PLANS COMPLETED FOR GREAT McCULLOCH COUNTY EXHIBIT

McCULLOCH CO'S FIRST BALE RECEIVED WED. EVE

The first bale of McCulloch county grown cotton was received here Wednesday evening, being brought in by Porfirio Trevino, a Mexican farmer living in the Dodge community, on the Alec Munson place. Trevino brought in 1350 pounds of seed cotton, and got a turnout of a 475 pound bale. The Embry gin ginned the bale free.

Trevino has about 140 acres in cotton and expects to have a second bale ready for ginning today. While the cotton had not yet been classed at the time this was written, the ginners stated it was a No. 1 bale.

Because of the late planting, the first bale is several weeks late this year, as compared with those of former years, but at that is 3 days earlier than last year's bale. The following is the record of first bales received in Brady in the past several years:

- 1917—August 14th, by Dario Rangel, Fife.
- 1918—August 15th, by M. Horn, Fredonia.
- 1919—September 4th, by C. M. Rasco, Fife.

NEW FIELD MAY BE DEVELOPED AS RESULT OF CRAVENS' DISCOVERY

A shallow oil well, with good production, was brought in Saturday evening on the J. D. Cravens farm, one mile from Winchell and just across the Colorado river in McCulloch county. The interesting features about this latest find are that it is between seventy-five and one hundred feet shallower than the nearest producing well and it opens up an entirely new field being at least four miles from the Mercury wells.

Land in the immediate territory is leasing for twenty dollars an acre.

The indications are that the field will extend well over into Brown county and that oil will be found at a less depth as development comes this way.

It is understood that the new well is a very satisfactory producer, but the drillers will more than likely shoot it in order to develop the well to its full capacity.—Brownwood Bulletin.

WOMEN TO VOTE WITHOUT PAYING STATE POLL TAX

Austin, Sept. 1.—Assistant Attorney General Stone ruled that women will be required to have a poll tax receipt only at primary elections. He said that in view of the amendment to the United States Constitution all women otherwise qualified to vote may vote in bond and general elections without being required to show a poll tax receipt or to have paid a poll tax.

McCULLOCH CO. EXHIBIT OCT. 5-6TH TO BE GREAT CO-OPERATIVE EFFORT

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE COMPLETES ORGANIZATION—EACH COMMITTEE TO ORGANIZE AND CO-OPERATE WITH CENTRAL BODY—SPEAKERS APPOINTED.

With the successful carrying out of present plans, the McCulloch County Live Stock, Agricultural and Industrial Exhibit planned for Tuesday and Wednesday, October 5-6th, promises to be the greatest feature ever attempted by Brady and McCulloch county citizens. The entire matter has been gone into carefully and exhaustively by the Central Executive committee, headed by Jas. T. Mann and B. D. Black, and the entire plan of operation has been worked out to the smallest detail. Not only will the exhibit include displays of agricultural products and live stock, but every merchant and business man will be invited and expected to take part in and have a booth or display in the general exhibit.

At a meeting of live-wire citizens Tuesday night, the entire plan was explained in detail by Mr. Mann. Each community in the county is to be organized in a manner similar to the central organization at Brady. This, then, will enable the superintendent in charge of the goat and sheep exhibit in a certain community to confer with and complete arrangements for his display with the superintendent of the central committee at Brady who will have charge of the sheep and goat division—and so on all along the line. No one committeeman will be weighted down with innumerable duties, but instead each one will have one specific task to perform and in this he will be aided by the community leaders who have charge of the same class of exhibits.

In order that the entire plan of organization and exhibit might be correctly and fully made known to the citizens of the county, some seventeen speakers have been appointed to visit various communities, in company with a delegation of exhibit boosters, and to lay the proposition before the people of the community and to answer questions regarding the project. By this means, it is certain that the interest of the entire county will be aroused, and that universal co-operation will result.

Speakers and Speaking Dates.
 The following is the list of men who are helping to get the plan of the County Exhibit before the people, so that all will understand more clearly just how to proceed in doing their part. Every citizen should rally and do his or her best to have a good meeting at each school in the county. All meetings will be 8:15 o'clock p. m., with speakers and dates as follows:

- J. E. Shropshire, Mercury, September 4th; Harkrider, 3rd.
 - Jas. T. Mann, Lohn, 2nd; Waldrup, 3rd; Dodge, 7th.
 - Sam McCollum, Rochelle, 6th; Claxton, 3rd.
 - W. D. Jordan, West Sweden, 4th; Round Mountain, 6th.
 - Evans Adkins, Camp San Saba, 6th; Fikes, 7th.
 - Joe Adkins, Voca, 4th; East Sweden, 6th.
 - W. M. Deans, Placid, 6th; Lost Creek, 4th.
 - Sam Hughes, Fife, 3rd; Broadmoor, 6th.
 - B. D. Black, Corn Creek, 3rd; Whiteland, 6th.
 - W. D. Crothers, Pear Valley, 6th; Salt Gap, 7th.
 - J. E. Brown, Ledbetter, 4th; Melvin, 3rd.
 - J. A. Holton, Doole, 3rd; Davis, 4th.
 - J. W. Cowan, Dutton, 3rd; Carroll Colony, 6th.
 - G. V. Gansel, East Gansel, 3rd; Marion, 6th.
 - S. J. Howard, Stacy, 6th; Cow Gap, 3rd.
 - Edd Broad, Milburn, 6th; Cow Boy, 3rd.
 - M. S. Sellers, Hansen, 6th; Martin, 7th.
- There will be more than one speaker at each place, but only one is listed. These men and women will be able to answer all questions and help get organized so that all the work will not have to be done by any one person. When the plan is understood, all will readily endorse it. No collection will be taken.

DAY TO INSTALL POWER PLANT TO PUMP OIL WELLS

Operations in the Day field are, at present, confined to well No. 4, which Wednesday had reached a depth of 205 feet, and was just drilling into the big lime. Local oil men are confident that this well will prove the best of all, since every indication points to its being located directly over the main oil pool.

Efforts to pump No. 3, which caused much excitement the early part of the week, by overflowing from the casinghead, were not successful, the pump proving too light. The well still continues to flow oil, and every indication points to its proving up a good producer. Present plans of the Day-Daley Petroleum association are to install a power plant upon completion of No. 4, and to pump all three wells with this plant.

Mr. Day left last night for northern points, and upon his return here, arrangements for installing the power plant will be completed simultaneously with the finishing of well No. 4.

'BLOOMER GIRLS' BASE BALL TEAM HERE NEXT WEEK

The "Bloomer Girls" base ball team is scheduled to play a game of ball with a picked team of Brady ball players on Wednesday afternoon of next week. Originally the team was to have come here on last Saturday, election day, and a subscription list to defray their expenses and make up the $200 guarantee was circulated about town by Messrs. M. C. Wolfe and Jess Woosley. Word was later had that the aggregation could not fill the appointment, and arrangements were then completed for a game on next Wednesday, September 8th. The team is said to be composed entirely of girls, and is said to be playing good ball and winning the most of their games. This week they are playing in San Angelo and other points along the Santa Fe, and after playing in Goldthwaite, they are expected to play next week in towns along the Santa Fe's Eden branch.

The local sports have not yet decided upon the lineup of players who will oppose the "Bloomer Girls," but it is likely that Will Allen Jones will be on the mound, and either Henry Tipton or Bill Vaughn will backstop. The reported coming of the team has aroused great interest and attendance at the game will be had from all parts of this section of the country.

The Standard is just in receipt of a letter from our friend, A. J. Beasley, who writes from Moran, Texas, that the aggregation is to play at that place on the 27th, and is to play in Brady on the 10th or 12th of September. A. J. is enthusiastic about the game, wants to see it, and says "I'll be there. Here is the note that Mr. Beasley writes: "I see a base ball club plays here the 27th. Name of the club is "The Western Bloomers," (all girls) They will play Brady about the 10th or 12th. Tell the boys to be sure and secure their best players, as I want the Brady boys to walk all over those girls. I'll be there."

ROCHELLE RUMBLINGS.

Misses Nell Selman and Blanch Smith Hurt—Car Overturns.

Rochelle, Texas, Aug. 30. Editor Brady Standard:

Just four weeks ago today this writer began her letter to The Standard, but it was never finished, as she was taken sick and has been down most of the time since, but will try this afternoon to give a few dots from this place. So far everybody is just lovely and the farmers all smiles over these fine crops, as it's been many a day since the prospects were so good. The binder is being heard now all around, binding maize, cane, millet which is being cut and put into big fine ricks in the stack lot, all of which speaks of prosperity to the farmer.

What came near being a very fatal accident happened a couple of miles out of Rochelle last Saturday about dark when the car the parties were in turned a complete summer-sault, throwing the young people out and as a result, Miss Nell Selman and Miss Blanch Smith are in a serious, but not fatal, condition, as both young ladies were precipitated with such force on their heads as to almost break their necks. But medical aid was called from Brady and pronounce them both doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances. Mr. George Sallee, the driver, received several bruises and cuts, not not near so serious as with the young ladies, and we hope this may prove a lesson to those as well as all other young people and help them to realize that we are none accident proof. Therefore, must be careful in their driving.

Dr. Matlock has been quite sick now for a couple or three weeks and this place is in the dark so far as a doctor is concerned, but am thankful to be able to report him convalescent and hope he will soon be able to again fill his responsible position.

Mrs. D. W. McNatt and daughter, Miss Rhoda, and three smaller children of Richland Springs visited in the home of her cousin, Mrs. J. P. Waddell from Friday till Monday.

Mr. Naith Selman and family took dinner with his cousin, Willie Selman and wife, Sunday.

