JERRY WRIGHT, POPULAR RODEO STAR, IMPAIRED BY STEER, MET QUICK DEATH

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY OCCURS IN RODEO ARENA AT PARSONS, KANSAS., WHILE BULL-DOGGING STEER—FUNERAL SERVICES HERE MONDAY AFTERNOON.

Jerry Wright, Brady's popular rodeo star, and well known all over Texas, New Mexico, and various states of the union by reason of his wonderful roping and riding ability, met a terrible fate last Friday evening at Parsons, Kansas, where he was one of the star attractions in the rodeo being staged at that place. Impaled upon the horns of a steer, which he was attempting to bull-dog, Wright suffered terrible injuries, from which he bled to death. The accident occurred at 4:25 p. m., and Wright's death occurred at 5:15 the same evening.

The accident happened towards the conclusion of a two-days rodeo staged in an arena at Parsons, Kansas, where Wright was contesting against some of the foremost rodeo artists of the country. At the time of the accident, he stood in the lead in the bull-dogging contest, according to Jack Brown, who accompanied the body from Parsons, Kansas, to Brady, Brown, whose home originally was at Dexter, Kansas, but who is home-staying in Wyoming, is himself a rodeo star, and has been associated with Wright in various contests over the country for the past five years or more. He, himself, the opening day of the rodeo, successfully threw the steer, which inflicted the fatal injuries. Brown states that when attempting to bull-dog a steer, the rules call for the rider jumping from his horse to the ground alongside the running steer, one arm over the steer's shoulder. After taking two steps on the ground, the contestant then seizes the animal by the horns and endeavors to throw it. Knocking the animal down by falling from the horse on it, results in the rider being penalized ten seconds.

In his attempt to bull-dog the steer, Wright leaped from his horse directly in between the horns of the animal, both he and the animal falling to the ground and sliding several yards. It was during this time that the steer's horn was jabbed into his groin and ripped a great gash in his thigh, severing arteries, and causing such a profuse flow of blood that he bled to death before anything could be done to staunch the flow.

The body was shipped to Brady for burial, arriving here on Monday morning's train. A great assemblage of mourning relatives and sympathizing friends gathered at the depot, and formed an escort to the residence of Leo Moore. Funeral services were conducted at 2:30 in the afternoon at the Moore residence, by the Rev. J. H. Taylor. Interment was made in Brady cemetery and was attended by a great concourse of friends. Jerry Wright was the son of J. S.

Wright, and was born near Rochelle, spending the greater part of his youth here. He reached his 29th birthday on October 1st of last year. For many years he had shown his prowess in roping contests, and was known as one of the best in the state. Being absolutely fearless, he then took up the more dangerous sports of wild horse riding, bronco busting, bull-dogging, etc. Two years ago at Fort Worth he was quite seriously injured by being kicked in the head by a wild horse. During the McCulloch County Exhibit last fall, he gave some spectacular exhibits, among other things mounting a wild mule backwards, and riding the animal successfully. About that time he offered to ride one of the wild bulls used in bull fighting in Mexico, but was unable to carry out this cherished ambition, because he was unable to obtain the sanction of U. S. officials to the matter on account of the great risk. During the past couple years he had entered in rodeo events all over the west and southwest, and was readily acclaimed one of the top-notchers in the arena.

Wright possessed wonderful bodily strength and followed certain rules of eating and living to keep himself fit at all times. He was a man of generous disposition, loyal to his friends, and accounted strictly upright and conscientious in all his dealings by those who knew him best. His untimely fate is mourned by scores of friends. Besides his wife, deceased is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Wright; also four brothers, John, Romus (Nick), Monroe and George, all of the Nine community; and two sisters: Mrs. Gene Meers of Eden, and Mrs. Clint Spivey of Nine.

McCULLOCH CO. FIRST STILL IS CAPTURED FRI.

McCulloch county's first wild-cat still is on exhibition at the sheriff's office, having been captured Friday morning near Voca by the local officers. Along with the still, Sam and Will Caldwell, were placed under arrest by the officers charged with operating the same. Dave Taylor is also held, it being charged that he was the owner of the illicit outfit.

