REBEKAH LODGE WALDRIP TO GIVE BASKET PICNIC

The Rebekah lodge of Waldrip announces a big basket picnic to be given at Waldrip, Texas, on Saturday, July 23rd, in the beautiful Hays park, one-half mile north of that prosperous little city. Miss Lois Bratton, chairman of the picnic committee, and Marion Holland, who has general supervision of the affair were in Brady Tuesday arranging for the advertising of the picnic, and state they are looking for an immense crowd on that occasion.

The inviting shades of Hays park will serve to attract many visitors, and the fact that the bathing pools are but one-half mile distant, assures everyone who cares for a plunge, a most pleasant time. The Rebekah lodge has also arranged a most complete program of entertainment, including speaking, base ball, wrestling, boxing, racing, broncho riding, etc. A special feature will be the ball game between the girls' teams of Fife and Waldrip.

Everyone is invited to come and bring well-filled baskets.

ITALIAN ASPS MAKE APPEARANCE IN BRADY AND CAUSE APPREHENSION

The Italian asp, a fuzzy sort of a caterpillar insect, and which made its appearance throughout this section a year ago, is again reported found about Brady. The asps, as a rule, are found in mulberry trees, as they feed upon the mulberry leaves, but those seen here recently were found on rose bushes. Wayne, 5-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Sellers, was stung the early part of the week by an asp while endeavoring to recover a ball from among some rose bushes, the injury causing a great welt to rise on his arm, and giving him much pain.

While the sting of the asp is not fatal, yet it is very painful, and it would be wise for parents to caution their children about touching these insects, especially since the asp is a rather beautiful specimen of the caterpillar, and may be mistaken for its more harmless cousin.

ODD FELLOWS STAGE A MOST ENJOYABLE GATHERING ON 4TH OF JULY

The local lodge of Odd Fellows played hosts to a large gathering of members of that fraternity, and their families at Jordan summer house on Monday, the 4th of July. Not only were members of the Brady lodge out in force, but Odd Fellows from all parts of the county swelling the attendance to around 400. Six goats, together with a specially fattened calf, were barbecued to a Queen's taste under the skillful direction of Ab Oldham, and furnished some 450 lbs. of savory meat for the assemblage. In addition there was an abundance of bread, pickles, coffee, and never-to-be-forgotten delicious pies and cakes, the latter furnished by the charming ladies. Needless to say, none were permitted to go away without having had their appetites fully appeased, and all declared the occasion a most delightful one.

In addition to all this hospitality, the local members also dispensed without charge to all present, ice-cold lemonade, soda-water and cold drinks of every description.

There was a splendid program of speaking in the morning, Mayor J. E. Shropshire making the opening address, and being followed by Rev. Campbell, Christian minister, who made a beautiful talk on "Odd Fellowshipship."

In the afternoon the assembled guests were at liberty to spend the day as they chose best, many of them coming to town to attend the ball games.

BRADY WATER IS PURE!

Water furnished citizens of Brady by the Brady Water & Light Works is pure. This is the cheering news received by Dr. B. L. Craddock, city health officer, from Dr. Manton M. Carrick, State Health Officer at Austin. Dr. Craddock had sent two separate specimens of Brady hydrant water to the state health department for analysis as to the presence of typhoid germs. However, one specimen of well water, taken from the well at the old Wade residence in the east part of town, was found contaminated, and will be condemned by Dr. Craddock. It is thought several of the cases of typhoid in the city had their origin from this well.

The report given by Dr. Carrick on his analysis of the water samples is as follows:

- City No. 1—Gave negative proof for B. Coli.
- City No. 2—Gave negative proof for B. Coli.
- Surface Well gave positive proof for the presence of B. Coli.

CASING SET ON THE CITY WELL—10-INCH TO 1250 FT.—WATER RUNS OUT TOP

Drilling at the city water well has progressed to a depth of 1250 ft., and Bodner and Conaway, the contractors have just finished setting the 10-inch casing to this depth. Water is reported as having run out of the top of the well, but no vein has so far been struck that would justify hopes for a permanent supply.

Drilling will proceed without delay, the bit still working in hard lime.

STEPS NOW BEING TAKEN TO COMPLETE ORGANIZATION OF FARM BUREAU

A telegram received here Sunday by local leaders in the Farm Bureau cotton pooling movement, from Walton Petet, director of commodity organizations, stated that while the central bureau had not had time to tabulate all the reports, they were assured of a half million bales of cotton in the million bale pool, and that the organization of the cotton pooling branch of the Texas Farm Bureau was to be completed at once. The local organization was requested to nominate directors without delay, and the names of Dr. J. P. Barton of Lohn, and G. V. Gansel of Brady were sent in to organization headquarters.

The campaign to enlist farmers in the movement is to be continued all through this week, and the bureau is expecting to secure the full goal of 1,000,000 bales. There is now no question but what the cotton pool will be formally incorporated and organized for the selling of the cotton of its members.

The Day's Work.

Is anybody happier because you passed his way?
Does anyone remember that you spoke to him today?
This day is almost over and its toiling time is through;
Is there anyone to utter now a kindly word to you?

Did you give a cheerful greeting to the friend who came along,
Or a churlish sort of "howdy" and then vanish in the throng?
Were you selfish, pure and simple, as you rushed along the way,
Or is someone mighty grateful for a deed you did today?

Can you say tonight, in parting with the day that's slipping fast,
That you helped a single brother of the many that you passed?
Is a single heart rejoicing over what you did or said?
Does a man whose hopes were fading now with courage look ahead?

Did you waste a day or it well or poorly spent?
Did you leave a trail of a scar of discontent?
As you close your eyes in you think that God has
You have earned one more by the work you did to—Edgar

FIREBOYS HAVE ANOTHER GOOD HOUSE MONDAY AT THE LYRIC BENEFIT SHOW

The fire boys express themselves as highly gratified over the splendid attendance had Monday night at the benefit performance at the Lyric theatre. The crowd was the largest had so far, and netted the boys a neat little sum, which proved most welcome in their near-depleted treasury. This evident appreciation of the fireboys' efforts to make their organization self-sustaining greatly encourages the boys, and in the meantime Brady citizens are not only lending financial and moral support to the fireboys, but are getting their full money's worth several times over.

WONDER WORDS.

Airplane Patrol Valuable Aids in Forest Fire Fighting.

Wonder, Or., July 1.
 Editor Brady Standard:

Well, the big humming birds are sailing around. I mean the Aero Fire Patrol There was a sawmill in this neighborhood burned down or up—which every you choose to call it—and the airplanes came sailing around like buzzards over a carcass.

I was talking to our local forest fire warden for this, Josephine county, about the efficiency of their work; and he said it was remarkable with what precision they could locate a fire in the mountains. They are furnished with charts and maps showing the location of the townships and sections; and he said last summer a fire broke out in the fork of two streams and that the airplane after discovering it wired to him and told him the number of the section and township it was on and he took a posse of men and went at once and subdued and extinguished the fire. I am sending a clipping from the Oregon Journal relating to the Airplane patrol, which will throw more light on the subject.

"O. I. C. U. R. RIGHT."

Airplane Patrol of Forests Begins.

Eugene, Or., June 15.—The airplane forest fire patrol started in Oregon this morning. Two planes of the 91st aero squadron hopped off from the municipal field here shortly before 9 o'clock for the first day's flight over the timbered stretches of the state.

One circled the Cascades and flew north to Portland and the second flew south to Medford over the Coast range. They are expected back about 5 o'clock tonight. The trips will be made every day hereafter, as long as the fire risk continues.