Fall gardens are looking fine and will soon have plenty turnip greens and snap beans, also sweet potatoes.

The Unfinished Picture

By OTILLIA F. PFEIFFER

With resignation and patience Marvin Truesdale took up the burdens of life after his wife had died. Her sickness, which had lasted for over a year, had called for his constant presence and he had removed his studio to the house. There was little Violet, two years old, to care for, and practically his life was given up to the demands of the sickroom and nursery.

He was a true artist at soul, and his troubles came upon him just as he was beginning to win recognition. Before twelve months had gone by, Truesdale had practically lost his portrait clients. Somehow, soul and mind seemed going through a change that dulled all ambition. One of his severest disappointments was the discovery that he had made a mistake in marrying in haste. His wife was not a helpmeet. All she seemed to care for was frivolity and dress. She used up his income; even the coming of little Violet did not arouse a right appreciation of maternal duties. She developed into a fretful, capricious invalid, with no thought beyond her own distress, and demanding luxuries her husband could poorly afford. When she died Truesdale had barely enough after selling nearly everything he had left of home and studio furnishings, to meet the demands of his creditors. He rented two furnished rooms in a poor quarter. The little one was a lovely child and clung to him, but she too, however, was frail of frame, and Truesdale was oppressed with a deep dread that she might have inherited the seeds of the disease which had carried her mother to an early grave.

Finally a large mail-order house specializing in enlarging photographs offered Truesdale a position in hand-coloring them. It was ungenial, but he was given a room all to himself for his delicate work, and what meant a great deal more, an opportunity to have little Violet with him all day long. There was a little empty apartment adjoining his work room. He bought some toys with which the little one could amuse herself, a child's rocking chair and a couch, each noon provided a nourishing lunch and was glad and content as long as she was not left to indifferent care at the boarding house.

The room looked out upon a court walled in on all sides and Violet did not thrive. One day when her father had left her to carry some finished photographs to the mailing room, he returned to greet a pleasing surprise. Little Violet was seated on the couch upon the lap of a lovely faced girl of about nineteen, who was listening with a smile of interest to her artless prattle. The visitor arose, flushing with some embarrassment.

"I love children so that the voice of this little angel lured me to an intrusion," she said. "I am Miss Norine Warren. My aunt has charge of the help about the building and I live with her on the top floor."

"And she has a garden, oh, papa!" interrupted Violet. "And flowers growing way up under the sky. Can't I go up there at noontime, for she says I can?"

"Come, both of you, please," invited Miss Warren, "and get a breath of real air. The chief janitor has made my aunt quite a roof garden—why not pass your noon hour there? You will find it pleasant and good for the little one."

And that noon the gracious, kindly Miss Warren led those two to the rooms where she and her aunt lived, and thence by a narrow stairway to the roof. Wire screened in the greater portion of it. Here and there small trees were set in tubs and flowers and vines in boxes. There were several chairs, settees, tables and a hammock and an awning to shield from the afternoon sun. It came about that Miss Warren delighted in having little Violet for a guest most of the day. It came about also that Truesdale should pass several hours a week in their company.

"My father, too, was an artist," she recited. "He was at work on his last picture when he died. It was a historical subject. I was his model. It is still unfinished, but I will show it to you."

She led Truesdale to the room her father had used as a studio, left just as it was when Robert Warren last occupied it. Upon an easel was the canvas she had told about. The theme appealed to every artistic instinct in Truesdale's impressionable nature. The delineation of Norine's beautiful face thrilled him. Back amid familiar surroundings his old aspirations aroused.

"If I dared to suggest it," he said, "how my soul would delight in striving to complete a canvas that the world should not lose," and Norine was glad, even urged him to essay the task.

Out of it all came a strangely fortunate issue. The completed canvas, dead Robert Warren given the credit of its production, attracted the attention of the public when placed on exhibition, and encouraged Truesdale. He gradually felt his way back to the call of art in a practical, substantial way.

"I knew you had the genius to carry forward my father's work," spoke Norine one day.

"There was something more than that," replied Truesdale. "You were its central figures, and from the canvas always your eyes seemed to bid me aspire and hope. It was not genius that sustained me. It was—love."

COTTON PALACE TO AID WOMEN SOLVE DOMESTIC PROBLEM

Labor-Saving Devices and Ways to Prepare Dishes Will Be Shown

Woman and her activities will reign parallel with the farmer and his interests, the music lover and his favorite classics, the social devotee and his functions at the Texas Cotton Palace, Waco, Oct. 30 to Nov. 14 this year.

Under the able direction of Mrs. Lee Davis, general chairman of the women's department, prominent women have been appointed to direct various departments of this important feature of the greater Texas Cotton Palace. Mrs. Davis predicts that never before will the women from adjacent towns and outlying rural sections find so many interesting exhibits and demonstrations.

"We want them all to come in and meet us and talk over their problems with us. We will have experts in domestic science who will be able to solve many problems for them," she says.

Canning Club Exhibits

Canning clubs will send exhibits and specimens in cooking. If your club has not entered an exhibit, you should urge it to do so, as it probably is proficient in some especial manner that will win warm praise for it at the Texas Cotton Palace.

Here's Vogue Feature

Still another new exhibition will be that displaying decorated tables, arrangement of tables of all description having become a vogue among artistic women. Tea tables, library tables, porch tables for decorative use, hall tables, bedside tables, invalid tables and others.

Specimens of cotton modeling this year will be replaced by another feature which will bring out the value of cotton and uphold the tradition of the Cotton Palace in regard to a display of Texas' principal product.

Woman and Her Use for Cotton

A woman's day in cotton is to be displayed, showing how a woman in the course of the day's work finds cotton products indispensable at every turn.

The Better Babies conference is another popular feature. Another prominent affair is Children's Day, which will come early in the second week. Woman's Day is also being planned on a large scale.

Labor Saving Devices

An interesting display will be the display of labor saving devices, many of which have been placed on the market since the inauguration of the Cotton Palace.

A special showing of lamps and rugs is also being arranged. This will be in line with the arrangement of brasses and tapestries.

TOYLAND AT TEXAS COTTON PALACE WILL AMUSE ALL CHILDREN

So complete are arrangements to make this year's Texas Cotton Palace the most pleasing and successful that even entertainment for the children have been included in the plans. The big exposition opens in Waco, Oct. 30, and closes Nov. 14.

A complete new feature of the program this year, and one that is intended especially to please mothers who will bring small children with them will be "Toyland," an exhibition of toys arranged for the delight of youngsters. It is planned to display all the latest toys, especially mechanical and electrical and others. This department is, as it should be, under the direction of the women's committee.

What's The Cotton Palace?

The Texas Cotton Palace, Waco, Oct. 30 to Nov. 14, is the center of attraction to farmers and townspeople alike this fall. It will furnish instructive entertainment and profitable demonstrations that will help solve the problems of all—the farmer, housewife and business man.

WONDER WORDS.

Thirteen Rules for Raising Big Hogs—Worth Hundreds Dollars.

Wonder, Ore., Aug. 30.

Editor Brady Standard:

I promised to tell your hog raisers how to raise the biggest hogs in all the biggest state of the U. S., and I have told it a little at a time and possibly all did not get all of the main essential points. So here are a few plain rules which if followed will surely give the same success that I have had:

1st. Bear in mind that Mr. Barnum was right when he said "There is perhaps nothing that so satisfies the American people as to be gloriously humbugged;" and "There's a sucker being born into the world every minute." So take warning and do not prove yourself to be a sucker. Do not bite at another's bait.

2nd. Always select the very best pigs for breeding purposes. It doesn't matter about the kind of stock, or the pedigree; for each breeder will tell you that his own particular breed is the best, of course. I had rather have a superior unregistered animal than an inferior registered one. It is not every individual who is endowed by nature with the pre-natal faculties of size and form. Some can't tell a good specimen when they see it. Consequently, if you are not right sure that you can make a good selection, then in that event, get someone who has made a success of raising good stock to make the selections for you.

3rd. After making the best selections possible, then never allow them to get stunted, but push them from the word go! Give them a variety of food.

4th. It will pay any hog grower to grind the grain he feeds to his hogs. A little thin dishwasher with a few broken toothpicks and coffee grounds and the charred ends of matches, a few eggshells and bits of broken dishes will not make a pig grow! I had a pig to die from swallowing a piece of broken glass in its feed.

5th. Do not keep the same breed of hogs for more than one generation. Keep crossing them with other good breeds whether others want you to or not! Have a head of your own and use it! That is the way I attained my unparalleled success. But always breed to a better animal than his predecessor if possible. Improve instead of going backward.

6th. Long bodied, large boned pigs are the best ones to keep if size is the object to be attained, together with prolificness. It is not uncommon for my sows to have a dozen pigs at a litter. Occasionally as many as thirteen. One sow had fifteen her first batch; at only about a year old. I did not keep her however, as I had objections to her shape.

7th. If you want a range hog, I would suggest that you select those with short chubby bodies, as that kind will live and keep fat where the larger types will starve to death. Besides, the short chunky (or blocky) ones only have a few pigs at a time usually three to six, and will raise them on the range.

8th. It never pays to only half feed a hog. If you feed at all feed it well—else your money be thrown away.

9th. Provide your hogs with plenty of water and shade in summer time so that they can gain access to it at any and all times, (either in summer or winter).

10th. If you desire to improve your stock always select the pigs you wish to keep for breeding purposes from sows that are two years old or more. But never from one that is more than six years old. They should be fully matured but not old enough to be on the decline.

11th. Do not get your brood sows too fat, as the pigs will not be so large, and besides they are liable to overlay them. Some people will tell you how to fix your hog pen so as to prevent the sow laying down upon her pigs; but it can't be done! You just can't keep the pigs from getting in the wrong places.

