl he might do something unpleasant. Girls should avoid the man who has not lived long enough in this world to understand its ways."

"Little philosopher," applauded Bob. "I'm not very worldly-wise; aren't you afraid I'll make a fuss?"

Lydia shook her fluffy head. "You made the conditions of our engagement, so you ought not to make a fuss."

"Never," breathed Bob, quickly; "I'll not do that. Pray continue your delightfully interesting tale," and he splashed the water spitefully with the oars.

"The last was Mr. Harper, who boards at Elm cottage."

At the mention of Mr. Harper, Bob burst into an uncontrollable fit of laughter and made the boat rock violently.

"Stop immediately!" cried the girl; "you'll upset the boat."

"I have two engagement rings," she retorted. "One is yours. You may have it now if you wish."

He silently lighted a cigarette. "You'll need it for one of those nice girls you've met," she suggested quietly. "Do I know her?"

"I believe you do." His tones were curt.

"I think," he remarked coldly, turning the boat out into midstream, "that we had better be going back to the hotel. The sun is already set and there is no moon tonight."

"Why, Mr. Porter," she cried, "there was a beautiful moon last night, so, of course, there must be another tonight. Mr. Morton and I sat out for a long time last evening admiring it."

"I suppose he is the fellow you are going to marry," Bob growled. "I remember seeing him about the hotel. Sort of a sissy, is he not? One of those, 'I'm mamma's boy, I am. I can talk to the girls. I know how.'"

"Oh, aren't you horrid?" laughed Lydia. "I think Mr. Morton is very nice, indeed."

"And quite ladylike, too," Bob slightly added.

"You're not obliged to like him," flashed Lydia.

"Certainly not. I say, Lydia, I'm going away in the morning—very early. Do you care?"

"Is that so?" Her tone was bantering. "How disappointed the heap of nice girls will be. Such a bright, eligible young man."

Bob's tanned face burned redly and he gave his full attention to the oars. "I suppose it's the other girl whom you are going to see," she remarked thoughtfully. "How glad she'll be!"

"Dence take the other girl!" broke from Bob's lips impatiently. "Lydia, don't you care the least little bit?"

Lydia's pink cheeks grew a shade deeper and her blue eyes twinkled brightly. "I wish you would explain," she said, provokingly; "I really do not understand you."

Bob ceased rowing and gazed at her long and steadily. Then he turned his gaze thoughtfully across the river. "Arnie't we going in?" she pettishly asked.

BRADY BOASTS OF CENTURY PLANT READY TO BLOOM

A novel and unique sight, and one well worth traveling miles to see, is the century plant, now apparently ready to bloom, at Chas. Bryson's place in the south part of town. The stalk now stands about twenty foot in height, with branches bearing clusters of yellow buds sprangling out from the main stalk at intervals of about a foot near the bottom of the stalk to half a foot or less nearer the top. The stalk itself springs from the center of the plant, and is about six or eight inches in diameter at the bottom, tapering off to a small branch at the top.

The century plant has been growing in the yard for many years, having originally been set out by Mrs. Emma Merwin, who formerly owned the place. Another century plant nearby, of about the same age and growth, shows no intention of putting forth the wonderful and novel blossoms.

Neighbors state that the stalk sprang up almost unnoticed. At first it had all the appearance of a young telephone pole of greenish color. It grew at the rate of about a foot a day, until it reached its present height of approximately 20 ft. Then the branches began growing from the stalk at right angles and ascending in spiral fashion up the stalk. These branches grow straight out from the stalk and the yellow flowers, buds or blossoms form at the end of the branch in a large flat shape, much the same as an arm outstretched with the palm of the hand held out flat. From a distance the plant has all the appearance of an ornamental lamp post, with the blossoms forming the lights.

FRANK CASE
Champion Fiddler of Oklahoma.

Catching the Professor.

There is a certain professor of natural history who delights in propounding catch questions to his class, and one young fellow, who had been caught by one, determined to get even at the next class, therefore, he said gravely:

"Professor, you have made a special study of snakes, have you not?"

"Yes, I think I am fairly well informed as to that branch," he professor responded.

"Then, professor, you can undoubtedly inform me on a point which, while doubtless simple, puzzles me. May I ask you a question?"

The professor began to feel uneasy but there was nothing to reply but "yes."

"Then, sir, what I desire to know is where does a snake's tail begin?" the young fellow asked gravely.