In addition to the patrols out of Eugene, one will operate out of Medford, a sub-base. The plane will cover a section of Northern California as well. Patrol work from Camp Lewis, another sub-base began June 1 because of the extraordinary fire risks in the timber blown down by high winds last winter.

Two men, an observer and pilot, are with each ship and, by means of a small wireless set, are able to keep in constant communication with the ground stations.

LANTERN AND CRUDE OIL EFFECTIVE TRAP FOR BOLL WEEVILS SAYS V. C. MILLER

Some few weeks ago The Standard published a remedy for the extermination of boll weevils as used and recommended by a Bangs farmer. It was simply to place a tub partly filled with water and with a quantity of crude oil poured over the surface of the water, in the cotton patch. Then at night a lighted lantern was hung over the tub, serving to attract the bollweevils, moths and millers, and which would meet a quick fate upon falling into the crude oil in the tub.

V. C. Miller of the Voca community tried the plan, and this week reports himself delighted with the results. The boll weevils, which had been giving him cause for anxiety, have apparently all disappeared. Mr. Miller says he has obtained better results from the use of lanterns than from candles, as the lantern seemed to have caused the pests to fall directly into the tub, while the candle would apparently scorch them, and cause them to flutter away.

It is claimed that one tub will suffice for about four acres, and that only a couple nights are required to trap all the weevils, moths and millers within reach of the tubs.

FREDONIA PICNIC AND BARBECUE SAID TO HAVE BEEN A RECORD-BREAKER TUES.

Attendants at the Fredonia picnic and barbecue Monday and Tuesday declare that occasion a record-breaker, both from the standpoint of the crowd assembled and the capable manner in which the Fredonia citizens took care of the great assembly.

Estimates on the number present on the second day run from 3,000 up, while those who took occasion to watch the crowd state that the barbecue committee had over 2800 plates on hand, and when this supply had all been passed out, scarcely more than half the crowd had been fed. In all, eleven fat heaves were barbecued for the feast.

Numbered among the attendants were a big delegation from Mason county, while almost every section of McCulloch had delegates there. Others came from Fort McKavett, Eden, Llano, San Saba, Fredericksburg and other places.

One great advantage possessed by the Fredonia picnic grounds was the abundance of pure, cold spring water. Varied amusements and attractions were offered, including boxing, base ball and other sports.

Two interesting addresses were also made, the one by the Rev. S. C. Dunn of Brady, and the other by D. J. Johnson of Brownwood.

After Him.

One of the members of a Negro church in Alabama was talking to the minister one day of the temptations Satan placed in one's path, when the pastor granted impatiently and replied:

UNCLE SAM'S FUMIGATING VATS

SO RAPIDLY does the world move now-a-days, so numerous and varied are the wonders which are wrought by the ingenuity of our experts in various lines and so quietly is the work carried on, it frequently happens that the general public knows but little of the marvels that are being done.

For instance, down on the Texas border—at Laredo, to be exact—the United States Department of Agriculture operates a fumigating plant or vat which is sufficiently large to accommodate a train of fifteen freight cars at one time.

Freight cars arriving in the States from Old Mexico are infected with live, pink bollworm—a pest which feeds and devours the unripened pods of the cotton plant. If permitted to enter and scatter in this country, it would, provided it gained much headway, create losses running into the millions of dollars annually.

To prevent this loss and preserve the crop, therefore, such cars are unceremoniously shunted into these vats and the unwelcome bollworms aboard accorded a knock-out reception.

This plant resembles a long, brick shed. After the cars are received, the doors are closed and the plant is flooded with a gas, generated on the spot, the fumes of which are sure death to bollworms. At the end of an hour or more, the gas is drawn off, the cars removed and sent on their way and the plant is ready for the next incoming train.

Other similar, but smaller, plants are located at various coast points.

AMERICAN CAMPANILE

THE records of past ages are authority for the fact that campaniles or bell towers became very common in Italy and especially in Rome between the eighth and eleventh centuries. Almost everybody has at some time seen a picture of that famous old one of old St. Mark's Church in Venice.

On the other hand, campaniles are rarely seen in the United States now-a-days and yet California boasts what is perhaps the most splendid example of a bell tower on the western hemisphere.

It is one of the most-pleasing and graceful architectural structures one can hope to look upon and is located in the grounds of the University of California, at Berkeley. The gift of a Mrs. Sater, it cost about $200,000, is 302 feet high, approximately 36 feet square and is constructed of California granite, with the exception of the pyramidally-shaped top-piece which is of white marble.

Within the tower is an immense clock and a chime of twelve beautifully-toned bells. These precious bells were safely transported through the submarine-infested waters of the Atlantic, on their journey from the old world, during the earlier days of the world war.

These bells, also the gift of Mrs. Sater, range in weight from 340 to 4,118 pounds. The tenor or largest bell carries the following inscription, written especially for the purpose by Professor Flag of the university:

"We ring, we chime, we toll,
Lend ye the silent part,
Some answer in the heart,
Some echo in the soul."

GRAY IS COLOR OF THE MOMENT

Shade So Much in Evidence Causes Wonder as to How Long It Will Last.

USE TAFFETA, LACE TRIMMED

Combination Promises to Be Popular When the Weather Becomes Too Warm for Wraps of Any Kind.

Gray is the predominating color of the moment. If there is any doubt as to the truth of this sweeping statement, writes a New York fashion correspondent, then visit the smart restaurants at any hour of the day or take a walk up Fifth avenue or any other street and note what is seen. There is so much of this shade, indeed, that one stops a moment to wonder just how long it will last and what the next change in color will be. There are signs pointing toward the lighter shades of tan, for now and then a champagne gown or coat or cape is seen, and it brings a nice relief from the preponderance of the various tones of gray.

Just now if a costume is not all gray from tip to toe then it seems to take pride in having some touch of gray about it, if it is only the feather drooping from the brim of the hat or the shoes of gray worn with a frock that is otherwise quite dark and inconspicuous. Gray, indeed, has taken its place along with the shades of dark blue and black as being an accepted out-of-doors color as well as a favorite tone for wear within doors. It is good for the young and for the old. In fact, it recognizes no class or distinction as to age or stature. It is the all around good color of the season, and women are making the most of its popularity to use it in every possible way.

Hat, Shoes, Gloves in Gray.

One of the favorite methods of wearing gray when the whole costume is not in tone is to have the hat and shoes and gloves of that color, each of them matching each other exactly in tone. Not a few of the gray silk crepe dresses are adorned with fringe, and this is always in the same tone as the materials from which the frock is fashioned. Gray capes and those of that color combined with one portion of dark blue are among the smartest that are to be seen upon the streets. One is a model fresh from the workrooms of Jenny in Paris. Its upper section is made in gray woolly material and the lower section is made of some thick material in black embroidered with threads of the gray drawn through it to form a plaid design. The cape is one of those new lines that are quite scant in width and perfectly straight in line, hanging from a little yoke that fits the shoulders snugly and supports a straight collar.

The hat worn with the cape shows how large the hats can be worn when they reach the limits of the French fashion for this season. Indeed, there is no limit to the extremes of width which they attain, and even then they

HONEST IMJUN.

KEEP THE RECORD STRAIGHT.

The Richland Springs Eye-Witness in attempting to justify the failure of the Richland Springs ball team to keep their appointment with Brady recently, made the accusation that a game had been scheduled between Richland Springs and Brady about a year ago, and when the Richland Springs team arrived in Brady, they found the Brady team gone a-fishing. Just to keep the record and the Richland Springs Eye-Witness in the straight and narrow path, we will relate the exact facts in the matter and challenge the Eye-Witness to prove them otherwise:

The game in question was matched by "Budge" Campbell, representing the Brady team, and was to have been played on July 4th. About 11:30 o'clock the morning of the 4th, Bailey Jones, one of the local players, found there were no baseballs to be purchased in Brady, and phoned to Richland Springs to ask the boys there to bring some extra balls, and the locals would reimburse them. Jones was thereupon informed that the Richland Springs team could not come to Brady. He argued and plead with them, to fill the date, without avail, and finally gave up in despair, and the game was called off.