12th. There are those who will tell you that it doesn't pay to feed a hog after he is ten months old (I mean for meat), but such is a mistaken idea. Of course a hog should attain a weight of 200 pounds at that age and brings a better price in the market per pound than a large hog. But if you only have enough hogs for your home butchering it will not pay you to kill them at that age, as at that age they are making meat and lard faster in proportion to the amount of feed they consume than they did when they were younger.

13th. Don't believe what others tell you unless it is very reasonable; and don't accept a statement or theory until you have tried it out for yourself. If you will try out my suggestions it will be worth hundreds of dollars to you.

WONDER WORDS.

A Word or Two About "Sugar Pine Cones" and Other Things.

Wonder, Ore., Aug. 25.

Editor Brady Standard:

One of my neighbors remarked that "Of all the places he had ever lived that this beat them all for clandestine grafting by public officials." Then he used the Oregon slogan and said, "It's the climate!" I told him that perhaps eating so much acid fruit affected some of their teeth so much as to cause them to talk crooked. At any rate I hope I don't catch the disease, or allow it to catch me. In one of my other letters it said "small melon" instead of small melon, and "sugar pine can" instead of cone. When the sugar pine cones are fully grown I shall send you one and see if it isn't larger than grows in Arkansas, and when I come to see you maybe I will bring along an assortment of native walking sticks—such as the prospectors use when climbing about in the mountains in quest of gold. Oregon fir, cedar, spruce, hemlock, yew wood, laurel, chingupin, manzanita, etc., etc., all of which make nice sticks. Yes, and there is the redwood I did not mention. I can get you curious in the way of walking canes enough to last you until you are as old as Methuselah. Did I spell it right? No matter; you know who I mean!

It is with profound pleasure I note that McCulloch county stockmen and farmers may soon be permitted to stop dipping cattle. And the tick will be a thing of the past. (?)

Ye scribe has only seen two ticks this summer, while last year some cattle and horses on the range were literally covered with them. And there hasn't been an animal dipped either! And I have only seen three or four small fleas this year, while last year there were millions of the pestiferous insects. Yet we have the hogs this year same as last. You know some folks claim that fleas live on hogs; but I offered ten dollars to any one who will show me a flea on a hog—but they haven't done it yet. I have also had a twenty year standing offer of five dollars for a flour sack full of native wild grass of Josephine county, (the boasted cattle range) but I still have the five.

Now I am going to make an offer of one thousand dollars for anyone to establish a permanent world peace without a league of nations.

LOOKS LIKE SLUMP IN PRICE OF SUGAR—A BIG DECLINE IN NEW ORLEANS

New York, Aug. 30.—Poor demand for refined sugar has led to absence of interest in the New York sugar market. Cuban holders are offering raw sugar at 11 cents a pound, cost and freight, while the best bid in the market is 8 cents. There was a small sale of Peru sugar at 9.7-8 cents, cost and freight, today, which is the equivalent of 10.1-8 cents for Cuban.

The small export inquiry in the market was not of sufficient volume to affect prices.

New Orleans, Aug. 30.—The wholesale price of granulated sugar was reduced 5.1-2 cents today by the Henderson refinery, making the price to retailers at 17 cents.

TO OUR ESTEEMED AND CENSORIOUS CRITICS.

Under the above caption, The Dallas News prints a very apt exposition of its position following a red-hot political campaign, during which it, in common with most other newspapers, has weathered ridicule, abuse and contumely by reason of difference with, misconception of, or misinformation regarding its views during the late unpleasantness. The News says: "The News did not succeed in pleasing everybody during the late unpleasantness, nor could it have done so, since all were not in agreement. To suggest some of the difficulties which the effort to be fair encounters, it might say that it has been denounced because it has reported the utterances of a candidate for office, and denounced for having published nothing on his side. It has been flooded with communications relating to the gubernatorial campaign, and nine in ten of these have given rise to fancied grievances. Many of these have been exceedingly long; most of them rehashed old statements and arguments. Many of them were mere personal declarations of intention to support one or the other of the candidates. The entire mass on many days would have filled an entire issue of The News. Obviously, for this reason alone, it was obliged to reject most of the communications and to trim others. Many of them were rejected because of the violence of the language employed, or because they asserted as facts things which were merely deductions. Many of the persons who tendered these communications, these being on both sides of the gubernatorial contest, denounced it for not publishing their products or for abridging them. Some of them accused it of trying to fool the people. But it was not a new experience. In fact, it has witnessed just such symptoms of partisan zeal and public excitement in many campaigns throughout its history. But it is comforted by the thought that always in the past, after the "heat of debate," most of its censorious critics have resumed cordial relations with The News. So it expects and hopes it will be now. At all events, to all of its well-intending, if often unjust critics, The News carries the assurance of its most distinguished consideration.

Dainty announcement cards announce the arrival of Edna May Peck on August 12th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Peck at Hamilton, Texas. No one can doubt for a minute but that the jovial editor of the Ham-

ASSURING DEMOCRATIC ASCENDANCY.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram of Monday has the following timely editorial:

And finally we would sound a note of warning to the victorious "leaders" of the recent campaign. This is no time to alienate Democrats through arrogance and narrow-minded displays of arbitrary power. All good Democrats should support Mr. Neff as the Democratic nominee. The Star-Telegram will support him. But the fact that more than half of the voters of the State remained away from the polls at each of the primary elections must be recognized. A coalition between the Republicans and the so-called American party to elect a candidate for Governor in November is not improbable. If the Democrats of Texas give Mr. Neff their united support, as they should, there will be nothing to fear from a coalition. But the recent campaign was the most bitter in years and it is important that this bitterness shall be allayed as quickly as possible in order that a united front may be presented. It is for the voters to say how quickly that can be accomplished. Democrats of the minority faction should be conciliated and not alienated. Vindictiveness could easily develop a situation which would result in demonstrating to the Democratic party in Texas that it cannot always nominate whom it pleases and get away with it. It is a time for closing ranks behind the nominee in order that the continued ascendancy of the Democratic party in Texas may be secured.

SO MOTE IT BE.

There are a few men in all parties or factions who discredit their candidates as well as their organization by their narrowness, their ill-tempereds and their lack of appreciation of the eternal fitness of things. They were found among the followers of Mr. Bailey in the campaign that has just closed. They were found in the Neff camp, as the exhibition of rowdiness on the sidewalks and in the lobby of the Metropolitan hotel on Saturday night disclosed. There are men who permit their passions and prejudices to control their actions or their tongues in times when partisan feeling runs high, but the vast majority of Texans are sane and considerate and champions of free assembly, freedom of political action, freedom of speech and a free press.—Editor of The Fort Worth Record.

SANATORIUM TO LOSE TUBERCULAR PATIENTS TO ARMY AND NAVY HOSPITALS

San Angelo, Tex., Aug. 30.—Three local sanatoriums that have been caring for almost 100 tubercular veterans of the World War for more than a year will lose 25 to 30 of their patients during September. The government has opened its army and navy hospitals to war risk insurance beneficiaries and is now able to accommodate ex-service men.

Announcement to this effect was made here Saturday after Doctors Frank Brewer and M. L. Compton of Houston, representatives of the United States public health service, had inspected the sanatoriums in which the ex-service men are treated.

Miss Elizabeth Sheppe, representing the federal board of vocational training, will open a school for disabled veterans on Sept. 1, and it will be maintained as long as a sufficient number of men remain here.

LOCAL BRIEFS

J. R. Herd was in this week from the Doole community all smiles because of the fine cotton crop they have out his way. J. R. says cotton is already opening, and by next week picking will be on in full blast.

A. W. Wood was in from Melvin Wednesday and reported his gin just about ready for the fall season. In fact, he had already ginned his first bale, brought in by Arthur Gibson, living on Siler's place near Doole.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Will Hampton. It's a fine boy, whose arrival was announced on Monday morning, August 30th. Mother and babe reported doing splendidly, and "Bill" wears the smile that won't come off.

Writes our old friend, R. L. Richter, now located at ElCentro, California: "Please send The Standard to me here. We all miss it so much—it is like a letter from home. I have seen lots of country since I left old McCulloch and some fine country, but, everything considered, give me Texas—it will always seem like home to me."

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Crum were among the business visitors here from Melvin the first of the week. Mr. Crum reports his new gin ready for business and he is looking forward to a prosperous and busy season. The gin purchased by Mr. Crum at Pear Valley has been thoroughly overhauled and rebuilt and will be operated this season by E. M. Neyland.

F. R. Peres, who is farming on the A. J. Johnson place about six miles north of Brady, has presented The Standard editor with a fine pumpkin, which tipped the beam at 42 pounds. Frank says he has many other large pumpkins, although none quite so large as this. He is one of our substantial Mexican citizens, an industrious, hard-working farmer, and the fact that his crop yields are among the best in this section attest to his good methods and industry. Frank made a splendid crop last year, and expects to duplicate that performance again this year.