The professor was silent for a moment, and a titter began to run over the room, which increased to a roar as the professor replied calmly:

"That is quite simple; It begins at the end of the snake which is not the head."

U. C. V. REUNION MEETS IN MASON AUGUST 4-5-6TH

L. Ballou, adjutant general and chief of staff of the Mountain Remnant Brigade, U. C. V., advises that the brigade has accepted the invitation of the town of Mason to hold their 1920 reunion at that place, and the dates set for the event have been named August 4, 5 and 6th. The Mason folks promise to show the veterans the best time they have ever had, the reunion being held in the Mason camp grounds. Free rations for the entire three day period are assured to all old soldiers, their widows and children.

While the circle of veterans is narrowing, those who remain are bound more closely together by these annual encampments and reunions, and each year's event is looked forward to eagerly by the veterans, and no less by the citizens of this section, who join with the veterans in their celebrations and aid in the complete success of the affair.

Goodner-Schultz.
Mr. Frank Goodner and Miss Katie Schultz were quietly married last Saturday, only a few intimate friends being present at the ceremony. Both are well-known and popular Brady young folks, the bride being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Schultz, and having spent practically all her life here. She is a most charming young lady and an admirable help-mate for the man of her choice. Mr. Goodner has been making his home in Brady for the greater part of several years past, and is, at present, a valued employe in the mechanical department of the Wulff Garage, during the war he served with distinction overseas, and came home wearing a wound stripe.

The best wishes of all their many early friends are extended Mr. and Mrs. Goodner in the journey through life.

Zimmerman-Tabor.
A wedding of interest to all Brady citizens was that of Mr. Clint Zimmermann and Miss Ola Tabor, the ceremony having taken place on Thursday, May 27th, at 4:00 o'clock at the Methodist church in Wichita Falls, Rev. Mr. Bingham performing the nuptial service. The wedding was a complete surprise to the many friends of the contracting parties, who took only their parents into their confidence. The bride had been visiting her parents in Burkburnett and was joined in Wichita Falls by Mr. Zimmermann on the day of the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Zimmermann returned to Brady Saturday, and are now at home to their friends at the residence of his mother, Mrs. Emily Zimmermann, on the north side.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Tabor, and has made her home in Brady the past six years or more. She is a most lovable young woman and is most highly regarded by all who know her. For the past several years she has been employed with the firm of Malone & Ragsdale, where her ability and courtesy made her services invaluable not only to her employers, but to patrons of the firm as well. Mr. Zimmermann is a

Brady product, and commands the respect and esteem of all Brady citizens. For the past eleven years he has been in the employ of the Frisco, being frequently promoted in recognition of his services and ability, and now holds the position of car clerk with that system.

The best wishes of all are extended this worthy couple for every happiness and success in life.

FAIR GROUND IS RECOMMENDED AS LANDING STATION

Captain D. P. Muse, commander of the Air Park Recruiting detachment, which spent three days in Brady the past week, has recommended Brady for a Class A Airplane Landing station, the site selected being the old Brady Fair grounds. In order to make qualification, when the crop on the fair grounds is removed, the tract will have to be harrowed and a marker placed in same, the marker being in the form of a large T. The present landing station at the Brady stock pens has been given a B classification by reason of the fact that landing can be made from only one direction. This landing station already has a marker placed on same.

REVENGE THAT WAS COSTLY

Australian Farmer's Fancy Method of Pest Destruction Could Hardly Be Called a Success.

A farmer living near Boree Creek, New South Wales, was greatly annoyed by the depredations of a hawk, which almost daily took toll among his chickens. Finally, after a good deal of trouble, he succeeded in trapping the bird alive, and, smarting under his losses, resolved upon a really elaborate revenge. Procuring a supply of "gell" (explosive), he fastened it to the unfortunate hawk's leg and attached a long fuse to it. Then, having lit the fuse, he released the bird and waited for it to fly into the air for annihilation. However, the trick failed to work. Somewhat dazed, no doubt, by the rough handling it had received, the hawk obstinately refused to move from a position near the door of the "humpy."