The local officers had been tipped off concerning the presence of the still on the Marion Miller place, about 9 miles south of Brady, and arranged to raid the place Friday morning. Sheriff Wall, assisted by Deputies E. B. Scarborough and J. W. Hibdon, made the raid and state they caught the Caldwell boys red-handed. Upon the approach of the officers, an attempt was made to make away with the damaging evidence. The still, however, proved too hot to be moved, and a keg of corn whiskey was captured before its contents could be spilled on the ground.

The still was a crude affair, being a copper boiler, with a lid soldered on, and an ordinary kitchen stove in the kitchen of the Caldwell home being used to heat the contents. A copper tube, with the worm immersed in a pan of cold water, and which led to a vessel, served to provide the working apparatus of the still. The worm was not located by the officers.

In investigating the premises, the officers unearthed two barrels of mash, which had been hidden beneath the plank floor of an outbuilding. A covering of dirt had been placed over the floor to hide the opening in the flooring.

At the preliminary examination Friday afternoon, the Caldwell boys were held to await the action of the grand jury, bail being set in the sum of $1,000 each, and which both readily made. Dave Taylor will have his examining trial today, and in the meantime has been at liberty on $500 appearance bond.

SCHOOL ELECTION.

The Standard takes occasion to remind the citizens of Brady Independent School district of the election to be held next Saturday at which time the citizens are to vote upon the proposition to increase the limit of school tax in the district from 50c to $1.00. It must be understood that this increase does not necessarily mean that the citizens of the district will be taxed $1.00 on the $100 for educational purposes, but it enables the school board to set a tax rate commensurate with the needs of the schools for the coming year. If this requirement be met with a tax of 70c, then the board proposes to set that as the rate.

It must be recalled that last year, the citizens of Brady, assembled in mass meeting, voted to support the school board in the proposal to raise all assessed values in Brady Independent School district 50%. Yet the school board, because of the generous state appropriation, found this unnecessary, and allowed the old valuations to stand wherever they were. This, in itself, should be assurance that the school advocating the increase in tax is not to squander the citizens' money, but rather to place themselves in position to meet school emergencies as they arise.

The crowded condition of the schools the past year, has made imperative the building of some five or six additional rooms. There are many objections to placing the Mexican pupils in the same rooms with the American children, and the proposition to build a separate school for the Mexicans should be endorsed by every right-thinking American citizen. In the matter of educating the citizens of the morning, the citizens of today cannot be niggardly. Brady cannot submerge her school interests to selfish personal gain.

Coleman recently voted the increase from 50c to $1.00. Every time you read of a similar election, the vote is invariably in favor of the raise from 50c to $1.00. Brady must not be placed on record as opposing such a proposition, and there is small likelihood she will, if the citizens who really have the best interests of the school at heart will only come to the polls next Saturday and vote.

AN APPEAL FOR OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

(From Journal of the National Educational Association.)

This is no time for extravagance in governmental expenditures. Appropriations should be carefully scrutinized and all unnecessary items eliminated. The times demand the application of the best business principles in the conduct of public affairs.

However, there can be no retrenchment in the support of education. Money wisely expended for this purpose is an investment in citizenship and an insurance against the revolutionary conditions which exist in countries whose peoples are ignorant and illiterate.

Our free public school system is an integral part of our free government, essential to its life and prosperity. The only secure foundation for democracy is an enlightened and intelligent electorate. A government of the people and by the people can be no better and no stronger than the composite citizenship of which it is constituted.

This fact was recognized by the far-seeing statesmen who founded this nation. William Penn declared that the only way to preserve free government was by the education of all its citizens, "for which," he said, "spare no cost, for by such parsimony all that is saved is lost." Washington urged his countrymen "to promote as objects of primary importance institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge." Jefferson, Adams and Madison taught that the education of all the people furnishes the greatest safeguard for our free institutions.

The greatest need of our country today is competent, well-qualified teachers to train the future citizens of the nation. We must get rid of the incompetent and unprepared in our public schools. The schools of tomorrow should be taught only by the best, and the profession of teaching must be made so inviting that it will attract and hold the best. Any reduction in the salaries of teachers or any failure properly to appreciate the importance of education will turn from the teaching profession those young men and women now preparing for their life's work who should be secured for this most important field of public service.