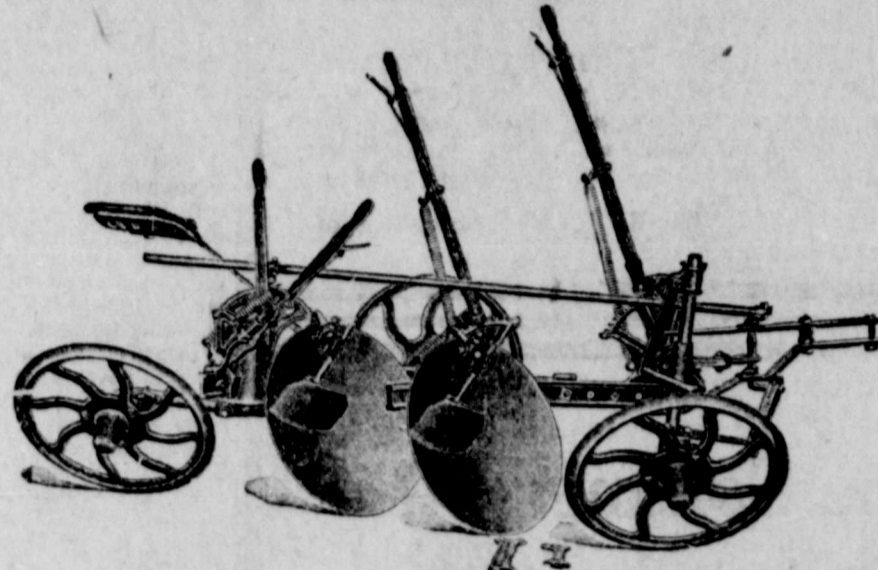

The city street force this week began the much-needed improvement of North Bridge street from the court-house square to the bridge over Brady creek. The city's engine has been hitched to the scarifier and the street surface has been torn up for re-working. The street will be re-graded, the low places will be filled in, crushed rock will be placed where needed, and the steam roller then used to put a smooth and wearing surface on the street. This work will meet with universal commendation, as the street is one of the most-traveled in the city and has long been in bad repair.

Mrs. Harry Irwin returned Wednesday from Achille, Okla., where she has been visiting for several weeks with her mother, Mrs. S. J. Flannery. Mrs. Irwin states that Mr. Irwin is now located at Dublin in the market business and that he is doing splendidly—so much so, in fact, that they have decided to make their home in Dublin. Mrs. Irwin will be here a few weeks arranging for the removal of their household effects to Dublin, and disposing of their residence property. Her mother has disposed of her property in Oklahoma, and will join the Irwins in Dublin to make her home with them.

Messrs. E. B. Elliott and D. H. Henderson were up from the Voca and Lost Creek communities this week, and reported that their fine crop prospects of a month ago had gone a-glimmering. Thirty days ago they had the finest prospects they had ever known for a cotton crop. Then came the disastrous hail storm of the early part of August, followed by continuous and heavy downpours of rain which left the ground soggy for weeks. The cotton stalks turned red, and what the hail and wet did not ruin, the boll weevils took over. As a result, outside of the cotton that was practically matured before the rain set in, they will make but mighty little out of their cotton crops.

J. F. Quicksall has bought the Dean Slaughter farm in the Dodge community, and with Mrs. Quicksall, occupied the place the early part of the past month. The new purchase comprises 160 acres, half of which is in cultivation, and includes a house, well, windmill and other improvements. The purchase price was $35.00 per acre. It adjoins Mr. Quicksall's other farms in the Dodge community, and makes him the possessor now of 731 acres of the most desirable farming land in that section. This acreage is divided into four farms, one of which is being

Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Hughes and little daughter returned last Friday from a trip and outing of several weeks, which they spent in the White Mountains of New Mexico. They also visited a day or two in Mesalero. The White Mountains are noted for the Indian reservation there, and the Hughes enjoyed several sight-seeing trips through the reservation, bringing back with them many interesting souvenirs in the way of beaded work, baskets, and other novelties. There are three tribes of Indians in the reservation—the Apaches, Mesaleros and another tribe. These tribes do not intermingle nor intermarry, and each maintains their own camp and councils. Visitors are not allowed to remain at the reservation over night, without special permit; however the government forest reserve adjoins the reservation and affords a splendid camping place; consequently the Hughes camped in this forest in between visits at the reservation.

FEDERAL MONEY FOR STATE ROAD AID IS TOTALLY EXHAUSTED

Washington, Aug. 31.—Serious handicaps to the states and a setback to the entire program of road building in the United States were predicted yesterday by Thomas H. McDonald, chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, Department of Agriculture, unless Federal action is taken in the current fiscal year on the subject of Federal aid for state roads construction, $100,000,000, McDonald points out, became available July 1, 1920.

When to this is added an equal amount of state funds, as required by law if states are to secure Federal aid, funds will be available sufficient to carry the road construction program forward for the current year. But McDonald points out that the states should know at least a year in advance what funds are to be available in order that plans can be made for future construction.

"The states have had four years in which to prepare for the expenditure of the large funds which now become available," he said. "They expect to be able to handle them. What is of greater concern to them at present is the condition which may result if Federal appropriations are allowed to lapse."

First Aid for the Idle.

In a golfing party down in Florida of which George Ade was a member, an elderly man was very much interested in getting Mr. Ade's ideas on life.

"Mr. Ade," he asked, "how can a man past fifty, practically retired, spend his time, even though he has everything he wants, without work?"
"Oh, I don't know," said Ade. "It's pretty nice to spend a winter down here golfing. Then if a man has a big country home like mine in Indiana he can go there in the spring and sit out on the porch, in the sunshine, and listen to the hardening of his arteries." —Saturday Evening Post.

"Golly, but I'm tired!" exclaimed a tall and thin negro, meeting a short and stout friend.

"What you been doin' to get tired?" demanded the other.
"Well," explained the thin one, drawing a deep breath, "over to Brother Smith's dey are measurin' de house for some new carpets. Dey haven't got no yardstick and I've just exactly six feet tall. So to oblige Brother Smith I've been a-lyin' down and a-gettin' up all over deir house."

"The Wires are Already There"

Sometimes, when folks order a telephone, they say: "It won't take you but a few minutes to install it, because the wires are already on the house."

BUT—

The circuit from the house all the way to the telephone exchange is the one that really counts—

That circuit is released—used for some other subscribers—when a telephone is removed.

Another must be built up for you before your telephone can be installed, and that takes time and work—

That is why it takes longer than "just a few minutes" to install a telephone—because there is a great deal more to do than simply to fasten the instrument on your wall!

Members of the Masonic order and the Eastern Star, were in receipt of the following invitations this week: You are cordially invited to attend an Informal Reception at the Masonic Temple given by the Order of The Eastern Star Wednesday evening, September first at eight o'clock.

The occasion proved a delightful gathering for many of the members of the order, and of the Masonic lodge, and a most enjoyable time was had, punch being served to the guests throughout the evening. A musical program was also enjoyed, a handsome player-piano, provided by courtesy of Davis & Gartman, being used. Following the program, delicious refreshments of cream and cake were served.

J. B. Whiteman addressed the gathering and told of the desire of the ladies of the O. E. S. to purchase a piano, to be installed in the Masonic temple and which would be of use and benefit to the members of the Masonic fraternity. The membership assembled enthusiastically endorsed the project, and it was decided to circulate a subscription list among members of the fraternity in an endeavor to raise the required amount.

Picnic on San Saba.

A most enjoyable time was spent Tuesday night by a jolly crowd of young folks in a picnic gathering at the San Saba crossing. The trip was made on a truck, Mrs. Willie Ballou chaperoning the crowd. Sandwiches were carried out, and added to the pleasure of the occasion. Various games passed the hours swiftly, and upon the return to Brady the evening's fun was made complete by a serenading tour of the town on the truck. Included among the picnickers were Misses Carmen Anderson, Marjorie McCall, Maggie Bryson, Vanda Aschbacher, Alice Samuel, Blanche Awalt, Florence Smith, Katherine Ballou, Cleone Deaver; Messrs. Royston Taylor, John Simpson, Glenn Rickes, Chas. Samuel, Dudley Westbrook, Arthur Awalt, Robert McGrew, Jim Espy.

A FAMILIAR ROLE

By ALVAH J. GARTH

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

Suggesting a person shamed, but driven to desperation, a man in threadbare garb stepped furtively from a sheltering doorway and confronted Mantell Barth so abruptly that the well-groomed, prosperous looking theater manager recoiled, uncertain whether the former was a footpad or a mendicant.

"I am weak, hungry, homeless!" came the bitter words, convincing in their expression, and the generous hand of Barth went to his pocket. Then he gave a great start.

"Arden Hyslop!" he exclaimed, and aside from surprise palpable gladness was in tone and face.

The other drew back as if humiliated by the recognition. "It is Mr. Barth?" he uttered faintly, peering closely. "I used to know you once."

"Know me now!" ordered Barth in bluff, hearty tones, and he linked his arm in a spontaneous friendly fashion with that of the other. "Down on your luck? I've been through that many a time since you and I met, ten years ago. I have an hour to spare. A restaurant, first! Don't talk, eat."

Barth's manner was irresistible. He fairly forced Hyslop along with him. He showed no embarrassment in ushering his unkempt companion into a fashionable restaurant. He spoke to him as though they were close familiar friends, he ordered a princely meal. Then as it was finished he took out his pocket book and selected from it half a dozen bank notes.

"Hyslop," he said, "I wish you to go and make yourself presentable and report at my office at the Grand theater at four o'clock this afternoon. Will you do it?" and the other bowed his head mutely in assent. His heart was too full for words.

"Our old acquaintanceship is all right," pursued Barth, "but aside from that business is business. By a strange circumstance one actor with the principal role in our play was taken ill this morning. I was on my way to find a substitute when I met you. Was ever such luck! For if I remember aright you made a great hit in that drama, 'The Wanderer,' years ago. You must be familiar with the text."

"I will come," promised Hyslop, "only I fear you will be disappointed in me."

Arden Hyslop looked a new man when he appeared at the theater that afternoon. Well fed, well dressed now, sober, grateful to generous-hearted Barth, a flash of hope and ambition had come to him. For five years he had sunk lower and lower after his habits of dissipation had separated him from his wife who, like himself, belonged to the histrionic profession. He had not heard from her or their little child since their parting.