In the meantime, a neighboring colored team had played here on the 3rd and stayed over for another game on the 4th. The local diamond was thereupon surrendered to the colored ball teams.

In the midst of the colored fracas on the only available diamonds, the Richland Springs team drove up. The home team was scattered and could not be assembled on a moment's notice, so the visitors were invited to witness the colored ball game.

Gordon Murray of the Richland Springs team was offered the $25.00 expense money guaranteed by the locals, but refused, admitting that the failure to play the game was the fault of Richland Springs, and not of Brady.

The accusations of the Richland Springs Eye-Witness would appear all flat, and get nowhere in the N. W. was the face of the situation. Richland Springs team.

THE VALUE OF CO-OPERATION.

The Bryan Eagle, referring to an address by A. D. Rogers, stresses one of the statements Mr. Rodgers made—"The main reason the Valley has prospered is because we have stood by the men and the interests who were able to put over things in the Valley. Hence Hidalgo county in ten years has increased in population from 12,000 to 38,000 and her taxable values from $2,000,000 to $30,000,000."

"It is," adds the Eagle, "a good idea for this advice to be followed everywhere and community interests built up and made great." That town grows fastest in a material and other ways where the citizenship stands together, where co-ordinated efforts to "put things over" for the community. The town which permits itself to be split into factions is seriously handicapped; the citizen who declines to join in a movement for the good of his community solely because that movement is being pushed by somebody whom he doesn't personally care for lacks that much of being as good a citizen as he is capable of being. One may not like personally another; but when that other is working for the betterment of the town—the common good, that is—one can and should be big enough to forget personal feelings, for the time if not permanently, and get in behind the effort for the good of the community. The Valley is a living example of what community co-operation can do.—Denton Record-Chronicle.

RUNNING A NEWSPAPER.

Recently, for some reason or other the Rotan Advance was published by the ladies of the Baptist church and the editor in the first issue following it has the following to say about their undertaking:

"The Baptist ladies who had charge of the Advance last week have had an experience, or experiences, to last them quite a while. We felt very sorry for them before they were done with it, and felt a little mean in getting them into it. They were made anxious, were worried, worked hard, coaxed, pleaded, threatened and even got mad before it was over, happily everyone is serene now and they will no doubt look back to the experience much as one does when shipwrecked but rescued before any real suffering overtakes them. "Of course their experience is what the publisher goes through every week, only he has added to the worries the troubles in the mechanical department where he must coax and subdue the whims of the presses, a gasoline engine and linotype. But becomes accustomed to combating all these troubles and worries and they do not hurt so badly." — Hamilton Herald-Record.

LIKES TO SEE BANKS ADVERTISE.

M. B. Welborn, governor of the Atlanta Federal Reserve bank, was one of the speakers before the recent meeting of the Associated Advertisers Club of America at Atlanta, and during the course of his address, said: "I like to see the banks, especially our member banks, advertise. I have noticed that advertising increases deposits and when deposits are increased, our reserves are automatically increased."

It may not be altogether due to advertising, but it is very noticeable that the total deposits in towns where the banks are consistent and wide-awake advertisers, are larger than in the towns where the banks do not present their claims for business thru publicity.

Advertising cannot, of course, make more money, but it can put money into circulation, and can induce it to come from its insecure hiding places and seek repose in the banks strong coffers. The people must have confidence and nothing engenders confidence like advertising.

The time was when banks thought it beneath their dignity, and unethical, to advertise, but times have changed and banks have found it profitable to mention the many features of their business through which they can be of help to the community.—Brownwood Bulletin.

Five Hundred Club.

Mrs. C. D. Allen entertained pleasantly on last Friday-afternoon, the occasion being the last meeting of the season of the Five Hundred club. Members present included Mesdames J. S. Anderson, J. G. McCall, John Wall, C. T. White, Ed Campbell, Wiley W. Walker, G. R. White. Guests were Mesdames Edwin Broad, Dimmitt Wood of Cherokee, J. E. Shropshire, Bailey Jones; Miss Ida Mae Souther of Snyder.

In the series of "500" played at three tables, Mrs. McCall received high score and club prize and Mrs. Wood, guest prize.

The hostess served a salad course. The club has disbanded for the summer and no more meetings will be held until September, with the exception of the monthly night meetings, at which the gentlemen are guests. Mrs. Ed Campbell entertains with a night party on Friday of next week.

Bridge Club.

Mrs. G. R. White entertained for the Bridge club on Tuesday afternoon, with members present as follows: Mesdames G. V. Gansel, S. S. Graham, Ed Campbell, Herbert L. Wood, R. W. Turner, W. R. Davidson, John Wall, C. T. White; Miss Sarah Johnson. Guests included Mesdames Jack Ragsdale, Dimmitt Wood of Cherokee; Miss Nellie Anderson.

In the series of "Bridge" Mrs. Turner received club prize, and Miss Anderson guest prize.

The hostess served a salad course. Mrs. Wood entertains for the club on next Tuesday afternoon.

Christian Ladies Aid.

The ladies of the Christian Aid held a very enjoyable meeting Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. T. J. Wood, at which some ten members were present. The subject for discussion was "Love." Following the business session, enjoyable refreshments were served.

The next meeting of the Aid will be with Mrs. A. B. Stobaugh

Surprise Party.

A most enjoyable surprise was given Miss Cleone Deavers last night when a number of friends gathered at her home to help make memorable the occasion of her fourteenth birthday anniversary. Dancing was enjoyed during the evening. Punch was served.

Numbered among those present were Misses Adeline Bevans of Brownwood, Mable Strickland, Frances Samuel, Margaret and Lucille Barnes of Coleman, Margaret McClure, Edith Reed, Gertrude Trigg, Lula and Jim Gay, Alice Samuel, Dorothy Wood of Cherokee, Katherine Ballou, Edith McShan Eulalia Gavit; Messrs. Leon Hoffman of Fort Worth, Royston Taylor, Sid Meers, Robert McGrew, George Dutton, Ed Olian, Vaughn White, Hardin Jones, Glenn Rieks, B. H. Townsend of Brownwood, Hoffman of Brownwood, Jack Deaton, Maurice Barnes of Coleman, Jim Espy, Jack Hampton.

Both remedies are packed in one carton and the cost of the combined treatment is 35c. Just ask your druggist for HAYES' HEALING HONEY.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

A party composed of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Arnsperger, T. E. Davis and family, Mrs. Bartholemew, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Abernathy and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Walton spent the glorious 4th on the San Saba river enjoying a picnic. They report having had all the fish they wanted to eat, and a good time in general.

The Rev. S. C. Dunn returned last Friday from Nixon, where he had been spending the past couple weeks conducting a revival meeting for the Rev. L. C. Matthis, former Brady pastor, and whose many friends here will be pleased to learn of the great success met with in the meeting. Rev. Dunn reports both himself and Bro. Matthis as highly pleased.

There's an old saying that the world is not so big after all, and every now and then something happens to confirm this old saw. For instance, Mr. Hallum is just in receipt of a letter from J. M. Stewart of the Sonora country, stating that while he was driving in Arizona enroute to California, he had a puncture. Stopping to fix the trouble, who should drive up but Mr. and Mrs. Joe McCall, who left Brady a few weeks ago, also enroute to California.

Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Myers and son, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Holton and Burt Norwood and Mr. Ingraham, of Brownwood, drove to Fort Worth Sunday to spend the 4th visiting there. They report having greatly enjoyed seeing the spectacular parade there, with its many beautifully decorated floats. The trip, all around, was a most enjoyable one, the roads being fine, and the drive to the Panther City being easily made by leaving Brady at 5:00 a. m. and reaching Fort Worth at 2:00 p. m.

F. R. and Harry Wulff returned Wednesday night from El Paso where they had been called last week by news of the serious illness of their mother, Mrs. Fred Wulff, who underwent an operation there. They report the operation as having been remarkably successful, and left their mother out of danger and with every prospect of an early and complete recovery. The gathering in El Paso was the first time in eleven years the entire family was assembled and but for Mrs. Wulff's dangerous condition, would have proven a most enjoyable meeting.

B. A. Hallum has returned from a trip to the south part of Texas, included in his party having been his two sons, Stewart and B. A., Jr., his mother-in-law, Mrs. J. M. Stewart, and Mrs. M. Hendricks. The original object of the trip was a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Top Jones at Laguna, although Mr. Hallum also drove to Pearsall. He reports having made the drive from Brady to Laguna, a distance of 253 1/2 miles, in just one day, which is a pretty good indication of the general excellence of the roads traveled. From San Antonio to Mexico City, a tarvia road is now under construction, which will link the two cities and make them accessible to the thousands of tourists who visit this section of Texas each year. Another attractive feature of the section visited, according to Mr. Hallum, was that they did not sell canteen by the piece there, but by the bushel, and at 50c per bushel at that.

An Evening Guard for the Children

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS.

Bobby Warden jumped lightly off the train as it slid into the Glen Cove station. There was a feeling of extreme joy in his heart as if something stupendous were about to happen in his more or less prosaic existence.

Practically the only visit his sister, Leona, ever had from him was a surprise. His sister's two children were in bed by this time, but there was the happy breakfast with the family and then a dash for the train back to the town. The ransacking of his well-laden pockets by the children was always a new joy to Bobby. The Hydes thought he spoiled their offspring and Leona scolded, but to no avail.

So Bobby, his pockets bulging to grotesque proportions, strode the mile through the village that took him to the small house on the hill. He always hoped the Hydes would be at home, and generally found them, since there was no one ever to leave at home with the children.

None but a young couple, without a servant, and having a child or two can appreciate the tragedy of turning down one invitation after the other with the excuse, "no one to stay home with the children."

However, for the time being, Leona had solved her difficulty.

Bobby did not know this and, as he drew near the cozy home of his sister, he felt reasonably certain of finding them home.

Leona never pulled down her blinds and as usual the piano was going full tilt. Bobby bounded up the veranda steps and glanced in the window before making his noisy entrance.

He drew a deep breath. Now he knew what the stupendous something waiting in ambush, or rather under the soft yellow light above the piano, was.

It was a slip of a girl with smooth black hair and the whitest of hands. That was all Bobby noticed in the first breathless glance. He did not see Leona nor Arthur, but supposing them to be in the back room, opened the door and walked in.

The girl at the piano opened wide violet eyes upon Bobby, then promptly proceeded to fall off the piano bench. Apparently the sight of the strange man, with pockets that seemed bulging with marvellous tools, right within the room with her, was too much for the Evening Guard.

Bobby shamelessly realized that he was glad she had fainted. Otherwise he would have had to await fate's kindness before holding the "only" girl in his arms.

As it was, when the heavy lashes lifted and revealed to Bobby the very depths of violet eyes he was sad that priceless moments were so soon over.

Grace Cox wondered, in that first conscious moment, whether or not she were being crushed into complete breathlessness. Never had she felt arms more firmly placed about her slim body. However, Bobby's eyes scattered her fright. They had no expression of violence in them. In fact, Grace liked the peculiar sense of being caressed by those eyes.

"I am sorry you were frightened," said Bobby.

"So am I," said Grace. "It shows I am not a very good evening guard for the children—when I faint at sight of a strange man."

"But I am not a strange man," Bobby argued. "I am Bobby Warden—Leona's brother."

"You are a stranger—to me," contradicted Grace.

"Well," growled Bobby, "it is Leona's fault. I'd like to know why she has kept me in the dark regarding her acquaintance with you."

Grace laughed.

"Leona perhaps does not consider our friendship one of the episodes of life."

"Has she known you long?" demanded Bobby.

"Not more than two months," Grace told him.

"Humph!" granted Bobby. Then suddenly, "where are Leona and Arthur?"

"Having dinner with the Evans family. I have been sitting ever here with the children lately so that they could go out evenings. I live just next door."

"Has Leona never told you what a nice brother she has?" asked Bobby as it finally behooved him to remove the great coat with its grotesquely bulky pockets.

"I think she did," mention Grace said. "But we always have far better things to discuss than mere men." She deliberately checked the dimple that strove for expression.

"Oh! Well—I can go out and sit in the barn," suggested Bobby.

"Better still," Grace decided, "I can go home. There is no necessity for two of us to guard the children."

"I most certainly will not stay," determined Bobby. "I will go back to the city. You evidently promised Leona to stay until she returned. He made ready to follow out his intentions.

Grace looked up at the ireful young giant, and there was something like a sparkle of real anger in her eyes.

"Bobby Warden! Will you please stop why you and I are scrapping like cat and dog before we even know each other's names?"

"I know why I am scrappy," said Bobby darkly.

"Because you took such instant, obvious and uncalculated dislike to me!"

"I did nothing of the kind!" snapped Grace and her cheeks were scarlet. He was out in the hall, so that she had to shout at him.

"Well, you told me I could go out and sit in that cold barn, where the cracks are an inch broad."

"You desired to go there yourself rather than have to sit here and guard the children with me."

Bobby was back in the room, his dignity still with him, and his great coat was on.

"I did not refuse to sit in this room with you. I would rather sit here with you than anywhere else on earth. Please tell Leona the curious circumstances under which I left and tell her these are for the kiddies." He pulled out any number of bundles and deposited them on the table.

Grace looked at them, then up into Bobby's wrathful eyes. The dimples were in full force.

"I don't know of anything I would rather do than be part of a double guard for the children," she said slowly.

Bobby looked down at her.

"Is there any particular other half I could go and get for you?" He was finding the violet eyes very disconcerting.

"Not unless you refuse to be that other half—Bobby."

When Leona and Arthur returned about 12 o'clock from having dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Evans they found a double guard watching over their children.

After that she and Arthur received unlimited tickets for theaters, concerts and evening affairs—in fact anything that would leave the children in the position of needing some one to stay with them.

Arthur and Leona smiled. They had not hoped for so sudden a tumble from either Bobby or Grace. The double guard suited their scheme exactly.

SEE INDICATIONS OF SPRING

Minneapolis Postmaster Knows Winter Has Passed When Poultry People Get Busy.

The Minneapolis postmaster has a "sign of spring" all his own. He knows that winter is gone and the year's in the green when the city poultry distributors turn up and post baby chicks by parcel post to R. F. D. addresses in the Minnesota countryside and to the suburbs of the Twin Cities.

The poultry, people began mailing this year earlier than ever before, and mailing more. For, apparently, the good commuters of the Twin Cities have been losing their toes by the fireside this winter and reading that most popular of works of natural science (or fairy tales, some say) called "86.25 Per Hen."

That volume, by the way, used to have a unique record in the Crerar library in Chicago. The librarian has a fond for statistics and a genius for collecting them, and many strange items he has turned up, not hitherto suspected about his library. One year he discovered that "86.25 Per Hen" has been asked for more than any other book in the library, which may very well prove that back to the farm is the city dweller's favorite slogan.—Christian Science Monitor.