With the fuse sputtering fiercely, the farmer began to get uneasy, and he did all in his power to scare this "feathered mine" away, but at first with little success. Finally it rose in the air—but only to settle on his roof, near the chimney. Shouting and bombardment with stones and sticks alike failed to move it from this position, and with the perspiration streaming down his face and his hair beginning to stand on end the farmer was ultimately obliged to take to his heels for his own safety. The bird sat doggedly on the roof till the end came; then the luckless squatter, looking back, saw roof, chimney and hawk go up in one terrific explosion. He has now sworn off all fancy methods of pest destruction.—Wide World Magazine.

WHAT GIVES SKY BLUE TINT

Simple Explanation of Matter to Which Probably Few Have Given Much Attention.

Not one person in a hundred could give a satisfactory answer to the question, Why is the sky blue?

And yet the explanation, as given by Professor W. H. Bragg, at the British Royal Institution, is quite simple.

The blue sky, he explained, is due to the interception of particles in the atmosphere of the blue rays which form a part of the white light of the sun. The parts of white light conveyed by longer red and yellow light waves manage to jump the many substances in the atmosphere and are seen at sunrise and sunset.

The professor illustrated his meaning by showing a disc of light on the screen which, passing through a bowl of water, became gradually redder as the water got cloudier, till at last, after an imitation of the sun in a November fog, it faded away.

Professor Bragg has also revealed some of the mysteries of sound. If you put a stick in a revolving bowl of water, it sets up little whirlpools behind it. In the same way the wind rushing past trees forms whirlwinds on a small scale, and these cause those sounds so admirably described by the imitative word "soughing." Similar sounds are set up by telegraph wires.

Tradition and Superstition.

The moon, of course, is the source, or reason, or what you will, of many superstitions. As one grows older possibly the moon becomes less an object of romance than formerly, but the sense of beauty is never lost—even though some otherwise sane people object, as long as they live, to seeing the lovely new moon over their left shoulder. Frankly, we do not know the reason of this fear. In the course of a busy and, we trust, useful life we have never happened to hear the reason. But it is well to assume that there is one.

Tradition is interesting; superstition is common. Perhaps we have too few traditions in this country and too many superstitions. But most of us will proudly affirm that we believe in all the good traditions and in no superstitions whatever—and maybe we all shall be telling the truth.—Exchange.

Tides in the Bay of Fundy.

The Bay of Fundy is noted for its high tides. At the head of the bay a rise of 62 feet is known, and in Passamaquoddy bay, which indents New Brunswick near the border of the state of Maine, a rise of 40 feet is not uncommon. At St. John the rise varies from 20 to 27 feet. At Moncton the tide rushes up the estuary a crest or wave of water from 3 to 6 feet high. At most places the tide rises gradually, but not slowly, each wave rolling up on the shore a little higher than the preceding one. There are two high tides in every 24 hours. For instance, say at 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 10 at night, and on the following day the two high tides will be one hour later, and so on.

Good Old Cheap Coal Days.

In the good old days of 1812 one could step out with a couple of dollars and come home with food and fuel sufficient to supply a good-sized family for a week. Facts regarding living expenses a century ago are contained in a letter from John Sims, great-grandfather of Admiral Sims, to his wife, Molly, dated Uniontown, 15th October, 1812. At that time, board and lodging for two cost $3.50 a week. Coal was 6 cents a bushel. Chickens still wearing their feathers, cost 75 cents a dozen. Beef was from 3 to 3½ cents a pound, while butter retailed from 12½ cents a pound.

How It Happened.

Dear Editor.—A neighbor man who lives in Oklahoma is so stingy he won't buy his county paper, but sends his little boy next door to borrow it. Recently the little fellow ran over a stand of bees in his hurry and they stung him until he looked like a swollen wart. His father heard his screams and broke into a run after the child, running into a barbed wire fence and tearing a $5-pair of pants all to pieces. The cow took advantage of the fence being down and went into the field and ate so much killed her. The old woman ran out to see what was the matter and turned over a 5-gallon jar of cream and smothered a little chicken. The baby smothered the cream and then into the room and ruined a $25 old dog broke up eleven and the calves got out and the tails off of five

BETWEEN LINES

By ELIZABETH A. DE BAER.

(©, 1919, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Olga was a senior in boarding school and George was a junior in college. They met at a college house party and, well—!

Olga was short with very large eyes and a very small mouth. She wore her hair, black and shining, parted in the middle, pulled quaintly down over her forehead, puffed over the ears and high in back. When George came to call, she wore her grandmother's comb, which was very lovely—then hurried it back among tissue paper when he left. Olga's dresses were ruffy—most impractical, but she was practical because she made them herself. She could play a guitar softly and roll her eyes at the proper moment, and, best of all, she was a good listener. But when it came to talking—Olga was a failure. She couldn't say anything funny and her words seemed to jump out in a short, staccato way. Olga couldn't talk well and, fortunately, she knew it—so she didn't talk much.