Barth greeted the resuscitated actor cheerily, and with satisfaction as he noticed his clean shaved face and new neatly fitting attire. He handed him the manuscript of the play with the words:

"Just to remind you of the cues and the general run of the piece, you must remember the old lines pretty well. You will have good support, a lady who has made her mark in the role of 'Margaret.'"

"Who is she?" inquired Barth casually.

"Your wife."

It was a true dramatic climax. The manager watched its effect upon Hyslop with curiosity and interest.

"Beatrice? oh, never!" gasped Hyslop, recollecting. "Why, man! do you not know that we have been separated for years, that I dragged her down to poverty and then cruelly deserted her? By this time doubtlessly she has legally severed the tie that bound us as man and wife."

"You mistake," Barth informed him. "Your wife is not a woman to forget the man she once loved."

"And little Aileen?"

"Takes the child's part in the play. Man, if you are in earnest in your professed desire to heal the past, don't refuse this opportunity!"

Mrs. Hyslop was not made aware of the identity of the substitute actor by Barth, and it was only after the play had begun that she began to suspect, and then knew to a certainty that it was her husband who shared with her the two leading characters in the drama. She paled, she trembled, but, actresslike, she went through the ordeal, immersed in doing justice to her role.

It was in the final act, however, when "the wanderer" returned to his family after a long separation, that she broke down. In the play the husband and father steals in upon his beloved child and reveals himself and together they weep with joy over his return.

The little one did not recognize him, but Arden Hyslop played the prodigal father with a fervor and pathos that held the whole audience spellbound. His caresses, his real tears, the ardor of his very soul permeated every line he spoke. As the curtain fell, thunders of applause fairly shook the edifice. Call and recall, father, mother, child were compelled to appear to receive the enthusiastic homage of the audience.

Then back of the scenes Beatrice Hyslop fainted a way, but into the arms of the husband she had given up long since as lost to the world and its old sweet ways, but his arm-supported her, and as his glowing eyes met her own as she recovered, she knew that his purified soul cried out for her and the little one beside them.

EXTENSION OF FRISCO LINE TO DEL RIO PLANNED

The Menard-Del Rio extension of the Frisco's Fort Worth & Rio Grande branch, now being agitated at Del Rio, would be of immense benefit to Fort Worth as well as to the vast new territory which it would open up, and should have the fullest encouragement of Fort Worth interests.

These sentiments were expressed Monday by William Monnig, president of the Chamber of Commerce and Jule G. Smith, member of its railroad committee.

"I am very much interested in this proposed extension," Monnig said. "When the project is in tangible shape it will have the hearty support of Fort Worth and the Chamber of Commerce."

Both Lines Needed.

"It is possible that our proposed road to the Northwest would be of more direct and immediate benefit to us, but we need both. The resources of the large section of Southwest Texas which the Del Rio extension would open up are great and direct communication with them would be of the greatest importance to Fort Worth in a commercial way. I notice that the haul would be shortened from 734 miles as at present, to 360 miles, which should mean a great deal to the livestock interests of that section and to Fort Worth as a center of the packing industry. The benefit to Fort Worth jobbing interests is obvious."

"This proposed extension," said Smith, "extending from Menard to Del Rio through Junction and Rock Springs, would have the same effect, and Fort Worth would derive the same benefits from the project as would come from a line extended west from Fort Worth to a connection with the Gulf, Texas & Western, the latter road to be extended on through Benjamin, Guthrie and Dickens to a connection with the Santa Fe for Amarillo to the north and Lubbock and Roswell due west."

Would Encourage Cattle Raisers.

"The Menard-Del Rio extension of the Frisco might not enjoy as heavy a traffic as the road to the west towards Lubbock and Amarillo would enjoy for a few years, but a vaster area of virgin cattle territory would be served by the Menard-Del Rio extension which would give the immense territory embraced in the counties of Schleicher, Menard, Mason, Kimble, Sutton, Edwards, Real, Val Verde, Kinney, Maverick and others, a direct route in place of a very round about route to the Fort Worth stockyards. The line would encourage the greater production of cattle and sheep in those great grazing counties which would thus supply both cattle and sheep in greater numbers for the Fort Worth market and packeries."

"The consummation of this project would likely open up a new international route through Fort Worth from the North and West to Mexico and add volume to the vast passenger traffic that passes through Fort Worth. Importance would thus be added to our city as a passing or transient point and the patronage of our hotels would be increased."

Would Aid Wholesalers.

"In addition to these advantages, a direct line to all these undeveloped counties of our State would give our wholesale houses new and greatly important territory as an outlet for their wares and create a new field of endeavor for Fort Worth's great army of traveling salesmen."

"If Fort Worth can do anything to encourage an extension of the Frisco Railroad from Menard to Del Rio, certainly such encouragement should be forthcoming in the most vigorous and substantial way."

"This line to the border of Old Mexico and our contemplated road to Perrine and through Jack, Young and Stephens counties to Albany, would make Fort Worth the greatest railroad center in the Southwest, not excluding Kansas City."—Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

The Call of Home

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

At thirty-five, Darius Moxley settled down to comfort and peace so far as the problems of life were concerned, content to accept and appreciate the awards of destiny.

"I love the old town, my neighbors are like brothers and sisters, the place I live in is cheap as to rent and very dear to my soul on account of old memories; I make a living—what more does a man want?"

"The old place—yes, it's the Dabney home, isn't it? Strange about that family," spoke the man who was listening to Moxley's statement. "They were three fine girls. What became of them and how is it that you came to inherit the place?"

"Oh, I haven't inherited it," said Darius. "After the family moved it was put up for sale, but nobody wanted it. Then it was offered for lease, it just suited mother and myself, so we've been tenants ever since. The agent tells me he sends the rent to the elder of the ladies, Miss Flora. After they settled in the city Annette died, Vera got married—did very well, too, I hear, and I think Flora has been living with her."

Darius sighed and a dreamy, far-away look came into his eyes. There was a reason he did not disclose as to his fondness for the old Dabney home. At twenty he had settled his mind down to the fact that the only girl in Wellston worth admiring was Flora Dabney. He had never courted her in the real sense of the word, for she and her sisters were rather exclusive, but they all liked the neighborly, unassuming ways of Darius, particularly Flora, and only because Annette and Vera her sisters had fired the ardent soul of Flora with mighty ambitions, was the latter deterred from encouraging this adorer, mute as to words of love, but betraying a silent devotion that was a sincere tribute from a worthy young man.

Darius suffered secretly when Flora told of taking up their lives amid new scenes, and she realized this and sorrowed for his sake. She could not trust herself to a last meeting alone with Darius, and after she bade a final good-by to Wellston she sat back in her seat in the train crying softly over the abandonment of a love so pure, simple and steadfast that she recognized that she was making a cruel sacrifice.

"I'll be content," he decided. "She was a sweet girl, she liked me some and I am glad I loved her. I'm too humble to ever meet her ideals, though, so I'll stick to mother and the old town."

It was like going into a temple that was sacred and revered, when Darius reentered the old Dabney home. There was a particular flower bed that had always had the exclusive care of Flora, and this, Darius tended and nurtured with tender memories.

Constantly he would close his eyes and would fancy Flora coming down the stairs in all her airy grace and beauty.

Darius was manager of a large farm near the village in the ploughing and harvesting seasons. For the rest of the time daily he drove an old-fashioned carryall down to the trains morning and evening, to receive and deliver light express shipments and passengers. His horse was slow and old, the vehicle had grown rickety and sagging, and an enterprising innovator had put into service an automobile for the same line of service. His charges were high, however, and the old-fashioned element in the village adhered to their faithful townsman.

One evening just at dusk Darius drove to the depot to meet the six o'clock city train. A veiled lady alighted. She set her suitcase at her feet and shook her head negatively as the driver of the automobile bus solicited her as a fare. Darius noted that she glanced all about until her eye rested on his old carryall. Almost eagerly, he fancied, she advanced to it. She seemed flustered, pleased, embarrassed, all at once. She placed a caressing hand on the head of old Dobbin and there seemed to be a catch in her voice as she half-whispered his name. Darius was surprised and puzzled.

"You seem to know my horse," he submitted.

"Yes, years ago," came the reply in a subdued tone. "Has Wellston got a hotel yet?"

"No, ma'am," answered Darius.

"I wish to find board and lodging for a week," spoke the veiled lady.

"My mother accommodates transients once in a while," said Darius.

"Oh, yes, yes," replied his passenger eagerly. "Please take me there. And, first, drive all about the town, will you? I want to see what it looks like after some years of absence. Darius, don't you know me?"

She had thrown back her veil and Darius was spellbound. It was Flora Dabney. She looked more sedate than of yore, and sad and wearied. There were tears in eyes and voice. She got into the carryall by his side, and as in a dream the slow conveyance went all about the village as in a vision, indeed, Darius listened to the story of his early love, world tired and disappointed in ideals that were delusions, coming back like a straying bird to its home nest, asking only peace, and comfort, and perhaps love.

He hoped so, as his honest heart gave a great throb. He knew so a few days later, after Flora Dabney realized the silent, but steadfast loyalty of that true soul through the lost years of his life.

BIGGER PREMIUMS OFFERED FARMERS BY COTTON PALACE

Blooded Stock From Big Texas Ranches Will Be Sent To Waco

A bigger show for farmers and a bigger and better entertainment for the farmer and his family is primarily the program of the Texas Cotton Palace this year.

As well as the premium list being considerably increased, the amusement end of the 1920 Cotton Palace has also been arranged with the farmer in view.

Agricultural exhibits from east, west and south Texas will form a part of the mammoth display that will be arranged in the spacious buildings shortly before the show opens on October 30 and which will be a drawing attraction throughout the sixteen-day period that the Texas Cotton Palace is maintained.