Let us cut down expenditures for luxuries. Let us reduce appropriations wherever it can be done with safety, but for the perpetuity of those ideals and principles which are nearest to the hearts of the American people, there can be no backward step in the development of a strong, intelligent, patriotic citizenry, upon whom must depend the preservation of the things for which we made such sacrifice in blood and treasure. The hope of America is in her free public schools. To elevate their standard and promote their efficiency should be the purpose of every American statesman and citizen.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

D. C. Randals was a Waldrip visitor in Brady Monday, and reported that a ten-acre field of oats on his place had literally been cleaned out by the rabbits. He says the rabbits are over-running that section and that they are to be seen five and six in a bunch.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Blackburn were Brady visitors Monday. Mr. Blackburn now lives on the Conrad Johanson place northeast of Brady and says the cut worms are bothering his cotton considerably. His immediate section of the country is beginning to need rain, although some neighboring communities have had an abundance for the present.

Friends of M. P. (Bully) Wegner are surprised and pleased to learn of his remarkable recovery, following the pronouncing of his case as hopeless by physicians at the Santa Fe hospital at Tomb. Some two weeks ago, Mr. Wegner was taken with violent vomiting spells, which left him so weakened that the attending physicians gave it up. His relatives hastened to his bedside. At that time Mr. Wegner had been at the hospital for about two months, apparently suffering with an affection of the heart. Following this spell, he showed signs of improvement, and his recovery has been so rapid that word received here Monday from his wife was to the effect that they would go to Austin to spend a week or so, while he recuperated, and then they expected to return to Brady.

"As in the greatest cities so in his own home town—the U. S. Tire user gets fresh, live tires of current production."

THE U. S. CHAIN TREAD
One of the few tires of which it may be said that they deliver economy year in and year out and tire after tire. The U. S. Chain Tread gives sufficient traction on all ordinary road surfaces. It is probably the handsomest, and by all odds the most popular, of the whole U. S. Fabric Tire line.

"In every section, however remote, you find a dealer in fresh, live U. S. Tires."

Economy rides on U.S. Tires—

If you could get together all the car owners you know, you'd probably find that their tire experiences had been much the same.

Most of them have taken their fling at "job lots," "discontinued lines" and "surplus stocks." Soon or late, nearly all settled back on quality first as the one sound assurance of tire value.

As soon as a man forgets the cut-price tag, and comes to the dealer who concentrates on a full, completely sized stock of U. S. Tires—he learns what it means to get fresh, live tires—not once in a while but every time.

Not merely in the big cities, but in his own home town.

Not merely for the heavy car, but for the medium and light-weight car—a full selection of size, tread and type.

Your U. S. Tire dealer can give you this service because of the service he gets from his neighboring U. S. Factory Branch. There are 92 of these Branches. Each gets its share of U. S. Tires, so that the dealer is always supplied with fresh, live stock.

U. S. Tires sell as fast as they are made.

There is no over production. No surplus piled up waiting for a "market."

Wherever you buy a U. S. Tire—you buy a tire of current production, as full of life and value as the day it left the makers.

HE COULDN'T ASK TO FEEL FINER

Gained 25 Pounds and Is On The Job Every Day Since Taking Tanlac.

"A gain of twenty-five pounds in weight in addition to good health is what Tanlac has meant for me, and words are not strong enough to express my gratitude," said Claude C. Moon, of 415 Broadway, Little Rock, Ark., live-stock salesman for the Copeland Sales Stables.

"Before I got Tanlac I had been in wretched health for six years and was in mighty bad shape. The choicest of food didn't tempt my appetite and I could scarcely eat a thing. I suffered from bloating and indigestion, went down in weight, had no strength and felt draggy and worn out all the time. I didn't even have enough energy to mingle with my friends, and was so dizzy-headed that at times I could hardly stay on my feet. I was so restless that at night I would roll and toss from one side of the bed to the other and could scarcely sleep a wink. I lost fully two-thirds of my time from my work and really wasn't able to work half of the time I did. I took every kind of medicine I heard of, but kept getting worse and thought I would never find anything to help me.

"It was about five months ago that I started taking Tanlac, and the medicine has put me in such fine health that it seems almost too good to be true. It has given me a dandy appetite, rid me of all my troubles and, as I said, built me up twenty-five pounds in weight. I'm feeling just as fine as I could want to now, and it was Tanlac, and nothing else, that set me right."

Tanlac is sold in Brady by Trigg Drug Co., in Mercury by J. T. Matlock, in Rochelle by C. W. Carr, and by leading druggists everywhere.

