Without when I tell you that I knew of its prowork, I mean. I may as well confess, at once, that I had never acquired the work habit. I was always "going to." but it was so fatally easy to keep on postponing the chilling plunge. I suppose I had been ready on at least half a dozen occasions to take a dive into some pool with a salary attachment; but always some good friend would bob up to say, "Oh, come on, Stannie, old man; we're lacking just one more to make up the bunch. Don't be a clam. Time enough to settle down when you have to," and then it would

Besides, you see, there was always Grandfather Jasper in the background. He had money-lashings of it, so we all believed; and it had been a family understanding for years that he intended splitting the bulk of it, fiftyme. Before we go any farther, let me set it down that Cousin Percy wasand is-all the seventeen different kinds of things that I am not, and never wished to be; smooth, neat, wellgroomed, a "grind" in college and a 'perfect dear" with the girls, am- trail of your legacy. bitious as the very devil, and measuring his friends by the amount of "pull" half: there you have him from the crown of his well-brushed little head to his patent-leather pumps."

"You're a fright, Stannie," he would say, in his carefully polished diplomatic manner-he had a billet in the Department of State at Washington, and was in training for the legation service abroad-"you are a perfect fright. Three whole years out of college, and you haven't done a single, solitary useful thing yet. When are you going to begin? And, incidentally, how long are you going to keep Lisette waiting?"

Oh, Lord !- right there was another enc' in the tangle-Lisette. We had ag to agree-Lisette and I-some six months or so in advance of Grandfather Jasper's death, and we were both perfectly well assured, and had assured each other a dozen times, that my income from Dad's estate wasn't more than half big enough to marry on. You see, it was this way: Lisette was one of a family of four girls in a mighty expensive household, and there wasn't anything to lean on on that side of the fence. Though, of course, we never discussed it brutally in so many words, we were waiting for that fifty-fifty look-in at the will which family tradition declared had already been drawn up, signed, sealed, witnessed and put away in cold storage; otherwise in the safe-keeping of Grandfather Jasper's family lawyer.

All of which may serve to bring us back to that nightmare effect registered at the start. When the Dudley will was taken out of the icebox and read to the assembled members of the family, there were at least two shocking surprises. Jasper hadn't been anywhere near as rich as we had all been thinking he was; that his modest m' er of living had been, perhaps, as n a matter of necessity as of d oice. Bad investments-of which the family had never heard so much as a whisper—had cut his fortune down to something less than half a million, all told. That was shock Number One; and show Jumber Two was strictly personal to we deandfather Jasper had left me his love and hest wishes, and had willed the money and property-all of it, mind you-to Cousin Percy, giving as his reason that he thought Percy would make better use of it. Of course, I had everybody's sympa thy and condolence—even Percy's, for that matter. My mother wept; and, as I recall it, Lisette managed to compass a tear or so when I told her what had happened; or rather what had so ignominiously falled to happen.

"Whatever will you do?" she faltered. "I suppose you will really have to go to work now, won't you, Stan-

she agreed; and I'm blest if she didn't shift it to a finger of the other hand It was less than a week after this little fade-out scene with Lisette that "I know just about how you felt last week when you heard Grandfather Jasper's will read, and it isn't visions more than a year ago. When the will was drawn, grandfather showed it to me, and gave me a sealed envelope, which I was to open after his death. That envelope, as I knew at the time, contilined, among other things, a codicil to the will. By its provisions you are to receive a legacy under certain conditions which were to be revealed to you at such time as I might think best.

"Your portion of Grandfather Jasper's property was worth, at its latest valuation, something like $440,000. It lies in a perfectly safe repository, situated between the 105th and 110th degrees of longitude west from Greenwich, and the 35th and 40th degrees north latitude. When you find it, you will be able to identify it by the presence of a girl with brown hair and fifty, between my cousin Percy and blue eyes and small mole on her left shoulder, a plebald horse which the girl rides, and a dog with a split face -half black and half white. You will be more than likely to find the three together; and if you make the acquaintance of the girl, you'll be on the

"So there you are, Stannie, old boy; there's your fortune. All you've got they might be able to exert in his be- to do is to go to work and find it. Perquired the working habit-which is what Grandfather Jasper hoped might prove to be the case.