Competitive Exhibits

According to present arrangements a triangular competitive contest between east, west and south Texas for prize exhibits will add interest to these agricultural displays. The different district chambers of commerce and agricultural bureaus of chambers in the various towns are interesting farmers in their especial territory in this progressive step.

The extension department of the A. & M. College, which has supervision over 150 county demonstration activities in the state, has agreed to supervise a representative Texas Cotton Palace agricultural production. The extension department's showing has always drawn considerable attention at Waco and it is expected that it will win more favor this year, as increased effort is being put into the gathering of this great collection to put into Texas' farm show-window, the Cotton Palace.

Bigger Livestock Show

This year's Texas Cotton Palace livestock show will also be bigger than ever before.

The barns at the edge of the track which have been maintained for years to stable race horses brought to the Palace, are being converted into sheds to shelter the swine and cows and mules that will contest for honors this year.

Carefully raised prize-winning Jerseys, Herefords and other blooded cattle will be brought to the Cotton Palace from all parts of the state. And owners of famous stock farms in Iowa, Illinois, Oklahoma and other states will also enter their favorite cattle at the Texas show.

The King and Taft ranches probably will send large exhibits of blooded stock to the Cotton Palace this year.

Premium Price Increased

Approximately $15,000 will be expended for prizes. This amount has been increased by nearly $5,000 in comparison to that offered in previous years.

This year's Texas Cotton Palace offers honors for poultry, rabbits and other small animals, as it has in the past.

ALL RAILROADS GRANT EXCURSION RATES TO TEXAS COTTON PALACE

Recognizant of the importance of the Texas Cotton Palace, Waco, Oct. 30 to Nov. 14, as an instructive agricultural as well as entertaining social gathering place for thousands of Texans, all railroads have agreed to offer reduced rates as an incentive to prospective Texas Cotton Palace visitors.

A fare and a third for round-trip tickets will be offered. These tickets will be good for stop-overs during the entire sixteen days the exposition will be in operation.

Vets of the Khaki

Texas' former soldiers will find the Texas Cotton Palace, Waco, Oct. 30 to Nov. 14 an appropriate place to meet their former comrades and spend a few days with them enjoying the festivities and talking over the days of darker times.

THE AMERICAN MILLS ARE STOCKING UP WITH FOREIGN WOOLS, SAYS BLANTON

In response to an inquiry directed to him by Harry G. Hubert, editor of the Coleman Democrat-Voice, Congressman Thomas L. Blanton writes from Washington, D. C., under date of August 28, 1920, as follows:

"Mr. Harry G. Hubert, Coleman, Tex. "My dear Mr. Hubert:—Answering your recent favor concerning the present wool market, will state that for some time, I have been distressed over the report that American mills are stocking up with imported foreign wools without a market."

"While I am a loyal Democrat and am unalterably opposed to protecting the few against the interest of the many, I have been forced to realize that in safe-guarding the interests of the city consumers, we have sadly neglected the rural producers who feed and clothe the United States."

"Every laborer in the city eats beef, or bacon, or mutton, and wears cotton in the summer and wool in the winter. He is interested in the production of an adequate supply of all these products in the United States. The above products have become staples in the United States. Unless the producer can make a fair return for his year of labor, he is going to quit the farm and ranch and move to the city. Statistics show that our rural districts are rapidly losing in population, indicating that there are more attractive and remunerative employments in the cities."

"The whole reason and trouble of it all is that we have been protecting the city consumer and forgetting the rural producer. In many ways, we protect every branch of urban laborers from the cheap-labor competition of foreign countries, while at the same time we give very little protection to the rural producer against the competitive products of foreign countries, always priced lower than ours, because raised by a cheaper class of labor."

"Just now the peanut industry in this country is jeopardized by reason of the fact that our market on fats has been paralyzed through tremendous importations of vegetable oils and oil-bearing seed, mainly from Japan, China and India, where labor is very cheap, affecting likewise the dairy interests of our country. The time has come when we must do something to adequately safeguard and protect the interests of our producers, as it is a question which should favorably concern the whole people of the United States."

"Sincerely your friend,
"THOMAS L. BLANTON."

Perhaps You Are, Too

A friend of mine was worn out running around trying to buy a particular something-or-other.

Hours had been spent, also strength and temper, and the desired article had not been found.

I asked if a try had been made at such and such a store.

The reply was "No, of course not; they don't carry such things."

I disagreed. We went together and found what was wanted.

My friend said: "How did you know?"

"Easy," I replied. "They advertised them last week."

Without seeing the joke, she said: "I never have time to read advertisements. I'm too busy."

Perhaps you are too. Many people are too busy to take time to save time, trouble and money. Then buy by chance—and hard work.

Reading advertisements is more than a time-saver; it's good, safe investment in information concerning the best things the market offers you.

 Nervous troubles, with headache,

 Ask your neighbor.
 Mrs. J. U. Silvers, Brady, she says:
 "I had the 'flu' and it left my back in a very weak state. I could hardly get around as the pain in the small of my back was severe. I was so nervous the least noise would irritate me. I would have had spells of dizziness and everything would turn black before me.
 Nights I was so I couldn't get any rest and I was annoyed by the irregular action of my kidneys. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills so I bought some

NO SYSTEM CAN BEAT BANK

But a Certain Old Lady Surely "Threw a Scare" into the Monte Carlo Authorities.

Lord Rosslyn, and other frequenters of Monte Carlo, who are said to be tracking their brains to invent a system to "break the bank," may as well save themselves the trouble, for, as M. Blanc, founder of the gaming tables, once truly said: "He wins sometimes, black often, but Blanc (white) always, and in defiance of every system human ingenuity can devise."

"There never has been a system," the directors said to an interviewer not long ago, according to London Answers, "which has given us a moment's anxiety—save one, and that one 'system' was the discovery of an old lady who had frequented the tables for years. She had noticed that at roulette certain numbers always followed each other. Thus, if the crumpler spun with the number nine opposite him, 26 was certain to be next; and if zero was in the same position, 32 would surely follow. After checking her observations day after day, she began to play, and won—won in all 300,000 francs, breaking the bank three times. The officials were in despair. M. Blanc was summoned from Paris, and, as a desperate resource, he persuaded the old lady to part with her secret for 70,000 francs down.

"The secret was absurdly simple after all. The roulette wheel had become warped by the heat, and was not quite round, so that when spun from a certain point, it invariably stuck at a certain other point."

TURKISH MOSQUE ON WHEELS

Enabled Pilgrims to Mecca to Conduct Their Devotions While on Way to Holy City.

The "chapel railway coaches, with seating accommodation for 50, now fitted to certain long-distance expresses in America, are not entirely a novelty.

A "mosque car" used to be run on the railway built 15 years ago between Damascus and Mecca the capital being subscribed mainly by pious Mussulmans. All the rest of the rolling stock was obtained from countries outside Turkey, but the mosque car was built in Constantinople.

It was externally distinguished by a minaret about eight feet high projecting from the roof; the walls were inscribed with verses of the Koran, and at one end a large compass was hung, indicating the direction of the holy city.

Pilgrims to Mecca were thus able to conduct their devotions with full pomp and ceremony during the three days' journey from Damascus.—London Tit-Bits.

Electricity to Locate Oil.
 New uses for electricity are constantly appearing. One of the latest is the detection of crude oil in the earth instead of boring for it. It is stated that crude petroleum has been located electrically in the shallow oil-field near Corsicana, Tex., and that further tests are being made around Burkburnett. A series of batteries is used for the test, the negative terminal being connected to a wire which is dropped into a dry waterhole, valley or indentation, and the positive terminal being connected to a "land wire," which is used to make contact at various points on the surface of the field investigated. It is stated that the higher electrical resistance of oil compared with other constituents of the earth, permits it to be located by the reduced deflection of a sensitive instrument in the circuit.

Pulp Yields 20 Commodities.
 Twenty commodities manufactured from near-silk made from the pulp of fir, spruce, and hemlock are being exhibited by the West Coast Lumbermen's association in Portland, Ore. The exhibit was prepared in the United States forests products laboratory of the University of Wisconsin and is being sent to all parts of the country for inspection. The commodities include silk cloth, silk stockings, gunpowder, paper absorbent (a substitute for absorbent cotton), paper bagging, rope and twine, linoleum, shingles, reed fiber for furniture and matting, paper lath, rug yarn, paper webbing and phonograph records.—Indianapolis News.

War Brides Awearry.
 Incompatibility of American and French customs has caused 12,000 of approximately 50,000 French war brides to return to France, according to Mrs. Reginald H. Johnson, president of the recently organized L'Espoir Franco-American club in Pittsburgh. The club, formed at the suggestion of Mile. Odette de Bonglon of Paris, who was in Pittsburgh recently, is expected to broaden the interests of French girls who became the brides of Americans overseas, and to make them contented in their new homes.

Pictures Show Effects on Tires.
 Slow motion pictures of the type that have amused movie fans by slowing down swiftly moving bodies to the point where every action may be analyzed have been utilized by a tire company for a scientific study of just what happens when a heavily loaded motor-truck climbs a curb, drops off an elevation or bumps over a railroad track.

This is the first time this very valuable form of photography has been used by a tire company. Among the questions the pictures will aid in solving are the effects of heavy blows on highways, trucks, roads and tires.

A Trick of Fortune

By ALVAH J. GARTH
 (Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

"An ideal place," said Rodney Merle to himself in a highly satisfied way as he set his suitcase on a chair in a very plainly furnished, but scrupulously neat and clean room, and glanced from its open window upon a rare scene of sylvan solitude and beauty.