Curiosities of the Bible. There are many curiosities of the Bible seldom noticed by a person who simply reads the book's pages. The book contains 3,586,489 letters and 773,693 words; 31,173 verses and 1,180 chapters besides 99 books. The books were written by 40 men during a period of 1,600 years. The 29 books of the Old Testament were classed: Law, 5; history, 12; poetry, 5; prophecy, 17. The 27 books of the New Testament were classed as history, 5; epistles, 21, and prophecy, 1. The word "and" is found in the Bible 46,278 times, and the word "reverend" but once. The nineteenth chapter of II Kings and the thirty-seventh chapter of Isaiah are alike. The middle verse of the Bible is Psalm XCIV. 8.—Albany, N. Y., Journal.

A Library Advertiser. Presuming that a public library is so well conducted that its custodians are able to direct applicants promptly to the volumes asked for, the next step for an ideal institution would be to advertise the treasures which it holds in trust for all citizens. It would appear that the Newark, N. J., library has reached the second stage, for it has begun distributing circulars to its patrons now the ambitious worker may educate himself by reading, and how the library can help him to find just the right things to read. Taking a cue from the methods of writers of eye-catching advertisements, the library entitled the circular in large type: "Get Wise Quick."—Christian Science Monitor.

The Way of the World. Two men stood in a balcony on a high tower looking down into a busy market place in the heart of a great city.

One man said to the other, "Do you see that fellow on the platform, addressing the people?"

And the other after a moment replied, "Yes, I do. Who is he?"

His companion answered, "I do not know. But he is telling the truth. Notice how few among all these hurrying thousands stop to listen."

Shirley Paton's Adventure

By A. W. PEACH.

Shirley Paton, waiting for the local train that would carry her to her suburban home, found two persons to interest her among the hundreds in the great station. One was a tall, clean-featured young man whose grave eyes stole a glance in her direction now and then—a glance of approval so impersonal that Shirley could accept it.

The other was a tired little mother at her left who seemed to be on the verge of fainting. In her lap she held a small, rosy morsel that was gurgling and cooing, oblivious to her mother's distress.

Suddenly the little mother turned and Shirley found herself questioned.

"Will you hold my baby until I see about my train?"

Shirley's first thought was to refuse. Then she scolded herself; no mother would ever leave such a winsome little wretch of a babe. Shirley held out her arms.

She was so interested in her new charge that she did not think of her young man. When she did glance up a blush came softly to her cheeks; for if eyes were ever saying anything his were saying: "You are very attractive to me as you hold that youngster so maternally and tenderly."

"I suppose I do look a bit maternal, and I do love babies, but I don't want to advertise it," she thought to herself.

Busy with the happy mite, she did not know the passage of time until it dawned upon her that soon her train would be leaving. She looked about anxiously for the mother, but the tired little figure did not appear.

Shirley's heart thumped. Had she been fooled after all? Was she here with a strange baby? What could she do. She glanced about in her distraction, and her eyes met the grave, fine eyes of the man opposite. She saw that he understood, and with a bit of quirk inside she saw him rise and come toward her.

"Pardon me, but I will see if I can find the mother," he said, smiling encouragingly.

"Bless his yellow head," Shirley said to herself, and then thanked him aloud.

But when he came back after making a trip through the station, she saw he was worried, too. He explained that he could find no trace of the mother.

They stared at each other, the same thought in each mind; what was to be done?

The crimson flooded through his tanned cheeks as he said haltingly: "If you give the youngster to me, I'll take him to the police station—though I hate like thunder to be seen carrying a baby round here where some of my friends may see me!"

She laughed at the sudden boyish exclamation. "I understand," she said. "Let's see." She thought a moment and a quick decision formed in her mind. She could not bear the thought of the baby's going to a police station, and then to some foundling home—such a dainty, fragrant, happy bit of humanity! She would leave word in the station and take the baby home. She smiled as she thought of the dumb astonishment of her family. But how could she ever get the baby home and also all her shopping booty?

She glanced at him. He was gazing with anxious eyes down the long lobby. She made up her mind—that man's frank face was the face to be trusted.

"I am going to take the baby home, if you will help me to the train," she suggested. "And we must hurry, too."

He caught up her bundles quickly and they trailed away to the gate, she in the lead, the baby snug in her arms; he, tall and serene, following her. Eyes turned to glance at them. She blushed, but he seemed imperious.

He saw to it that she was seated and then he hesitated. "You will never be able to get off with your—er—impedimenta. May I go with you? I should like to see this adventure through."

She hesitated in turn, then nodded, thinking to herself, "I really want to see a little more of him."

The ride was not eventful in some ways; but she found herself as they neared the station, turning her eyes toward the broad shoulders to the gray, protecting, honoring eyes quite a distance above hers. It was an adventure surely, but worth it, just to know him for a short while.

When the station came he aided her to the platform, and again they came to a halt.

"You will really have to help me to the house, and then I'll excuse you—that is, if you—er—are to?" she questioned.

He was already gathering up her bundles. "I am in this with you; but—er—your people. Perhaps—er—had better introduce myself—She rian Meldon."

"Agreed," she said, and gave him her name.

They walked to the broad street where she lived, and stopped before a large house, set back among the trees. She hesitated a bit, but it was no use; she must have his aid clear to the door. So they went on.

The maid at the door stared dumbly and let them in. Then a heavy step sounded and a voice began: "Shirley, why didn't you telephone for the car?"

Mr. Paton stepped into the hall, his paper in his hand. He saw them. "Great Scott!" he exclaimed, and the paper dropped.

"Pater, I had to bring the baby home," Shirley cried, and she explained rapidly as she laid the baby down.

As she introduced Meldon and saw that her father knew him by reputation, the tension lifted. "We must get busy and see if we can locate the mother," said Mr. Paton, "and Meldon, you better stay with us and have a bite."

Shirley looked around to find Meldon's eyes upon her in quiet question—a greater question than if she wanted him to stay—a question that told her plainly: "I am learning to love you. If I stay, it means that one of these days I shall love you. Do you want me to linger?"

A little thrill going over her as she made her decision, she smiled: "Yes, you have earned a reward—a good dinner, at least."

Her father, who had stepped out, came in. "You kids did not show much detective ability. I just telephoned to police headquarters and they said the mother was taken from the big station unconscious to the general hospital, and she's wild for the baby now. So you'll have to turn around and take him—it—her—back!"

NEW EPOCH IN RECLAMATION

Tract of Desert Land in Arizona Set Aside to Conserve Types of Desert Vegetation.

Few of us know that many expensive and priceless irrigation projects have been and are being carried on by the United States government. We are aware that the desert will nearly always and everywhere "blossom as the rose" if you can get water into it. But perhaps the most extraordinary reversal of this commendable alchemy has recently gone on the records from Arizona. In continued pursuance of the policy of setting aside large unsettled areas to be future outdoor playgrounds, the Department of the Interior has established "The Panago Saguaro National Monument." It is a tract of simonpure desert land, just east of Phoenix along the famous Apache trail; and it was created "primarily to conserve types of desert vegetation in a region that is rapidly changing in appearance through increased cultivation of the soil."

In other words, reclamation is proceeding at so rapid a pace that soon in the locality the precious giant cactus, sagebrush, rattlesnake, yucca, and gila lizards, shall have passed like the bison. The monument represents a "cross section of the state," a fauna and flora representative of the whole commonwealth, and so is to be preserved to the ages. Truly, a real tribute to nature! Here is a reclamation of the desert in a new sense: Reclamation from the selfish activities of those who would turn its sand to soil and its sage to celery. Surely this marks an epoch in the passing of the great West!—Christian Science Monitor.