As for George—he was big and awkward, but loads of fun. He could make his thumbs go out of joint and Olga would cover her big eyes with her little hands and beg him not to be "so naughty," and said she wouldn't look, but he knew she was peering through her fingers. He liked to have her sit curled up beside him, and play soft, slow music on her guitar while they both looked into space. Yes, they were deeply in love!

Then the house party ended and Olga came back to school, fell into the arms of her waiting roommate, was dragged upstairs and, lights turned low, confessed the whole story to wide-eyed Jane.

"And just think, dear," she ended with a resigned sigh. "It'll be two months before I'll see him."

"Poor little thing," Jane eyed with envy the diamond set fraternally pin that clung desperately to Olga's waist. "It must be wonderful to be in love."

The next day a special came for Olga—it was a letter from George and such a letter! Olga showed it to Jane and cried and laughed alternately as she read it for the fifth time. It was indeed a masterpiece, a clever, well-written letter, and Olga was wise—she knew her answer was expected to be equally as clever—it just had to be! Moreover, she knew she couldn't write a good letter any more than she could tell a good story—and she knew Jane could. And Jane did. True love should not deceive, but Olga, in her desire to keep George's affection while away from him, was desperate. She realized her shortcomings and she did her best to outwit them. So Jane, under Olga's careful censorship, carried on the latter's correspondence with her fiancé.

All went well and everyone was apparently happy until one day Jane, red-eyed, told Olga she wanted to talk with her. She flopped down on the cot among the pillows and looked up into Olga's questioning eyes.

"I can't go on with it, Roomy," she said in a hollow voice. "I can't go on deceiving him, and myself."

"Yes, I've tried to make myself believe I don't love him, but I do—my letters are so wonderful. I—"

"Stop," Olga cried; "do you mean you have fallen in love with my George?"

Jane nodded miserably and the tears bounced off her cheek.

"Yes," she answered simply.

"Then desperately she went on:

"And I've read between the lines, it's me he loves, it's my letters, it's the girl I've put into my letters—me!"

"Oh, Jane, how can you!" and Olga sank down. She wanted to cry but she didn't, so she whistled bravely.

That night the maid came pattering up the stairs with two cards for Olga. One was "George Potter," the other, "Stanley Mills." She couldn't think; she went mechanically down the stairs and into the reception room. George caught her hands awkwardly and, utterly ignoring the tall, dark man beside him, said:

"Olga, tell me the truth—do you love me?"

"Oh, George, what's the use if—"

"I won't believe it, Olga—I know you love me and I've come to explain everything. I was so crazy about you that when I went away I was afraid my letters wouldn't hold your interest, so I got Stan to write 'em for me. And now, Olga, he's fallen in love with you, and he says he's read between the lines and knows you're his by rights. He told me so this morning."

But Olga shot out of the room, flinging "be right back" to the surprised man who stared after her. In a moment she returned dragging a bewildered Jane across the room.

"George, dear," she explained, "it was Jane who wrote these letters—I was trying to deceive you and—" but George had taken her in his arms. He had kissed her twice when she suddenly remembered, and whispered:

"Introduce them, dear."

George laughed.

"They don't need an introduction, honey."

And they didn't.

A Sex Difference.

The difference between a man and a woman is that when you see a man wearing evening clothes you usually see somebody who'd much rather be wearing something else.—Detroit Free Press.

It's the Man of Farsight and Vision

That Turns the Conditions of Today to His Future Advantages

The careful man knows what a Bank account means

The dollar of today looks mighty small in relation to its buying power and most of us are getting a sufficient number of those dollars to meet our current cost of living and a few dollars over. But the days are not far off when that dollar will grow in purchasing power and when it does the dollars will not be so plentifully or generously circulated. The man who saves those little dollars now and puts them away in a safe bank will find they have grown tremendously in importance and usefulness when dollars are scarcer and when the spendthrifts and improvident have carelessly failed to conserve against future opportunity and need.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SAVE

Now while the dollars are easy to get. You cannot "eat your cake and have it too." So let's save the cake for a time when it will be most substantial and harder to procure. Save those little 1920 dollars. They'll be mighty big dollars in 1925, or before.