DR. B. L. CRADDOCK TO RESUME PRACTICE OF MEDICINE IN McCULLOCH CO.

Dr. B. L. Craddock has decided that he will once more take up the practice of medicine, a profession which he followed for over twenty years. Dr. Craddock practiced for something like eight years in Denton county, and about twelve years in McCulloch county, before retiring in order to devote himself to mercantile pursuits. In 1918, as a war-time emergency, he took up the practice at Beasley, Texas. Since that time, he has always felt a strong impulse to get back to his first love, and believing that there is a good field here now for his endeavors, he will hang out his shingle in Brady.

Dr. Craddock will specialize in cases of women and children, for which he has special aptitude, and will, as well, engage in general practice, and expects to throw his whole energies into the work. He will make his office with Dr. Granville, over the Trigg Drug Co.

ILLUSTRATIONS BY IRVING BACHELLER

CHAPTER I.—In the village of Bingville thirteen-year-old Robert Emmet Moran, crippled son of a poor widow, is known as the Shepherd of the Birds. His world is his mother and friends, his little room, the flower garden of Judge Crocker, and every flying thing he sees from his window. The painting of pictures is his enjoyment, and little Pauline Baker, small daughter of a neighbor, the object of his boyish affection. To him, J. Patterson Bing, the first citizen of Bingville, is the ideal of a really great man.

CHAPTER II.—The village becomes money mad, reflecting the great world in its state of unrest. The Bing family is a leader in the change. To them the village has become "provincial." Pauline Baker, victim of her surroundings, elopes with a stranger, and her parents are unable to trace her.

CHAPTER III.—Severe winter weather brings distress to Bingville. Spoiled by false prosperity, the citizens have failed to look ahead, and many suffer absolute privation. The Reverend Otis Singleton, one of the few in the village who seek to stem the tide of extravagance and folly, effects a reformation in Hiram Blenkinsop, town drunkard and general "black sheep."

CHAPTER IV.—Mainly owing to Judge Crocker, the village awakes to its shortsightedness in having considered money the essential, and neglecting the real things of life and true democracy. Some of the leading men also receive a lesson in the increasing waywardness of members of their families.

He was pleased that it seemed to say Mr. Hiram Blenkinsop. He lay for a long time looking up at the starry moonlit sky, and at the marble, weather-spotted angel on the monument of the Reverend Thaddeus Sneed, who had been lying there, among the rude forefathers of the village, since 1806. Suddenly the angel began to move. Mr. Blenkinsop observed with alarm that it had discovered him and that its right forefinger was no longer directed toward the sky but was pointing at his face. The angel had assumed the look and voice of his Old Self and was saying: "I don't see why angels are always cut in marble an' set up in graveyards with nothing to do but point at the sky. It's a cold an' tonesome business. Why don't you give me a job?"

His Old Self vanished and, as it did, so the spotted angel fell to coughing and sneezing. It coughed and sneezed so loudly that the sound went echoing in the distant sky and so violently that it rocked and seemed to be in danger of falling. Mr. Blenkinsop awoke with a rude jump so that the dog Christmas barked in alarm. It was nothing but the midnight train from the south pulling out of the station, which was near the old graveyard. The spotted angel stood firmly in place and was pointing at the sky as usual.

It was probably an hour or so later, when Mr. Blenkinsop was awakened by the barking of the dog Christmas. He quieted the dog and listened. He heard a sound like that of a baby crying. It awoke tender memories in the mind of Hiram Blenkinsop. One very sweet recollection was about all that the barren, bitter years of his young manhood had given him worth having. It was the recollection of a little child which had come to his home in the first year of his married life.

"She lived eighteen months and three days and four hours," he used to say, in speaking of her, with a tender note in his voice.

Almost twenty years she had been lying in the old graveyard near the ash tree. Since then the voice of a child crying always halted his steps. It is probable that, in her short life, the neglected, pathetic child Pearl—that having been her name—had protested much against a pitiful lack of comfort and attention.

So Mr. Blenkinsop, sitting there at the sound of a baby crying some where near him in the darkness of the old graveyard, with his hand on his elbow and listening, he heard the small, appealing voice.

"By thunder! Christmas," he whispered. "If that ain't like Pearl when she was a little, teeny, weeny thing no bigger'n a pint o' beer! Say, it is, sir, sure as sin!"