More Than One Way. There is an old farmer in one of our suburbs who is noted for saying quaint and unexpected things. One day last fall he delivered a couple of dressed birds to a customer, who remarked: "I should think, Mr. Brown, you'd simply hate to chop off the heads of those innocent chickens."

"You're right, ma'am," he said, "and so I never do it. I manage to get around it."

"Get around it, how?" the housewife asked with eager interest.

"Well, you see, ma'am," replied the farmer, "what I does is chop the chickens off the heads."—Boston Transcript.

Embarrassing Moment. I was expecting some freight and called the depot to see if it had arrived. We lived on a country line, and of course every receiver was down. While I was waiting for them to answer I was thinking what I would say. I had intended to say, "Is this the depot?" and "Has anything arrived for Mrs. K—?"

Instead, I got excited and said, "Hello, is the depot here?"

"No!" thundered the man at the other end of the line, "it just went off on the south-bound train."

American Woman in High Position. Rutland, one of the most picturesque counties of England, is presided over now by an American-born countess. Through the recent appointment of her husband, the Earl of Ancaster, to the office of lord lieutenant of the Etoile, Countess Ancaster, the former Eloise Breese, daughter of William L. Breese of New York, has become the first lady of the shire. The lord lieutenant is the principal representative of the sovereign in the county and as such outranks everybody else in the shire, his precedence being shared by his wife.

Farmers' Wives. Ninety-eight per cent of farm wives bake their own bread, according to the latest census reports; and 97 per cent do the family sewing, with 96 per cent doing the family washing and ironing. The average workday of the farm woman is 61 per cent longer than that of the city man worker.

A Disastrous Deal in Jumbo Iron

By R. RAY BAKER.

The ticker tape had overflowed the waste basket in Claude Winters' office and a liberal supply lay curled on the floor, while short bits reposed here and there about the room.

One piece was held taut in Claude's fingers, as he sat at a desk by a window. Seven stories down the city roared and clattered, but the young stock broker heard none of the tumult. He bent over the desk, his elbows resting on it, his gaze transfixed on the tape before him.

"Lost," he muttered. It was not a groan, for Claude was not the groaning kind. He had stamina, although the supply was being overtaxed at present. "Lost—a clean sweep. Only one possible way to retrieve, and that's to throw at least $200,000 into the whirlpool that sucked down my half-million. But where's it to come from? I haven't more than $5,000 left, and that wouldn't affect Jumbo iron one jot. No, what I need is a whole lot of money in quick time. I'll not give up. Two hundred thousand will bring back the five hundred thousand; there's no doubt of it. But where'll I get it?"

He rose, dropped the piece of tape, and ground it between a heel and the office rug. Crossing to the telephone he called up various bank officials, one after the other. No satisfaction. Money was "tight," and besides, it was the big banking interests largely that had brought about his downfall. He was disappointed but not surprised.

Claude returned to his desk. But not to his attitude of dejection. His mind was busy seeking the signpost of a highway that would lead him out of the forest of "frenzied finance."

Six years ago Claude had come to the city with a comparatively few dollars, and acceptance of a lowly position in a brokerage office had proved a lucky step. He made a favorable impression with the broker and was educated in the finesse of playing stocks. Finally he was made a partner; shortly after that the broker died and Claude became sole owner of the business. Fortune leaned on his side and money rolled in. Everything he touched responded as objects responded to the golden touch of Midas, as told in mythology—until he tried Jumbo iron. Then came the crash.

All this time he had neglected the old home on the farm. On this farm he had been born and raised to young manhood. On the adjoining eighty acres had lived Alice Hall, pretty daughter of a farmer, and with her Claude experienced his first affair of the heart. He had loved her desperately—he had thought.

Then his parents had died, one shortly after the other, and having a natural-born dislike for farming, he had gone to the city. "I'll come back for you some day," he had told Alice, but after writing once or twice he had forgotten her. A member of his office force had attended to the payments of taxes on the old farm, but that was his only remaining connection with the environment of his boyhood.

Now as he sat at his desk seeking a way out of his dilemma the picture of a girl arose in his mind—a beautiful girl. But it was not Alice. Her name was Hortense Molton, and she was the daughter of Ruthford Molton, a power in the financial world. She had a million in her own right, and she was fond of Claude. He had met her at a social function and they had liked each other. Somehow he had felt she would marry him if he asked her, but he had never really courted her, although he had taken her around some.

"She's the solution," he decided, as he harassed his brain for a means of raising money. "I'll ask Hortense to marry me. Let's see, she's spending the month at Troy. I'll just run up there in my car, get her consent quickly—if I can—and then put my hands on some money. This situation ought to keep a week at least. I'll appeal to her romantic nature, and she ought to dispense with an elaborate ceremony. The trip will do me good, and incidentally I'll step on the way and cast my eye over the old farm."

That very afternoon he started on the trip, his hopes once more arisen. Abandoning the cares of financial life, which his peculiar construction permitted him to do, he assumed a holiday spirit, and spoke amiably to every one he met on the road.

Cities, villages and farming districts he passed through at a swift pace. At last strangely familiar sights began meeting his glance. They were strangely familiar because never before had he motored in this direction, in spite of the fact that the road led past the farm which had once been his home.

"Can't stop for more than a minute," he muttered as he noticed a landmark which he realized was not more than five miles from the old farm. "I'll just stop and look it over; won't even stop the motor."

A mile farther on he came upon a flivver in trouble. It was standing at one side of the road, the hood was up and a girl was prowling in the mechanism with a wrench.

Being in a holiday mood and likewise being a gallant young man, Claude stopped his roadster and inquired: "Need some help?"

Apparently he had not been en-grossed in her beauty. He repeated it again, and she turned toward him with a black streak across her forehead.

"Well," she said slowly, "it looks as if I might—"

She stopped talking and gazed at him in a daze.

"You're—you're Claude Winters!" she managed to stammer.

It was so like an accusation that he felt guilty, without having the slightest idea why. He peered at her intently. The black mark disfigured her countenance, but suddenly her identity dawned on him.

"And you're Alice Hall?" he exclaimed, and forthwith switched off the ignition of his motor and left his machine.

They shook hands with a good deal of restraint.

"You're—you're still here, I take it," he observed inanely.

"As you see," she retorted somewhat pointedly.

"I just thought I'd drop in at the old place and see how it looks," he went on. "I happened to be coming this way, you see."

"About time," she sighed. "And you won't see much to please your eye. The old home is buried under a growth of weeds. It's been sadly neglected—just like some other things." She emphasized the word "some."

Claude was feeling contrite. In addition, he had a strange sensation about the heart. This country girl had grown more beautiful since he went away. He had loved her once, and the city had made him forget. Now he was away from the city, and the old feeling appeared to be creeping over him. And it was not an unpleasant sensation, either.

"Your father," he asked. "He is well?"

"He died a year ago," she replied aply, dangling the wrench in a muddy hand. "I'm farmeretting."

"You're what?" Claude inquired.

"Farmeretting. I'm a farmerette. I'm working our old farm and getting along pretty well, too; but it's terribly hard work, I can tell you."

"Let's see what's the trouble," he suggested, and looked into the hood. "Timer wire is loose," he said presently. "Have you some pliers? Thanks; now it's all right, I think. Where are you bound?"

"Home," said Alice.

"Good. I'll straggle along behind."

"Afraid you wouldn't know the way, I suppose," she said pointedly.

During the four-mile ramble Claude did a deal of thinking. Hortense and his mission were forgotten. His financial worries had faded. Things seemed good in the country. He had never liked farming, but he believed he would enjoy it now. Hard manual labor was what he needed. Let the half million go; he could get along without it. When the flivver ahead came to a stop he had made up his mind.