> "Wishing you great joy in your search. I am.

Your affectionate cousin, "PERCY."

Naturally, I had a quiet little laugh over this screed of Percy's, taking it for a joke; a poor joke and in rather bad taste, I thought. In that mood I handed the letter to Lisette for her to read. She didn't laugh, but she did look a bit scornful and put about, if you know what I mean.

"I don't suppose the blue-eyed girl would appeal to you," she said, "though the horse and the dog might. When do you start?"

We discovered that Meridian 105 west of Greenwich split the state of Colorado just beyond Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo, and the huntingground plotted out for me took in three-fourths of the remainder of the state, a slice of Utah, a good bit bigger slice of New Mexico, with a bite out of the northeastern corner of Arizona, just for good measure.

"Me for the wild and woolly!" I brayed. "Don't you see me rigged out in a nice, hairy pair of 'shaps' and riding hell-bent-for-leather-I believe that's the phrase-over the snow capped peaks or the boundless prairies, as the case may be? But just imagine Percy the immaculate pulling a bonehead joke like this!"

"You are taking it for a joke?" she questioned.

"Sure I am; and it's a rather rotten one at that, I should say-considering the source." "Then you won't go to look for the blue-eyed girl with nut-brown hair and I got to thinking it over, and more the cunning little mole? Think of what you may be missing!" For just one crazy minute I had a hunch, or a premonition, or whatever you like to call it, that the letter might not be a joke. Grandfather Jasper had always been a bit eccentric-a rich I made some sort of a foolish excuse man's privilege and a rich old man's incontestable right. What if he had lows, caught a night train for Boston, actually done this thing to me?-a stopped off at the home station long fning scarcely less devastating than cutting me off without a penny? On the spur of the moment I said:

"If I should go, would you wait for me. Lisette?"

She took her time about answering a good and sufficient plenty of it. "I think perhaps I'd better not change the ring back, Stannie," she away before you could get back to Bos-Besides, there is the blue-eyed girl; if she should bring you a fortune, you'd have to marry her, wouldn't you? You are big and strong, and-well-er -nice in a good many ways, Stannie, and much too good-looking for your own good; but when you marry-if you do marry-you'd better be sure that the girl has money enough to buy her own hats. I haven't enough, as "I know only too well that the lovein-a-cottage idea has never appealed to you," I said, with the regretful stop pulled all the way out in deference to the sentimental decencies.

"Not in the least, Stannie, dear; not in the littlest least.'

This appeared to be the end of our rather lukewarm love-dream, and to be really honest and aboveboard about it, I am obliged to confess that it didn't break as many bones for me as I suppose it should have. Anyway, a half-hour or so after I had said goodby to Lisette I met Jack Downing; and when he asked me if I didn't want to go with him and a bunch of the fellows for a little spin down the coast of Maine in his motor cruiser, I fell for the invitation so suddenly that he hadn't a ghost of a chance to back out, if he had wanted to.

So, a few hours beyond that touching little scene at "The Rockerie," you may figure me, if you please, spinning the wheel of one of the nattiest little boats on the North shore, with a fresh nor'easter blowing and the sea getting up to give me the time of my young life to hold the Guinevere to her course, nor' nor'east, half a point east, as we lifted the Shoals on our port

In such jolly good company as we had aboard the stout ship Guinevere, three full days elapsed before a Percy's letter came. This is what it thought of Percy or his joke ever entered my head again; and it's a tento-one shot that I wouldn't have thought of him, or it, during the remainder of the cruise if we hadn't been obliged to tie up at Rockland for going to make you feel any better now | motor repairs. This, as I recall it, was on the fourth day, and it was a dog that made me remember; a mongrel cur that followed the motor re pairman down to the wharf; a most disreputable looking mongrel, at that, but-by Jove! he had the magic markings! Half of his face, measuring from a line drawn straight down over the tip of his nose, was black, and the other half was a dingy, dirty white.