He scrambled to his feet, suddenly, for now, also, he could hear the voice of a woman crying. He groped his way in the direction from which the sound came and soon discovered the woman. She was kneeling on a grave with a child in her arms. Her grief touched the heart of the man.

"Who be you?" he asked. "I'm cold, and my baby is sick, and I have no friends," she sobbed. "Yes, ye have!" said Hiram Blenkinsop. "I don't care who ye be, I'm yer friend and don't ye forget it."

There was a reassuring note in the voice of Hiram Blenkinsop. Its gentleness had in it a quiver of sympathy. She felt it and gave to him—an unknown, invisible man, with just a quiver of sympathy in his voice—confidence.

SYNOPSIS.

If ever one was in need of sympathy, she was at that moment. She felt that she must speak out to some one. So keenly she felt the impulse that she had been speaking to the stars and the cold gravestones. Here at last was a human being with a quiver of sympathy in his voice.

"I thought I would come home, but when I got here I was afraid," the girl moaned. "I wish I could die." "No, ye don't, either!" said Hiram Blenkinsop. "Sometimes, I've thought that I hadn't no friends an' wanted to die, but I was just foolin' myself. To be sure, I ain't had no baby on my hands but I've had somethin' just as worrisome, I guess. Folks like you an' me has got friends a-plenty if we'll only give 'em a chance. I've found that out. You let me take that baby an' come with me. I know where you'll git the glad hand. You just come right along with me."

The unmistakable note of sincerity was in the voice of Hiram Blenkinsop. She gave the baby into his arms. He held it to his breast a moment, thinking of old times. Then he swung his arms like a cradle saying: "You stop your hollerin'—ye goll-darn little skeezucks! It ain't decent to go on that way in a graveyard an' ye ought to know it. Be ye tryin' to wake up the dead?"

The baby grew quiet and finally fell asleep. "Come on, now," said Hiram, with the baby lying against his breast. "You an' me are goin' out o' the paw. I know a little house that's next door to heaven. They say ye can see heaven from its winders. It's where the good Shepherd lives. Christmas an' I know the place—don't we, o' boy? Come right along. There ain't no one here but what they'll say to us."

The of the dark, to the twilight. Judge Shepheard gave the baby to its mother and, with his hands to his mouth called "Bob!" in a loud whisper. Suddenly a robin sounded his alarm. Instantly, the Shepherd's room was full of light. In a moment, he was at the window sweeping the garden paths and the tree tops with his searchlight. It fell on the sorrowful figure of the young mother with the child in her arms and stopped. She stood looking up at the window bathed in the flood of light. It reminded the Shepherd of that glow which the wise men saw in the manger at Bethlehem.

"Pauline Baker!" he exclaimed. "Have you come back or am I dreaming? It's you—thanks to the Blessed Virgin! It's you! Come around to the door. My mother will let you in."

It was a warm welcome that the girl received in the little home of the Widow Moran. Many words of comfort and good cheer were spoken in the next hour or so, after which the good woman made tea and toast and broiled a chop and served them in the Shepherd's room. "God love ye, child! So he was a married man—had 'cess to him an' the likes o' him!" she said as she came in with the tray. "Mother o' Jesus! What a wicked world it is!"

The prudent dog Christmas, being afraid of babies, hid under the Shepherd's bed, and Hiram Blenkinsop lay down for the rest of the night on the lounge in the cottage kitchen.

An hour after daylight, when the judge was walking in his garden, he wondered why the widow and the Shepherd were sleeping so late.

CHAPTER SEVEN.

Which High Voltage Develops in the Conversation. A bright May day. There was not a cloud in the sky. Judge Shepheard, the judge, and the Bing boys were out in the garden. They were coming over to see the Phyllis and Roger. They were together that day on the new Kentucky saddle horses. Mrs. Bing had spent the morning in Hazelmead and had stayed to lunch with Mrs. Stacy. She had returned at four and cut some flowers for the table and gone to her room for an hour's rest when the young people returned. She was not yet asleep when Phyllis came into the big bedroom. Mrs. Bing lay among the cushions on her couch. She partly rose, tumbled the cushions into a pile and leaned against them.