He and the girl stood and looked at two farms, one of them flourishing, the other gone to ruins.

"Let's make these two farms into one," he suggested. "Do you remember one I said I'd come back for? I've neglected you, I know, but I've returned. What do you say? Will you have me?"

She hung her head.

"I'm still here, you see," she replied finally. "I took you at your word and I've been waiting."

New Flying Target. A new kind of flying target has been patented by Alexander McMillan of Princeton, N. J. It is an artificial bird, meant to be discharged like a clay pigeon from a machine.

A clay pigeon, when hit, is smashed. The target here described simply flies to pieces, which can be readily put together again, making it as good as ever.

The target is composed of several wing-shaped pieces, with turned edges, so that in revolving through the air it has a tendency to fly. In this respect it claims superiority to the ordinary clay target.

The component pieces are so constructed, with resilient gripping engagements, that, while readily detachable one from another, they are easily assembled again after the target has been hit by a shot.

Grow Your Own Stray Flowers. Florists' windows all winter have been gay with an old-fashioned annual in several varieties which was popular in the days of our great grandmothers, who always had bouquets of them for the winter—the everlasting flowers. Two varieties have been displayed more than other, the heli-chrysum and the rhodanthine. The former has a fine line of bronze, maroon and yellow shades. The latter is the most dainty and delicate of all the everlasting. It is often grown as a pot plant. Its flowers are nodding and a delicate rose pink. All these are as easily grown from seed as a zinnia or sweet alyssum. The blossoms should be cut when half open, suspended head downward until dry, and may then be made into bouquets.

Real Prodigy. "Pop?"

"Well, Junior—"

"Got a silver dollar in your pocket?"

"Yes, but—"

"Lend it to me a little while; I'll give it back."

"But why do you want a silver dollar?"

"I want to try it in my slingshot." "Shoot it?"

"Yep." "What for?"

"Oh, just for the novelty of seeing a dollar go a long way."

TYPHOID FEVER.

The following is reprinted from a pamphlet issued by the Texas State Board of Health, and dealing with Typhoid Fever—Its Spread and Control. This subject is very opportune at this time, and our readers should read carefully the following and preserve it for future reference.

Frequency and Fatality of Typhoid Fever.

Very few people need an introduction to typhoid fever. Everybody has observed the disease. Typhoid fever is responsible for 200,000 cases of sickness and 20,000 deaths every year in the United States; 900 deaths in Texas from typhoid fever each year.

The fatality of typhoid fever, that is, the number of deaths in each 100 cases of the disease, has varied in different epidemics from 5 to 35, averaging about 10 deaths for every 100 cases.

Source of Infection.

Dr. Osler has said that the number of cases of typhoid fever in a community is the best index to the sanitary intelligence of the community. Knowledge of how the disease is caused and how it may be avoided will give anyone who uses such knowledge almost an absolute protection against the disease.

Typhoid fever is due to a germ which was discovered in 1880 by a man named Eberth. The germ is about one-eighth-thousandth of an inch in length and about one-twenty-thousandth of an inch in thickness, a short rod-shaped germ. Considering the size of the germ, it is clear that a very small particle of the filth in which the germ exists under natural conditions would contain millions of them.

The typhoid germ is present in the intestine and bladder of three groups of persons: (1) Persons who are sick with typhoid fever—those who have the disease. (2) Persons who have recovered from a known case of typhoid fever. About three people out of every 100 who have had typhoid fever continue for years, in one known instance for forty years, to discharge typhoid fever germs from their intestine or bladder. (3) Persons who have had extremely mild cases of typhoid fever, too mild for them to have suspected so serious a disease or to have called in a physician, those who have had typhoid fever and do not know it. There are many in this third group.

"Typhoid Carriers" are persons belonging to the last two groups, that is to say, persons who have had typhoid fever in a recognized or unrecognized form, but have recovered and continue to carry and discharge the typhoid germ from their bodies.

Modes of Infection.

Every person who has typhoid fever has taken the typhoid fever germ which was discharged from the intestine or bladder of a typhoid fever patient or "carrier" into his body through some article or food or drink. The germ is passed from the typhoid fever patient or "carrier" to a new victim in one of the following ways:

Water borne: The discharges from a typhoid fever patient or "carrier," without being disinfected, are deposited or emptied on the ground or in an unsanitary closet; from one of these places the typhoid germs gain entrance to the drinking water in one of the following ways:

(a) During a heavy rain surface water may carry the filth from the place of deposit or from a badly lo-

ated or constructed privy into a well or spring. This is easily possible when the surface drainage is from places of deposit toward the well or spring, and especially is this true when the top or covering or wall of the well is not so constructed as to prevent the entrance of surface water.

(b) Where the distance between the place of deposit of typhoid fever discharges and the well or spring is not too great, not over 150 feet, the filth with the typhoid germ may percolate through the soil into the well or spring. This last mode of well and spring pollution is especially dangerous in limestone countries.

(c) Persons, chickens, dogs, pigs, and other animals may soil their feet with carelessly deposited discharges from typhoid fever patients or "carriers," and carry this filth to the well, which, if improperly covered, that is, has a bad, leaky platform on which the person drawing water stands, may become contaminated.

Infection by the Fly: When typhoid fever discharges are not disinfected and are exposed to flies by being left uncovered, or by being deposited upon the ground, or by being emptied into an open-back, unsanitary privy, flies become contaminated or soiled with the poisonous filth and convey the typhoid germ to kitchens or dining rooms, and there infect or poison some article of drink or food. This mode of infection is especially dangerous where a number of families live within the radius of the fly's flight, that is, within two or three hundred yards of each other, and where there are several open-back unsanitary privies.

Infection by Contact: Persons who nurse typhoid fever patients frequently soil their hands with invisible amounts of the infectious or contagious filth (remember the size of the germ), and then, in handling food or drink convey the disease to others. "Carriers" may soil their hands with their own discharges and infect those whose food they handle. "Carriers" that are housewives, cooks, or employees about restaurants, hotels or dairies are very dangerous on account of their great opportunities for transmitting the disease.

How to Avoid Typhoid Fever—General Precautions.

Sanitary Privy: A sanitary privy is one of the cheapest and best insurances against typhoid fever. To be sanitary, a privy must be at least 200 feet from the well or spring and on lower ground. It must be so constructed that domestic animals—pigs, chickens, etc.—shall not have access to and scatter the discharges; and what is much more important, it must be so constructed that flies shall not have access to the discharges. For full description with cuts of sanitary privies write the State Board of Health for bulletin.

Keep Down the Flies: There is no animal on the globe, with the possible exception of the mosquito, that is responsible for so much injury and destruction of human life as the fly. The fly is by its nature drawn to the discharges of the human body. The discharges of the human body contain the infectious and contagion thrown off from the body. The fly feeds upon these discharges, soils itself, conveys the filth with its infection to the dining rooms and kitchens and to the food and drink of its prospective victims. The fly is one of the major causes of typhoid fever. It should be kept out of the house with screens. If the entire house cannot be screened, the kitchen and dining room should. Screens are so much cheaper than doctor bills and so much cheaper than ill-health. In addition to screening fly traps should be used, especially about the back doors and near the garbage can and the slop bucket. The flies that get by the screens and traps may be poisoned in the dining room and kitchen with a mixture of two tablespoonfuls of formaldehyde in a pint of equal parts of milk and water exposed in saucers. Fly swatters should be kept convenient for killing the few remaining flies. For full details in regard to the control of the fly nuisance, write the State Board of Health for special bulletin.