He had sought to find some peaceful rural place where he could rest and read, wander in the woods and take in a supply of pure country air and sunshine. Fate had sent him to Leesville and an equally kind old-fashioned postmaster had directed him to the home of Mrs. Abigail Briggs. A pretty modest girl of about eighteen had greeted him pleasantly and her mother, a stately old lady, evinced a sincerity and dignity that told of good breeding.

"I hope the postmaster told you that we are poor folks and live very plain," said the widowed mistress of the little home. "My husband died leaving us nothing but this poor old property, but if fresh cream and butter and plenty of green stuff and berries and chickens and eggs are what you like you can have them in plenty."

"You will find the old lady set in her opinions and a trifle bitter over the great disappointment of her life," the postmaster had told Merle. "She and her husband had toiled hard to earn and save, but when he died there wasn't a trace even of the securities he had told his widow about while living. It's a blessing that she has Lottie, a girl all gold. Works like a beaver, and with her school teaching in season and what they sell of the produce of the place she has kept thearder full and the old ramshackly house out of debt."

"Mother wishes to know if there is anything we can do to add to your comfort," said Lottie half an hour after Merle's arrival, appearing at the door of his room.

"Why, I was thinking if I had a small stand or table," replied Merle. "It would make things just prime. I do a good deal of writing at times," and he indicated some writing utensils he had temporarily placed on the bureau.

"I think I know what will suit you," announced Lottie. "There is a small table we used to play games on stored away in the attic," and five minutes later she reappeared carrying the object she had described, which Merle set in a corner of the room. Lottie went downstairs with the words: "Tea will be ready in a few minutes."

Merle found some difficulty in opening the drawer of the stand and a tinkling bell sounded downstairs as he managed to pull it open. He hurried in his house papers and descended to the lower floor to partake of "the finest meal I ever enjoyed," he afterwards asserted.

Within two days Merle was fully domesticated. Before his first week was passed he had become the confidant and sympathizer of the old lady, who constantly dilated on their great and mysterious loss of fortune.

As to Lottie she came into the life of Merle so simple, so refreshing that he sought her companionship whenever she was at leisure. The postmaster had jocularly advised him not to fall in love with Lottie for she had broken the hearts of half a dozen ardent suitors, who had learned that the faithful daughter had consecrated her young life to looking solely after her mother until she had earned enough to place her in a position of independence.

Merle awoke one morning at the echo of a vivid scream downstairs and hurried on his clothes as smoke and smell of burning wood warned him of apparent fire peril. The lower part of the house was in flames. He aided the two terrified women to get outside in safety, returned to carry out what he could of their personal belongings and, remembering his suitcase in his room, hastened thither, filled it with his scattered possessions and dumped in the contents of the drawer of the little stand.

The house was burned to the ground. A neighbor offered to house Lottie and her mother, but the stricken Mrs. Briggs refused to leave the only spot on earth she could call her own. There was a small two-room cottage that had once harbored the hired help and here the two women established themselves. Merle put up at the village hotel.

He did not sleep that night. All through the lonely silent hours he thought of Lottie, of her mother, too. Love and sympathy led his mind to a fixed decision before morning came. And then, while he was doubting that Mrs. Briggs would consent to be dependent even upon a willing son-in-law, or that Lottie would consent to marry him, Merle made a wonderful discovery.

Sorting over the papers he had rescued from the little stand he found that, unknown to himself as to the mother and daughter, it had held several packages, doubtless hidden there by John Briggs for safekeeping. They held securities representing a modest fortune. The missing wealth of the dead man was found at last.

"I will rebuild the house, and since you are determined to be independent, become a life boarder. If it must be that way," pleaded Merle, after he had told Lottie that he could not go away and leave or forget her. And the happy smile on her bonny face assured him that she was fully content.

Three of any of the above committees are authorized to act for the whole.

In addition to the above committees, the chairman of each are instructed to appoint or require to be elected, in each school district similar committees and officers, whose duties it will be to work with and through the central committee.

The duties of the different committees will be as follows:

FINANCE: It will be the duty of this committee to provide such funds as are necessary to pay the expenses of this exhibit, and they are authorized to solicit subscriptions, both public and private, by the circulating of subscription lists in each school district in the county with the understanding that no one individual is to be asked to subscribe less than $1.00 nor more than $25.00, but voluntary subscriptions for either more or less will be accepted and appreciated. The Executive committee respectfully urges that each and every citizen take some part in the financing of the exhibit. It is for all the people, by all the people, and this is the spirit we hope will possess us all.

It will be the further duty of this committee to create similar committees in each school district in the county, and to visit each district at an appointed time, in company with representatives of the Arrangement and Program committees, to thoroughly explain in detail the plan of the exhibit, at the time of creating these committees, and to furnish subscription blanks and such other equipment and information as may be required.

ARRANGEMENT: It will be the duty of this committee to make arrangements for the place of holding this exhibit, and to provide such material as is needed to arrange for the best display of the exhibits and to see that same is properly put in place for the use of exhibitors, by working with the superintendent of grounds. All expenses for this work to be paid out of funds raised by the Finance committee and it will be the duty of this Arrangement committee to ascertain about what amount of funds will be at their disposal and to make arrangements accordingly. It is expected to provide sufficient funds to make thorough and proper arrangements. Superintendent of grounds is by virtue of his office a member of this committee.

EXHIBITS: It will be the duty of this committee together with Superintendent of exhibits, who is a member of same by virtue of his office, to work together in the procuring and arranging of the exhibits proper, and it shall be their further duty to go out over the county, along with the Finance committee, and establish similar committees, for the procuring of the exhibits in each school district, which shall be made through the school or schools of each district, and to arrange with each school for its exhibit, and to render such other advice and assistance as may be necessary or required as to the manner and character of exhibits, etc. It is desired that all permanent or fixed exhibits be in their place not later than Oct. 4th, at 6 o'clock in the evening.

PROGRAM AND ENTERTAINMENT: It will be the duty of this committee, to determine the nature and kind of entertainment to be had and to make provision for same. It is expected that the program will be both entertaining and instructive and it is the duty of this committee not only to procure the entertainment desired, but to arrange the program as they deem proper, from the arrangement of the parade to the last thing on the program and to supervise the rendering of same. It will be the duty of this committee to work with the committee on arrangements and exhibits to the end that nothing with reference to either will conflict and so that provision may be made with reference to your requirements for auditorium seats and etc., and it will also be necessary to organize and work with similar committees in each school district with the object of their taking part in the great parade and to render such assistance together with such suggestions as may be needed.

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE: It will be the duty of this committee to see that the occasion and purpose of this exhibit is thoroughly advertised, not only in McCulloch County, but in every way that they think will be beneficial and especially in the adjoining country. The Executive committee feels that publicity is very necessary if we are to make a success of this exhibit and that judicious advertising will be materially beneficial, and it is your duty to use such mediums as you think best and to communicate with the finance committee to ascertain the amount of funds at your disposal, or rather the amount that in your judgment and theirs, should be used for that purpose, and then to spend it in the way you deem best.

About our proposed Live Stock and Farm Products Exhibit, I want to say that I believe the people all over the county are agreed that we need to have something of the kind. We are indebted to Mr. Black for his perseverance in the matter. We ought to know that we can never have anything worth while unless we all work together for one purpose and that purpose ought to be for the accomplishment of the greatest good to the greatest number of people and for the betterment of our social, religious and financial condition and we ought not be selfishly inclined in our services.

It is the purpose of this exhibit and entertainment, to bring about better social and economical relations in each and every community in the county and throughout all people as a whole, to help us to more fully realize our needs as well as to meet them and to help us to solve our problems as well as to more profitably use the numerous opportunities that present themselves to us. We feel that by coming together in this manner and allowing ourselves to be ourselves to see what our neighbor is doing, exchange ideas and discuss problems that we can not only profit by one another's failures, but successes as well.

With this purpose in view and in order that there might be more incentive for us to work, it has been decided that all exhibits be made by each community, through the school of that community. A man, woman or child that hasn't the interest of their school at heart, needs something done for them and there could be no greater test of one's loyalty or their interest in the community. During the war when people refused to meet their obligations to their country they were held in contempt and any person who will not cheerfully and heartily work for the best interest of community or their school, might be looked upon with some degree of suspicion.

It was first decided not to give any premiums whatever, as they are usually so small as to seem negligible, and must necessarily be so on account of the great number to be given and the great amount of money required. It was thought best to put all the money we could raise into the arranging for exhibits and for entertainment, but after carefully considering the matter, it was decided to offer premiums to the schools of the county in sufficient amounts to be of interest to everyone and enough of them so that a number of schools would be sure to get something.

The plan is for each community to exhibit through its school and everything that community exhibits and their participation in the parade will all count in the judging for these prizes. It is proposed to have a big parade, in which all the schools will be represented, as well as all of the commercial and industrial enterprises of the county who can be induced to participate and it will represent everything from the ridiculous to the sublime, will be headed by a good band and everything from a javalena to an airship will be included. No effort will be spared to make this not only comical but instructive as well, and it is hoped that everyone will enter into the spirit heartily.

Considerable time and effort will be spent on the entertainment feature and we expect to have some good things, something that you will enjoy and that you will be glad for every member of your family to see and not feel that your time has been wasted.

This is not an entertainment or exhibit for profit, but to the contrary, everything will be free. No entrance fees for exhibits nor admittance fees will be charged; all entertainment will be free and will be wholesome as well as instructive on a high plane.

Nothing will be spared to make the exhibits the best ever had in this part of the country. I think we can beat anything we have seen in this section, and you are going to be surprised.