So then I did a little rapid figuring on train schedules. If Percy had left Washington as I knew he was planning to, my diplomatic cousin should have been, at that figuring moment. just about due in San Francisco. That being the case, or the likelihood, I toddled up to the telegraph office and sent a message, addressing it in care of the captain of whatever might be the next steamer due to sail for ports in China. All I said was: "Your letter was as funny as an hour in a dentist's chair. Bon voyage to you."

Night found us still tied to the Rockland wharf; and just as we were getting up from dinner in the yacht's saloon, here came a boy with a telegram. The wire was from Percy, and it said :

"Don't be a complete fool. It was no joke at all. Ask my lawyer."

Even then, I didn't go off at halfcock, though I have often been called an impulsive jackass. The thing was still too ridiculous to bite very hard. But farther along in the evening, when especially when it was shoved in upon me that I really did owe it to Lisette not to turn down even the tenth part of a chance to provide her with the means of buying her future hats, the die was cast, as the play-writers say. to Jack Downing and the other felenough to pack a couple of grips and to tell my mother and sister good-by, and the thing was-oh, no; not donenothing like that. and Omaha. As I recall it now, it was after the train had passed North Platte that I first became sensibly conscious, as you might say, of the fact that the man in the opposite section of the sleeping-car had a little Pullman table set up in front of him, and was studying maps-and blue-prints. He was a rather efficient-looking fellow of maybe thirty-two or three, with dark hair and eyes, and what Lisette would you had never seen?" have called a determined nose, and he sported a beard and mustaches, nutback at me, quick. brown as to color, and neatly trimmed.

Farther along we met in the smoking room, at a time when the stuffy little den had no other occupants. Mr. Opposite Section's only cigar turned out to have a broken wrapper, so I naturally tendered my own pocket-case. That served to break the ice and we talked, dribbling along from one commonplace to another until finally Brown-beard said:

"You don't by any chance happen to be a mining engineer, do you?" "Far be it from me." I laughed:

"nothing so useful as that." "I didn't know," he hastened to say, half apologetically. "I saw you studying maps as we came along."

Now, ordinarily I'm apt to talk a lot too much about my own affairs-I'll admit it; but this was one time when I had a sort of hunch not to. So I merely said:

"I saw you doing the same thing." "Sure you did." he admitted cheerfully. Then he told me his namewhich I got as Bullton, or Bulletin, or something like that-and said he was a mining engineer, which was the reason why he had asked me if I wasn't

Past that, the talk ran mostly upon his profession, and since the mysterious hunch was still nudging me, I let him have the floor, so to speak, figuring chiefly myself as a good listener. "Yes; we do run across some rather queer propositions in our trade," he said, after he had given me some sort of an idea of what a mining engineer's job is like. "In my own experience, for example, the only sure shot I have ever had-or possibly ever will havegot away from me."

It was up to me to bite, and, of course, I did it.

"How was that?" "The man died," he replied laconi-

"You'll be the one to be bored. It was this way: A little over a year ago I was on my way to Chicago with said Brown-beard. Jor your entire family

HIS Christmas, why not do away with innumerable small and useless gifts to the members of your family and invest the money they would cost, in the gift supreme?-

THE NEW DIAMOND

Your family will enjoy the Amberola-not merely on Christmas, but for months and years to come. Good music is always a boon to the home, and because the Amberola plays the best operatic, classical and popular airs, it satisfies every musical taste. Here is a gift that will make your home brighter-cheerierhappier-from the very first tune it plays on Christmas morning.

The Edison Amberola is the world's greatest phonograph value—a perfect musical instrument sold at a remarkably low price. But even this moderate amount may be divided into payments which you will scarcely feel, because they can be made practically at your own convenience.

Three Days of Good Music-FREE!

Come in today, hear the Amberola, and ask us to deliver it to your home for three days free trial. There are no strings to this offer-it is a real opportunity to enjoy good music in your home without cost or obligation. If you can't come, write or phone today.