"Heavens! I'm tired!" she exclaimed. "These women in a mud hang onto one like a bunch of cats. They all want to know for one thing or another—Red or Liberty bonds or fatherless children or tobacco for the soldiers—books for the library. My word, it broke and it seems as if each of legs hung by a thread." Phyllis smiled as she stood looking down at her mother. "How beautiful you look!" the fond mother exclaimed. "If he didn't propose to-day, he's a chump." "But he did," said Phyllis. "I tried to keep him from it, but he just would propose in spite of me." The girl's face was red and serious. She sat down in a chair and began to remove her hat. Mrs. Bing rose suddenly, and stood facing Phyllis. "I thought you loved him," she said with a look of surprise. "So I do," the girl answered. "What did you say?" "I said no."

"What!" "I refused him!" "For God's sake, Phyllis! Do you think you can afford to play with a man like that? He won't stand for it." "Let him sit for it then and, mother, you might as well know, first as last, that I am not playing with him."

There was a calm note of firmness in the voice of the girl. She was prepared for this scene. She had known it was coming. Her mother was hot with irritating astonishment. The calmness of the girl in suddenly beginning to dig a grave for this dear ambition—rich with promise—in the very day when it had come submissively to their feet, stung like the tooth of a serpent. She stood very erect and said with an icy look in her face: "You young upstart! What do you mean?"

There was a moment of frigid silence in which both of the women began to turn cold. Then Phyllis answered very calmly as she sat looking down at the bunch of violets in her hand: "It means that I am married, mother."

Mrs. Bing's face turned red. There was a little convulsive movement of the muscles around her mouth. She folded her arms on her breast, lifted her chin a bit higher and asked in a polite tone, although her words fell like fragments of cracked ice: "Married! To whom are you married?"

"To Gordon King." Phyllis spoke casually as if he were a piece of ribbon that she had bought at a store.

Mrs. Bing sank into a chair and covered her face with her hands for half a moment. Suddenly she picked up a slipper that lay at her feet and flung it at the girl.

"My God!" she exclaimed. "What a nasty liar you are!" It was a ladylike but, at that moment the lady was temporarily bent.

"Mother, I'm glad you say that," Phyllis answered still very calmly, although her fingers trembled a little as she felt the violets, and her voice

"Married! To Whom Are You Married?"

was not quite steady. "It shows that I am not so stupid at home as I am at school."

The girl rose and threw down the violets and her mild and listless manner. A look of defiance filled her face and her figure. Mrs. Bing arose, her eyes aglow with anger. "I'd like to know what you mean," she said under her breath.

"I mean that if I am a liar, you ought to know it. I've been married since I was five high, and you've been married for me by some one, and I ain't no going to do it any more. I'm going to find my father and see the truth. I shall not wait another minute. He will give me better advice than you have given, I hope."

The words had fallen rapidly from her lips and, as the last one was spoken, she hurried out of the room. Mrs. Bing threw herself on the couch where she lay with certain bitter memories, until the new maid came to tell her that it was time to dress.

She was like one reminded of mortality after coming out of ether. "Oh, Lord!" she murmured wearily. "I like going to bed! How can I get through that dinner? Please give me some brandy." continued next Tuesday.

WALLACE PRICE SELLS ROCHELLE TAILOR SHOP --TO LOCATE AT MILES

Friends of the family regret to learn of the departure from Rochelle of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Price, who left last Thursday for Miles, Texas, where they have decided to locate, and where Mr. Price will probably re-engage in the tailoring business. Mr. Price has been one of the progressive and successful business men of Rochelle, and during the several years he has engaged in the tailoring business there, has built up a splendid patronage and business.

Mr. Price has suffered some severe reverses, having his home and all contents completely destroyed by fire some years ago; then, last fall he lost quite heavily when his tailoring shop was burglarized, and more recently, he once more lost his home by fire. Following this last reversal, Mr. Price sold his tailoring business to Otis Waddell, and, undaunted by his misfortunes, will seek to re-establish himself in a new location. Mr. Waddell, who succeeds Mr. Price, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P.

Waddell, and is a splendid young man, who will successfully carry on the business established by Mr. Price, and whose popularity will serve to add to the list of patrons of the shop.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES MARK CLOSE '20-21 TERM

Commencement exercises at the Methodist church Monday evening marked the close of the 1920-21 session of the Brady High school, and the graduation of the Class of '21. The notable features of the exercises were the splendid address by Dr. Martin L. Hayes, teacher of Vocational Education at A. & M. College, and the Valedictory Address by Miss Estelle Jones, honor graduate of the class. The songs by the high school were especially appropriate and were greatly enjoyed. Miss Mary Morris favored with a solo, which was thoroughly appreciated.