The Executive committee is especially anxious that every citizen take upon himself or herself to do all he or she can in every general way and to do any active work they are called on to do. If you know of any one or see anything that ought to be exhibited, don't fail to see that it is turned over to the proper committee. And when you are approached by any of the committees, show your spirit by your actions and give them your encouragement not only in a financial way, but in every other way you can, and show them that you are willing to be of service when and where you can. You know that the committees cannot have anything by themselves and you are not only earnestly solicited but expected to help in this that will be such a source of inspiration and encouragement to your community and the county as a whole.

We assure you that we are not only willing, but that we are going to do all we can to make it a success and we crave your support and co-operation.

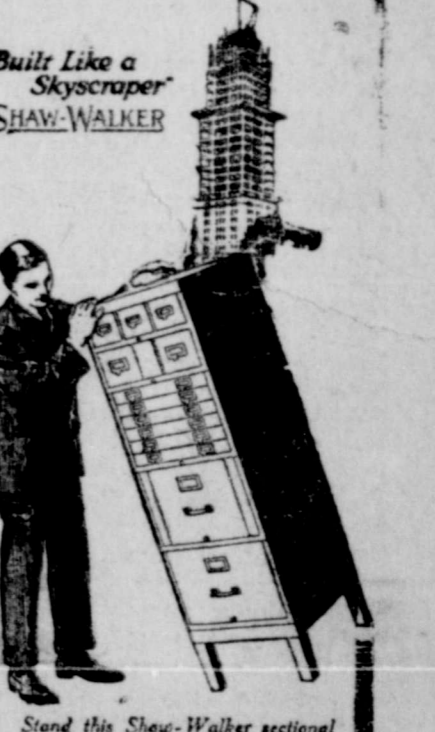

Yours truly,
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.
 By Jas. T. Mann, Chairman.

The Point of View.
 A jury gave judgment of $25,000.00 against an Eastern restaurant man who served a paper of tacks in a bowl of oxtail soup set before a physician. The doctor had a punctured inner tube and a lot of other troubles and may never be as good as he once was. People run up against some new form of tax every day, but when a man gets a paper of tacks in his chowder the iron enters his soul. There are several points to this.—Los Angeles Times.

Neff	241,968
Davidson	179,229
Johnson	155,339
Hawkins	137,885
Pierson	187,050

As comparatively few votes are yet to be heard from, and only fifteen small counties have not yet reported, several of which probably held no elections, this is the final compilation by the Texas Election Bureau until the complete returns from all counties are received.

Andrews, Sterling, Upton, Hansford and probably several other counties held no elections.

It is estimated that the total vote is not above 450,000 and the Neff majority will probably be above 80,000.

The vote in McCulloch county was much lighter than in the July primary, and in the Brady box alone the number of votes cast was 91 less than in July. The total vote cast at Brady was 488, as compared with 579 in July.

Much interest was shown Saturday night in returns showing that Mr. Neff had carried Gainesville and Cooke county, former home of Mr. Bailey, and that he had carried his own home city and county, Waco in McLennan county. On the other hand, Bailey carried El Paso county, the home of R. E. Thomason, one of the candidates for governor in the July primary, and who had since declared in favor of Neff.

Of 196 counties whose unofficial and incomplete returns had been tabulated Sunday night, Neff had majorities in 172 and Bailey had majorities in 24. Among the more interesting county votes reported were the following:

CONCEDES DEFEAT

In a statement issued at Fort Worth late Saturday night Joseph Weldon Bailey said:

"The returns received up to this hour indicate a decisive majority for Mr. Neff. I made the campaign for the principles of Democracy as they have been accepted and cherished for more than 100 years, but the result convinces me that our party in this State will no longer support those principles, but the people have spoken and I accept their verdict as the final conclusion of the matter so far as I am concerned."

VERA CRUZ WORTH VISITING

Mexican City Has a Number of Attractions That Invite the Wandering Tourist.

Vera Cruz is a city of contrasts. Its vividly painted houses of red, blue and yellow, built close to the narrow streets, have grated windows and heavy, forbidding doors, which give little evidence of the charming interiors with their patios, palm-shaded, filled with exotic flowers and cooled by fountains.

Modern street cars look out of place in the same streets with burros laden with merchandise, fruits and vegetables, and caballeros in their broad sombreros, vividly colored blankets, enormous spurs and silver-mounted saddles. Even the tropical climate is in sharp contrast with the snow-capped, extinct volcano, Orizaba, which towers almost 20,000 feet into the cold air above. Although this peak is nearly fifty miles away from the city, it can be plainly seen from there and makes a beautiful picture standing white against the sky or catching all the colors of the sunrise.

Another point of interest is the ancient fortress of San Juan d'Ulloa, which is built on an island, connected to the mainland at the northern end by a long sea wall. It has a fair exterior, being painted a pure and radiant white, but hidden beneath this innocent mantle are dark and noisome dungeons where many political prisoners of Mexico have been kept for years.

Turning hastily from this unpleasant scene, gentle reader, let us retrace our steps to the center of the city, which is marked by the plaza. This is a large and beautiful square filled with palms and flowers, and watched over benignly by the ancient and stately cathedral. Every evening during the band concert it is the quaint custom of the youths of Vera Cruz to promenade around the square on the outside of the walk in one direction, while the young girls, carefully watched over by their duennas, walk in the opposite direction on the inside. In this way most Mexican flirtations are begun.

KNOW ALL ABOUT WEATHER

Animals, in the Construction of Their Houses, Show They Can Forecast the Seasons.

The weather man has co-partners in the prediction of a bad season in the wild animals who qualify as weather prophets for the experienced out-of-doors man.

"Trappers believe firmly in the ability of wild animals to forecast weather conditions," says the Hunter-Trapper, published in Columbus, O. "The type of house which the muskrat builds for the season indicates the kind of weather he expects. When the muskrats build large houses, with thicker walls, a cold winter is to be expected. If the houses are made unusually high, much snow and high water will come."

"Just before a storm, all animals are unusually active and travel fast and far. Even human beings notice a difference in their feelings just before a storm, especially if they are troubled with rheumatism or other ailments of a like nature."

"It is reasonable that nature has provided animals with a sixth sense for forecasting weather conditions which mean so much to them."

Desert Compensations.

For all the toll the desert takes of a man it gives compensations, deep breaths, deep sleep, and the communion of the stars. It comes upon one with new force in the pauses of the night that the Chaldeans were a desert-bred people. It is hard to escape the sense of mystery as the stars move in the wide, clear heavens to risings and settings unobscured. They look large and near and palpable, as if they moved on some stately service, not needful to declare. Wheeling to their appointed stations in the sky, they make the poor world-feeble of no account. Of no account you who lie out there watching, nor the lean coyote that stands off in the scrub from you and howls and howls.—Mary Austin, in "The Land of Little Rain."

Not a Stickup.

While motoring in Tennessee on a lonely road one night we were being followed in a machine containing five colored men. They kept uncomfortably near us, and after a few miles we motioned them to pass, hoping they would speed along, as we feared a possible holdup. Instead of continuing, they stopped directly in front of us, and when one big black fellow asked us to stop our hearts were almost at a standstill. However, we breathed easier when he said: "Will you-all be so kind as to let us have a little gas? We sho' can't make it to town, fo' we am about out."—Exchange.

American Pearls.

There is a species of green or iridescent pearl found occasionally in the abalones, or ear shells, of the California coast. Black and gray pearls are found in Lower California waters; white, pink, brown and other colored pearls in some of the fresh water brooks of Ohio, Tennessee, Texas, Kentucky, and Wisconsin; purple and black pearls are sometimes found in the shells of the common clam of Long Island sound and the Atlantic coast. The principal pearl fisheries of the world are Ceylon, the Persian gulf, western Australia, Torres straits and the Sulu archipelago.

BETTER PASSENGER SERVICE IS WANTED BY WEST TEXAS POINTS

San Angelo, Texas, Aug. 30.—With the ending of the government guarantee to railroads and their return to a competitive basis, a number of towns in West Texas are seeking additional passenger train service on the Santa Fe.

Patrons on the Lometa-Eden branch are urging that a through train from Temple to Eden be inaugurated, leaving Temple daily ahead of No. 91, which is the California special, and relieving this train of local stops between Temple and Lometa. The return train, leaving Eden at noon would make the local stops for No. 92 and would reach Temple about 8 p. m.

The Sweetwater-Coleman division is now served only by the California trains, both of which pass the towns mentioned during the night. This line wants a local train, leaving Sweetwater about 3 o'clock each morning and connecting at Coleman with east and west bound Temple-San Angelo trains. It would return to Sweetwater about noon, after taking passengers from westbound train No. 77, which passes Coleman about 10.30 a. m., and arrives here at 1:50 p. m.

STRAND THEATRE ANNOUNCES OPENING NEXT WEEK

W. E. Weeks, proprietor of the new Strand theatre in the Rice building on the northwest corner of the square, announces opening of the theatre for Wednesday of next week—September 8th. Installation of the motion picture machine, screen and all other equipment has been completed, and temporary seats have been installed in the building pending receipt of the opera chairs ordered direct from the factory.

J. A. Nolan, an expert operator, will have charge of the machine—a Powers 6B, and which is rated as the best machine made. Mr. Nolan has been operating at the National theatre at Graham, one of the series of theatres owned by Dr. Box of San Antonio. He is very much pleased with the splendid equipment of the new theatre, and predicts popular approval of Mr. Week's efforts.

Mr. Weeks has not yet completed his bookings, but will show Paramount and other productions of national reputation and merit. He will operate the show to meet the demands of his patrons, running two shows at night, if business justifies, and may also give a matinee show. While regretting his inability to open the show fully equipped with his new seats, Mr. Weeks states that he hopes to have the opera chairs in within the next few weeks so that this inconvenience will soon be removed.