A Good Well: A good well should be at least 200 feet from the privy and on higher ground. It should have either a cemented top or a wooden top made of tongue-and-grooved lumber or two layers of boards running in opposite directions. Pumps are preferable to buckets and chains. A well that becomes turbid or muddy after a rain means that the well is receiving surface water, and all such wells are dangerous.

Avoid Contact Infection: No person who assists in the nursing of a case of typhoid fever should handle any article of food or drink, especially milk, without first having thoroughly washed the hands in soap and water, followed by dipping them into water containing carbolic acid in the strength of a tablespoonful of the acid to a pint of water.

Avoid Carrier Infection: "Carriers," as we have pointed out, are persons who have had recognized or unrecognized cases of typhoid fever, who have recovered, and who continue to carry and discharge typhoid germs from their bladder and bowels. Such persons occasionally soil their hands with typhoid discharges and if handling food infect those who consume the food. The most dangerous carriers are those who have to do with the handling of foods, such as cooks and restaurant keepers. A cook who gives a history of the occurrence of typhoid fever in the families in which she has worked should be suspected as a carrier.

Avoid Milk Infection: Twenty per cent of all cases of typhoid fever is milk borne. If a dairyman should have a case of typhoid fever or a typhoid "carrier" in his family, or in the family of an employe, the milk supply may be poisoned and a number of cases of typhoid fever occur on the milk route of the dairyman. Persons should be on their guard when typhoid occurs in their family or among the employees of the dairyman who supplies them with milk. A number of cases of typhoid fever occurring on a dairyman's milk route should always put the other customers on guard. A "carrier" in the family should be suspected when there is a case or two cases of typhoid fever in the family every year or so, or among friends and relatives who frequently visit the family. In such instances the "carrier" is a member of the family who handles the food supplies.

Vaccination: From what has been said about the cause of typhoid fever, and the many precautions necessary to avoid it, one will understand that, be as careful as he may, he is liable sooner or later to be infected from some of the many sources of the disease. Fortunately, we have a means of fortifying the body against the effect of the typhoid germ; we can vaccinate. Vaccination every two or three years gives one almost absolute safety. Vaccination is harmless; it is a little uncomfortable, but certainly not painful. In many counties the county authorities offer it free to the citizens of the county, so that it costs nothing. Everybody with the exception of children under three or four years of age should be vaccinated. With a remedy so cheap, so painless, and so sure, as typhoid vaccination, against a disease so prevalent and so dangerous as typhoid fever, the neglect of this protection is, in the majority of cases, inexcusable carelessness or ignorance.

Precautions During the Disease.
(1) Faithfully carry out the rules furnished by the city or county health office

(2) Separate the sick person from the other members of the family insofar as such separation is practicable, and, where it is possible, do not allow those that handle the food for the other members of the family to handle anything that comes in direct or indirect contact with the sick person.

(3) See that the sick person has his own set of eating utensils and that these, with all particles of unconsumed food, are thoroughly disinfected with water that is boiling when it is poured, before being handled by another person, or better still, place them in a vessel and boil them for thirty minutes.

(4) Those in attendance upon the sick should carefully wash their hands with soap and water, and then dip their hands into a solution of carbolic acid and water, in the strength of a tablespoonful of the acid to a pint of water, before handling any article of food or drink that may be consumed by others.

(5) All discharges from the typhoid patient, including discharge of the bowels, bladder, and expectoration should be treated in one of the following ways:

(a) By placing unslacked lime the size of an egg in each half-pint of discharge and then adding a pint of very hot water. Slacked, or air-slacked lime is of no value.

(b) Or dust about a tablespoonful of chloride of lime, sometimes called "bleaching powder" or "laundry bleach," over each pint of discharge and add a pint of boiling water.

For larger amounts of discharge a proportionate increase in the above substances would be used. After adding either of these substances, including the water, thoroughly mix the discharge with the solution and

How does she make that extra 10 lbs.?

COWS that get only enough protein and calcium from grass to make 20 lbs. of milk may make 30 lbs. for a time on grass alone. They do it by drawing upon their bodily tissues for the other 10 lbs. But their milk will suddenly fall off unless a concentrate is fed.

Don't let cows "run down"—
Feed Purina Cow Chow Now

You can get about 3 1/2 lbs. more milk per day from each cow on pasture, for every pound of Purina Cow Chow you feed. Cows keep in better condition for winter production, and you can milk them longer. Call us up. We put the proof in your milk pail.

WAS BENEFITED IN EVERY WAY

Houston Woman Eats, Sleeps and Says She Feels Better Than In Many Years.

"The best I can say for Tanlac is not good enough; that's just the way I feel about this wonderful medicine," said Mrs. A. M. Raper, 1609 Columbia street, Houston Heights, Texas.

"I had stomach trouble for three years. Everything I ate soured and would come back up into my mouth undigested. Gas formed on my stomach and bloated me up so that I had the most terrible pains all the time in my back and in the region of my kidneys. At times I suffered so I could hardly breathe, and when I did it felt like a knife sticking in me. I was restless during the day and sleepless at night, and I finally got to the point where I didn't believe I would ever see a well day again.

"The way I began to improve after starting on Tanlac was simply amazing. It benefited me in every way and I am just overjoyed at the results. Tanlac now is the talk of our home. I eat, sleep, and feel better than in years and I wish I could put a bottle of Tanlac in the hands of every man, woman, and child in Houston so they might take it and get well as I have."

Tanlac is sold in Brady by Trigg Drug Co., in Mercury by J. T. Matlock, in Rochelle by C. W. Carr, and by leading druggists everywhere.

WITH THE CHURCHES

Catholic Church.
Mass will be said on the third Sunday of each month at 10:00 a. m. by the Rev. Francis Hudon.

Christian Church.
Sunday school at 10:00 a. m.
Morning service at 11:00 a. m.
Evening service at 8:00 p. m.
Rev. G. T. Reeves of Fort Smith, Ark., will conduct both services. Everybody invited to attend.

Baptist Church.
Regular preaching services at 11 a. m. and at 8:15 p. m.
At the morning service and at 11 o'clock, we will take the Lord's Supper.
In the evening at 4:00 o'clock anyone who wishes may have the privilege of baptism.

J. H. TAYLOR, Pastor.

Gospel Tent Meeting.
A ten-day tent meeting will be held in Dodge community on Brady creek, close to the Abner Hanson place.

The meeting will begin next Thursday night, the 14th of July, and will continue over two Sundays. Rev. S. C. Dunn will preach. Everybody invited.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Westbrook, accompanied by their son, Dudley, and daughter, Mrs. Ira Mayhew and son, and also Chas. Samuel, left Thursday to spend a week on Galveston beach.

The old stork is one of the finest birds in the land—and you will have no trouble in getting Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Roberts, Jr., of Lohn to agree, for it left them a fine son at the local sanitarium on Wednesday, July 6th. Mother and babe reported doing nicely, and Father Roberts about the proudest and happiest man in the land.

Take Notice, Please!

The big picture show man from San Antonio, Texas, will be with us at the Methodist church next Sunday morning and evening. He will preach for us at 11:00 o'clock, and at 8:30 p. m. He will put his pictures on the screen for us. These pictures and this lecture will be worth your while. Dr. J. T. Curry, who will preach in the morning, and deliver the lecture with the pictures at the evening hour is well known to many of our people, and if you have not heard him, it will pay you to be here with us next Sunday, both morning and evening.

Remember the Sunday school at 9:45 a. m. Come on, and bring your friends and relatives, also your company, if they happen to come in to see you.

Epworth League at 7:00 p. m. every Sunday. To this you have a standing invitation, and you will find it a very helpful service to one and all who attend.

S. C. DUNN, Pastor.