A Man's Job.

It's a man's job to be cheerful In the face of grief and care; Any weaking can be tearful And a victim of despair. But it takes a man to swallow All the bitter in the cup, And to live for what may follow, Without ever giving up.

It's a man's job to be kindly, It's a man's job to be true; None can shut his eyes and blindly Try to journey this life through. And not see the wrongs about him, Or the hazards in his way, There are times when fate will flout him And his feet will go astray.

Not in fools and craven creatures Are the worthy virtues found, Not on blank and lifeless features Do the cheerful smiles abound; He who to his best is living And for truth and honor stands, And is cheerful in his giving, Has a man's job on his hands.

To be kind and thoughtful ever, To be strong in times of need, To put all your best endeavor, In an effort to succeed, And to fail and keep on trying, And not lose your cheerful ways, Is a job, there's no denying, For a real man, nowadays.

Hard work sets unfavorably on the body that is bilious or constipated; producing low spirits, weakness and loss of energy. The Conscientious Scot. An enterprising drummer," says a New York business man, "once attempted to bribe an old Scotch merchant by offering him a box of cigars."

"Na, na," said the old chap, shaking his head gravely, "I canna' tak' 'em."

"Nonsense," said the drummer. "If you have any conscientious scruples you may pay me a quarter for the box."

"Weel, weel," said the old Scot, "I'll tak' two boxes."

CATTLE MOVEMENT IN WEST TEXAS HAMPERED BY SHORTAGE OF CARS

Fort Worth, Tex., May 27.—The cattle movement in the southwest is hampered by the car shortage, states the official weekly report of the Texas Cattle Raisers association, from West Texas, where many Wyoming and Montana stock were wintered. The return of these cattle to their home ranges causes a tremendous demand.

W. S. Dickinson, son, Besnie, and son-in-law, Wiley Williams, were here from the Stacy country Monday. "Uncle Bill" said they brought in some corn he raised himself the past year to have ground into meal, and says his select white corn makes the prettiest, whitest cornbread anyone ever saw. For fear the editor might doubt his word, "Uncle Bill" then and there issued an invitation to come and see him when out in the Stacy neighborhood.

Reports reaching The Standard tell of a new grasshopper pest which is beginning to make its appearance in this county. According to G. V. Gansel, these hoppers have invaded some of his cotton fields in the north part of the county. When they first emerge from the grass, they appear like small bugs, about 1-4 inch in length, but when grown are about an inch in length. They are without wings. Just how extensive a territory this new pest has covered, The Standard has been unable to learn, although one of the neighboring papers, (the Coleman Democrat-Voice, unless we mistake) reported the appearance of the pest there the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Sparks arrived here Tuesday night from Ranger, and Bob says they are back to stay. Bob has been gone from McCulloch the past couple years, and during the last twelve months has been located at Olden, a new oil town just this side of Ranger. However, having tired of the bustle and life in the new oil metropolis, Bob naturally wanted to come back "home"—that's Brady. He says he is going to enjoy some good fishing and loafing before settling down to some new endeavors here. His brother, Ernest, who has been secretary of the Olden Chamber of Commerce, has been located in Ranger the past couple months, where he is employed as reporter on the staff of the Ranger Daily Times, in which capacity he is making good, and is said to be as happy as a June bug.

Mrs. C. A. Yonas is enjoying a visit from her sister, Mrs. Kate Knight of Lampasas, and nephew, Kemper Knight of Long Beach, California, who, with his wife is making a visit in Texas. Mr. and Mrs. Knight passed through Brady some four weeks ago enroute to his old home at Lampasas, and his visit here then with Mrs. Yonas gave aunt and nephew their first opportunity to see one another in 21 years. Mrs. Knight is making her first visit to Texas, but is delighted with everything here, and has fallen in love with the Texas people. She says the beautiful flowers and scenery of California is nothing compared with the natural beauties of Texas which she thinks are superb. The journey from California to McCulloch county occupied but fourteen days, was a most pleasant experience, with delightful weather and not even so much as a rain falling on them to mar the trip. They found Texas folks most hospitable—so much so, in fact, that they felt as if they had known them as strangers, that Mrs. Knight declares them the best people she has ever met. Mr. Knight was raised in Lampasas and is likewise delighted with his visit back here.