Dr. Hayes took as his subject, "Life's Challenge." He compared life to a great struggle, in which the fittest survive. He compared life with the struggle of various objects of nature, in which all things strove to surpass others, and in which various measures of success were earned. Some, he said, fell by the wayside, because they chose not the right line of endeavor to follow, and, taking up other work, excelled in that in which they were more apt. He also compared life to a play, in which some played the major roles, while others played the minor. Some were called upon to make personal sacrifices that others might benefit. Above all, those who played the game clean, and with good sportsmanship were the ones who deserved the palm. Then he compared life to drama, in which each actor played his part—some well, some indifferently. "All the world's a show," he quoted, and each individual must play his part in the great dramatic drama of life—some being showered with happiness, while others are hurled to postoffice with care and anxieties. He congratulated the graduates upon their successful race they had run. He said that the splendid finish they had made in taking up their new life was a fitting end to their school days. He said that they should be glad to play their part in the great drama of life, and that they should be glad to play their part in the great drama of life, and that they should be glad to play their part in the great drama of life.

—the one looking forward, the other back. So, she said, the Class of '21 could look—backwards upon the pleasant and happy school days; forward with anticipation of the greater experiences to come in life.

In the presentation of the diplomas, A. J. Ricks, member of the school board, emphasized the importance of the school board co-operating intelligently and wisely with the faculty and the pupils and requested that the citizens stand behind the board.

In presenting the scholarships, N. A. Cleveland, in a few, short words, bade farewell to Brady, the Brady schools, the pupils and the patrons; spoke his appreciation of the friendships shown him and gave expression to his hope that the Brady schools might grow and prosper and that his successor might profit by the experiences of those gone before and make for great success during the coming years.

Scholarships were presented to Miss Estelle Jones as having won first honors; to Miss Arvie Wegner as winning second honors and to Clyde Martin as winner of third honors.

FORDSON TRACTOR DEMONSTRATION PROVES INTERESTING EXHIBIT FRI.

The Fordson Tractor demonstration, conducted by factory representatives last Friday for J. H. Hill, local representative, was an interesting exhibit of the marvelous amount of work that can be accomplished with this steel horse. The demonstration was in charge of A. J. Lankford, of Dallas, manager, who was assisted by Messrs. Erskine, Proctor and Kendall of the Ford factory, and Mr. Duffie, representing the Morris Implement Co. of Dallas.

The demonstration included the use of triple disc plows, middle-busters, disc harrows, grain drills, binders, and proved without a shadow of a doubt how splendidly this powerful machine performed in all classes of work and under various conditions. Examination of the seed bed after the disc plowing and harrowing showed it to be as well prepared as a garden. The special tractor binder hitch was also demonstrated, and the adaptability of the tractor to belt work shown.

There was a good attendance throughout the demonstration, which was conducted from 10:00 a. m. until 4:00 p. m., and more than 50 farmers partook of Mr. Hill's hospitality at dinner time, when barbecued goat, pickles, bread and coffee were served.

FAREWELL RECEPTION TENDERED F. F. ASCHBACHER BY ODD FELLOWS LODGE

Brady Lodge No. 257, I. O. O. F., had one of its most interesting meetings last night, when a large gathering of both local and visiting members witnessed the conferring of the first degree upon seven candidates. Following the degree work, a farewell reception was tendered F. F. Aschbacher, who, during his year's residence in Brady, has worked faithfully and successfully to uphold the local lodge and to put renewed spirit into the organization. As testimony of the high esteem in which the members held him, and as a token of appreciation for the splendid work he has done, the local lodge presented Mr. Aschbacher with a solid gold Odd Fellow emblem, the presentation being made by H. R. Hodges in an appropriate speech in which Mr. Aschbacher's good work was extolled and the regrets of the membership at his departure expressed. Mr. Aschbacher replied to this and various other speeches during the evening, in his own inimitable fashion, in which he told "Why I Am an Oddfellow."

The evening's enjoyment was brought to a climax with the serving of ice cream and cake, and all the attendants declare the occasion one long to be remembered.
